The Social Week

Pledges Will Have "Kid" Party and Christmas Teas

The pledges of all the sororities on the campus will be the honor guests at three social functions this week-end.

The decorations of the informal affairs which are to be given by the pledges of Zeta Tau Alpha, Kappa Delta, and Alpha Delta Pi will feature the Christmas motif. This will be carried out mainly in the lighted and gayly trimmed Christmas trees. Bowls of red chrysanthemums, poinsettias, holly, and fern will add to the red and green colors which will predominate in the decorations. Christmas wreaths will hang from the tassels of the window shades and sprigs of mistletoe will be placed above the doorways.

This afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock the first of these entertainments will take place at the Zeta Tau Alpha house in the form of a Christmas tea. During the afternoon as the guests call, coffee and doughnuts will be served. As a favor of the occasion each guest will receive a small red stocking filled with candy.

From 4 to 6 o'clock tomorrow the pledges are invited to attend a combined Christmas tea and coffee at the Alpha Delta Pi house on Jefferson street. The pledges of the sorority who will be the hostesses on this occasion will meet the guests at the door. Refreshments will be served during the afternoon.

And tomorrow night at the Kappa Delta house there will be a Kid party for all of the pledges at which time no one will be admitted unless dressed in a child's costume. Games and entertainment which are fitting for the occasion have been planned and will be induged in by the "children," who will be resuscitated at "feeding" time by big lollypops and ice cream cones.

ZETA TAU ALPHA

The pledges of the sororities who will be hostesses at these functions for the other pledges are: Zeta Tau Alpha: Elizabeth Green, Inez Harrison, Frances Lingle, Dorothy Bagley, Gertrude Carn, Elaine Davis, Martha Evans, Esther Hay, Lois Long, Jean Maze, Virginia Shultz, Elizabeth Simpson, Marjorie Stump, and Lucile Weeks.

ALPHA DELTA PI

Alpha Delta Pi: Ellen Fleming, Flossie Henry, Caroline Lufburrow, Mary Belle Rogers, Elizabeth Whidden, Isabel Yon, Elsie Baird, Lily Barnett, Gwen Blake, Betty Lane Campbell, Josephine Davis, Mary Crane, Isabel Dillard, Mary Isabel Hardin, Ann Hickman, Barbara Holmes, Anne Jeter, Eloise Jackson, Charmien Lufburrow, Phoebe Messer, Margaret McCall, Sara Moor, Grace Munroe, Helen Peck, Dora Risk, Wennie Rogers, Ann Summerlin, Leone Thornton, Josephine Trantham, Judy Whidden, Tommie Grace Faircloth, and Helena Ruth Powell.

KAPPA DELTA

Kappa Delta: Helen Ballinger, Dorothy Benford, Jane Crook, Polly Dabney, Carol Farabee, Catherine Fuller, Josephine King, Mary Frances Suann, Jane Tharin, Frances Thomas, Hazel Anderson, Ann Bayley, Clara Birdsail, Leila Ray Bentley, Jean Boughman, Irma Engle, Betty Ferrill, Madge Gleen, Christine Griffin, Annette Harris.

Dorothy Hill, Mildred Hudman, Mary Hutchison, Sara Knight, Blanche Lamar, Martha Lester, Mary Litschgi, Geraldine Miles, Ann Miznell, Virginia Northcutt, Virginia Phillips, Lilla Parramore, Dorothy Phillips, Jane Rice, Evelyn Robson, Inez Seabrook, Della Smith.

Jane Grey Stevens, Genevieve Summers, Barbara Taylor, Jo Olivia Taylor, Nora Tatum, Sara Tillman, Mary Voss, Daisy Marie Welch, and Catherine Wilhelm.

Suggestions For CHRISTMAS GIFTS
Crocheted Scarfs, Sweaters and Berets
—ALSO—
Novelty Stationery
Ethyle Mae Edward - 104 Bryan Hall

FLORIDAN DRY CLEANERS
"There's a Difference"
PHONE 811
Elizabeth Dickinson
College Agent, Lower Bryan

Be Sure to Have Your Dry Cleaning for the Holidays Done
at the
SUPERIOR DRY CLEANERS
308½ S. Monroe - Phone 216

SELECT YOUR GIFT
FOR XMAS
at Turner's
YOUR STORE
Our Gifts Will Be Appreciated!

SALE ON DRESSES!
VALUES TO $8.95
$3.50
TWO FOR $6.00
Wool, Street and Dressy Dresses
LIPPMAN'S
HUB STORE

COLLEGE CALENDAR

December 14 to December 21

Friday

4:00 p. m. Zeta Tau Alpha Christmas tea.
8:15 p. m. Artist Series: Kathryn Meisle, contralto.
8:15 p. m. Special play nite in gym.

Saturday

9:00 a. m. Mortar Board coffee.
4:00 p. m. Sigma Sigma Sigma reception.
4:00 p. m. Alpha Delta Pi Christmas tea.
8:00 p. m. Eta Sigma Phi Christmas party.
8:00 p. m. Kappa Delta "Kid" party.
8:00 p. m. Phi Mu, Beta Phi Alpha, and Zeta Tau Alpha Christmas parties.

Sunday

5:30 p. m. Christmas Vesper program. College Glee club.
8:00 p. m. Delta Zeta Christmas party.

Monday

8:00 p. m. Beta Pi Theta meetings.
8:00 p. m. Alpha Xi Delta Christmas party.
8:00 p. m. Theta Upsilon Christmas party.

Tuesday

7:30 p. m. Miss Richardson reading Christmas stories in Browsing room
8:00 p. m. Christmas parties at Sigma Kappa, Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Chi Omega, Chi Omega, Pi Beta Phi houses.
8:00 p. m. German club party at Ruge hall.

Wednesday

6:30 p. m. College Christmas dinner in dining room.
8:00 p. m. Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Omicron Pi, and Kappa Delta Christmas parties.
8:45 p. m. Senior Christmas party in Bryan atrium.

Thursday

8:00 p. m. Kappa Alpha Theta and Delta Delta Delta Christmas parties.

Friday

11:30 a. m. Christmas Recess begins.

Home Economics Club Has Christmas Fun At Kid Party

The Home Economics club had its annual Christmas kid party Tuesday night in the clothing laboratory. The members all arrived dressed as children, each bringing a ten cent toy for the Christmas tree. After the party, the gifts were given to the nursery school.

The laboratory was decorated by a committee, under the direction of Mercia Scott, in Christmas style. Christmas games were played and refreshments of hot chocolate, hot dogs, and candy were served. Dimples Turner and Lois Lewis were in charge of games, while Kay Sands, Ruth Durrenberger, and Donna Gardner prepared refreshments.

Next semester the club plans to call several lecturers from among the local and state workers in the field of Home Economics to speak to them on subjects of current interest. At the beginning of the year they will also elect a faculty committee as sponsors.

May Our Greetings
Add to Your Christmas Cheer.
SUTTON'S
Half-Way
Shoe Shop

Merry Christmas
and
Happy Year New
to
Students and Faculty
M & N
CAFE

The Season's Greetings!
Students and Faculty
of the
Florida State College for Women
MAE'S SHOP

SORORITY PARTIES AND DECORATIONS PROVE THAT CHRISTMAS IS COMING

With Christmas less than two weeks away the social affairs on the campus and in sorority houses are assuming a holiday air. The social activities of the Greek letter organizations for the year of 1934 will be brought to a close with a Christmas party given by each of them before next Friday.

These parties will all feature the Christmas motif. Each house will have a Christmas tree gaily decorated with bright colored lights, stockings filled with candy, peppermint walking canes, toys, red, white and silver ornaments, tinsel, icicles snow, and topped by a big silver star.

The festive color scheme will be further evident in wreaths of holly and the bouquets of poinsettias. To complete the scene, long red tapers will be placed on the mantles and the tables, while sprigs of mistletoe will be placed at vantage points.

At each house the members and pledges will at some time before the party have the annual drawing of names for presents. At several of the sororities toys and small gifts will be exchanged, to be used later in providing Christmas cheer for the poor children of Tallahassee, or to be sent to missionaries in Kentucky and Georgia for distribution. Gifts will be placed under the Christmas trees, to be distributed at the parties.

And this is where Santa Claus will come in. At many of the parties there will be a Santa Claus dressed in his traditional red suit trimmed with white fur.

Entertainment will be varied. At one party the pledges cannot receive their gifts until they sing an original goat song. The members of another chapter will present skits for the pledges and at other parties the situation will be reversed. Whatever the entertainment the program will be closed by the singing of Christmas carols.

Refreshments will usually consist of coffee, sandwiches, fruit cake, nuts, and peppermint sticks.

Mrs. R. S. Dowdell of Plant City, national secretary of the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority, will be a guest of the members of the local chapter this week-end. While a visitor here Mrs. Dowdell will be the honoree at a number of informal functions which have been planned by the sorority members.

Mortar Board Will Give Early Coffee

The Mortar Board coffee, previously planned to begin at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning, has been set back a half hour to accomodate those students wishing to attend the French talkie. Guests are invited to come between 8:30 and 9:30 rather than between 9:00 and 10:00.

Also any student who received an invitation dated January 15 is asked to note that this is an error. The invitation should read December 15.

German Club to Hold Annual Christmas Party Tuesday

Der Deutsche Verein, the college German club, will celebrate its annual Weihnachtsfest on Tuesday night. The Weihnachtsfest is a Christmas party given by the club each year for the purpose of showing American students how the Germans traditionally celebrate this holiday.

The Weinachtsfest will start with a program which will include German plays, poems and prose selections especially adapted to the occasion. German Christmas songs will be sung, and the Weihnachtsmann, or Santa Claus, will appear to speak to the audience and to present the gifts. After the gifts are opened refreshments will appear. German cakes and candies and black coffee will be on the menu. The Weihnachtsfest ends each year with farewells in German to Miss Myrtle Dolbee, who is the faculty sponsor of the club.

MERRY CHRISTMAS
to Faculty and Students from the
SURPRISE STORE
"Tallahassee's Busiest Dry Goods Store"

QUALITY GIFTS
Reasonably Priced!
Desk Sets
$3 and $5
Cigarette Cases
$1.25 to $10.00
Fitted Bags .... $5 to $30
College Seal Bracelets in colors
$1.95
Elgin Watches, Parker and Schaeffer Pens and Pencils
CARR JEWELRY COMPANY
State Theatre Bldg.

POIL DE CAROTTE
(Red Head)
ALL FRENCH
TALKIE
(Sub-Titles in English)
Sponsored by Beta Pi Theta
December 15th, at 9 A. M.
STATE THEATRE
Admission 25c

Personal Mention

Mary Catherine White of Pensacola, who graduated from Florida State last year, has received an appointment from St. Joseph's hospital in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Mrs. J. Knox Breaux of Jacksonville is spending the week as a guest at the Alpha Chi Omega house.

Betty Manning was a visitor in Gainesville last week-end where she sponsored the Sigma Nu-Phi Delta Theta game.

Among the Florida State Students who were visitors in Tampa last week-end was Lillian Thornton who was visiting friends and relatives.

Betty Hamilton was a visitor in Jacksonville last week-end.

Roman Saturnalia Is Theme of Classical Honorary Party

Members of the Eta Sigma Phi classical honorary fraternity, will give a Christmas party tomorrow night at eight o'clock for all members of the Classical club. The party will be held at Ruge hall with decorations and entertainment carrying out the theme of a Roman Saturnalia.

In a short introduction information will be given on the following: "History and Origin of the Saturnalia" by Martha Whitaker, "Survivals in Christian Christmas" by Rebecca Keith; "Messianic Prophecy in Vergil" by Mary Etta Thistlethwaite; and "Story of St. Francis" by Avaline Lancaster.

A quartet composed of Mickey Conn, Lois Bowen, Dorothy Moorhead, and Pat Patterson will sing the Christmas carols, "There's a Song in the Air," and "Adeste Fidelis."

Margaret Roe, who will be crowned king of Saturnralia, will act as master of ceremonies presenting the following program based upon the different sections of Rome:

Suibura: juggling, Muriel Nelson; strong man, Elizabeth Weatherly; tight rope walking, Lela Rushing; Esquiline: a tableau based upon Horace's ode to Asteria, Lillian Turlington in charge; Capitoline: fortune telling, Doris Bourgeois; palatine: sportula: dancing, Catherine Tackash; and forum: death of Rex Saturnalia.

Refreshments will be served in little Sportulae in the manner in which the Roman patron distributed food to his clients.

Men on Faculty Say, "No Barrels, Please"

If you see your favorite professor wearing brown shoes with a black suit or grey tweeds to the next Artist Series, search your mind to see if you didn't once borrow a tuxedo from him for Odd demonstration or a pair of shoes for a skit.

Several faculty members have been complaining of the failure of students to return their wearing apparel and of the resulting depletion of their wardrobes. These faculty members from either the proverbial absent-mindedness or from politeness have forgotten the students who borrowed their clothes and are making a request that the clothes be returned even if they were borrowed a year ago. So if you don't want to rent a pair of shoes for the next play, bring in the clothes and all will be forgiven!

Cabinet Gives Party For Nursery Tots

The Y. W. C. A. cabinet is sponsoring a Christmas party for the tots of the nursery school this afternoon in the nursery school building. They are furnishing the refreshments of hot chocolate and cookies, and presenting the children with a gift which they can all enjoy, such as a big red wagon.

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

WILSON'S
Pre-Christmas SALE
Beginning Friday, December 14th

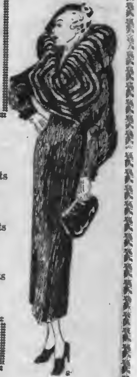
Silk and Wool Dresses
$8.95 Dresses
—SALE PRICE—
$4.48
$10.95 Dresses
—SALE PRICE—
$5.48
$12.95 Dresses
—SALE PRICE—
$6.48
$14.95 Dresses
—SALE PRICE—
$7.48
$18.95 Dresses
—SALE PRICE—
$9.48
$24.75 Dresses
—SALE PRICE—
$12.38

Sweater Coats
We have about a dozen and a half of the staple coat sweaters for women that we desire to move.
$3.50 QUALITY—SALE PRICE
$2.69
$4.95 QUALITY—SALE PRICE
$3.89

Coats and Suits
$12.95 Coats and Suits
—SALE PRICE—
$6.48
$14.75 Coats and Suits
—SALE PRICE—
$7.38
$18.75 Coats and Suits
—SALE PRICE—
$9.38
$18.95 Coats and Suits
—SALE PRICE—
$9.48
$29.75 Coats and Suits
—SALE PRICE—
$14.88
$39.75 Coats and Suits
—SALE PRICE—
$19.88

We have a varied selection of holiday novelties, lamps, costume jewelry, vanity sets, make-up boxes, bridge sets.

P. W. Wilson Co.
—SINCE 1837—



Start Reviewing
Now
For Examinations

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

Hear Briggs Lecture
At
Art Exhibit Monday

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, January 11, 1935 NUMBER THIRTEEN

NSFA Meeting Urges Federal Youth Service

Organization Affiliates With International Confederation

DELEGATES WILL DELIVER REPORTS

To Tell Student Body Of Public and Campus Affairs Soon

Boldly claiming to represent 1,000,000 American students in all matters affecting college and public life, the National Student Federation of America closed its tenth annual congress at Boston last week with a projected program for extending its national and international activity and for localizing its influence within campus groups.

Official reports on the congress will be made by the Florida State delegation in the near future. Louise Robertson, senior delegate, will speak in convocation on the Federation's activity in public affairs, and Katherine Blood, junior delegate, will report on student government affairs in an open meeting of senate, according to a decision made by the executive council this week.

C. I. E. Affiliates

Cooperation which the NSFA has maintained for some years with the Confederation Internationale des Etudiants culminated last week in its formal affiliation, effective as of July 1, 1935. The Cie, which has a fifteen year record of internationalizing student interests in Europe, was represented at Boston by its president, Dennis Follows, of the University of Nottingham, who outlined the ideals and practical accomplishments of the Cie and who made an impassioned plea for Anglo-American cooperation to save the tradition of freedom in civilization.

The Lang plan for a Federal Youth Service within the U. S. Department of the Interior to coordinate all government activities in behalf of youth and to attack unemployment and the causes of crime was officially endorsed by the Federation and its passage urged in the present session of congress. This program, due to the efforts of John Lang, president of NSFA, has received the active support of the U. S. office of Education and the sympathetic consideration of President Roosevelt. If the Youth Service is set up as proposed by the Federation, it will take a place beside the National Institution of Public Affairs as a constructive accomplishment of national import. The idea of the Institution of Public Affairs, a two months training course in government for college students, was presented at last year's congress of the Federation, with the support of leaders in education and government the Institution has been set up, and will open its first session in Washington next February, with major NSFA officers on its advisory board.

Opposes Military Training

Efforts to abolish compulsory military training, which have heretofore run against stone-wall opposition in Congress, were pressed vigorously by the NSFA with the assurance that it will be a major objective of a powerful bloc of congressmen in this year's sessions. This congressional drive will be the first government recognition of an organised student movement to revise the National Defense act of 1916 to make military education elective rather than compulsory.

The problem of academic freedom, which has loomed during the past year as a major problem confronting American students, received aggressive action by the NSFA congress, which revised its constitution to place an unqualified statement on academic freedom in the preamble, and which

(Continued on Page Three)

Bagley to Visit Here

According to Dean Nathaniel M. Salley, students who will attend the summer session of 1935 may be interested to hear that Dr. W. C. Bagley of the teacher's college of Columbia university will be here one week of the summer term. During this time Dr. Bagley will lecture, head round table discussions and hold conferences with students and faculty.

Doyle Names Dates To Change Program

Beginning January 14 and continuing until January 26, students may change their schedules for next semester, according to an announcement from the registrar's office.

A new schedule card will be sent to every student and a definite time will be set for its return, filled out, to the registrar's office.

Faculty Go To FEA Meeting

Nineteen From College Attend; Twelve Are On Program

Nineteen member of the Florida State college faculty attended the forty-ninth annual meeting of the Florida Education association held at the Mayflower hotel in Jacksonville, January 2-4. Tallahassee was further represented by five members of the Demonstration school faculty, six members of the Leon high school faculty, and ten lay persons interested in the educational trend of the day.

The Florida Education association encourage a State organization of teachers wit hthe purpose of fostering an improved professional standard and the best in public support. Twelve Florida State faculty members were speakers on the program of the meeting which dealt with the problems confronting teachers in their work today.

Education Speakers

Speakers from the education department included Dr. Marion Hay, Dr. D. H. Briggs, Dr. M. H. De Graff and Dr. R. E. Eyman. Dr. Hay spoke on "Modernizing Modern Languages in Florida," and Dr. Briggs on "Testing and Guidance Programs of High School Pupils Thorugh Cooperation with Principals." Dr. De Graff's subject was "Minimum Requirements for Preparation and Certification of Teachers." Dr. Eyman spoke on "Latin in the Secondary Schools of Tomorrow." Dean Olivia Dorman also spoke on this topic.

There were three speakers from the department of physical education. Miss Marjorie Mayer spoke on "Enriching the Physical Education Program Through Acquatics." "Interesting Phases of Physical Education Work in Florida" was the subject of a talk by Miss Mary Settle. Miss Dorothy White spoke on "Enriching the Physical Education Program Through Camping."

Dr. Hugh Waskom of the psychology department gave an address on "Remedial Studies of Problem Children" and Miss Edith West of the department of modern languages spoke on "The Celebration of Horace." "The Relation of the Emergency Nursery School to Home Economics Education" was the topic discussed by Dr. Ruth Connor of the home economics department. H. F. Becker of the geography department, spoke on "The Development of Geography Based on Relationship Thinking."

Miss Florence Tryon and Kenneth Williams of the Demonstration school were also on the program. Miss Tryon spoke on "Findings of Investigations of Social Studies Teaching in Florida" and Mr. Williams participated in a discussion on "Planning the Science Lesson to Suit Varying Levels of Capacity."

Other faculty members who attended the meeting were Dr. Edward Conradi, Dr. N. M. Salley, Miss Emily P. Wilburn, Miss Bernice Deetz, Dr. Mildred Burlingame, Miss Boletha Frojen, H. F. Becker, and Miss Nita Pyburn, Miss Rachel Gregg, Miss Margaret McCurdie, and Miss Ruth Taylor from the Demonstration school also atetnded the meeting.

Association Official To Visit Tallahassee

Miss Jeanette Kelly of Williamsburg, Virginia, director of the south Atlantic section of the American Association of University Women, will be in Tallahassee on Tuesday, January 15th, according to Dr. Jennie Tilt, publicity director of the Tallahassee branch of A. A. U. W.

Miss Kelly is on a tour through the state, visiting the various branches and working out plans for the next sectional meeting.

The Tallahassee chapter of A. A. U. W. will entertain Miss Kelly at a coffee in Reynolds parlor on Tuesday afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock at which time the visitor will speak. Members of the senior class are to be invited to this meeting.

FERA Studies Electric Rate In Tallahassee

Sixty-five Students Will Suspend Regular Work For Investigation

SURVEY MUST BE ENDED BY FEB. 1

Dr. Richards Will Take Charge, Assisted By Miss Lynn

Regular work done by sixty-five of the students under the Federal Emergency Relief Administration has been temporarily suspended by orders from the Federal Power commission in Washington in order that these FERA workers may be employed in making an electric rate survey of the city of Tallahassee.

Instructions were not received here until the beginning of the holidays so that the work on the survey could not get under way before this week, said Dr. Harold F. Richards, who was appointed by President Edward Conradi to act as supervisor of the work.

Detailed Information

The information desired by the Federal Power commission includes detailed data regarding electrical appliances used by consumers in this city, together with the monthly consumption of electric energy and the charge made for it month by month over a period of thirty months.

Students are gathering this information from records made available by city authorities and by personal calls at selected residences in accordance with instructions for making the survey.

The survey must be in Washington by February 1, Dr. Richards stated, but intensive efforts are being made to complete it before examination week.

Appreciates Cooperation

"We appreciate the cooperation extended by the student workers, by the faculty members, who have temporarily lost their student assistants' time, and by the city officials, by T. E. Perkins, and by the Leon Electric company. Furthermore, we are glad to show our appreciation for the Federal assistance thus far granted the state by extending our full cooperation to the government in its study of public utilities," Dr. Richards said yesterday.

Mrs. Harold F. Richards and Miss Elizabeth Lynn, instructor in physics here, are also lending assistance in planning and supervising the investigation of the student workers.

Dean Present At Musicians' Meet

Opperman Made Member Of Ethics Commission Of Association

Miss Ella Scoble Opperman, dean of the school of music attended the fifty-sixth annual convention of the National Association of Schools of Music, held in Milwaukee, Wisconsin December 26-28. She was elected a member of the Commission on Ethics of the National Association of Schools of Music for a term of three years. Dean Opperman has served in the capacity of officer or committeeman almost the entire time she has been a member of the association.

According to Dean Opperman there was a large attendance and a well organized, highly entertaining, and instructive program of events. Howard Hanson, considered one of the outstanding American musicians, was present and made a report as chairman of a committee which has been working for the past year on the subject of graduate study in music.

Other prominent musicians and educators present included George S. Dickinson, Cecil Burleigh, Paul Boepple, Arthur Riemschneider, Otto Ortmann, and Hans Barth. Concerts, recitals and demonstrations presented throughout the convention included the Valcross Eurythmics demonstration, the McDowell club orchestra, Rudolph Gans, pianist, lyric male chorus, Milwaukee woodwind ensemble, Augustana choir, and Louise Lockwood Carpenter.

Students Returning to College Bring Bumper Crop of Tall Tales

To Hold Elections For Annual Section

Elections for the feature section of the Flastacowo will be held at convocation in the near future, according to Hazel Goss, editor.

There will be eight students selected to represent the qualities of beauty, intelligence, best personality, dignity, sportsmanship, charm, wit, and originality.

Quartet Will Give Program

Curtis Institute Group Returns for Second Engagement

The Curtis string quartet, sponsored by the Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia, will present a concert in the auditorium of the Florida State College for Women Monday, January 21, at 8:15 p. m. The members of the quartet include Jascha Brodsky, violin; Benjamin Sharlip, violin; Max Aronoff, viola; and Orlando Cole, violincello.

The instruments they will use were given to members of the quartet upon its organization from the very famous collection of the Curtis Institute of Music. The viola is the oldest of the instruments, having been made by Gasparo de Salo, Brescia, in 1570. The violincello is the product of Giovanni Rogeri, Brescia, made in 1701; the two violins, one by Francesco Goffriller, Venice, and the other by Pietro Guanerius, Venice, were made in 1725 and 1750 respectively. With these rare old instruments the tone quality of the Curtis String Quartet is said to be of transcendental loveliness.

The New York Times said of them, "The voice of the four instruments was fused into a tone of ingratiating warmth of beautiful quality;" while "Few quartets could perform their music with such a wealth of tone, such fervor and intensity," is the statement of the Boston Post. The critic of the Chicago American stated: "I was enchanted with the lovely singing quality of their ensemble tone, the spontaniety, the earnestness and happy esprit de corps demonstrated in the concerted effort."

Beth Lancaster Is Tennis Champ

Wins State Women's Title In Amateur Contest In Jacksonville

Beth Lancaster of Gainesville, senior at Florida state, holds the state women's tennis championship as the result of her victory in the matches held January 2 at Riverside courts, Jacksonville. In the semi-finals, Beth beat the newly crowned girl's champion from Miami, Patty Kilmartin, with scores of 7-5, 9-7. In the finals, she won from Mrs. Catherine Sample, defending champion from Miami, with a score of 8-6, 6-4.

In the women's intercollegiate tournament held last spring, Beth, representing Wellesley college, went to the finals in both singles and doubles to be ceded fourth in this match.

Extend Length of Time For Honors Work Exam

Upon recommendation of the honors committee Wednesday, regulations governing the final comprehensive examinations required of honors students who are candidates for honors degrees have been changed to extend the examination period one-half hour. This change was made in response to requests by the students for more time on the examinations.

Under the new regulations, the written examination surveying the general field of the major subject will be of from two and one-half to three hours' duration. The examination dealing with the phase of phases of the major field in which the students' advanced independent study has been concerned will now be of two and one-half hours' duration instead of the two heretofore allowed.

Curious Adventures Are Result of Holiday Celebration

With a squealing of brakes and a shrieking of bus sirens the students of Florida State College for Women trekked back to the campus after the Christmas holidays, some of them quite a bit the worse for their vacations.

One bus-load of students arrived just in time for their eleven-thirty classes Monday morning, their bus having broken down outside of Greenville, Florida. It seems that the bus company being pushed for means of transporting all the students headed for Tallahassee had run in a bus which had very little gas in the tank. The result was a trip of some miles being pushed by another bus also loaded with returning students. The students who arrived late missed one or two classes. The students in the bus that pushed them had stiff necks caused by the jolting as their bus contacted the bus in front. But all arrived in Tallahassee safely and none of them will have to repeat their recent experience until next June, at the very earliest.

Among the minor casualties was the loss of two teeth in an automobile wreck by one of the sophomores. Another girl, a senior, bought a ticket on the wrong railroad and almost didn't get home for the holidays. Two sophomes inspected the steamship Cherokee, during one of her recent visits in Jacksonville. The unusualness of this inspection lies in the fact that the girls went right to the bottom of the boat. At the lowest point they were sixteen feet under water with only about five-eighths of an inch of steel between them and the fish outside.

One student who wants to be a laboratory technician went to watch an autopsy in one of her hometown hospitals. She still wishes to be a lab technician nevertheless.

Among the still more minor

(Continued on Page Three)

New Students To Enter Soon

Registrar Now Receiving Applications For Second Term

Sixteen reservations have been definitely honored by the registrar's office for enrollment next semester and additional applications have been filed. Applications are coming in daily, Mr. Doyle stated yesterday. He expects an enrollment of from twenty-five to fifty new students for next term.

Those who have already paid their fees include five freshmen, three transfers, and eight old students who are returning to the campus to complete their college work.

Among those returning are Adele Barnard, St. Petersburg, Fla.; Annabel Gruppe, Tampa, Florida; Willie Mae Hall, Auburndale, Fla.; Dorothy C. McCall, Miami, Fla.; and Blance Elizabeth White, Tallahassee, Fla., all of whom are freshmen. The transfers so far include Mary E. Brantley, Jacksonville, Fla., a transfer from Smith college; Bertie Mackery, Carrabelle, Fla., a transfer from the University of Georgia, Southwestern, and Martha Berry colleges; and Erin Turner, Freenwood, Fla., a transfer from Montreat college. Old students who have already registered are Esther Blattner, Jacksonville, Fla.; Adelaide Emanuel, Ocala, Fla.; Annabel Graves, Quincy, Fla.; Louise Hill, Tampa, Fla.; Naomi Mallory, Wellborn, Fla.; Mrs. Geneva Fisher Morris, Miami, Fla.; Agnes Irene Reedy, Pensacola, Fla.; and Mrs. Mary Steffee Degtoff, Kissimmee, Fla.

Graduates Are Placed

With an increase of 104 requests for student graduates over the previous year, eighty-nine per cent of the 1934 graduates, as compared with sixty-seven per cent of 1933, were placed on teaching and other positions, the personnel department recently announced.

This year there were 322 requests for teachers as compared with 118 last year. There were twenty-one requests in other fields, whereas there were but three such requests the previous year. Many of these, however, were for work on FERA projects.

Exhibition Of Water Colors Is On Display

Artist Series Committee Sponsors Collection Of Fifty-six

MISS BRIGGS TO LECTURE MONDAY

Sketches By Outstanding Americans May Be Seen This Week

A collection of water colors by American artists will be on exhibition in room 306 of the Administration building until Wednesday, January 16th.

The exhibit opened yesterday and is the second of the series of art exhibits to be brought to the college this year by the Artists Series committee. Its water colors are the work of some of the most outstanding and representative artists of today.

Fifty-Six Sketches

This collection of modern work includes fifty-six sketches, of which several are outstanding for strength of line. Among these are "Fresh Strawberries," by F. Di Gioia; "Washing Clothes," by Lamar Dodd; "Depression of 1918," by Thomas Donnelly; "Manhattan," by Reginald Marsh; "Water Front," by George Pickens, and "Five Sisters," by J. C. McPherson. In the "Five Sisters," an impressionistic work, the line dominates all else. According to critics this gives a crudely daring yet strong protrayal of the five subjects.

Example of Cubism Shown

Several sketches are notable for subiety of tint and shading and delicacy of line. The "Sea Plant," by Isolde T. Gilbert, has these qualities which give a feeling of lightness and piquancy.

All students who desire to learn a little of the work and lives of the various artists whose work is on exhibit may attend the lecture to be given by Miss Amy Ferris Briggs, of the art faculty, Monday, January 14, at four thirty in room 307 Administration building.

The sketches may be seen during the following hours: today, 9:30-5:00; tomorrow, 9:30-12:30; and Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, 9:30-5:00.

Visitor to Speak At Local Church

R. S. Ross to Lecture On Christian Science Tonight

The coming week will feature important events in the denominational activities of college students, with a visiting lecturer speaking on Christian Science, a reception honoring the new pastor of the Christian church, special Presbyterian and Episcopal services, and a Methodist conference.

Robert Stanley Ross, of New York city, and a member of the Board of Lectureship of the First Church separate of Christ Scientist in Boston, will speak tonight at 8:15 at the local church. He comes here unde rthe auspices of the First Church of Christ, Science of Boston, and is presented in the annual free lecture offered by the First Church of Christ, Science church in Tallahassee.

New Pastor Honored

The recently established Capitol Christian church is giving a reception in honor of the Rev. Gerald Culbertson, their new pastor, this evening at eight o'clock at the banquet hall of the Masonic Temple. Reverend Culbertson, of West Palm Beach, has formerly occupied a pulpit in Atlanta, Georgia. The Rev. Jeffrey Alfriend, Episcopal rector, will give the welcoming address. Mrs. Rachel M Owen is arranging a musical program, and Mrs. C. C. Williams is in charge of refreshments.

Under the leadership of the Rev. Culbertson, the Christians are hoping to begin construction of a church soon on the church property on Park avenue.

The Presbyterian student league will present a New Year's program meeting Sunday evening. Marjorie Pain is in charge of arrangements.

An Epiphany service, "Feast of

(Continued on Page Three)

Yale Singers May Be Here in March

The Yale University Glee club is tentatively scheduled to appear here March 27 as a part of the Artist series program for the year, according to an announcement made yesterday. Mr. Walter Ruel Cowles, alumnus of the university, is in charge of arrangements.

The club will be on tour through the southern states this spring and will give a concert March 26 in Jacksonville, after which they will appear in New Orleans. On learning of the proposed tour, Governor Sholtz extended the glee club an invitation to stop over here en route and give a concert in the auditorium. Arrangements have not been made definite as yet.

Florida State Receives Gift

College Selected to Get Music Material From Carnegie Fund

Florida State College for Women is one of twenty-seven universities chosen to receive a set of music study material including a phonograph, records, music scores, books and a catalog, worth $2,500, as a gift from the Carnegie corporation of New York, according to information received yesterday by President Edward Conradi.

The set is one selected by a group of leading educators for use in the cultural, not professional, study of music. G. Schirmer, Inc., of New York has compiled the sets, twenty of which have already been distributed with seven more ordered. The condition upon which the gift is received is that the college will provide a special depository for the entire set where students will have free access to it, and that the material not be a duplication of that already possessed by the institution.

The set will include one Capehart phonograph with a special automatic record-changing device. The 824 records will extend from compositions of ancient Greece through modern works, will be grouped in 136 volumes by type, and will be contained in a specially-constructed cabinet which will be included in the gift. The scores of 251 musical compositions, some in full and some in miniature, will also be contained in a special file. Included in the set is a music library of 129 volumes, historical, biographical and technical books. A full descriptive catalog accompanies the material.

Members of Freshman Class to Have Charge Of Vespers for Sunday

The vespers program Sunday evening will be directed and presented by members of the Freshman class. Otherwise, the usual procedure will be followed throughout the evening, the program consisting of the devotional period, musical selections, and appropriate readings.

Margaret Brown will have charge of the devotional and Mickey Conn will direct the choir.

The music to be rendered on this occasion consists of several special numbers, including "Into the Woods My Master Went," "Softly Now the Light of Day," "Anchored," "The Cradle Song," and "Hymn to Diana."

Ushers for the eevning will be Martha Lester, Virginia White, Virginia Northcutt, Evelyn Robson, Lois Askins, and Ellen Wiggins.

Posters telling about the program have been placed about the campus. Ruth Sadler is chairman of the advertising committee.

Sociology FERA Group Studies Insanity Laws

The sociology department here through its FERA workers is assisting the Florida Association for Promotion of Social Legislation in compiling a study of the various states' laws regarding the insane.

Three FERA workers are at present copying the content of all the statutes found in records at the state library and at the supreme court.

It is expected that the association will use this data in devising social laws for Florida to be brought up at the next meeting of the state legislature in the spring.

Entire State Will Observe FSCW Week

Plans Are Announced For Publicity Campaign February 3-9

DORMAN WILL BE GENERAL CHAIRMAN

Banquet Honoring Sholtz Will Be Climaxing Campus Event

Plans for a state-wide F. S. C. W. week to be held February 3 to 9, in which students, alumnae, faculty, and citizens of Florida will participate, were announced yesterday by Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, dean of students, who will act as general chairman.

The purpose of the 1935 week is three-fold, namely, to make contacts with alumnae chapters, stimulate their work, and encourage organization of alumnae chapters where they do not exist; to bring information regarding all phases of the college to the public throughout the state, and interest alike both citizens and prospective students; and to give appropriate publicity to the installation of a Phi Beta Kappa chapter here.

Publicity Campaign

An extensive publicity campaign will swing into action during the week throughout the state which has been divided into four sections. Each of these will be covered by a member of the faculty who will give talks in the larger communities on the history and development of the college. In addition, prominent alumnae have been asked to speak before high schools, women's clubs, girls' clubs, Kiwanis and Rotary clubs throughout the state. Alumnae luncheons and dinners will be held all during the week with members of the college faculty and local Phi Beta Kappa members present.

The main event of F. S. C. W. week on campus will be a formal banquet to be given by the college in honor of Governor David Sholtz, members of the Board of Control, members of the Board of Education, presidents of all the colleges throughout the state, Senator William Hodges, and others.

Alumnae Letters

Letters are being sent to presidents of alumnae chapters in the state and to prominent alumnae in large communities where there is no chapter, giving information regarding plans and asking cooperation. Members of the executive council of the Alumnae association and representatives of Phi Beta Kappa in large centers, will also receive letters outlining proposed activities.

Committees whose appointments were announced yesterday by Dean Dorman are: committee on information to be given out, S. R. Doyle, chairman, Dr. Ralph Eyman, Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, and Dr. Margaret R. Sandels; committee on contacting local clubs, Mrs. J. G. Kellum, chairman, for Federated Women's clubs, Miss Sadie G. Young for A. A. U. W., Miss Florence R. Tryon for Pan-Hellenic, Dr. Herman Kurz for Kiwanis and Dr. Mark DeGraff for Rotarians.

The committee for preparing exhibits includes Miss Edith West, chairman, Miss Bernice Deetz, Miss Hazel Stevenson, and Miss Emma Keis. The committee on radio publicity is composed of J. G Kellum, chairman, Dean Ella S Opperman and Mrs. Mary H Buford. The committee on contacting Phi Beta Kappas will consist of Dean Dorman as chairman, Dr. Harold Richards and Claude Pepper.

The committee on contacting alumnae is Miss Rowena Longmire, chairman, Dean Dorman, Miss Louise Richardson, Miss Anna Mae Tracy, Miss Ruth Schornherst, and Miss Flavia Gleason.

Seniors to File Cards

Seniors and two-year certificate candidates have been requested by Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews, director of personnel, to file their pledge cards, registration and reference cards in the personnel office immediately, and to file photographs as soon as possible.

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF
BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON .... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Athea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchanges, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyne Wahnish, Copy Editor, Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedra McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Pain, Virginia Early, Ruth Parsons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF
ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS ... Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS .... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON .... Circulation Manager
Ass't. Adv. Manager, Mary Patterson; Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sara Beth Davis.

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Answering the SOS Call of Democracy

The light of democracy has not gone out, but it is flickering low. The time has almost arrived when we will no longer speak of safeguarding our constitutional rights, but of rescuing them. American civilization is threatened by political forces that look not to legitimate political action but to revolution for their coming into power, not to the will of the people but to tyranny for their endurance. These forces are permeating many of our educational institutions, attracting students of intelligence and talent, who somehow fail to see that social change to be of permanent value must result from reason, not from force, must depend upon free inquiry, not upon suppression.

The only legitimate way of striking at the growing radical elements in college ranks is to reassert the fundamentals of freedom and democracy in campus as well as national life, and to set up college communities in which future leaders will be conditioned in the political practice of a free democracy.

Dr. Henry Noble McCracken, president of Vassar College, speaking at the recent convention of the National Student Federation, made an impassioned plea for a democratic campus regime as a training school for government leaders.

"To keep democracy," the Vassar president declared "we must train for it. To train for it we must have a laboratory. There is no laboratory of government, save government itself. Student government is an ideal instrument for training the future leaders in democracy. As such, I commend it to educators everywhere and ask their indorsement of its national society."

"The present system of college administration," he declared, "which denies to student government all authority except over the most trivial aspects of student life, is a training in petty tyranny such as has been the curse of life in many European countries." The new America, he held, which is likely to be governed far more than formerly "by bureaus of government officials recruited from the ranks of college graduates, needs the laboratory of student self-government."

"I propose, first," he said, "that the student body through their constituent society be granted the right of collective bargaining with the governing board and administration of their college. All plans effecting the welfare of students, the provisions for scholarships and housing conditions, the expansion or contraction of college services, should come before this body."

"I propose, second, that through a student commission on the course of study, undergraduates should have the right of free expression of opinion in all requirements for degrees, as to hours of study, number of courses, standards of work. They should have the right not only of criticizing poor teaching but of seeking redress when such teaching interferes with their profitable use of time and money. The faculty would agree not to pass any important changes without reference to the commission."

No more encouraging sign for the raising of campus standards can be seen than this progressive attitude taken by administrators and educators toward student life. Dr. Robert L. Kelley, secretary of the Association of American college, told students at the same convention that "on behalf of the most alert colleges of the country there is no student interest which is rightly outside the province of student government. In numerous colleges students are participating cooperatively in the educational programs, in committees on building and grounds, and in many other ways are attempting to work out a general standard of civilized life on the campus."

And bringing the point to a local application, may we point with pride to the obviously progressive changes which have come about at Florida State within the past year and to plans which are to effect improvements in student government during the coming year. More significant, however, than any of these technical changes is the alteration in the philosophy of campus government. Many issues are now normally expected to be decided jointly by students and faculty on a basis of common deliberation and cooperation rather than of class conflict. We have already built up an ideology which will promote and stabilize a more democratic and progressive campus regime—when we are ready for it. Let our progress be always unhurried, purposeful and constructive. For, although Dr. McCracken failed to mention it, patience and tolerance are indispensable in the leadership of a democracy.

A Lone And a Blue Eagle Nest on Front Page of American Newspapers

A Lone and a Blue eagle are vying for the attention of the American public.

For the past week American dailies have conscientiously divided their front pages between the Lindbergh trial and Roosevelt's message to Congress.

As entirely antithical as they may seem, these two stories, one of the trial and one of the president's message, dovetail in two particulars. Both are redolent of the sensational, and both are indicative of America's wish for security. In the right hand column of the home town edition you read of some one whose baby has been kidnaped, killed. The alleged murderer is on trial. Justice must be rendered; the wrong must be redressed. The child might have been your baby home sleeping in bed. You sympathize with some one who thought he was secure and wasn't. That some one might have been you, and you want security.

You want security. In the left hand column of the home town paper you find Franklin D. Roosevelt promising you the fulfillment of that very desire.

You shall not want for his program includes "security of livelihood." He will lead you in the paths away, from the "major hazards and vicissitudes of life," and you shall dwell in "decent homes" forever. Your children shall not be kidnaped by night for he will "strengthen the laws for the prevention, detection, and treatment of crime and criminals. Nor shall you meet doom as you travel by day on Morro Castles for he shall "regulate transportation."

He will care for the widows and orphans by old age pensions and benefits for children. He will abolish holding companies and taper off the emergency credit activities of government. He will renew and clarify the NIRA.

And all these things shall be added unto you if congress is willing. But it is scarcely conceivable that this body will block the president's new work-relief plan. They have no alternative. There can be no turning back now. The welkin sounds "Forward."

And as the president grinds out messages to congress and witnesses take the stand in the courthouse at Flemington, N. J., the American public will read the front page of tonight's edition to see "how they are doing" on this security proposition. May they read, not just lines, but around and through lines. May they neither swallow whole nor refuse to taste Franklin D. Roosevelt's "New Order." May they decide for themselves just how much security they want.

Does the creation of intelligent attitudes, integration of knowledge and training in thinking processes have any place at all in the prerequisites for promotion of students or the conferring of degrees in a college? One is forced to wonder when hearing a senior at Florida State enlighten a group of students with the statement that "We need a war to bring back prosperity!" The problem of war can be studied and solved only when the data of all the social sciences are integrated and simultaneously brought to bear on the matter at hand. The same applies to any other problem confronting contemporary civilization.

Magazine Thumbings

By Melvyne Wahnish

WOES OF A SOUTHERN LIBERAL

By James M. Shieldes
The American Mercury, January

Shieldes states that the heart of the new south is typified today even as it was in years past by a caste system, only the system of today has many new and vicious complications. At the top of the system is supposed to be the new aristocracy which is composed of a small but all-powerful group of landowners. At the bottom of the caste is the poor whites and the poor blacks. He predicts that the day of a halfway liberal policy is passing. Southern liberals are faced everywhere with racial disputes and prejudices, and unfair discriminatory child-labor laws. Most insidious perhaps of all might be the conditions existing in the schools of the south. Shieldes has this information first hand because he was kicked out of the school of Winston-Salem on account of a book which he wrote exposing the "tobacracy" which controlled the Winston-Salem school boards.

THE SAAR—AND HUMAN NATURE

By Edgar Packard Dean
Harpers, January

Dean suggests that before we attempt to understand the politics which have been influential in molding world history we should follow Socrates in the advice which he gave the world many many years ago, "Know Thyself." Of course there is implied in this the thought, you must know thy neighbor also.

We have a problem in the Saar because men take some sort of fiendish joy in collecting the spoils of war, which reviewing the past we find has been anything from women, religious converts to economic resources.

We are told that although France has been a fairy godmother to the Saar she has not received any thanks from that region, nor is it likely that she shall. Hitler in his campaign to establish Nazi prestige rather than German unity has done much to turn the Saarlanders away from their mother country.

WHY PEOPLE SMOKE

By Fernand Kabus
The Forum, January

Kabus points out that many of the intellectuals are extremely fond of cigarettes, cigars, and pipes, and then he proceeds to tell us why. He would have us believe that sensitiveness and emotionalism are necessary by-products of the development of the mental faculties. He tells us that once tobacco was used to chase off mosquitoes, and then he hastens to add, "It still is used to chase off mosquitoes, mosquitoes of the mind—worries, doubts, and fears."

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticisms. Letters should be signed, marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the postoffice.

GROW UP, STUDENTS

This is an appeal to the maturity of college women. For despite their reactions in convocation, it is to be presupposed that students at the average age of eighteen are actually mature.

It seems almost ludicrous to have to remind college women that one does not munch apples, write letters, or thumb newspapers in public audiences. Such behavior is rude, discourteous, heathenish.

It is hardly necessary to reiterate all this. Every college student recognizes bad taste when she sees it. The point is, that recognizing these things to be in poor taste, a certain group still continues to maintain an aloof and individual attitude toward convocation.

If this reaction had only personal results, nothing would be said. But when reactions have social consequences complaints are justified.

Because certain students insist on maintaining an impassive and more often a rebellious overt attitude toward chapel programs, the rest of the student body is being denied the privilege of interesting visiting speakers. Two persons of note are coming to Tallahassee soon. They have not been asked to speak here because the faculty fears that a few bumptious young women may refuse to be ladies at convocation. No more need be said as to the unfairness of this situation.

Upperclassmen, freshmen, are you afraid to expose yourself to enlightenment one hour a week? You complain about uninteresting chapel programs, and yet your own actions preclude those in charge from offering you any improvement.

Start the new year right, and ladies, be good at convocation.

Signed: Marjorie Harris.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By "Shorty" Hoffman

FORGIVE US OUR PREJUDICES

BY LUCY FULGHUM

The holly-days being past and our new resolutions no sooner made than broken, we have returned to school with a week of exams staring us in our faces. For the freshmen, who have endured only seven days of quarterly tests, the tension of the exam week will be a new experience. The nervous chatter and clatter in the dining rooms which is heightened exceedingly during this bi-annual orgy of cramming will be a curious phenomenon for those of us who are speculative enough to notice it. It is even more curious to observe how contagious the garrulity of examination days can be. The quietest and the most conservative members of our student body will soon outdo themselves branding questioneers with superlatives of one sort or another. Voices will be pitched not only higher but much louder and the manner of each speaker will be that "My voice is still for war."

If Bacon were yet in our midst, he would no doubt give some practical advice on remaining aloof, much as he counseled us on the art of holding our heads when we assumed positions of "great place." Probably he would have said to endure the seige as one would a plague of hot weather which fretting will in no wise alleviate. An end must come to everything and even exams will soon be done and past, and the tenor of our way shall resume its low pitch which the shrill voices of the occasional chronic complainers can little alter.

◆

Rocco was a young boy apprenticed to a goldsmith, and his youthful buoyancy could be paralleled only by his unscrupulousness—or so it is that Manuel Komroff recounts the tale in his Coronet. Rocco stole some gold filings from his master, invested in all the pigs possible about his country-side, and declined to sell at the market time. Late in the season he flooded the market with his pigs at a low price which consequently sent the prices of all pigs staggering, and then he staged a coup d'etat by buying all the pigs offered for sale about him at an extremely low premium. At the next hog killing season he again refused to sell, and at a later date flooded the market again, causing the prices for pig meat to be lower yet. Obviously it was little or no time before he had the market cornered, and pursuing the same tactics, he gathered riches and power to his bosom until he was one of the wealthiest and most potent men in all Italy.

Rocco's progress was phenomenal, but even more astounding is the fact that he could actually be so insensitive to people about him that he could plan to rob them of their livings. Do not let this be misunderstood. It is obvious that even Pollyanna must recognize the existence of innumerable swindlers who craze the world, but the average person is shocked into asking "how did they ever get that way?" Someday perhaps we shall have an autobiography which traced the development of selfishness or arrogance in a personality.

◆

Apparently the worst plagues of an author's life are the people who think it is more important for them to buy a book than for the man to write one.

(Continued on Page Four)

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

MILITARY TRAINING UPHELD BY SUPREME COURT

Those people who believe in preparedness and military training to guard against the possibility of another war catching the United States in the disabled military condition by which she was handicapped when entering the World war, gained a great victory Monday when the United States Supreme court handed down a unanimous decision upholding the right of universities to compel military training.

The court ruled that constitutional guarantees of religious liberty do not operate to permit college students with scruples against war to refuse military training in the state universities.

The ruling holds that the government has certain obligations to the people "to preserve itself in adequate strength to maintain peace and order," and that every citizen "owes the reciprocal duty, according to his capacity, to support and defend government against all enemies."

Newton D. Baker, famous statesman, hit the keynote of the purposes of preparedness in a recent address. He says: "God forbid that I should want anybody to go to war, but I am too old to be otherwise than frank. The attitude of many youths and many churches in seeking to avoid war by having nothing to do with it is flight from reality. If this nation became involved in another war the young men would be drafted, in spite of any pledges or desires, or position or responsibility.

"It is just as foolish to say you won't have anything to do with war as it would be if you were walking through a forest and were attacked by a lion, to say you wouldn't have anything to do with the lion."

Sveinbjorn Johnson in an address given at Purdue university last May classified those persons agitating against the R. O. T. C. into two general groups. First, those individuals and organizations who seek the overthrow of the present economic and political system. These people are desirous of destruction of patriotism, which will of course prevent the fulfilling of the overthrow of the present system.

Then there is the second group, says Johnson, that oppose military training because it tends to promote and bring on war. This class includes the ministers and clergymen.

To the average Georgia student, we do not believe that the first class needs to be debunked. At Georgia, however, the average college student little realizes the communistic and fascistic groups that control northern colleges and universities. In the North these societies are hard at work to overthrow the present government and, realizing the credulence of the average student, start in the universities.

For the second class, we believe that their ignorance of the aims and purposes of military training accounts for the ridiculous statements and assertions that they make. The R. O. T. C. seeks to

(Continued on Page Three)

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKER

IN HIS opening message to congress the president outlined the general ideals and aims of the administration in regard to the legislation to be enacted by the Seventy-fourth Congress. Perhaps the ringing keynote of the chief executive's address was his statement, "The federal government must and shall quit this business of relief."

To this end the president proposes a unified public works program of clearing slums, building power lines in rural districts, eliminating railroad crossings and so on. The president also favors unemployment and old age insurance. In brief, the aims of the administration in regard to legislation are "the consolidation of federal regulatory administration over all forms of transportation, the renewal and clarification of the general purposes of the National Industrial Recovery Act, the strengthening of our facilities for the prevention, detection, and treatment of crime and criminals, the restoration of sound conditions in the public utilities field through the abolition of the evil features of holding companies, the gradual tapering off of credit activities of the government, and improvement of our taxation forms and methods." In short specific messages to congress from time to time the President will outline the ways by which the congress is to materialize these aims of the administration.

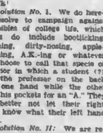
FROM ROME comes the news that Italy and France have formed an agreement, the main feature of which is the guarantee of the freedom of the Austrian Republic. Since the assassination of Dolfuss last summer the fate of the Austrian Republic has been a source of much anxiety throughout all Europe, it being feared that Herr Hitler might suddenly descend upon Austria with his storm troopers. The tension is now eased somewhat with Austrian security guaranteed by two of the strongest powers on the Continent. There is the fear, however, that Austria may now become a province of Il Duce rather than that of der Fuehrer.

Other features of this accord between the two countries are not public at the present time. It is thought that France has accepted Mussolini's ambitions in regard to gaining African possessions.

IN A GRAY little New Jersey village a man is on trial for his life. His trial is perhaps the most famous trial—and most sensational—known in modern times. In that little town, too, the American judicial system and the American people are on trial. It must not be that emotions and prejudices will so overcome us that an innocent man will be sentenced to die. On the other hand, should the German carpenter be acquitted the byword of the underworld may likely become, "Hauptmann got by. Come on." A conviction may well put a stop to the kidnaping wave now sweeping over our country; an acquittal may well give impetus to that wave. Justice must be so meted out that crime will be dealt a crippling blow; yet an innocent man—and we do not imply that the accused is innocent or guilty—must not die. Yes, the American judicial system is on trial.

NOTES ON THE new congress—Representative Byrnes of Tennessee is the speaker of the house; Bankhead of Alabama the majority leader and Snell of New York the minority leader.—There are seven women in the Seventy-fourth Congress—one less than was in the last session. There is one woman senator and six women representatives of which the senator and four representatives are democrats, the other two women representatives being republicans. —Observers are predicting that the senate will be the scene of dramatic testing of the New Deal during the next session. The Senate, knowing no gag rules, will witness many battles—three-cornered ones probably—the three corners being the progressives, about 20 in number, who are far more left wingers than the administration leaders, the conservatives, about 25 in number, who, led by such men as Carter Glass, are known as dyed-in-the-wool right wingers, and the New Dealers, about 40 in number, who are thoroughly in accord with administration policies. That the New Dealers will win every skirmish is no rash prediction, for to think that the two first groups would combine against the third is ludicrous.

Collegiate Come-Backs



With the dawn of a brand new year, it behooves us to make a few resolutions so we'll have something to break besides shoestrings. '—%$'@! (we're winding up our resolver) 1, 2, 3, RESOLVE!

Resolution No. I. We do hereby resolve to campaign against all foibles of college life, which foibles do include bootlicking, browning, dirty-nosing, apple-polishing, A.K.-ing or whatever you choose to call that specie of behavior in which a student (?) pats the professor on the back with one hand while the other picks his pockets for an "A." They had better not let their right hand know what their left hand doeth.

Resolution No. II: We are resolved at the earliest possible opportunity to feed certain pepless, lethargic professors a generous portion of Mexican jumping beans.

Resolution No. III: We are resolved to procure a set of gold-plated spurs such as are commonly used on horses but which we think might come in handy in th 9:30 post-office push.

Resolution No. IV: We would like to see the type of students known as the "greasy grinds" fry in their own fat.

Resolution No. V: Last but not least, we resolve—after March, of course—to be a better gumdrop and write a better colyum. (The new [illegible] comes in in March.)

The Procrastinator's Prayer

'Twas the day after vacation
drew to an end;
Each girl looked like she'd lost her last friend.
Exams were ahead and, more horrible yet,
Unfinished term papers made each one fret,
Each girl did mutter and each girl did swear
As, moaning, she uttered the following prayer—
"Backward, turn backward,
O time in your trend
Make it vacation all over again!"

—Hollins Student Life.

* * * *

The Spotlight says, "The advantages of a college education can hardly be overestimated. Not only is it a boon to the adventurer into the business world, but it is of unparalleled importance in lovemaking. The following conversation was eavesdropped.

She: I love you from the bottom of my left auricle.

He: I love you from the top of my left ventricle.

She: My semi-auricular node is wild about you.

He: My whole circulatory system is crazy about you.

. . . Gee, what Romance with a capital "R". Imagine a moonlight night with someone whispering that at the very sight of you his words stick in his larynx and he has difficulty getting air through his bronchial tubes, that he loves you with all the assorted red and white corpuscles in his body. Ignorance is undoubtedly bliss.

* * * *

We hear upon good authority that the Mid-Winter Festival will not be repeated again this year. Really, when we go to all the work to start a brand-new, shiny tradition, struggle hard to get it on its feet so we will have one more thing to tell freshmen about, why drop it after the first year? We usually have a queen of something or other—we often have several if they're small—why not a festival?

* * * *

From the Alabama College sheet: "Bones rattle in class room, reads a headline in The Florida Flambeau. Sally Satire guessed, before she discovered it was merely a skeleton, that the students were either given a pop quiz or were freezing" . . . Gracious me, how clever of you, Sally. Bet it just never crossed your mind that we might shoot craps with our professors between classes.

* * * *

We see by the exchange that Louisiana State University now has a special class in hypnotism. Wonder if Huey Long condescends to teach the class himself or contents himself with promoting it.

* * * *

"Christopher Morley gave a smothered yelp of delight at a luncheon at the University of Minnesota the other day when a professor described the difference between a university and an insane asylum.

'You have to show improvement to get out of the asylum,' said the professor."

* * * *

We herewith put into print sev-

(Continued on Page Three)

Parish Priest Compares Irish Lass to Co-Ed

Says Colleen Custom of Wedding Late Leaves Time for Work

"Women are alike the world over so far as fashions are concerned, for Irish colleens are as keenly interested as any in Paris creations, cosmetics, and new coiffeurs," stated Father William J. Carroll, local Irish Catholic priest, in a recent interview. Father Carroll, who is the parish priest of the Blessed Sacrament church in Tallahassee, is a native of Ireland and has recently returned from a trip to his home.

"There is very little difference indeed in the Dublin girl and the Tallahassee girl," continued Father Carroll, "for she is just as modern and up-to-date as any girl of today. Sports are as much a part of an Irish girl's life as an American's, with tennis one of the favorites. Tap dancing, or "clogging" as it is called in Ireland, is immensely popular. In the colleges, they play "camogie" which is similar to hockey, but they do not play basketball.

Concerning the shows and motion pictures which play such an important part in American amusement, Father Carroll says that the Irish girls are an even more theater-going group than we. American pictures are shown there, but they are carefully censored, and the stage inclines more toward comedians than chorus girls. "Incidentally," said the priest, smiling, "no one there ever says 'Let's go to a show'; the word implies a place of ill repute, as your word "bowery" does. They always say, 'Let's go to the theater'."

Although there are no night clubs in Dublin there are many public dances which are well attended. Few of the girls smoke, as smoking is still frowned upon, and, generally speaking, none of them drink. Cars are a rare luxury, a fact which often limits dates to the home. If a young man asks a girl to go to the pictures he takes her by "tram." Afterward, they may go to a tea shop for hot tea. It is always "hot" tea, winter or summer, for iced tea is considered an unspeakable ruination of a perfectly good Irish drink.

When asked about courtship and marriage customs, Father Carroll replied that Irish girls marry late in comparison with American girls, and that courtships are usually long. On the average, the girls there marry between the ages of twenty-five and thirty and never before an engagement of two years standing. In the meanwhile they have time to attend college, and to work in the business world for several years. Higher education in Ireland is in the hands of nuns, and does not offer the wide range of courses offered in American colleges. Since there is no woman's suffrage in Ireland, and women do not hold government positions the colleges do not prepare graduates for the field of politics. And unlike the common practice in America of seeking a new city for occupation the Irish girl stays at home with her family and pays her parents for room and board until she marries. "It is interesting to note that most of them do marry if they do not become nuns," said Father Carroll. "That is quite unlike America where there are so many business and professional women who prefer to remain single."

Visitor To Speak At Local Church

(Continued From Page One)

Lights," will be conducted in the chapel of Ruge hall Sunday afternoon at 5 o'clock. Music will be furnished by the junior choir of St. John's Episcopal church. Marie Certain will act as leader and candle-lighters will be Betty Ostlund, Frances Lewis, and Louise Lingo. Following the service refreshments will be served.

This evening at 7:30 an after dinner coffee will be held at Ruge hall.

There will be an Episcopal student vestry meeting Tuesday evening at 6:00 at Ruge hall. Plans for a Lenten program will be discussed. Following the meeting a supper will be served, under the direction of Frances Ellis, Mary Hamilton Meginniss, and Mary Bennett.

The Right Rev. Frank A. Juhan, bishop of the diocese of Florida, will arrive in Tallahassee February 19 to administer the apostolic rite of confirmation. Any Episcopal students who wish to take advantage of this opportunity are asked to get in touch with Miss Kathleen Platt at Ruge hall at once.

The International lesson plan will be introduced in the Methodist Sunday School class this Sunday. Small printed pamphlets will be sent out on Thursday of every week containing the verse of Scripture from the Bible on which Dr. Raymond Bellamy's talk will be based on the following Sunday so that students may make advance preparation on the topic.

The Methodists have begun to make plans for the state-wide Methodist student conference which will be held in Tallahassee February 1-3. It is composed of voluntary delegates from all Florida colleges, and among those represented will be Florida State College for Women, Southern college, University of Florida, Rollins college, Miami university, and Tampa university. The purpose of this conference is the interchange of ideas and the development of friendships between the members.

Meetings will be held on the campus. Dr. Leroy E. Loemker of the faculty of Emory university will be the guest speaker.

While here the conference members will be the guests of the local Methodist group. There will be a banquet on the evening of February 2 in the college dining hall, in honor of visiting speakers and delegates.

Officers of the State Methodist Student council are: Melvin McCloude, president, Southern college; Mary Etta Thistelthwaite, F. S. C. W., vice-president; Etna Cook, secretary, Southern college; and Neal Smith, treasurer, University of Florida.

EXAMINATION SCHEDULE
January 21 to 25

CLASS HOURS	EXAM HOURS
M. W. Th. 8:30	8:30-10:30 Mon. Jan. 21
Hygiene 101 (All Sections in Auditorium)	10:30-12:30 Mon. Jan. 21
M. W. Th. 1:30	2:00- 4:00 Mon. Jan. 21
M. W. F. 11:30	8:30-10:30 Tues. Jan. 22
History 101 (All Sections)	10:30-12:30 Tues. Jan. 22
T. Th. 10:30; F. 1:30	2:00- 4:00 Tues. Jan. 22
M. W. F. 10:30	8:30-10:30 Wed. Jan. 23
Geography 101 (All Sections)	10:30-12:30 Wed. Jan. 23
Economics 201 (All Sections)
Home Economics 111-201-380 (All Sections)
T. W. F. 9:30	2:00- 4:00 Wed. Jan. 23
M. Th. 9:30; T. 2:30	8:30-10:30 Thrs. Jan. 24
English 101 and 102 (All Sections)	10:30-12:30 Thrs. Jan. 24
T. W. F. 8:30	2:00- 4:00 Thrs. Jan. 24
M. Th. 8:30; T. 1:30	8:30-10:30 Fri. Jan. 25
Industrial Arts 101 (All Sections)	10:30-12:30 Fri. Jan. 25
Art 109 (All Sections)
All one, two and three-hour classes not included above.	2:00- 4:00 Fri. Jan. 25
All conflicts.

NOTE:

1. There should be no changes in this schedule except for most urgent reasons; such changes as are necessary should be reported to the Registrar in advance.
2. Individual conflicts, not provided for above, will be worked out by the instructor and student concerned. All such examinations must be set during the week and the hours of examinations.
3. Students may not change sections for the examinations even if the two sections are under the same teacher.

S. R. DOYLE
Registrar

Jan. 10, 1935

The change in the above schedule is the beginning of a permanent plan of examination rotation adopted by the executive council at a meeting of that group Wednesday afternoon. The change purports to be a fairer deal for those students who have late afternoon classes. The examination schedule in May will return to the usual plan of having morning classes first.

NSFA Meeting Urges Federal Youth Service

(Continued From Page One)

provided for the setting up of a permanent committee to deal with violations as they occur. Following the report of a temporary fact-finding committee, the Federation took action on specific violations of the freedom of speech, assembly and press in student cases, and violations of freedom of teaching in faculty cases.

Attack Outside Forces

That curtailment of student and faculty liberties is often tied up with curtailment of administration liberties by outside pressure was brought to the attention of the federation which decided to take the lead, if necessary, in attacking non-academic interests which attempt to abridge the constitutional right of freedom in education.

Dr. Robert L. Kelley, secretary of the Association of American Colleges, in speaking to the Federation asked for the cooperation of the NSFA in the effort that his association and the American Association of University Professors are making on behalf of academic freedom, saying that the idealism and courage of students would be a tremendous asset in the most important issue that education is now facing.

ESTABLISHES CURRICULUM WORK

The success of student curriculum committees now cooperating with faculty groups in the revision of curricula in a number of the larger colleges, and the insistence of Dr. H. N. McCracken, president of Vassar College, that these committees be increased and enlarged, resulted in the decision of the NSFA that all member colleges should institute such committees within the coming year.

Students should determine jointly with the faculty, Dr. McCracken told the Federation, as to "all requirements for degrees, as to hours of study, number of courses, standards of work. They should have the right not only of criticizing poor teaching but of seeking redress when such teaching interferes with their profitable use of time and money."

The growth of numbers of superfluous intercollegiate organizations which hold annual conventions, the assessing of unduly large fees by honorary organizations, and the generally over-organized condition of campus life was protested by the Federation. A permanent committee will be set up in the near future to conduct a fact-finding investigation of national and local organizations and to cooperate with local NSFA clubs in weeding out those which are found to be useless.

LOCALIZES PROGRAM

At its Boston meeting the Federation faced seriously the paradoxical fact that while it holds a high prestige among national organizations and wields no small influence in official Washington, its activities are practically unknown to the average student, particularly on campuses where there are no NSFA clubs. The strongly localized program of the newly elected president, Thomas Neblett, graduate fellow in law at Louisiana State University, is intended to remedy this situation and bring the local influence of the Federation abreast with its national concerns. Plans for the coming year include increase of NSFA clubs, more intimate contact between the permanent committees and the clubs, strengthening of regional organizations, establishment of an exchange speakers' bureau, sponsoring of debating teams, and a change of policy regarding the Federation's magazine, news release and radio programs.

Definite stands were taken at the convention on the status of labor, the administration of the PERA, social insurance, the Agriculture Adjustment Administration, the sales and income taxes, the League of Nations, the World Court, munitions regulations and disarmament. Speakers of national reputation who addressed the convention on political and economic issues included Dr. William Trufant Foster, director of the Pollak Foundation for Economic Research, Henry Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Edward A. Filene, prominent Boston merchant.

Wahnish Wins Prize In Sorority Story Contest

Melvyne Wahnish, while attending the national convention of Delta Phi Epsilon in New York City during the Christmas holidays, was awarded first prize in a short story contest. This contest was sponsored by the sorority publication, Delta Phi Epsilon Quarterly, which circulates not only in the United States but also in Canada. The prize is a compact with the sorority seal emblazoned on it.

Student Builds Sound Proof Box

Lois Virginia Williams, member of the class in advanced experimental physics, has been doing a little experimenting of her own on the side. Several weeks ago she started studying the theory of sound proofing. She went to the library and secured four huge, musty, pretentious looking volumes which contained the information she desired. They told how one should go about constructing a sound-proof box. "I could at least understand the pictures," she said with a smile that made one know she probably understood a few other things, too. After a little coaxing she decided to tell the whole story:

"Well, it was this way: First, I had a motor that sounded terrific when I put it on the table and sent the current through it. I had the carpenter make a box for the motor, two boxes, in fact. The theory of sound proofing is that when you place alternately several layers of different kinds of material you cannot hear through them, so I used lead, building board, and wood as a base for the motor. I lined the top of the little box with lead, screwing it on with 28 screws. Then I placed the smaller box inside the larger box and packed around the smaller one a mixture of sawdust and sand. A pillow stuffed with excelsior was placed between the lids of the little and big boxes."

The funny thing about the experiment is that it works. When the lid to the big box is closed one cannot hear the motor inside running. "See how simple it it?" Lois Virginia said.

Contemporary Students

(Continued From Page Two)

prepare college men to become officers in case of war and at the same time it teaches the college men the slight chances that they have of coming out of war with a whole skin.

The R. O. T. C. training officers from the regular army agree with Sherman that "war is hell," and any advanced student after spending one week in target butts at the summer camp listening to machine gun bullets pop over his head will readily agree with Sherman's statement.

Army officers and those R. O. T. C. students preparing themselves realize the futility of war. If the clergymen and other agitators could only realize the uselessness of trying to stop preparedness as a move to combat war and concentrate on leading to world peace through a universal religion both sides would be better off.—Red and Black.

MORE SCHOLARSHIPS

President Conant of Harvard makes a plea for more scholarships from those persons whose wealth exceeds the "necessities" of life. While a large percentage of the upperclassmen at Harvard are there on scholarships he points out that not nearly enough of the nation's brilliant young students are able to take advantage of the facilities of schools like Harvard, Columbia, University of Chicago and others of that group.

At the same time that Dr. Conant makes this suggestion to the nation's wealthy, we find that Columbia University proposes to raise its tuition requirements and from the additional revenue, scholarships will be given to worthy students. This is a novel way of working out this problem and its development will be interesting to watch.

Now it is not always possible to have wealthy people die at the most convenient moment and in many universities the effect of raising tuition might tend to keep certain students away from the universities, who are a source of revenue. Our suggestion would be for federal scholarships.

PERA does not fall into this

(Continued on Page Four)

Students Returning to College Bring Bumper Crop of Tall Stories

(Continued From Page One)

casualties were several losses of baggage, pocketbooks, tickets, and similar impediments of travel. All losses seemed to have been recovered, however, and most Florida State students (with the exception of those who married during the holidays) returned to the college at the end of the Christmas vacation.

THE SWEET SHOP
708 W. Jefferson Opposite Gilchrist
WEEK-END SPECIAL
Hot Chocolate with Marshmallow 05c
We Deliver PHONE 1091 We Deliver

Cuba is a Floating Cork

Its Students Are Serious, Sullen Individuals Who Know No Fraternities, Football Games Or Campus Life

"Just how is it," I asked my Cuban friend, "that Cuban students have taken so much part in the recent revolutions in your country? And why have they always shown such intensive interest in their government?"

"The answer to your question is ultimately one word—government," she replied. "But for you to understand this answer I shall have to tell you a long, long story.

"Let us start back in the period of the Spanish occupation of Cuba. In accordance with her unenlightened policy of colonial administration Spain gave Cuba a school system in name only. There was a university, but it had no funds or adequate supervision as had neither the other pitifully few public schools in the island.

LOCAL SUBSIDY

"With Cuban independence from Spain and the United States military government of the natives came also a reorganization, or to be more truthful, a creation of a Cuban primary and secondary school system. The governor-general of the island appointed Alexis Frye to set up this system. Mr. Frye with astonishing swiftness opened up 3313 schools in some four or five years. These schools were to be supported by the local governments of the separate communities in which they were located; this system of local subsidy quickly proved disasterous. Schools became the tools of politicians.

"So in 1900 a Lieutenant Hanna was appointed by the governor-general to institute some change in the set-up. Lieutenant Hanna reorganized it into the system which we use today. All schools, secondary as well as the university, were put under direct governmental supervision. The central government appropriated the funds on which to run them; appointed the faculty; and gave standard governmental examinations.

HIGH SCHOOLS CREATED

"Along with this reorganization in economic lines was the creation of six high schools, 'institutos,' one in each province. At this time the University of Havana was somewhat reorganized, after this time being able to offer degrees in medicine, engineering, arts, and architecture.

"With the withdrawal of the American military occupation and the establishment of the republic the educational system remained unchanged. Under the republic, a secretary of public instruction administered the schools in the place of the army official in military rule. And just as under the plan of local subsidy, the schools again became the tools of professional politicians who became accustomed to avail themselves of the secretariat in order to do what Mr. Farley would call 'rewarding deserving Democrats.' This political maneuvering was especially marked at the University.

PROFESSORS CUT

"By 1923 instructorships had become mere "botellas"—political positions. The instructors seldom knew anything about the subjects which they were supposed to teach; so with remarkable expediency they just stayed away from class. Strangely enough the students, about 5000 in number, resented this professoral 'cutting' and expressed their resentment in a rather marked manner. The students rose in armed rebellion and drove the professors from the University. For two days the students remained in complete possession of the school.

"Partly through generosity but mostly from necessity the government gave in to the students. One hundred offending instructors were dismissed. And a further concession was made in connection with the election of a president of the institution. It was agreed that the president was to be selected every two years by alumni, faculty, and students, each group having an equal vote.

BEGINNING OF REVOLUTION

"But politics in the University weren't a thing of the past; they were just beginning. In 1926 President Machado absolutely ignored this agreement and set up a personal friend of his as rector of the University. And with this act begins the excessive student activity in, or really against, government. In fact, I believe that I might be safe in saying that with this act began the Cuban Revolution that had its consummation in 1933.

"In 1927, October, a group of students tore down a sign with the name of Machado on it. Characteristically Machado had the offending students expelled and exiled and the University closed.

"In the following April, however, the University was reopened but with soldiers stationed about the buildings.

"In September, 1930, during a student demonstration against Machado the police shot down a student. The student answer to this was the organization which was known as the Directorio Estudiantil, a secret society which had for its immediate purpose the overthrow of Machado. It had a far more reaching purpose in that of ridding the island republic of "los hombres de '95." These men—the Old Guard as you would call them, the students felt, had brought the government to its present state of corruption and tyranny. It was at this time—September, 1930, to July, 1931—that students and professors who weren't Machado henchmen were found in alleys and dark streets mysteriously slain.

"By July, 1931, student activity against Machado had become so intense that the University, the high schools, and the normal schools were closed by presidential order. And closed they remained until Machado was driven from Cuba."

DISSATISFACTION GENERAL

"But," I interposed, "do you mean to tell me that student dissatisfaction with Machado's rather high-handed methods of dealing with them was the sole agent in bringing about the Revolution?"

"No, not at all, but I am firm in my belief that student dissatisfaction was the main force. No, Machado was unpopular generally. He had forced through a congressional amendment that had given him quite an extended term. Too, Cubans felt that he "sold out"—as you would say—Cuba to foreign interests. In his early days of the presidency in 1924 Machado had begun a very ambitious public works program. In 1928-29-30 Machado and his government, even as yours, became the victim of a world depression. In order to complete his public works program he borrowed quite heavily from the National City Bank and the Chase National Bank of New York City. Thus these two banks got quite a hold on Cuba, a situation which patriotic Cubans naturally resented. It was this state of affairs which brought about the formation of a political group which undoubtedly precipitated the revolution.

CUBAN ALPHABET

"I refer to the ABC. That this group is an outgrowth of the student movement is indisputable. Its membership is composed of professional men and students. As the Directorio Estudiantil the ABC has, or I suppose that I should say had, as its main purpose the overthrow of Machado and his associates, the 'hombres de '95.' Its more far reaching purpose is a campaign of 'Cuba for the Cubans.' The most wonderful and idealistic mission of the ABC is that to 'maintain a sane public opinion as a permanent force.'

"In the political policies of the ABC the student viewpoint is ever to be observed. The ABC demands an educational system entirely divorced from governmental control and politics; a Cuba of small rural proprietors; a National Bank; an Agricultural Bank; accident, death, and old age and unemployment insurance; the eight hour day; the establishment of tribunals to hold public officials accountable for their acts and to determine their wealth at the beginning of their terms of office and at the close; women suffrage; literacy tests for voters; compulsory military training; and the suppression of the lottery.

"This ABC society works in units of ten called 'cells.' The membership, at the present time, is estimated as about 10,000.

FORCE BEGETS FORCE

"The rest of this story you are more or less familiar with. You know how this group with its splendid ideals finally resorted to the violence for which they so severely condemned Machado. The OCRR (they had put the alphabet to work before the CCC and the AAA) was the particular division of the ABC which had for its function the bombing of public buildings and the assassination of governmental and military officials. Machado's violence begat theirs, the OCRR asserts.

"You know the rest of the story. Murders, riots, more murders, the flight of Machado, Menocal, Grau San Martin, and now Mendieta.

"Grau San Martin is, by the way, a college professor. When his government was in effect it really looked as though the reign of the youth of Cuba had begun. But San Martin wasn't powerful enough or perhaps not politician enough to endure.

"Does that in any way answer your question? Had your government pursued such a policy in regard to the schools, you too would be stirring up rebellions."

"Indeed, you have most fully answered my question. But this student, is he a hotheaded, dashing sort?

"Hotheaded, yes. Dashing, no. The Cuban student is a serious individual, rather sullen and emaciated you Americans would say. He knows no fraternities, football games, and all that go to make up your dash. The University of Havana really has no campus, no dormitories, no college paper, no athletics, no fraternities. I once heard an American say something I didn't understand until I came to the States. He said, 'Your student never goes to college; he just goes to school.' In short, if the government were Utopian, the Cuban student would probably 'agitate,' for there's nothing else for him to do. The student body of the University is a mighty enemy to have; and it could be a mighty friend to have. In the Cuban student is the hope of Cuba. I hope he may know in the near future a peaceful and happy homeland in which to materialize his ideals."

"And do you think he will? Do you think the Republic is now on the road to peace and progress?"

"I wish I knew. I can only think of something that I have heard every since I was a child. 'Cuba is a cork; it always floats'."

Bennett's
75c BENNETT'S CLUB LUNCHEON 40c
CHOICE OF:
FRIED CHICKEN COUNTRY STYLE
TUNA FISH SALAD WITH BOILED EGG
VEGETABLES:
CREAM CARROTS
BABY LIMA BEANS
PINEAPPLE SALAD
BUTTERED RICE
CORN MUFFINS OR HOT BISCUITS
20c Chicken Salad Sandwich 15c
15c Double Dip Ice Cream Soda 10c
15c Hot Fudge Sundae 10c
20c Fruit Pineapple Sundae 15c

Nims Attends National Sociology Conference On Needs of Children

Dr. Eleanor Nims, assistant professor of sociology here, attended a national conference on the needs of children for 1935 in New York City at the Hotel Pennsylvania on January 3 and 4.

All the speakers emphasized the need of security for children during 1935, Dr. Nims stated, in terms of peace between nations and peace along economic lines.

It was further evident from the meeting, Miss Nims said, that Florida has launched a program for integration of federal emergency relief work with local welfare activities so that the welfare work will henceforth be more successfully carried on throughout the state.

College Women Grow Hair From Meal to Meal

Excellent Crop of Nails And Eyelashes Is Also Reported

Florida State College for Women evidently isn't only the place to learn readin' and writin' and 'rithmetic, but is also the place to study the gentle arts of dressin', hairdressin' and cosmetics. The college is virtually an experimental laboratory in which the subjects conscientiously endeavor to improve nature.

Essential equipment for the laboratory is amazing in its extent even in view of the results. Silky eyelashes, scarlet toe-nail polish, ten-cent store braids, silver celluloid finger-nails keep company with rouge-pot, lipstick, powder puff and bleaching creams.

Every season, however, there is a favorite, whether an improvement or not, which rages in unsurpassed glory. This year the old-fashioned braid has come back to steal the honors. Whether the hair is short or long, curly or straight, there always seems to be enough to wind completely around the head. The artistic abilities of the college girl in this particular experiment breaks forth in the form of delicate shadings—sometimes not so delicate—of the hair as it emerges from bun to braid. The most popular trick at present is to appear at lunch with a bob and at dinner with a carefully braided bun low on the neck.

In years before the fad mania has been even more serious. Last year Katharine Hepburn bangs swept the campus and the year before it seemed that every girl was a blond. Those same girls were flaming red-heads previously. Who knows what Florida State College girls will do next?

Collegiate Comebacks

(Continued From Page Two)

eral ditties that have been going the rounds of late.

F. S. C. W. Specials
with apologies to Mother Goose
Little Miss Muffet
Sat on a tuffett,
Eating her curds and whey.
Along came a spider
And sat down beside her
And she had to sign up for a date.

Hickory dickory dock.
The mouse ran up the clock
The clock struck ten-fifteen Lightflash!

* * *

We see by the papers that the freshmen have come into their own with the election of class officers. Part of the business is, half of the student body did not even know that elections were pending, but as the other half not only knew they were forthcoming but also exactly who was slated to be elected to what, we guess things about even themselves up. Perhaps we say it that shouldn't, but it does seem as if the powers that be—and never doubt that they do be—would have discretion enough to re-budget the officers among themselves every few years or so. After all, freshman presidents from the same sorority for three consecutive years is getting rather monotonous, don't you think?

Even the Demonstration school has open politics, with students

(Continued on Page Four)

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery
in
"BIOGRAPHY OF A BACHELOR GIRL"
SUNDAY - MONDAY - TUESDAY
Joan Crawford and Clark Gable
in
"FORSAKING ALL OTHERS"
WEDNESDAY
Douglas Fairbanks
in
"PRIVATE LIFE OF DON JUAN"
THURSDAY
Gloria Stuart
in
"MAYBE IT'S LOVE"
BANK NIGHT—$150.00

RITZ THEATRE
FRIDAY
BING CROSBY in "HERE'S MY HEART"
SATURDAY
TIM McCOY in "THE WESTERNER"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
WILL ROGERS in "JUDGE PRIEST"
WEDNESDAY
Joan Crawford and Clark Gable
in
"FORSAKING ALL OTHERS"

The Social Week

Dow, Koch, and Taylor Will Continue Teas For Freshmen

The series of teas which is being given by faculty members for their freshman students will be continued next week by Miss Margaret Dow, Miss Gladys Koch, and Miss Marguerite Taylor.

The first tea of the week will take place on Monday afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock in Jennie Murphree parlors with Miss Taylor as hostess. Freshmen who have been invited are Sara Moor, Charlotte Roberta Pelsang, Edith Grace Lynch, Mary Margaret Pfeiffer, Marie Ferguson, Lucille Finley, Betty Wheeless, Mary Ellen Tharpe, Nellie Melba Graddy, Mary Elizabeth West, Lenora Thorn, Beatrice Grus, Ruth Marion Hoskins, Abdelia Saurez, Marguarite Ricou, Blanche Lamar, Ruth Lind, Ethel Runyan, Marguerite Huxford, and Jane Rice.

This tea will be followed by a similar event in Bryan sun parlor Wednesday afternoon from 5:30 to 6:30 given jointly by Miss Dow and Miss Koch. Among the freshmen who will call during the afternoon are Marguerite Meiner, Jessica Jane Mackey, Rachel Rothstein, Elizabeth Bary, Marian Alice Rogers, Eleanor McLeod, Lois Bowen, Dorothy Swanbom, Mary Pichard, Annie Jane McRae, Dorothy Branch, Louise Doyle, Anita Eve Easton and Hildred Hurst.

Assisting the hostesses will be Rosalie McDonald, Ruth Persons, Mildred Tyler, Evelyn Chauncey, and Betty Routh.

These informal social gatherings are planned by the chairman and members of the college social committee in cooperation with the faculty members.

Jacksonville Alumnae Entertain for FSCW Delegates to FEA

The Jacksonville Alumnae association of Florida State College for Women entertained with a dinner at the Carling hotel for members of the faculty, alumnae and students of the college attending the convention of the Florida Education association in Jacksonville last week.

Katherine Warren, president of the Jacksonville alumnae, introduced Dr. Edward Coradi, president of the college, who was guest speaker for the evening and who recounted the recognitions the college has received in relation to its faculty, its plant, and its student body. Dr. Conradi stated that the latest recognition has come from Phi Beta Kappa which will install a chapter on the campus in March.

Miss Rowena Longmire, associate professor of English, commended the alumnae on the fine spirit of cooperation and interest they have shown in the college.

Dr. Ralph L. Eyman, professor of education, asked the alumnae for their continued support of the institution, particularly by trying to show the people of the state what the college is doing.

The dinner was attended by more than a hundred members of the alumnae, faculty and students of the college.

Phi Beta Sigma And Friends to Enjoy Informal Hour

A social hour will follow the January meeting of Phi Beta Sigma, Spanish honorary fraternity next Wednesday evening at 7:30.

The occasion will serve as an informal get-together and will give the members and faculty sponsors an opportunity to visit with each other.

During the evening refreshments in keeping with the occasion will be served by the hostess and will consist of turron, a Spanish candy, and Cuban chocolate. The hostesses for this informal social event will be Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Lily Friscia and Laura Mathis.

The faculty members who are invited to be present on this occasion are Mrs. Charlotte M. Beckham, Mrs. Dorothy Breen, Miss Margie Burks, Miss Myrtle Dolbeer, Mrs. Marian J. Hay, Mr. Manuel Lopez, and Mr. Arthur R. Seymour.

The student members who will attend are: Betty Bailey, Marjorie Carter, Ruth Dickson, Rosa Desh, Minna Dunn, Ruth Feinberg, Mary Helen Forth, Sara Kreutzman, Abbie Lyle, Julia Norfleet, Murne Reddick, Mildred Stevens, Betty Ellen Smith, Jennie Rae Nall, Martha Wolliston, and the hostesses.

Dr. Herman Kurz and Mr. Sumter Doyle attended a district meeting of Kiwanis International conference Monday at Eustis, Florida.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
Jan. 13 to Jan. 19
Sunday
11:00 a. m. Church services.
7:15 p. m. Y. W. C. A. vespers.
Monday
4:30 p. m. Art lecture in room 207 Ad building.
5:30 p. m. Orchestra rehearsal.
7:30 p. m. Glee club rehearsal.
7:45 p. m. Beta Pi Theta meeting.
8:00 p. m. Sorority meetings.
Tuesday
11:30 a. m. Convocation.
4:30 p. m. Tea honoring Miss Jeannette Kelly, Reynolds hall.
7:30 p. m. Kappa Delta Pi meeting in 207 History building.
8:15 p. m. Orchestra concert.
Wednesday
7:15 a. m. Worship service.
7:15 p. m. Phi Beta Sigma meeting.
7:30 p. m. Glee Club rehearsal.
8:15 p. m. "The Fundamentals of Art Criticism," Dr. A. Philip McMahon, lecturer.
Thursday
5:30 p. m. Orchestra rehearsal.
8:00 p. m. Spoken English recital, Ruth Mock, in Augusta Conradi little theater.
Friday
8:00 p. m. Meeting of A.A.U.W.

Kappa Alpha Theta Holding Informal Tea on Sunday

The pledges and members of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority will be hostesses at an informal tea Sunday afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock at the sorority house on College avenue.

During the tea faculty members, sorority alumnae, and friends of the sorority will be invited to call and visit with the hostesses. Refreshments consisting of coffee and sandwiches will be served.

The hostesses on this occasion will be Evelyn Ballard, Barbara Bandy, Irene Edwards, Mary Ennels, Virginia Hamilton, Eleanor Harris, Mary Ann Hills, Virginia Holt, Betty Kimball, Mary McCormick, Clairnelle O'Steen, Rosalind Parker, Margaret Reedy.

Harriet Roberts, Josephine Skeels, Antionette Sullivan, Wylma TerBush, Claire Williams, Banks Woods, Betty Hamilton, Mary Lee Hopkins, Dabe Lewis, Laulette Millat, Annie Laurie Rentz, Clarice Sanchez, Anna Belle Baker, Ann Chichester, Mamie Jane Clark.

Sarah Clark, Kitty Craney, Marjorie Horton, Iris Machen, Nedra McNamara, Margaret Schmidli, Madge Williams, Helen Doon, Dagmar Fripp, Virginia Godwin, Patty Hamilton, Jean Harris, Mary Kimball, Virginia Lide, Rachel Sherman.

Social Hour Follows Honorary Meeting

Faculty and student members of Phi Beta Sigma, Spanish honorary, were entertained for Wednesday evening preceding Christmas with a Spanish program at the home of Mrs. Dorothy Breen. Minna Dunn was in charge of the program, the main topic of which was Cuba.

Songs of Cuba were sung by Carlota Cubillas, and Cuban group songs were sung by those present. Following the serving of the refreshments of Spanish chocolate and pastries, games were played.

Those present at the entertainment included: Mrs. Marian Hay, Miss Marjorie Burks, Mr. A. R. Seymour, Mrs. Dorothy Breen, Mr. Manuel Lopez, Mary Helen Forth, Betty Bailey, Lily Friscia, Julia Norfleet, Mildred Stevens, Laura Mathis, Abbie Lyle, Rosa Desh, Marjorie Carter, Murne Reddick, Sara Kreutzman, Ruth Feinberg, Ruth Dickson, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Jennie Rae Nall, Betty Ellen Smith, and Martha Wolliston.

Miss Jeannette Kelly To Be Guest at Tea

Miss Jeannette Kelly, regional director of the south Atlantic section of the American Association of University Women, will be the honor guest at a tea Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 in Reynolds parlors. This tea will be given for Miss Kelly by the members of the local chapter of the A. A. U. W. with Miss Jennie Tilt, past president of the State organization, acting as hostess.

The members of the Tallahassee chapter of A. A. U. W. and the members of the senior class are invited to the tea to hear a talk given by Miss Kelly and to meet her personally.

Mrs. B. K. Scott has returned to the campus to resume her duties as the chaperone of the Delta Delta Delta sorority after a long illness.

Vances to Entertain Writing Class At Coffee Sunday

The members of the article and feature writing class will be the guests at an informal after-dinner coffee given Sunday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Earl L. Vance at their home in Pinecrest.

During the evening the hostess will serve refreshments consisting of coffee, iced cakes, candy and nuts.

Among the students who have been invited are Barbara Garfunkel, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Gertrude Kuhn, Elaine Klepper, Melvyne Wahnish, Sara Beth Davis, Edna Hoffman, Daisy Parker, Claire Williams, Lorraine Hudson, Lucy Fulghum, Edith Patterson, Althea Smith, and Mrs. Elberta Hinson.

Personal Mention

Miss Anna May Tracy, dietitian, returned from Chicago this week where she attended a meeting of the executive committee of the American Dietetics association. Miss Tracy is administration section chairman of this association. This committee, which is composed of twelve members, serves as the managing and directing group for the association.

Dr. William G. Dodd, dean of the college of arts and sciences, has been unable to meet his classes for the past few days because of an illness which has confined him to his home in the Country Club estates.

Yulee Way was unable to return to school after the holidays because of a dislocated collar bone sustained in an automobile accident on Christmas eve. Yulee is recuperating from her injury at her home in Orlando and will return to school as soon as possible.

Amy Brenner Proves Model of Versatility

Graduates of Florida State College for Women have proved they can be versatile in the type of work that they do. Amy Brenner, a graduate of last year who is teaching in the high school at Cedar Keys, can do more different things at the same time than go on in a three ring circus.

In a letter to a student here Amy listed the lines of work that she has been doing since she began teaching school. They include teaching three sections of typing, two sections of shorthand, and one section of commercial law; supervising two study periods; helping edit the school paper; dramatic director of two plays each semester; junior sponsor; keeping books for the school general treasury fund; secretary of the faculty; and taking care of the principal's correspondence.

Contemporary Students

(Continued From Page Three)

category. What we recommend are scholarships for scholarship. It is admitted that there is the danger of government strings being attached to such scholarships as we have in mind, but this is not an important objection. Scholars who know would not sell out their principles even for a lucrative award. Here is a place where the government can put its money into a useful social project.—Cincinnati Bearcat.

FRATERNITIES AND SCHOLARSHIP

At the National Interfraternity Conference held in New York during the past week the problem of scholarship among the Greeks was the chief issue.

Reporting for the committee on scholarship, the chairman declared that over forty fraternities had fallen below their own records of last year while only a few raised their scholastic standards during the year. In stressing the problem the chairman maintained that fraternities are back to where they were five years ago. A harsh statement but only too true.

Fraternities may be a social benefit to their members but it cannot be gainsaid that they have little or nothing to offer in support of the general purpose of an institution of higher learning. Intellectual pursuits are all-but foreign to the average fraternal itinerary; even suitable libraries are a scarcity in fraternity houses.

Those educators who laud the fraternity have much upon which to base their opinions, as is the case with Dr. Dixon Ryan Fox of Union College where the fraternity situation is a virtually utopian as compared with that at other colleges including Cincinnati. But those who warn of the many shortcomings of the Greek letter societies must not be ignored if fraternities have any desire to give their best to the development of culture and true education among their numbers.—Cincinnati Bearcat.

Fireman's Daughter Follows In Father's Footsteps to Flames

Sound of Gong Is Signal For Hasty Exeunt of Chief's Offspring

For students who want a life full of thrills Belle Henshaw, senior, advises one ride on her father's largest fire-truck with dad himself at the wheel. Belle says no one forgets that first ride and few ask for a second.

Last summer Jimmy Lewis, senior, visited Belle. The first time the fire gong went off she insisted on going to the fire on the chief's truck and in true fireman fashion, by hanging to the side of the truck. Fire Chief Henshaw smiled. When he got the heavy truck up to full speed Jimmy was barely hanging on. Belle, who was also on the truck, said Jimmy was flapping in the breeze like a sheet on a clothesline in a strong wind.

Belle and Jimmy had just arrived home after the fire when the siren blew a short blast to let everyone know the fire was over. Jimmy, thinking it was another fire, was out of the station and two blocks down main street looking everywhere for flames and smoke "like Columbus discovering America," as Belle phrased it, before someone told her that it was not another fire. Jimmy wanted to go to the fire, but she didn't want to go on the fire truck.

The daughter of a fire chief leads a hectic life generally, according to Belle. The Henshaws live over the New Smyrna fire station and the upper story is connected to the station below by a fire-pole which Belle has learned to slide fireman-style when she wishes to get to the station in time to go to a fire on one of the trucks. Belle says this pole is the Henshaw family's means of escaping bill collectors. As the bill collector mounts the stairway outside the Henshaws descend the fire-pole.

The pole has several advantages from Belle's point of view. This past summer she was enrolling children for the nursery school in New Smyrna. She was not surprised then when her father yelled up the fire-hole to her one day to say that there was a man to see her. Belle thinking it was someone wishing to enroll his child at the nursery, hurriedly made herself presentable and then just before going down she peeped over the edge of the fire-hole to see who the visitor was. Her father was playing a huge joke on her, for who should be downstairs but her erstwhile roommate, Mims Smith, who had arrived from Jacksonville to visit her.

Belle was not to be outdone by a mere man, and so to retaliate she jumped the fire-pole and greeted Mims by landing on her head—Mim's head. Even her father was somewhat taken back by this unexpected appearance of his daughter from regions above.

Belle says she'll never forget the night when the fire siren went off while she and a friend were in the movies. They trod on the corns of everyone in the row with them in their haste to leave the building. They got outside just in time to flag a fire-truck. The man had to stop to pick up his own daughter and the daughter's friend. After even this delay the chief was getting rather caustic in his remarks. The fire turned out to be a chicken-coop, but by the time the chief got there both the fire and the chickens were out.

Belle's greatest thrills in life come when she attends the firemen's convention with her father, where she pesters all the fire chiefs who have red automobiles until they loan her their cars and at the convention in Quincy this fall she managed to get the loan of a red car. Disdaining to be commonplace, Belle mounted on the fenders of the car in order to watch the demonstrations being put on by some of the fire companies at the convention. All of her friends were watching from a third story window of the building across the street. Belle had just settled herself comfortably upon the fender and was surveying her surroundings with interest when one of the teams lost control of its hose. Water flew everywhere, and a stream backed by two hundred and fifty pounds of pressure hit her squarely and knocked her down to the ground.

"While I was trying to pick myself up from the curb," Belle recalled, "the water kept knocking me down. Several firemen rushed to help me. In that interval before rescue I was sure that we shouldn't have left the first aid team at home. I finally got to the other side of the car, but by that time the bystanders were howling. Belle's friends in the third-story window cheered (jeered) her on as she crossed the street in a dazed and very wet condition.

There's nothing like being a fire chief's daughter if one wishes life to furnish one with thrills, according to Belle.

She never misses a fire.

Kadelpians to Hear FEA Reports by Salley, Moon

At the next meeting of Kappa Delta Pi, which will be held Tuesday, January 15, at 7:30 p. m. in room 207 History building, Dr. Nathaniel M. Salley, dean of the School of Education, and Mr. Moon, principal of the Sealey Memorial school, will give reports of the Florida Education association meeting held recently in Jacksonville.

Mrs. Dora Skipper, president, requests all members attend.

Preliminary Matches In Tennis Intramurals Get Under Way Here

Tennis intramurals are well under way with most of the preliminary matches completed and all eyes turned toward the finals. Beth Lancaster won from Anna Glenn by default and Monica Wiley from Elaine Klepper by the same process. In the match between Wiley and Lancaster, the latter won from Wiley to go up to the semi-finals.

Minna Dunn and Jean Harris have yet to play, which leaves the second match on the boards a matter of much conjecture. The winner will play Marie Taylor who defeated Mildred Lovell in the preliminaries.

Marie Clark won from Frances Lewis and Viola Brooks from Edith Webb. Clark defeated Brooks and thereby places for the semi-finals.

Also in the semi-finals is Dot Lancaster, who defeated Katherine Rogers and subsequently Charlotte Cameron who had defeated Sally Anthony. Much interest is being shown in these games because of the good playing. Beth and Dot Lancaster have played several tournament matches both here and in other states.

Doggy Romance Ends In a Near Tragedy

Flunky and Skippy were playmates. Flunky, although a foundling, was a Heinz dog—with everyone of the fifty-seven varieties included in his dachshund-low body. Because of his adoption of the chaperone of one of the sororities on the eve of first semester exams last year, he very appropriately came into ownership of his name.

With Skippy it was different. She was a peppy black and white wire-haired terrier who had a pedigree and all that goes with the title—a home, a mistress, and loving care.

Flunky lived on College avenue and Skippy lived on Park avenue but the block between their homes did not keep them from being practically inseparable. What happy times they had romping across campus or following at the heels of girls going out to "grind"! And as the spring weather turned warmer, how much fun it was to plunge and splash in the fountain that several Odd classes so conveniently placed in front of the administration building!

The one drawback to the carefree lives of these two dogs was that they were made to observe house rules to the extent that they had to be in every night at light flash. So Skippy would be off to her home where she would resume chewing some girl's last pair of stockings where she had left off. Stockings were her specialty but shoes would do in a pinch. Flunky, as much as he liked shoes or feathers, really preferred rag rugs or the fur collars on coats. The mutilation of one fur collar was almost Flunky's ruination but, after all, he was only a puppy and didn't know any better.

One afternoon Flunky wandered off beyond the college gardens and hadn't returned to campus at light flash. Skippy was not to be consoled. She knew her little pal was gone forever. All the girls were especially kind to her but to no avail. Skippy would not eat all of the dog biscuit set before her so her mistress sent the little dog to her home in Georgia to be near the best veterinarial attention.

After his escapade, Flunky returned home in the best of spirits until he found Skippy had gone. Because it was his own fault, he took his grief all the more mournfully.

This tale of doggdom does not have quite the tragic ending of the Pyramus and Thisbe episode for Flunky is now in Miami trying to mend his broken heart—with the aid of Princess Mitzi, a cocker spaniel.

For the use of lecturers, a projector has been invented that shows pictures on a mirror back of the speaker as he operates it, so that he never has to turn his back to his audience.

Lower Bryan Is Going to Frogs

Lower Bryan is going to the frogs.

That is what one sophomore who lives on that floor is prepared to tell the entire school.

Friday evening the said sophomore breezed into her room, oblivious to the anticipatory titters which followed her. Humming noisily she began to undress, unaware that every door on the hall was open awaiting the moment she would get into bed.

However, the sophomore did not go to bed. Sitting on the bed to take off her shoes, she suddenly became conscious of a stirring within it. Rising with a little squeal, she cautiously turned to look at the bed-clothes. The covers were moving up and down in one small space near the pillow. That was all she wanted to know. With a lusty yell she dashed from the room in search of her roommate.

When the room-mate finally arrived she discovered a frightened toad frog, which might have been the pride of any zoology laboratory, sitting in the middle of the sophomore's pillow. The sympathetic room-mate transferred the frog in a paper cup to a grassy spot outside Bryan while the sophomore, swearing revenge, went to telephone for a bottle of ammonia.

Collegiate Comeback

(Continued From Page Three)

announcing their candidacy and stating their platforms openly. Somebody has said, "A little child shall lead them," and if so, we wish said child would function before spring elections. After all, the prime purpose of education is not learning to slink around under cover like snakes in the grass.

* * *

We see by the Rollins Sandspur that Will Rogers, America's ace humorist, has acknowledged receipt of an invitation issued by Rollins College to attend their annual Founder's Week celebration in February. As a sort of bribe he is to receive the honorary degree of Bachelor of Art of Making People Grin, Laugh and Guffaw. Here we work for four years for only two letters of the alphabet, and just for taking a vacation in Florida Will Rogers can write B. A. M. P. G. L. G. after his name. What is Rollins trying to do, run a bargain sale on degrees?

May we suggest that in case they continue so hard up for inducement, Huey Long might be enticed by an offer of the degree of Bachelor of Science of Expelling Defenseless College Students and Pushing Little Ducks in the Water.

* * * *

We could turn the college upside down, push the faculty off the top of the "Ad" building, bury the student body alive, even send fewer delegates to fewer conventions, and we still doubt if we could crash the Intercollegiate press. But just let a goldfish named Hugh die, and a short obituary and description of his "burial at sea" appear in the Flambeau, and we receive condolences from several colleges expressing sympathy in our bereavement. The Agonistic compliments our "splendid funeral." Thanks.

* * * *

According to the Purple Parrot, a psychology professor at Nebraska University advises that everyone read a detective story before going to bed, saying that there is nothing better for taking the mind off studies after a hard day's work. A nice, gory murder story, so he claims, is a means of relaxation after a day of classes, and serves as a sedative for the nerves. . . . What a recommendation for the kind of courses they have at Nebraska. . . . We wonder if they hand down razor blades for daily exercise.

* * * *

Cornell University scientists have raised two sheep which never ate a blade of grass, but lived solely on synthetic diets. They were fed a mixture of casein, cellulose, starch, vitamin concentrates and salts. . . . Smart sheep if they knew what comprised the mixture they were being fed. That they lived through it is small comfort for us, for the fact of the business is, we ain't no sheep.

* * * *

The davenport held the twain,
Fair damsel and her husband swain
Henniske

But Hark! A step upon the stair,
Mrs. Riley finds them there
He   and   she.
—Exchange.

* * * *

"Poetry is something that gives one a strange sensation in the back of the neck, or down the spine, or a funny feeling in the pit of the stomach."—Exchange. Yeah? So does a worm in the spinach.

* * * *

From Knox and Armour Tech come these submittances of a certified list of "putter-righters."

Epistle—A gun.
Senor—Noise made in sleep.
Paralyze—two louses.
Sapid—A dumb guy.
Bayou—Body odor.
Cod—Used in bridge games.
Cipher—To long for.
Clog—Timepiece.
Aware—A word meaning whither . . . Aware, aware can my bonnie be?
Pell—Bucket.
Suite—Like sugar.
Wad—Relative pronoun meaning that which . . . Wad? No spinach?
Scent—Five make a nickel.
Adam—A real small piece of something in chemistry.
Soccer—Candy on a stick.
Slip—The easy way to live thru a lecture.
Jail—Place where people go to pass their time.
Ate—Number after seven.
Rant—The money the land-lord wants.

When You Think
of
Cleaning, Dyeing and
Alterations
Think of the
Central Cleaners
"Your Patronage Is Our Pleasure"

Works of Spanish And Cuban Poets to Feature Meeting of Fraternity

The January meeting of Phi Beta Sigma, Spanish honorary, to be held Wednesday night at 7:30 will feature a program in charge of the poetry group.

Included in the events scheduled for the meeting will be sketches of the lives of Heredia, a Cuban poet, and Becquer, a Spanish poet, by Laura Mathis and Mary Elizabeth Cooley. Lily Friscia will read examples of the poetry of these authors.

Following the meeting, a social hour will be enjoyed by the faculty and student members of the honorary.

Instructors at College Take Part on Program

At the industrial arts exhibit of the Florida high schools held in Jacksonville January 3, Miss Emily Wilburn, assistant professor of the industrial arts department, acted as chairman of the industrial arts section of the F. E. A. The business session was held at the Central high school following a luncheon at which Miss Wilburn presided.

Miss Florence Tryon and Kenneth Williams, instructors at Florida high school, read papers in the social studies group and the science group, and Dr. Marion Hay, associate professor of education, read a paper in the methodology group.

Miss Katherine Montgomery, Miss Mary Settle and Miss Dorothy White, instructors in the physical education department, were also on the program.

Davidoff Makes Debut In Metropolitan Opera

Of interest to his many admirers at Florida State College for Women is the announcement that Yasha Davidoff, the young Russian baritone who gave a concert here last spring, will make his first appearance at the Metropolitan Opera in New York City, February 5. He will create the leading role in the new Russian opera "Lady Macbeth." He will also sing this role at the American premiere of this opera in Cleveland, Ohio, January 31.

"College Misses' Hangover" Gains New Sympathizer

Kurz Thinks Professors Should Experience Week-end Jaunts

What would Monday's classes be like if every faculty member should go away for an exciting week-end? For instance, imagine one of our austere professors riding the bus until late Friday night, going to a football game Saturday, dancing until the wee hours Sunday morning, and arriving in Tallahassee early Monday morning after a long all-night ride on the bus to crawl into bed as the clock strikes three.

Dr. Herman Kurz, professor of botany, says that if every college professor and instructor would go away for an exciting week-end they could appreciate the "college gal's hangover" after a particularly lively jaunt. Dr. Kurz spoke from his own experience of coming back from a full week-end and the way he felt while teaching his classes the following day.

Forgive Our Prejudices

(Continued From Page Two)

Mr. George Meredith said that an intelligent or at least an appreciative audience was necessary to the successful production of a play. Undoubtedly this is so. Likewise, a book is not much of a book until it is read. For this reason, comments one of the professors on campus, the extreme liberation of the American press by the customs and usage of the American people has been a boon and a godsend to many of the literati who were frustrated in their main function of communicating ideas. With the publication of Joyce's Ulysses in a legitimate, above-board edition came probably the biggest sanction ever given literature which had hitherto been banned in this country. After all however, it is difficult to tell how good or how bad Joyce really is when he writes in his own manner inimitable save by Gertrude Stein who goes him one better.

Nor should we overlook the pure pleasure of the literary pursuit. If it were not for the searching of the printed page, we should not have found John Dryden's song from Mercury to Phaedra:

"Fair Iris I love, and hourly I die
But not for a lip nor a languishing eye:
She's fickle and false, and there we agree,
For I am as false and as fickle as she:
We neither believe what either can say,
And, neither believing, we neither betray.

'Tis evil to swear and say things of course;
We mean not the taking for better for worse.
When present we love; when absent, agree:
I think not of Iris nor Iris of me.
The Legend of Love no couple can find
So easie to part, or so equally joined."

The Honor Beauty Student's DAILY
SCHEDULE

Arranged by Helena Rubinstein so that your entire day will be free from worry about your skin or envy of other skins—

Cleanse with PASTEURIZED FACE CREAM. Besides cleansing it revitalizes. Builds new beauty in skin and contours. 1.00.

Clear with SKIN CLEARING CREAM (Beautifying Skinfood). Makes skin radiant. Refines texture. Excellent for dull, sallow, freckled conditions. A beauty necessity to every skin! 1.00.

Close Pores with gently bracing SKIN TONING LOTION. For dry, sensitive skin use Skin Toning Lotion Special. Each 1.25.

Make-up with the world-famous Helena Rubinstein cosmetics: Lipsticks with marvelous new ingredient that keeps the lips dewy, fresh . . . Rouges in enchanting shades . . . Mist-fine Powders . . . Alluring Persian Mascara . . . Each from 1.00.

Bennett's
109 East College Ave. — Phone 300

Don't Forget That Soup
After Examinations

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

LIBRARY
FLORIDA STATE COLLEGE [illegible]
TALLAHASSEE, FLA.

Hear Curtis String Quartet
Play Monday Night

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, January 18, 1935 NUMBER FOURTEEN

Senate Posts Data to Inform Student Body

Questions for Discussion In Council to Be On Bulletin Board

SEEKS TO LEARN CAMPUS OPINION

Recommendations May Be Formed Through Group Members

Information about questions which are to be discussed by the senate of College Government association will be posted on the College Government bulletin board the third Thursday of each month, a week before action is taken on the questions by the senate, according to a recommendation from the committee on senate procedure, headed by Georgia Ruth Work, which was adopted at the senate meeting this week.

Students May Question

This recommendation, however, applies only to those matters which shall come up before the college council.

The recommendation further stipulates that any student or group of students may present a question requiring legislation through any member of senate. Also, recommendations received from the college council shall be posted on the College Government bulletin board on the second Thursday of each month.

Any senate member may introduce a question requiring legislation by handing a signed statement of the question to the chairman of senate. It is supposed that senate members be representatives of the opinions of their group in so far as possible.

Further, the recommendation states that at the request of the executive council senate may make recommendations on matters of policy. At the request of the senate, executive council may make recommendations on matters of legislation.

Art Exhibit Is Topic of Talk

Briggs Discusses Modern Trend In Lecture Monday

Using the two points, medium and style and subject, as the basis of her discussion, Miss Amy Ferris Briggs, of the art faculty, lectured Monday afternoon on the Artist Series exhibit of water colors then being shown in Room 361 Ad building.

"From the standpoint of medium water color is one of the most difficult mediums to use successfully, yet when used successfully it is of great charm," she said. Miss Briggs compared the work of the old masters, Claude Lorrain, Turner, Blake, Cezanne, and Winslow Homer, with that of today. "The tendency today is to value slight, unlabored, work—work that would have been classed as mere sketches or rough drawings by the artists of only a few years ago."

The lecturer brought out the fact that a radical change has taken place in water colors during the past ten years. The trend of today is toward organization with simple, limited color harmonies as against the vogue of brilliancy and sunlight of ten years ago. Two paintings in the exhibit were named as examples of the latter, namely, Lamar Dodd's "Washing Clothes" and Ethel Katz' "Tropics." As examples of the trend of today Miss Briggs pointed out several water colors in the exhibit done by [illegible] Dol, Ann Brockman, and Nathaniel Dirk.

In discussing the various styles and subjects represented Miss Briggs stated that four main styles were represented—the formalist or decorative, the realist, the lyrical or romantic, and the individual. "The trend in America today shows interest in the American scene, or Americana as it is called. It is therefore significant to note that only two of the exhibits are of the [illegible] and one of these [illegible] for its title, would [illegible] be classed as Americana in [illegible] and subject."

Catholic College More Liberal In Many Respects Than F. S. C. W.

Great Freedom Enjoyed In Dating, Dancing, Radio Hours

Contrary to a belief commonly held by most college students, life in a Catholic college directed by nuns is not the restricted existence it is often thought to be, according to Carmen Moran, sophomore here who in her freshman year was a student at Trinity College, the highest rating Catholic woman's college in the United States and which is located in Washington, D. C.

Carmen believes that most of the rules at Trinity are as lenient if not more so than those here. Dating is allowed on any day of the week providing the date does not interfere with class. The number of dates a girl may have is unlimited. However, on week days dating is limited to six o'clock in the afternoon and on week-ends dates are allowed until nine-thirty. However permissions are often given for girls to stay out as late as midnight, if they are attending a banquet or an affair at one of the embassies in Washington.

May Ride On Dates

There is no chaperonage of dates and riding alone with a man during date hours is permitted. A student does not have to sign up when she has a visitor but it is expected that she introduce the young man to the dean of her dormitory.

Smoking is absolutely forbidden on the campus, but a student may smoke anywhere she wishes off of it. Girls may dance in any of the better class hotels or restaurants with men during tea time or at dinner. The number of large dances a student may attend a year are limited, but the college itself sponsors several. These are held at the hotels.

"One interesting thing about life at Trinity that would seem peculiar to a student here," said Carmen, "is that the night before every big dance the girls who are planning to go have to put on the evening dresses they are to wear and stand inspection. If the dress is considered too immodest it cannot be worn unless it is fixed in some way. However, that doesn't mean that we cannot wear formal dance frocks, for the dresses are only condemned if they are extremely low in the back."

A student at Trinity may go to town any time she wishes but she has to sign up at all times. Failure to sign off will incur a Saturday campusment. Carmen says that a student at Trinity never leaves the campus unless she has on her "Sunday best." Socks are

(Continued on Page Three)

Construction On Campus Reviewed

General Building And Renovating Program Progresses

According to H. D. Mendenhall, resident engineer of the college, work is progressing rapidly on the numerous construction projects now under way on the campus.

All the brick work has been completed on the education building. The plasterers and the carpenters have started work on the interior with plans to complete some rooms by the first of March. The State Board of Control plans to hold its March meeting in the five rooms suite that is being prepared for its offices on the ground floor of the building.

The second floor and parts of the first and attic floors are being equipped as Psychology laboratories. When they are complete they are expected to be most modern ones in the South and probably in the United States.

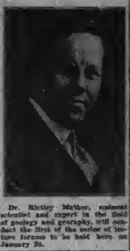
During the Christmas holidays work was begun on repainting the Science Hall for the first time since its construction. Since the men are unable to work while classes are in session however, the work will be delayed for a while. During the holidays the library, the practice house and the Demonstration school were treated for termites, and it is probable that this same treatment will be given to other buildings threatened with termites.

The smoking rooms in Jennie Murphree, Broward, Reynolds, and Gilchrist are nearing completion. The modern chromium furniture ordered for the rooms has arrived and will be put in place as soon as the painting has been completed.

Observations are being made daily in regard to the behavior of

(Continued on Page Three)

FORUM LECTURER



Dr. Kirtley Mather, eminent scientist and expert in the field of geology and geography, will conduct the first of the series of lecture forums to be held here on January 30.

Artists Play Monday Night

Curtis String Quartet Features Smetana's "From My Life"

The Curtis String Quartet will be presented as an Artist Series program Monday, January 21, in the college auditorium at eight fifteen. The quartet is composed of Jascha Brodsky, first violin; Benjamin Sharlip, second violin; Max Aronoff, viola, and Orlando Cole, violincello.

The organization, which made its first appearance in 1927, is sponsored by the Curtis Institute of Music of Philadelphia and received its name from that institution.

The instruments used by the quartet in its concert work were given to the members from the

(Continued on Page Four)

Practice Begun For Spring Meet

Swimmers Are Preparing For International Contest Here

Practice began yesterday morning in the college pool for the 1935 National Telegraphic swimming meet which will be held in the spring. This year Florida will be in charge of the Southeastern division of the meet.

The meet for Florida will be held in the pool at a later date with time taken for first, second, and third places, and the results will be sent by wire to headquarters where they will be compared with the time from other competing colleges and universities.

Every Thursday morning at 11:30 practice will be held in the college pool, open to all those who wish to enter the meet. The requirements for eligibility consist of a C average, A health, and a required amount of practice.

Last year Florida State College for Women won the Southeastern division first place with a score of 27 points. In this division, Martha Makemson was high point girl, winning one first place and two second places. Other winners from Florida were Claire Redfield with one first, one fourth, and one fifth place; Mildred Stevens with a second place, and Shirley Stevens with a fourth place.

Those who have started practicing for the 1935 meet are: Martha Makemson, Marie Taylor, Janice Borton, Marion Weeks, Hazel Royal, Frances Thill, Claire Redfield, Mildred Stevens, Shirley Stevens, and Mary Etta Thistlethwaite.

Chemistry Department To Hear Adams Lecture

Roger Adams, president of the American Chemistry Society, is touring the eight southern sections. He will speak in Gainesville January 26, on "Recent Trends in Applied Organic Chemistry." Several members of the local chemistry department plan to attend this meeting and hope to have as complete a representation as possible from Florida State College for Women.

Scientist Will Open Lecture Forum Series

Dr. Kirtley F. Mather's Subject is "Whence Come Our Ideals"

CRIMINOLOGIST TO APPEAR IN MARCH

Discussion on Questions From Audience Will Follow Talks

A lecture forum series will be opened here on January 30 by Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, well-known geologist, who will speak on "Whence Come Our Ideals," in the auditorium at 8:15.

Dr. Hubert W. Hurt, a lecturer and authority on crime, was also definitely secured Tuesday as a speaker on the forum, to appear March 30 in place of Robert Ellwood who will be unable to meet his engagement because of illness.

Geology Student

A fellow of the Geological Society of America and a member of other scientific organizations, the recipient of many honors, and at present chairman of the Department of Geology and Geography at Harvard, Dr. Mather is famous here and abroad for his work as a geologist.

As a member of the United States geological survey, his research into geology, oil and gas resources, has carried him into many sections of America and even into Alaska. For several years he conducted geological explorations along the eastern front of the Andes in Bolivia for one of the larger American oil companies and he has done similar work in connection with petroleum resources in Mexico and Nova Scotia.

Much thought has been given by Dr. Mather to the impact of modern science upon religion, and his lectures dealing with this relationship and also with the origin and geological history of mankind are in constant demand. In the field of science and religion, Dr. Mather's book entitled "Science in Search of God" was selected August, 1928, as the Religious Book of the Month. He is also a contributor to several outstanding journals, technical and otherwise.

His broadly human interests are indicated by the fact that as president of the Twentieth Century club of Boston, he has recently organized an Adult Education Center which is attracting considerable attention.

Noted Criminologist

Dr. Hurt has chosen for his subject, "Making Crime Hazardous and Justice Efficient." The material for his lecture is based largely on his own observation and experiences in such positions as director of research for four-

(Continued on Page Three)

Hysteria Seizes Florida Campus

Examination week. Cold chills and fever accompanying these words. After spending a nice quiet week in the infirmary a wise student may come home Sunday afternoon, study a couple hours, play a few rubbers of bridge, go out to dinner and, then to a show. As to whether it is wiser to set up all night and worry, or go t bed and sink int oblivion, is a controversial subject. Of course the blue dress, the white elephant, and the handkerchief to sit on, are all institutions here to stay.

Everyone knows that to look at the moon over the left shoulder, to change dresses in the middle of the week, to dream of snakes, or to pass the salt without putting it down is sure fatality.

However, if one of these errors has been committed, a damp blotter in the sole of the shoe sometimes helps to relieve the dire situation by causing a faint and thereafter immediate removal to the infirmary.

Constant complaining, sarcasm, gluttony, scorn of advice, conceit, ridicule, late hours, and neglected health habits are also indispensable aids.

Beauty hints for exam week: Use no rouge, lipstick and no powder, unless it is dead white. Buy a new stick of mascara and draw deep circles under your eyes, and don't wash that blue dress—you haven't time!

College Is To Be Publicised

Alumnae Advertising And Faculty Talks Are Week's Features

Plans for the extensive publicity campaign of the state-wide F. S. C. W. week, which will be held February 3-8, were made known yesterday by Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, general chairman of the whole program.

Among the illustrative material which will be used are three maps, one of Florida showing by black dots every one of the 4000 places where there is a Florida State College alumna. Another map of Florida will show places from where students are now attending college. According to Miss Edith West, chairman of exhibits, the two maps are almost parallel. "This indicates," she said, "that alumnae are the best advertisement that a college can have."

The other map will be of the entire United States and will represent by a black dot every town where a Florida State College alumna is doing graduate work.

Illustrated folders showing views of campus and college life will be printed and 2000 copies distributed throughout the state. There will also be small bulletins showing the services the college has rendered the state of Florida.

Radio publicity of speeches on the topic will be broadcasted over

(Continued on Page Three)

Expert Surveys Curriculum And Speaks to Faculty Here

"There must be something to these orientation courses," said Dr. Doak S. Campbell in his opening remarks to the faculty Monday afternoon, "or not so many thinking people would pay as much attention to them as they do. Of course, college men and women are susceptible to new ideas and passing fads, as are any other body of citizens, but this plan seems to be here for keeps."

Dr. Campbell's visit to this campus was a part of the detailed survey of curricular problems which he is carrying on as chairman of the Education committee of the South of the General Education board, and Director of the Joint committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools on the study of Curricula. The survey is being made in an effort to discover what has been done in the various schools toward revising the curricula, and to establish eventually some plan whereby all schools may have the same general curricula set up. Dr. Campbell came not for the purpose of offering suggestions, he said but to get information concerning our system, and to give the committee here ideas as to what is being done in other schools.

"The matter of orientation i s not a new thing," the speaker declared. "The essence of the plan goes far back in educational history. Segmentation into minute subject matter groups is a fairly recent thing in education. Now that we find ourselves with scattered, unrelated materials, we are trying to integrate, to correlate them, and to get back what we have lost. The unity of the thing is what we're striving for now. We've lost a sense of relationships, and at present we have a desire to bring together again those things which have become specific, separate, and unrelated.

"Education consists in the application of subject matter, and in the development of a social understanding. The system of orientation will not do away with the first fundamental in order to promote the latter. On the other hand more subject matter will be taught in orientation courses, but it will be related to the life of the child and to the other things he is learning. A social intelligence will naturally follow in such a set up.

The two purposes of the orientation courses which Dr. Campbell mentioned were: A basis should be laid for forming judgments for concentration in some particular field; and a basis of conduct should be formed.

"Orientation is really a word synonymous with education. We

(Continued on Page Four)

Visitor From Rollins Will Lecture Here

International Relations Is Subject Chosen By Authority

AAUW CHAPTER INVITES PUBLIC

Speaker Widely Known As Educator, Author And War Worker

Dr. Evelyn Newman, professor of English literature at Rollins college, state chairman of the international relations group of the American Association of University Women, and lecturer, will speak on "Greater International Understanding Among Nations" tomorrow evening at 8:15 in the Augusta Conradi theater. She will be accompanied by Mrs. Willard Wattles, president of the Florida division of the A. A. U. W.

Dr. Newman is the author of The International Note in Contemporary Drama and of "The International Note in Contemporary Fiction", both critical studies of current literature. She is considered an authority on international relations, and has just recently returned from Europe where she attended the World Peace Conference in Geneva, including the session at which Russia was admitted to the League of Nations.

Serves in France During War

Last winter Dr. Newman attended a conference on the cause and cure of war in Washington. During the World War she served with the American Army in France and Germany as a member of the Education and Morale Department of the Y. W. C. A.

Dr. Newman and Mrs. Wattles will arrive on Saturday afternoon and will be entertained by the Tallahassee chapter of A. A. U. W. at a dinner to be held at the Dutch Kitchen. After the dinner

(Continued on Page Three)

Methodists Plan Conference Here

College Will Be Hostess To Students From Entire State

Methodist students on this campus will be hostesses to students from colleges all over the state at their annual Methodist student conference to be held here, February 1-3, according to Dr. R. Ira Barnett, executive secretary of the conference board of Christian Education, who has spent several days in Tallahassee completing arrangements.

The general theme of the conference is "Daring To Be a Christian in the Present Economic Order." Dr. L. E. Loemker, member of the Emory university faculty, will lead three open-forums along these lines Saturday morning.

There will be three "interest" groups, also centering around economic problems, conducted by three of the visiting pastors. Dr. Harvey C. Brown from Nashville, Tennessee, and a member of the general board of Christian Education, will lead the first group, Saturday, on the economic order and the church. The second group, on the economic order and world peace, will be lead by Dr. J. C. Peel of Southern college. The Reverend F. M. Boyd, pastor of College Heights church in Lakeland, will discuss the economic order and amusements with the third group.

Dr. Harvey C. Brown will conduct open-forums on "Suggestions for Student Organization and Programs in College Situations." The worship periods during the conference will be in charge of the student leaders from the colleges represented.

General fun and fellowship are the sole provisions for their banquet to be given for the delegates in the college dining hall Saturday evening, February 2. Dr. Barnett said the conference will be brought to a close, Sunday, with a holy communion service at the Trinity church in Tallahassee.

Students from Southern college, University of Florida, Rollins, Stetson, Miami and Tampa

(Continued From Page One)

A. A. U. W. OFFICIAL

Dr. Evelyn Newman, writer, war worker, educator, and chairman of the international relations committee for A. A. U. W., will speak here tomorrow night.

Kelly Speaks To Graduates

Outlines Activities Of National Alumnae Organization

Miss Jeannette Kelly, of Williamsburg, Virginia, director of the south Atlantic section of the American Association of University Women, spoke on the history of A. A. U. W., outlined its program and purposes, and discussed its international relations at a coffee given in her honor in Reynolds parlor this week. The coffee was given by the Tallahassee chapter of A. A. U. W. and attended by the members of the senior class.

"To you girls who are leaving college," said Miss Kelly, "the A. A. U. W. is the largest alumnae association to which you could belong. Of the six hundred or so women's colleges in this country a little over one third have reached the standards of A. A. U. W., making a membership of about 70,000 women."

An important aim of the association at this time is to obtain equality for women with men on faculties, in salary and in positions of responsibility.

The American association is affiliated with the International Federation which renders services

(Continued on Page Three)

Electric Survey Near Completion

College Students Aid In Compiling Data On Consumer Rate

The data for the electric rate survey in the city of Tallahassee, which is a part of the national FERA project, will be completed before the examination period, according to Dr. Harold F. Richards, supervisor of the work.

"During the past week a crew of FERA workers outside of the college have been visiting the homes of about one hundred consumers of electricity. These consumers were selected from a much greater number on the basis of information which the college FERA workers transcribed from the records made available by city officials and electrical dealers," said Dr. Richards. He added that no canvassing whatsoever has been or will be done by college students.

Students from various departments were drafted into service for the survey work, all FERA workers of the college being subject to call temporarily to complete the job of this intensive campaign. Work on the survey did not create any new jobs, however, as the instructions which Dr. Richards received from Washington did not stipulate this.

The general purpose of the project is to study the effect of the power business on living conditions. Data compiled includes rates charged for the service, the amount of current sold, the kind of electrical appliances used, the extent of their use, and records of individual consumption. The survey is to cover a period of thirty months, beginning with April 1932.

Miss Elizabeth Lynn, instructor in physics, supervised work at the city offices on Friday, Saturday and Monday.

Major Dates For College Calendar Set

Religious Emphasis Week Will Be Held Here In February

PROM WEEK-END IS MARCH 22-23

Florida State Campaign, Mid-Winter Festival Are on Program

Dates for the major events of the second semester of the college year were announced yesterday by Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, dean of students.

One of the outstanding events is the state-wide Florida State College for Women week to be held February 3-8, the purpose of which is to make contacts with alumnae chapters and to give appropriate publicity to the installation of a Phi Beta Kappa chapter here.

Ted Shawn to Return

In addition to the special activities concerning F. S. C. W. week, Ted Shawn and his dancers, who were here last year, will again make their appearance on the artist series program of February 8.

On February 9, the Emory Glee club from Emory college in Atlanta, Georgia, will give a concert. Other glee clubs which have obtained a place on the college calendar are the University of Florida Glee club which will appear here May 4, and the Yale Glee club, which will probably give a concert on March 27.

Religious Emphasis week, introduced to this campus for the first time two years ago, will be held again this year from February 11 to 17. During this time Raymond Albert Kissling of the Riverside Presbyterian church in Jacksonville will be here to speak, lead discussions, and have conferences with students. Also, on February 13, Rabbi Edward L. Israel will speak on "The Social Implications of Unemployment."

The last of February will mark the celebration of Mid-Winter

(Continued on Page Three)

Mortar Board To Present Plaque

Group Announces Plans For Varied Activities During Year

A plaque is to be awarded by Mortar Board early in February to the freshman having made the highest scholastic average for the first semester, according to Marian Brantley, president of the honorary.

Investigations concerning a freshman honorary society are being carried on by Mortar Board. The need is being felt on the campus of a small organization composed of freshmen of the highest scholastic standing, and Mortar Board is making plans for a local recognition of about twenty members of the freshman class.

The senior play, plans for which have recently been begun and which is expected to be presented in March, will be sponsored by Mortar Board.

The survey of honorary societies begun by Mortar Board last year has been expanded into a survey of all extra-curricular activities being participated in by students. Statistics are being gathered which are expected to indicate over-centralization of offices and club memberships, a condition which over-burdens a small group of students while large numbers of capable girls belong to no organizations and hold no offices. Mortar Board expects to accompany the results of its investigation with recommendations for a radical change in the present system. This investigation is expected to be concluded within the next few weeks.

Mortar Board is at present working on a plan by which it is hoped that high school students throughout the state may become acquainted with the principles and standards of the honor system while they are still in high school in order that they may be entirely familiar with it and ready to cooperate upon their entrance into college.

New members to Mortar Board will be tapped near the last of April.

The Florida Flambeau

Member

EDITORIAL STAFF
BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON .... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Athea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchanges, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyne Wahnish, Copy Editor, Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedra McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Fain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF
ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS .. Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS .... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON ...... Circulation Manager
Ass't Ads Manager, Mary Patterson; Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sara Beth Davis

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Sarah Wambaugh Knows Her Plebiscites

When the inhabitants of the Saar voted on January 13, to take their government German, in preference to International or French, a woman was at the polls to see that what was done in voting this year was done rightly.

Her name is Sarah Wambaugh. She hails from the States and is the only woman to serve as deputy commissioner and technical adviser on the League of Nation's Plebiscite Commission.

And Miss Wambaugh knows her plebiscites. Roland Sharp in the Christian Science Monitor delineates the training of this feminine connoisseur in the methods by which peoples decide their governmental alignment. Devoted to public affairs, a student of international law at Radcliffe, Miss Wambaugh was called into the Secretariat of the League as a technical expert on the Saar and Danzig in 1920.

There followed a succession of jaunts to plebiscite areas where Miss Wambaugh went directly to the people—housewives, working men, and governmental officials. She has preserved these contacts in books and lectures, being the only woman invited to give a lecture course at the academy of International Law at The Hague.

This American woman has gone a long way. And now that she has reached the top it is a relief to have American editorial writers recognize her victory on the basis of efficiency. The appointment of women to salient governmental positions is no longer furnishing copy for "unusual" stories. Those who appoint governmental post officers are becoming cognizant of the truth that often the ablest man for the job is a woman.

Returning to our own microcosmic world, it is entirely feasible to contemplate the day when a graduate from Florida State, say an international law student, may have the weal of small nations in her hands.

Are Southern Students Asleep?

Not infrequently some irate southerner rises to the defense of his homeland in an effort to disprove the old charge that "the south is backward." Well, now is the time for all good defenders to come to the aid of southern college womanhood, for objective evidence indicates that women's colleges below the Mason-Dixon line are either asleep or indifferent in regard to the most pressing problems of the world around them.

To what extent are college women in this country awake to the task of promoting peace in a war-threatened world? The editor of the literary magazine of Barnard college decided to find out. She therefore sent a comprehensive questionnaire to the presidents of the student bodies of 74 women's colleges throughout the country. Consisting of two mimeographed pages, the "Barnard Quarterly Questionnaire on College Anti-War Activities" asked for names and activities of organizations concerned with the peace movement, the attitudes of student body, faculty, administration, deans, and student newspaper, affiliation with national peace organizations and other information.

From the results, which have been printed in the National Student Mirror, it was concluded that "The South has its eyes shut the tightest." Out of thirty-two colleges which were polled in the South, five availed themselves of the enclosed stamped envelope and replied. "Roughly," the editor of the quarterly writes, "we heard from one-sixth of the southerners, one-third of the westerners and one-third of the northerners. Then the responses were analyzed. The Southern replies held no reason for altering the impression that the South is asleep or indifferent." Not only was this true of students, but in contrast to the North and West where teachers sometimes lead the students in anti-war activities, the faculties of the South are "quite passive" in making any defined peace movement step.

Newton D. Baker said recently that he saw only one chance of averting a destructive war—to "hold it off long enough for this new generation to assume control." But it is apparent that the white hope of peace cannot look below the Mason-Dixon line for support. Southern colleges are refuges from reality. So cloistered are we, so strangely shielded from the world of strife and unrest, that we will probably not even know when tragedy is eminent.

When war comes—as it surely will, if this generation remains indifferent to its responsibility—perhaps then we won't sleep so sweetly among the bullets, blood and bandages. When the big bombs of the new warfare burst and break their bloody way through our sanctuaries of learning, perhaps then the sleeping beauties of the South will be awakened from their slumbers.

Once Upon a Time—

"End of semester sale, closing out on extra-curricular activities."

Somewhere about campus there should be a sign like this. Of course there isn't, but if you did happen to see such a billet pinioned to one of the trees in front of the Administration building you could think a story like the following and not be wrong.

Once upon a time Florida State College for Women took inventory of all its extra-curricular activities. It was not impressed so much by the number of seeming corporations on campus as it was by the number of holding companies. Too many organizations had duplicate boards of directors.

A deplorable situation but not an irremediable one. Florida State issued an injunction against interlocking directorates. First, it voided the use of the term ex officio. No stock holder in one organization became an automatic member of another organization by virtue of her office in the first.

Second, it encouraged the honor idea in honoraries. If a student were elected to an honorary she was entitled to enjoy the privilege of membership without attending meetings or participating in the usual elective service programs of such groups.

But remember that this honeycombing of extra-curricular activities also revealed the startling fact that in spite of the appreciable number of activities there were some students whose names were not on the roll book of any campus organization. Immediately Florida State conjured up a scheme whereby every student found her outside interest satisfied by some particular group. In many cases it was necessary, even in a period of abundance, actually to create an organization to take care of the interests of certain types of students.

Having evolved such emergency measures, Florida State sought permanent relief from this hodge-podge of extra activities by going to the source of the maladjustment—the freshman class. It seemed that certain of the upperclassmen were exploiting the freshmen as lackeys. The latter spent all their time kotowing to the desires of sophomores, juniors, and seniors. Whenever these three groups had menial tasks to do, they immediately sought aid from the underclassmen who were afraid to say, "no."

But Florida State said no more of this. From now on freshmen will have their own activities. They will produce their own plays and publish their own magazine, and each freshman will be allowed to enter just one outside endeavor. Then when they become sophomores they will have learned the value of specialized endeavor and concentration of efforts. They will be the harbingers of discriminating junior and senior classes.

Of course, this is just a story. But often stories come true. When this one does, life at Florida State will become less tempestuous and take on the appearance of serenity. There will be less meeting and more living.

Surgeon General Hugh S. Cumming, in his United States Public Health service report to Congress last week, announced that the death rate for 1933 was the lowest in the history of the country. In spite of Depression, we live.

Magazine Thumbings

By Melvyne Wahnish

THE UNCERTAINTY PRINCIPLE AND BEHAVIOR
By Selig Hecht
Harpers, January.

The uncertainty principle, or the principle of indeterminacy as it has in the past few years come to be known, deals with the sum total of accuracy for which a person may hope in describing a single individual event. The principle states that there is a distinct limit to the precision with which we may measure such an event. Hecht adds, "Since our tools are of the same stuff as the things under investigation, we can get no information about the ultimate nature of these objects by their interaction." We are told that for a large number of such events it is possible to state what will happen in "terms of a scheme of numbers called the 'law of probability.'"

It is interesting to note at this point the physicist joins hands with the biologist. It has long been an accepted doctrine of the biologists that individual behavior is unpredictable. Now we find that it is necessary for the physicist who thought himself so infinitely superior, to admit that when he arrives at the very core and basis of energy and matter he is equally as helpless as the biologist who also cannot predict events with certainty.

The author, Selig Hecht, expresses the challenging thought, "From my point of view there is no difference between animals and man except quantitatively. In all its essentials the problem of man as a whole is inherent in any other animal; more than that it is inherent in any part of him."

It flatters us immeasurably to believe that we have freedom of will. It gives us a feeling of self-reliance and a sense of responsibility. It instills in us ambition and makes us want to applaud our own progress and courage. However scientists would have us believe that all behavior, not only our own but that of plants and animals, is determined by circumstances and conditions which are vastly complicated.

In concluding Hecht says that to lead a vigorous, well-balanced, sympathetic and tolerant life we need to incorporate into our philosophy of life both free-will and determinism.

LADIES HATS
Fortune, January.

In a nutshell the millinery business for last year may be summed up as follows: $100,000,000 worth of hats sold, the majority of which were sold for the price of $1.95. The average hat was bought from the average cheap department store, which in turn got the hat from a cheap wholesale house which probably stole the idea for it from a higher class house who received the inspiration for the hat in Paris.

In 1925 there were 80,000 workers in the retail business. That year we are told $350,000,000 was paid for hats. It is believed that Lilly Daché of New York does the largest business in the more expensive line—$20.50, and up.

At present the millinery business seems to be feeling three major pains: unemployment, distribution problems, and style piracy. However there is not much pity produced Lilly Daché, John-Frederics, and Sally Victor for the latter pain of which they so heartily complain when one thinks in terms of their vast profits.

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a forum of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit direct and constructive criticism. Letters should be signed, marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the [illegible].

Just around examination time a dreadful disease sweeps over the campus—a malady that makes its victims hollow-eyed, nervous, distrait, and perhaps somewhat irresponsible. And the tragedy of this plague is that it is very, very contagious; once it starts on a campus the campus is powerless to check it.

So let's not let this disease get a start here this year. You know the disease; we shall call it examination hysteria, for lack of a better name.

Those who first contract this malady, [illegible] to academic conjecture, are those whose [illegible] is the because of [illegible] habits of study. Unfortunately, though, those with a strong constitution succumb to it if exposed even for a very short time. Of course, it would be best to live so that this disease would make no impression on our mental constitution; but it is hardly possible that all of I have done that this semester. It seems [illegible] to suggest counter measures to prevent the spread of this plague.

Unfortunately there is no [illegible]

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By Hoffman

FORGIVE US OUR PREJUDICES

BY LUCY SOLOMON

Emerson averred that there was always a best way of doing everything, and it seems foolhardy for adolescents to challenge the old American sage, but a large part of our student body wherein the Literary Workshop comments there is a "miniature" intellectual awakening, takes violent exception to this platitude. These students believe that there are innumerable ways to act under any given situation and that it is not only impossible to determine the best way, but that it is very difficult to decide even those which are desirable and those which are undesirable. This leaves us in quite a quandary.

Still worse is the situation when we remember that those people who are the most narrow and the deepest in bigotry are the ones who have the most confidence and who speak the loudest in meeting. There are those "poor thinkers" who, seeing a prism of a situation with countless facets, are more hesitant in prescribing a "right" course of action, and there is good evidence that he who considers and hesitates is lost to those who know without consideration and blunder accordingly.

I know one young man who has decided that the only possible solution to the dilemma is a decision upon one course of action which to the best of his knowledge is as good as any other, and then a sure, self-confident proceeding along that course as if no other could even be considered.

This is a pragmatic version of course, admittedly and candidly, but even then its defects may outweigh its virtues.

Then there is the story of Lincoln Steffens who, when assailed by some conformers of the law-and-order group and accused of being Bolshevik, Communist, errant socialist and all other names of political stigma, replied that "Worse yet—I am Christian!"

Which, I presume, will be a pointless story to some of us.

Things I'm prejudiced against:
Chewing gum
Spiders
People who constantly fiddle with their hair
People who take the second slice of bread
People who do not return books
"Forsaking All Others"

And the last leads to a tirade against Miss Crawford who might be excused for some of her bad acting if she didn't seem so awfully cocksure of appealing to her audience. But then, she probably has reason to be, undoubtedly she knows the level of intelligence and appreciation she is playing to.

Her latest starring vehicle, "Forsaking All Others" is an awful idea, and the record of those college students who went into ecstasies over the repartee of the picture which was, almost without exception, quite within the grasp of grammar school children. Even those babes in the woods have heard of Einstein and the mention of him is any longer a mark of distinguished mental ability or achievement. "Forsaking All Others" however, seemed to think that allusion to such mountains as Mr. Einstein turned it among the sophisticated and intellectual pictures of the year.

Let us have more Ann Hardings, in more pictures like "The Animal Kingdom." We have gotten rid of one-hundred per cent American speakers on our college platform at least temporarily, and it would be an equal achievement to change our taste in movies.

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKER

TO those of us who have perhaps thought that the election [illegible] that Herr Hitler has so far been able to pile up in all elections were secured by means of [illegible] the 90 per cent majority given the Nazi government in the Saar election calls for reflection. In an absolutely impartially held election—supervised by a division of the League of Nations and an international police force—Saarlanders overwhelmingly voted for German rule. Perhaps all of der Fuehrer's charm is not derived from force.

The announcement of the German [illegible] from Berlin, [illegible] [illegible], to the [illegible] that with the return of the Saar to Germany the Germans have no more claims on French territory certainly brings to the Continent a feeling of joy and relief.

FROM a [illegible] plane at 1:31 P. M. (Pacific Coast time) Saturday stepped a tall blond young woman with a tousled head. Amelia Earhart had come through again. This time having gained the distinction of being the first person—man or woman—to have flown the Pacific alone from Honolulu eastward. Just 18 hours and 16 minutes after Miss Earhart left Wheeler Field in Honolulu she was in Oakland, California.

Let us hope that the flights of Miss Earhart will be praised and viewed as a feat of modern aeronautics and of a courageous woman. Let none of us be seeing squadrons of Japanese planes swooping down on the California coast without notice. The tragedy of modern science seems to be that its every advancement is ultimately judged by how many battles it can help win or how many mortals it can help slay.

IN HANDING down the decision Chief Justice Hughes said, "We express no opinion as to the interpretation or validity of the Gold Clause." But the Senator did assert that Congress "had delegated its authority to the President in an improper manner." Congress had the Court, may delegate certain powers to the President or to anyone else, if these powers do not pertain to the exercise of "the legislative function." In short, Congress, in granting powers, must lay down and also the general conditions under which the purposes may be carried out. This decision will no doubt greatly affect legislation in Congress to be enacted this session and may also bring about the revision of some of the other so-called emergency measures.

The Court is now considering the "Gold Clause" case. The gold clause is in all Liberty bonds and by substance in all other private or public contracts, reads thus: "The principal and interest hereof are payable in the U. S. gold coin of the present standard value." Now, of course, all gold is held by the Government, so payment in gold contracts is made in legal-tender currency.

The case is brought before the Court by holders of such bonds and obligations who are contending that the gold clause is still valid regardless of Presidential action, and that contracts should be paid in dollars at their value at the time contracted. In other words they contend that at the present value of the dollar they should get $1.69 for every dollar due them.

How the Court will act on this vital case is a matter for conjecture only. On Thursday and Friday of the past week, however, bonds containing the Gold Clause were in demand as their price [illegible] while bonds were declining.

theatre on this time is potent enough to prejudices against this engine. Consequently it is necessary to appeal to those who are inclined to overlook themselves as [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] their subjects for to [illegible] of this [illegible] or [illegible] it. And as all [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] it is [illegible] to appeal to all to run [illegible] but away from anyone who starts saying "This professor just wants me to ..., I know I'm going to flunk it." Avoid such people, but none of us are immune to examination hysteria.

Signed Daisy Parker

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

GREEK ORGANIZATIONS

In reference to the status and the future of those Greek letter societies grouped under the general classification of fraternities the Pathfinder makes the following statements: "Let them die, and let them be buried in the potter's field, without honors. . . . Secret societies have been one of the evils which have sapped the life out of the colleges and made them dead as Sodom. They are built on snobbery and class preference based on wealth, influence, social standing and gang unity."

The campus where such is the prevailing opinion of fraternity and sorority life is a campus that would benefit by the death of these organizations.

Fraternities are founded with high ideals. Their aims should be that of helping their own members to adjust themselves to university life, that of setting an example, and that of being of benefit to every student of the university. The promotion of well conducted social activities, of sportsmanlike competition in athletics, of the wholehearted support of the ideals of the institution, are not the least of the duties of such organizations.

The accusation is frequently made that fraternities are not just in their selection of students. These organizations are criticized on the belief that they are biased by wealth, social standing, and influence. But what social group is not so limited? Universities themselves set up standards of admission, intelligence, financial resources, and special abilities. It is only logical that groups within an institution which seek to lead and be of benefit to the whole should require higher qualifications than the university itself? And yet fraternities and sororities are in this respect even more lenient than universities, for they allow personality itself, and the worth of an individual, to determine largely the acceptance of members into the group.

But at all times these organizations should keep in mind that students who are not Greeks and should work with a spirit of cooperation with them.

The day when the non-fraternity man and the non-sorority woman feels nothing but rancor or distaste for a high-handed, snobbish social differentiation, is the day when fraternity life is doomed.

In the South, Greek organizations are comparatively new. On many campuses they are welcomed as being a real asset to the institution. It is up to the fraternities to keep this regard, to cooperate with the faculty and with the entire student body, and to be one of the finest factors in aiding a university to maintain high standards of conduct. — The Reveille.

$46,000.00 FOR THE UNIVERSITY

The published Congressional hearings on the war department appropriations bills disclosed that the federal government spent $46,944.18 to maintain the R. O. T. C. unit at the University for the year 1933-1934. In addition, the cost of equipment issued from the War Department were not included.

Staggering—these figures. With dozens of students ignoring their personal health, starving themselves to get an education at the university, these thousands of dollars enough to pay the tuitions of [illegible] students, is being spent to create an emotional condition.

There could be justification for the government spending this money for a medical research foundation where the lives of thousands might be saved through experimentation.

How easily it could be used to increase the number of students working on FERA projects. These forty thousands of dollars would pay the salaries of approximately 150 students on FERA research projects—increasing the number now employed by almost 300 per cent.

Is there justification for this expenditure at the University and as well as for the expenditure of another $20,000 to maintain units elsewhere in Kentucky?

Students of the members of Congress have been extremely critical of these appropriations and apparently in the near future will refuse to approve such measures. Until that time, will the student body remain dormant?—Kentucky Kernel.

Collegiate Come-Backs

Pinch hitting for the regular and official campus griper who happens to have gotten ahead of the vanilla extract instead of the grape juice bottle, is no fun. Neither is vanilla extract. Actually there isn't so terribly much to gripe about this week, or else I came back from the holidays with an unusually Cheerful Pollyanna complex. In less feeling less pretty ... and anyway I haven't broken my exact new resolution to look on the bright side of things yet.

BANG! One, Mr. ... there, it goes. I'm remembering—Ed. [illegible] next week.

Though, the old world has rolled around to Exposition time again. If that isn't a [illegible], I dare you to name one that is. And yet have the reading public—most of those... expect the typewriters that wait to get out a paper on ... time. The ... daily reader, ever try to compose the ... purpose: a ... ? ... a column ... of humor ... and ... laugh ... laugh when you ... feel like pulling up a pillow and ... putting all ... generally in the... Right now if anybody dared me to do a back dive off the Empire State Building into a bowl of vegetable soup, I'll probably take them up on it. Maybe I will anyway.

You know you can fool some of the professors some of the time, and all of the professors part of the time, but [illegible] the thing that ... [illegible] ... time?

Right now the thing ... is here ... a [illegible] ... of those ... at Bloomington, N. J. ... [illegible] remember what happened in ... of March 7, 1933, when I ... remember what happened ... when I ... [illegible] ... it may be wonderful.

And then you know the old ... about ... When your ... tells you, ... pulling ... your ... leg.

I see where a course in elementary fishing has recently been added to the curriculum of the University of California. Practice is to be held at the University swimming pool. But there will be a lot of fish stories told in examination papers in that class. I wonder whether the professor will swallow 'em all, hook, line and sinker.

According to some collegiate formulators, blue eyes are for beauty, and green eyes are for jealousy. And the campus cops think, gray, and black eyes are for not minding your own business. Or have you heard that one before?

The Literary Digest is collecting the opinions of college students throughout the country concerning war. General girls, remember, no war, no military balls. Is peace worth it?

From the way things look over in Oklahoma [illegible], military training begins as soon as you are able to walk and sink as soon as you can?

G. K. Chesterton once made the apt comparison of the "general press" of the eighteenth century and the "free press" of the twentieth. And he: In the eighteenth century the rugged journalist was allowed to write "The tyrant." . . . "It is a privilege and a liberty of the present liberal era of free journalism, the writer may

(Continued on Page Three)

Distaff Will Appear Soon

Second Issue Out Next Week, to Have Design For Each Story

The second issue of the Distaff, which will appear next week, will feature a woodcut, a sonnet sequence, designs for the head of each story, two satires, and several articles showing student opinion on some of the major contemporary problems of not only students but people everywhere. In addition the magazine will also contain some poems, fiction, and the two departments, Marching Letters and All Wool.

The wood-cut, which was done by Olivia Embrey, art editor of the Distaff, will be the frontispiece of the magazine and is called "Mirror Lake—Low Waters." Olivia also made the conventional designs for each story. Janice [illegible] contributed a sketch of "[illegible]" for Marching Letters, the book-review department.

A sonnet sequence of six sonnets by Mildred Elrod Williams and called "[illegible]" will appear along with "A Sonnet" by Maxine Hughes, a freshman who is making her first contribution to the magazine.

Among the articles featuring student opinion are "Lily-White [illegible]," an article on the racial problem, by Mildred Bond; "Prevailing Winds," a reply to a recent criticism of the American university by Anita Mitchell; "Industrial Romance," an article by Eugenie Hudson showing that [illegible] and "Keeping the Boy Out of the Little Red Schoolhouse," a satire by Edna Hoffman on the attempts that are being made to "purify" the American curriculum. Shirley Parker has contributed a pleasant sketch, "I Like to Study."

Fiction in this second issue includes "Clown" by Carol Reeves, "[illegible]" by Christine [illegible], "To All Who Are Lost," "Aunt of [illegible]" by Barbara [illegible], and "[illegible]," by Edna Hoffman. Edna's article is a satire on the prominence the criminal receives on the front page of the average American newspaper.

Several books which have been attractive with interest because of their revelation of contemporary thoughts, trends, and customs have been reviewed by different members of the [illegible]. "[illegible]" is reviewed by Martha Whitaker; "The Red [illegible]" by [illegible]; "[illegible] American" by Mildred [illegible]; and "Mary Peters" by Ruby Parker.

According to the editor, Lucy Preston, this will be the largest Distaff published to date.

Germany's only offshore possession is Heligoland, a lonely rock island a quarter of a square mile in area, situated in the North Sea, 35 miles from the mainland.

Duke University
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE
DURHAM, N. C.

[illegible]

2 for 1 SALE

Buy one dress for regular price and get another dress of the same price for ONE DOLLAR!

$1

These dresses are this season's merchandise . . . evening, dinner, sport and street. . . . Sizes 14 to 52.

[illegible]

THE LADIES' SHOP
[illegible] South Monroe

Dean Salley Issues Notice to Juniors

Because openings for teaching positions are available mainly in the elementary grades, all juniors now preparing to teach high school subjects, unless they are certain of obtaining a high school position, are advised to meet the state requirements for elementary teaching as well as the requirements to teach in high school. For advice on this matter, students are requested to go to Dean Salley's office.

Campus Boasts Four Pairs of Student Twins

Two Are Freshmen While Six Belong to Ranks Of Upperclassmen

Students at Florida State are seeing double, and week-end [illegible] are not to blame. Four pairs of twins are the cause of these "come again" illusions.

Margaret and Jean Elizabeth Bloom, who live in Jennie Murphree dormitory, are freshmen twins, coming to Tallahassee from Jacksonville. The twins are graduates of Robert E. Lee high school and are eighteen years old. Jean and Margaret dress alike and look alike, but, oddly enough, do not room together.

Among the upper classmen are the Hubbard, the Walker, and the Hutchinson twins, not to mention the one Lancaster twin. Jane and Barbara Hubbard are sophomores in the College of Arts and Sciences. They are [illegible] and are particularly interested in campus work. These two can be easily distinguished from each other, as they differ slightly in appearance. Barbara and Jane live in Gilchrist hall, as does Beth Lancaster whose twin sister, Margaret, is at Wellesley college in Wellesley, Massachusetts. Beth is a senior and a well-known tennis champion.

Two pairs of twins live in Broward hall, Bernice and Mollie Hutchinson, and Annie and Emily Walker. Bernice and Mollie are quite alike and are seen only at intervals on the campus, while Annie and Emily are seldom seen apart. Annie and Emily are [illegible] in their [illegible]. They look very much alike and are in almost every class together.

Major Dates For College Calendar Set

(Continued From Page One)

Festival February 22-23, the outstanding event of which will be the annual [illegible] Friday. At this time sororities, organizations and private groups also compete for the Flambeau cup prize.

On the following Saturday morning there will be sports and hockey games. Definite arrangements have been made for the hockey team of the women's college of Montevallo, Alabama, which is on an exhibition tour throughout the southern states, to play the hockey team of Florida State college on this day.

Saturday night will feature the coronation of the king and queen of the Mid-Winter Festival, who will be elected from the senior class by popular vote of the student body. Concluding the festival of activities will come the freshman carnival, an event which was so successful last year that it will be held again as a part of the celebration.

Finals Date

Another important week-end is that of March 20-22 which will feature the senior play on Friday night and the annual junior-senior prom on Saturday night.

Events which will come near the close of the school year are the senior [illegible] on April 12, May day celebration, May 4, and the installation of College Government officers May 6.

Marseilles, France, where King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia was assassinated, is the greatest port of France.

Eyman Speaks On Conference

Names Points Discussed By Association In Chapel Talk

Dr. Ralph L. Eyman, one of the nineteen delegates from Florida State College for Women who attended the Florida Education association meeting in Jacksonville January 2-4, addressed the student body Tuesday in convocation on five points discussed by the meeting.

The first point discussed at the meeting and explained by Dr. Eyman related to teacher training. He stated that in the past many first, second, and third grade certificates were granted to teachers who had not so much as graduated from high school. In many communities such groups are holding forty per cent of the jobs. On this point the recommendation was made by the Education association that after 1939 no certificates would be granted in Florida on anything less than four years training in college, and that no certificate would be granted with less than two years college training in 1937. In 1941 no permanent teaching certificates would be given for less than four years of college and one year of apprenticeship.

Dr. Eyman next dealt with the problem the association faced regarding the financing of the schools. He stated that up to this time the state has appropriated seven and a half million dollars for schools without funds to back the appropriation. This condition resulted in the closing of schools in less than the allotted eight months of the school term, and the non-payment of teachers. The association sent a request to the state legislature that the state appropriate ten and a half million dollars with actual backing, making the salary of the teachers $100 a month, and keeping the schools open nine months, regardless of their size or location.

The third point Dr. Eyman presented centered around the aim of education as decided by the association. "The only reason for teaching is to have an influence on the person learning; character education is the keynote of all education."

The fourth problem discussed at the convention was that of compulsory attendance. "There is a coming age of compulsory school attendance," Dr. Eyman said. "Labor unions will forbid employment of people under the age of eighteen in the next five years. This situation will mean the doubling of the present high school attendance and will probably lead to a need for cooperative education."

Dr. Eyman closed with the statement that there will be a reconsideration of the school system with the aim of removing schools from the influence of politics, if this is possible. This was the fifth problem the association dealt with.

Preceding Dr. Eyman's talk the college string orchestra under the direction of Walter Ruel Cowles, and assisted by Owen Sellars and Miss Anna Mae Sharp, played Andante Cantabile by Tschaikowsky and Mozart's Serenade.

Visitor From Rollins Will Lecture Here

(Continued From Page One)

the group will come out to the college for the lecture.

Dr. Jennie Tilt, publicity chairman of the local unit, extends to all students, faculty members and town people who are interested an invitation to attend the lecture.

Dr. Newman has been touring the various branches of A. A. U. W. recently giving lectures on international relations, in order to stimulate an interest in graduate fellowships given by the A. A. U. W. and in international understanding.

Active Professional Career

Upon her return to the United States after the war Dr. Newman was appointed professor of English at the University of Colorado, resigning later to become the dean of women and professor of English at the State Teacher's College in Greeley, Colorado. She has been a member of the Rollins faculty the latest three years.

Dr. Newman received her Ph. B. and A. M. degrees at the University of Chicago and her Ph. D. from Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland. During the summer of 1933 she studied at Oxford University where she held a fellowship.

Dancers to Present Recital February 2

On February 2, at 8:00 o'clock, a dance recital will be presented in the college auditorium by members of Miss Mildred Stewart's advanced natural dancing class. The theme of the program will be the history of the dance from primitive times to the present day.

Original dance numbers have been created by the twelve members of the class. Solo dances will be presented during the course of the program.

Kelly Speaks To Graduates

(Continued From Page One)

for women abroad, especially on the scholarships. This affiliation provides many traveling privileges. There is a residence hall in London and Paris for women of the Federation, and membership cards are open sesame to numerous public and private libraries and art galleries.

Part of the dues go to the International Federation. Because of the varying exchange, Europe asked that these dues be paid at a regular rate. By doing so the American association helped to make possible the recent triennial meeting of the International Federation in Europe. "The European women were so anxious to attend it," said Miss Kelly, "that many of them brought farm products to sell along the way in order to meet their expenses."

"The A. A. U. W.," continued Miss Kelly, "grew out of an interesting situation. Before 1900, few schools prepared women for college, and those women who did attend found that degrees were almost a hindrance, because they were more or less cut off from society by them. So, in 1882 in Boston, Marion Talbott called the first meeting of the American Association of University Women whose purpose was to be the furthering of adult education for women, and its recognition by society."

Adult education is still the main purpose of the organization. It is worked out through study groups for which material is provided by headquarters in Washington, and through the fellowship fund. Fellowships are given to women who wish to continue their education and who are financially unable to do so. Some of the first American women to attend European universities were sent by A. A. U. W. fellowships.

"I hope," said Miss Kelly, "that we will soon count some of the seniors of F. S. C. W. among our members. Membership will not only afford you new contacts with college women, but it will keep you in touch with your own college, and with the four delightful years you spent here."

Constructions On Campus Reviewed

(Continued From Page One)

the northeast corner of the administration building to see if there has been any further widening of the cracks.

The tile work at the new dairy is practically complete. The silos will be finished in two weeks and the major part of the grading of the roads has been done, with the clay foundation placed. The dairy will not be used until it is completed in about a month's time. The herds will be moved out to the dairy in approximately four weeks' time.

Sport Slants

Alabama May Play Hockey at College

Florida State College may be privileged to entertain on this campus the members of the hockey team from the women's college at Montevallo, Alabama, according to Betty Bailey, president of the Athletic association. The team is making a tour of the Southern states and will probably be there to play the hockey team from this college in a Midwinter Festival game.

Scientist Will Open Lecture Forum Series

(Continued From Page One)

tee of ex-President Herbert Hoover's conference committee. Even more related to his topic was the investigation conducted by him on which basis he prepared the data and recommendations for Dr. Copeland's recent senatorial inquiry into crime and its causes. Dr. Hart is also editor of the College Rate Book and was for some time research specialist for the Boy Scouts of America.

Other speakers on the series will include Dr. William Trufant Foster, author, economist and former college president, who will lecture February 6 on "The New Deal at the Minister" and Rabbi Edward L. Israel of the [illegible] Congregation of Baltimore, mentioned in a campaign address by President Roosevelt as the outstanding spokesman of Jewish social ideas, who will discuss "The Social Implications of Unemployment."

He will be followed February 20 by the well-known author and lecturer, Miss Margaret Slattery, the only woman who will appear on the forum this year, who will speak on "Personal Liberty and Other Smoke Screens." On March 13, Dr. Henry Newman, secretary of the American Commission and International Moral Education Congress at the Hague in 1912, will lecture on the "Revolt Against Dullness in American Life." Dr. Shailer Mathews, dean of the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, who has not yet announced his subject, will close the lecture series on March 28.

Open Forum to Follow

Following each lecture, those desirous of asking related questions may adjourn from the auditorium to the Augusta Conradi theater for further discussion, Dr. Andrews announced yesterday.

Decision for this step toward enabling students to participate in vital discussion of current problems was influenced not only by observation of the forum committee as to the value of the plan, but by an address delivered in New York recently by the United States Commissioner of Education, John W. Studebaker, in which he recognized and stressed the value of the forum in that it develops the technique and habit of discussion, thereby broadening and enlightening large numbers of people who, for lack of time or proper facilities would otherwise be unable to gain information.

Mr. Studebaker's address was especially related to the open forum and its relationship to government and the people, stressing its great opportunity for adult education. "It is clear now," said Mr. Studebaker, "that good government through democratic processes can be preserved only by adequate and planned development of the means of public enlightenment."

As a consciously planned endeavor for the production of civic intelligence, Mr. Studebaker stated that "it is proposed to establish in our national life a far-flung system of public forums for adults as another innovation in American education. Government now recognizes the imperative necessity of meeting the new modern need of the day by extending the educational opportunities of the masses."

On The Spot With Sports

There will be no play night tonight, due perhaps to the fact that coming examinations provide their own entertainment . . . horseback-riding is becoming more popular every day . . . girls clad in jodhpurs and girls in boots and breeches can be seen at all hours on the campus . . . wonder what the Montevallo hockey team thinks about the prospective match with us? . . . training for the telegraphic meet will begin precipitately and with the time-honored bang . . . soccer and hockey teams are putting in some good practice out on the field . . . the coming Midwinter Festival must provide the impetus . . . Beth Lancaster came back to the South for the tennis. She seems to have done well at it, too. She has a sister at Wellesley . . . and so on to exams.

The theory examination for the National Women's Basketball official rating will be held in the large classroom at the gymnasium Monday evening, February 4, at 7:30. All those interested may make application to Miss Elizabeth Autrey immediately.

Catholic College More Liberal Than F.S.C.W.

(Continued From Page One)

never worn by any of the girls. A freshman is allowed to leave the city for two week-ends a semester and to do so she must have a written permission from her parents, as a telegram is not accepted. A girl who lives in a nearby city may go home every week-end if she desires.

Play Radios at Any Time

Radios may be played any time of the day if they cannot be heard outside of the room. Musical instruments may be kept in the rooms and very often a girl has her own piano in her room. However, it can only be played during the music hours which correspond exactly to those at Florida State College for Women.

Each class at Trinity has a special section of the dining room to eat in, and once a year every class has a class day at which time they are allowed to order anything they wish to eat. At this time they are also honored by being given individual butter knives as well as bread and butter plates.

Ordinarily only the tables in the senior section are set with these utensils. Besides the dining room there is also a cafeteria where girls who have gotten up too late for breakfast may buy something to eat for a very small sum. The cafeteria is also open after lunch and dinner.

Faculty Lives on Campus

Chapel is held every morning but is not compulsory. There is a close contact between the students and the faculty because the faculty lives on the campus and the small number of students, about three hundred and fifty, allows individual attention.

Carmen says one of the most interesting courses given is French. In her junior year, a French major goes to France for nine months to study at the Sorbonne and at the Catholic university in Paris. During the Christmas and Easter vacations she goes on tours to the neighboring countries, thus obtaining practical experience in speaking the language and in learning something of the French people themselves.

No sororities are permitted at Trinity, and every other club or organization formed must have the sanction of the dean of students. There are no intercollegiate sports, but the debating team is especially encouraged and the debaters compete with many other women's college teams.

The ideal of Trinity as held up to all the students is "True scholar and true woman."

College Is to Be Publicised

(Continued From Page One)

WJAX in Jacksonville and probably from Gainesville, Miami, and Clearwater. The original plan of giving a musical program as well as speaking has been abandoned.

The committee on exhibits has planned an elaborate window display which will be placed in the show windows of a prominent store in each of the ten largest cities of Florida. The other stores and business firms will be asked to put cards in their windows recognizing F. S. C. W. week in the state.

The main display will include a beaver-board background of three panels on which will be information about the organization of the college, degrees offered, number of scholarships available, the associations of which it is a member, the number of volumes in the library, and the number of scholastic honoraries, student clubs and activities.

There will be two other smaller panels showing the campus and pictures of the administrative officers. On the floor of the window will be lying issues of the three publications, the Distaff, Flambeau, and Flastacowo. Attached to each of these will be a statement of recognition and honors it has received.

Another feature of the publicity campaign will be talks on the history and development of the college given by faculty members in different parts of the state. The talks will be made before various civic clubs every day at lunch throughout the week, while at night speeches will be made in the same town before some other group. Those who will speak are Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, east coast; Dr. Harold F. Richards, Jacksonville and vicinity; Dr. Katherine Abbey, west coast; and Dr. Ralph Eyman, central section.

In addition to these speakers twenty demonstration agents, instructed by Miss Flavia Gleason, state home demonstration agent, will go out into the rural districts to talk about the work of the college. Contacts will be made in every other town by having alumnae speak.

The committee on contacting local clubs headed by Mrs. J. G. Kellum has been enlarged, Dr. Dorman announced yesterday. It now includes Dr. Jennie Tilt for the Business and Professional Woman's club, Dr. William H. Rogers for the American Legion, Mr. W. T. Moore for the Kiwanis club, Mrs. A. J. Henry for the American Legion auxiliary, and Mr. W. H. Cates for the Lion's club.

Mrs. Tome Andrews of Columbus, Georgia, is leaving tomorrow after having visited with her sister, Mrs. Margaret Garner, social director of Bryan and Broward halls, for the past week. During her stay here Mrs. Andrews has been honored by a number of informal social events.

Waskom to Give Talk On Children's Problems

Dr. Hugh Lee Waskom, of the psychology department, will give an address on "Child Problems" before a forum of the Parent Teachers' Association of the Florida high school this afternoon at 3:30 in room 310 of the school building.

Speaking recently to the pupils of the third through the sixth grades was Mr. Asher Frank, director of the state safety department. Mr. Frank spoke on the question of safety and on the organizing of a junior safety council.

French Honorary Meets

At the regular bi-monthly meeting of Beta Pi Theta, national French honorary, which was held last Monday night at the Methodist student house, June Bullard read a paper on Moliere, and plans were made for the rest of the semester.

According to Olivia Embrey, president, the next meeting will be January 26, probably at the home of Miss Lucy Lester, faculty member of the chapter. At this time a pledging service will be held for students recently tapped by the honorary.

Collegiate Comebacks

(Continued From Page Two)

boldly announce, "The Prince of Wales is a model family man."

Just to patronize the home talent (and to fill up space), we include the following. Yep, a couple of local gals thunk 'em up. Thanks, ladies. All aboard—next stop Chattahoochee.

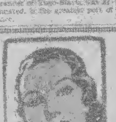
Cuff—when you have a cold.
Amen—something rarely seen here.
Sheep—ocean going vessel.
Wit—preposition.
Pour—opposite of rich.
Raw—college yell.
Vassel—a serf.
Eraser—speed demon.
Spinster factory—F.S.C.W.
Dame—(bad word).
Tree—after 2.
Ex—goes with ham.
Done—shootin' iron.
Frees—frozen water.
Course—a group of singers.

That's that. Now I'm going home and take a rest cure.

Methodist Plan Conference Here

(Continued on Page Three)

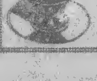
universities are expected to attend, according to Miss Winnie Lee Davis, who is in charge of registration at the Methodist student house. The girls will be entertained at the sorority houses and dormitories, and the boys will stay at private homes.



The bond of school-day friendships is sealed the more firmly by an exchange of photographs . . .

YOUR FRIENDS WILL WANT YOURS

PIKE'S STUDIO
107 W. College Phone 787



75c BENNETT'S CLUB LUNCHEON 40c

CHOICE OF:
Baked Chicken with Oyster Dressing
Tuna Fish Salad with Sliced Boiled Egg

VEGETABLES:
Fresh Turnips
New Boiled Irish Potatoes
Frozen Fruit Salad

Drink and Dessert Included

25c Bennett's Special Hot Plate Lunch [illegible]
20c Chicken Salad Sandwich [illegible]
20c Pimento and Olive Sandwich [illegible]
25c Maple Pecan Sundae [illegible]
25c Special Hot Fudge Sundae [illegible]
15c Choc. Syrup Sundae [illegible]
Russell McPhail Ice Cream, pints [illegible]

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
[illegible] E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

All Silk Chiffon HOSE 59c Value 39c

Ladies' Corduroy Zipper Jackets $2.95 value . . . $1.99

Ladies' Kid Gloves $1.95 Value 99c

An Event of Interest
To the Students and Faculty of F.S.C.W.
Turner's "Your Store"
SEMI-ANNUAL CLEARANCE SALE
BEGINS FRIDAY, JANUARY 18
For 10 Days
Every Item in Store Great Reduced!

Sweaters $1.95 Values 99c

Ladies' Handbags $1.95 Value 69c

Give yourself a fresh point of view with this glamorous
Co-Ed Frock

$10.95

Fashioned of a pure dye silk crepe this Co-Ed Frock introduces the new trend in necklines, sleeves and contrasting details. The prints are richly colored and expensive looking.

Assorted colors. Sizes 14-20.

GELBERG'S
"Style Plus Economy"

The Social Week

Student Secretaries Are Planning Social Affairs

With examinations approaching, student religious secretaries are planning teas and general relaxation hours every afternoon next week at the various student houses, while Presbyterian students are having a party next Friday night after the all-over.

The Methodist student house will be portioned off into four parts for games, reading, music, and puzzles for Methodist students and their friends from four to six on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoons of next week. Methodist hall chairman of the committees will be in charge of these various groups, and tea, coffee, and cookies will be served every afternoon according to Belle Hinshaw, chairman of recreation.

Next Friday night Presbyterian students will meet with young people from town for a party in the annex of the Presbyterian church. Arrangements have not been completed, said Miss Rachel Wylie, but it is expected the party will be a "tacky" one.

Bonnie Hamilton, social chairman, is in charge with Virginia Bailey, Marguerite Bivens, and Marion Conn, among her assistants.

The monthly Presbyterian council meeting has been postponed until February 1 when Miss Sara Herndon, faculty member, will entertain the members at her home in Palm Court.

Baptist students are having an after-dinner coffee for Dr. and Mrs. Luther Christie at the Baptist student lodge January 23. Dr. Christie is the new pastor at the Baptist church.

Jewish Women are planning a party in Bryan annex the week following examinations, according to Helen Simon, president. They are also making plans for a dance, but have not decided definitely upon a date as yet.

Tea will be served Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday afternoons at Reid hall, according to Miss Kathleen Platt, student secretary.

Soup to Be Served During Exam Week

Each morning next week from Monday through Friday soup and crackers will be served in each of the dormitory parlors from 10 to 11 o'clock.

During that time students, including those living off-campus, are invited to come and relax after examinations. Off campus students will be served in all of the dormitory parlors.

Third Monthly Faculty-Student Dinner Is Scheduled Soon

The date for the third of the monthly faculty-student dinners in the college dining room has been set for Monday, January 28, by the members of the college social committee.

Students who wish to have a special table for any members of the faculty are asked to make arrangements and reservations as soon as possible to facilitate preparations for the dinner.

The table decorations for the dinner will feature spring garden flowers, calendulas and narcissus, which will be arranged on each table in a hammered brass vase. A special menu which will be in keeping with the occasion is being planned by the college dietitians.

DR. EVELYN NEWMAN TO BE HONORED BY UNIVERSITY WOMEN'S GROUP

The members of the local chapter of the American Association of University Women have been invited to be present at a dinner tomorrow night at the Dutch Kitchen honoring Dr. Evelyn Newman, professor of literature at Rollins college in Winter Park.

After the guests have convened a member of the Million Dollar Fellowship committee will introduce the speakers for the occasion who will be Mrs. Willard Waters, state president of A. A. U. W. and Dr. Newman.

The members of the A. A. U. W. who have been invited to attend are: Miss Katherine Abbey, Mrs. Ada Allen, Miss Elizabeth Andrews, Mrs. H. F. Becker, Miss Charlotte M. Beckham, Miss Irma Bondy, Miss Clara Bowen, Mrs. Dorothy Breen, Mrs. David Briggs, Miss Beulah Bailey, Miss Sara Broughton, Miss Margie Burns, Miss Alta Burleson, Miss Mildred Burlingame, Miss Margaret Campbell, Mrs. H. E. Carter, Miss Mattie Sue Collins, Miss Jeanne C. Compton.

Miss Ruth Connor, Mrs. W. R. Cowles, Miss Genevieve Crawford, Miss Lillian Cross, Miss Elizabeth Cummer, Miss Edda Delaney, Miss Dorothy Disher, Miss Myrtle Dobber, Miss Olivia Dorman, Miss Margaret W. Dow, Miss Helen Everett, Miss Gladys Fawley, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Mrs. P. F. Fincher, Miss Bolette Frojen, Miss Elsye Giesendaaner, Miss Rachel Gracy, Miss Alvah Gregory, Mrs. Julia Hentrum.

Miss Mildred Henry, Miss Sarah Herndon, Miss Ethel Holloway, Miss Edith Hughes, Miss Marion Irish, Mrs. Green S. Johnson, Miss Gladys Koch, Mrs. J. B. Keen, Miss Olga Larson, Miss Lynn Leslet, Mrs. L. J. Lewis, Miss Anna Forbes Liddell, Miss Elizabeth Lynn, Miss Margaret McCurdie, Miss Edna Mae McIntosh, Miss Helen McKean, Miss Isabel McKinsey, Miss Zoe Manning.

Miss Etta Mathews, Miss Sara Meador, Mrs. Irene R. Miller, Miss Katherine Montgomery, Mrs. Robert Moon, Mrs. Edward Myers, Miss Alice Nicholson, Miss Sallie Nickolson, Miss Elinor Nims, Miss Isabel Perkins, Miss Sue Pitchford, Miss Kathleen Platt, Miss Annie Popper, Miss Marion Pryor, Mrs. Robert Putnam, Miss Nita Pyburn, Mrs. H. B. Rae, Miss Ida Rae.

Mrs. H. F. Richards, Miss Lavilla Richey, Miss Emilee Rivers, Miss Ida Rowan, Mrs. Marian Salley, Miss Margaret Sandels, Miss Mary Schermerhorn, Miss Ruth Schornherst, Mrs. Arthur Seymour, Miss Anna Mae Sharp, Miss Venila L. Shores, Miss Annie Mae Sikes, Miss Henrietta Soyer, Mrs. Dora Skipper, Miss Helen Smith, Miss Leonora Smith, Mrs. Virginia T. Stout, Miss Jewell Swain, Miss Adrienne M. Taylor, Miss Jennie Tilt.

Miss Anna Mae Tracy, Mrs. Earl Vance, Miss Leila Venable, Miss Katherine Walker, Miss Edith West, Miss Mary C. Whitfield, Mrs. Kenneth Williams, Miss Rachael Wylie, Miss Annie Lee Yates, Miss Marion Young, Miss Sadie Young, Mrs. Jack Scarborough, Miss Josephine Thorpe, Miss Alice Berry, Miss Margaret Boyle, Miss Sallie Cornell, Miss Marion Gardner, Miss Marianna Taylor.

Super-Value Photos
25 for $1 or 50 for $1.50

Satisfaction Guaranteed
These photos are used exclusively by college and high school teachers and students.
We will send you perfect copies from any size photo or snapshot, beautifully finished on genuine heavy weight photo paper, postpaid. Original returned unharmed.
Any size photo or snapshot can be copied.
NO FILM IS NECESSARY
Have a good photo to send friends or prospective employers.
Send for Free Sample Today.
William R. Lake
Suite 307
316 Fifth Ave. - New York, N. Y.

Neophytes Entertain Delta Delta Delta Actives at Party

The members of Delta Delta Delta sorority were honored at a hobo party last Friday night given by the pledges of the sorority.

The setting and atmosphere for the party was furnished by the yard back of the sorority house where a large bonfire was built. Games in keeping with the theme of the party were the main source of entertainment.

Near the end of the evening the "hobo" guests were served with refreshments consisting of frankfurters, doughnuts, pickles, [illegible], marshmallows, and coffee.

Hostesses at the party were Adelaide Dixon, Eleanor Moore, Elsie Payne, Mildred Strock, Katherine Beck, Ann Carmichael, Frances Phillips, Nancy Wilkinson, Janet Charles, Frances Lorenz, Mary Meiklejohn, Betty McKinnon, Mary Miller, Jane Reed, Marty Pell, Betty Baxter, Virginia Turner, Margaret Ware, Betty Peck, Dorothy Gandy, Becky Lou Hughes, Virginia Ray, and Lucille Holland.

The list of pledge hostesses for the evening included: Jessie Lee Lumpkin, Catherine Murphy, Rosemary Payne, Dorothy Cunningham, Jackie Williams, Ella O'Neal, [illegible] Marie McGrath, Charlotte Pearce, Dorothy Branch, Nell [illegible], Rosalind Hopkins, Betty Wiener, Mary Jane Michel, Jean Rose, Billie Hoben, Dorothy Mae, Jean Tilden, Betty Ware, Dorothy Dixon, Frances Hartley, Mary Emily Sieber, Nettie Taylor, Louise Rogers, and Martha Hall.

Chi Delta Phi Decides To Function As Group Of Literary Critics

Members of the Chi Delta Phi, honorary literary society, have decided to sponsor the magazine "The Literary Workshop," a national organ for student expression, on the campus of Florida State College for Women. In order to get this magazine before the students, a subscription has been donated by the chapter to the college library.

By this new plan members of the Chi Delta Phi are to function as a group of literary critics. They are asking that all students who are interested in writing for publication submit to this group their manuscripts. The work will be examined and sent to the Literary Workshop. Manuscripts which are not accepted will be returned with helpful criticisms.

At the last meeting of the group they voted to hold regular meetings the first Thursday of each month and to arrange some suitable program for each meeting.

They expect to sponsor a lecture by Mr. Vance, head of the journalism department, some time in the near future.

Personal Mention

Adelaide Dixon spent the week-end with friends and relatives in Ocala.

Betty Hamilton will visit in Jacksonville this week-end. While there Betty will lead the grand march at the Confederate ball.

Among the students who will attend [illegible] for the [illegible] dances are Evelyn Harris who will go to Gainesville, Ethel Price, [illegible] Thomas who will visit in Ocala, and Mary Virginia Weaver, Jean Clark and Ruth Stuart who will [illegible] to Tampa.

Patty Hamilton was [illegible] by Kappa Alpha Theta sorority last Thursday evening.

Dr. Doak S. Campbell, professor of Education, Division of Surveys and Field Studies at George Peabody College for Teachers, was the honored guest at an informal after-dinner coffee given by Miss Olivia M. Dorman, dean of students, in Reynolds parlors Tuesday night following the dinner in the college dining room. At that time many of the faculty members were called to meet Dr. Campbell.

Dr. Evelyn Newman, professor of literature at Rollins college, and Mrs. Willard Waters, state president of A. A. U. W., will arrive tomorrow afternoon to visit with the members of the local chapter of A. A. U. W.

Artists Play Monday Night

(Continued From Page One)

very famous collection of the Curtis Institute dating back as far as 1570.

The quartet will feature on its program the Smetana quartet called "From My Life" titled thus because the music embodies pictures [illegible] in the composer's own life. The first movement portrays love of music in his youth, longing for something inexpressible, and a premonition of future misfortune that turned him to deafness. The second movement, in the form of a polka, recalls the joys of youth and his love of dancing, while the third movement pictures the happiness of his first love. The fourth movement portrays his introduction of the national element in music. The joy [illegible] this idea until the beginning of deafness, and a glance at the gloomy future; a long drawn [illegible] E [illegible] the end is the piping of the high tone in his ear announcing his deafness.

The rest of the program includes:

Quartet in G major, op. 77, No. 1, by Haydn. Allegro moderato, Adagio, Minuetto, Finale.

La oracion del torero by Joaquin Turina.

Scherzo op. 30 by Tschaikowsky.

H. T. Parker, critic of the Boston Transcript, said of the quartet: "They brought to each piece a young, inspiring eagerness that quickly caught the sympathy of the audience. They played as though they cared. We others could not choose but hear."

The New York Times further states: "The voices of the four instruments were fused into a tone of ravishing warmth, and a clean attack of the musical phrase was accomplished with ease and assurance. They played with the inner warmth and clarity that give to the outward line an authentic air of sensibility."

KAPPA ALPHA THETAS WILL HAVE TEA COMPLIMENTING MRS. CANOVA SUNDAY

Mrs. L. A. Canova, formerly Miss Alma Ackerman, a member of the music faculty of Florida State College for Women, will be honor guest at a tea Sunday afternoon given by the members and pledges of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority.

Faculty members and patronesses of the sorority have been invited to call during the afternoon to meet Mrs. Canova. As the guests arrive with the hostesses refreshments, consisting of tea and cakes, sandwiches, and nuts will be served.

Hostesses for the occasion will be Evelyn Ballard, Barbara Bandy, Irene Edwards, Mary Gillies, Virginia Hamilton, Eleanor Haltie, Mary Ann Hills, Virginia Holt, Betty Kimball, Mary McCormick, Carmela O'Steen, Rosalind Parker, Margaret Reedy, Harriet Roberts, Josephine Steele.

Antoinette Sullivan, Wilma Tebush, Cecily Wilburn, Blake Woods, Betty Hamilton, Mary Lee Hopkins, Dollie Lewis, Lauletta Millet, Annie Laurie Moore, Charlotte Sheppard, Anna Belle Baker, Ann Chickering, Mamie Jane Clark, Sarah Clark, Kitty Craney, Marjorie Horton.

Iris Mathes, Nedra McNamara, Margaret Schmidt, Mabel Williams, Helen Penn, Dagmar Pleus, Virginia Godwin, Patty Hamilton, Jean Harris, Mary Kimball, Virginia Lide, Rachel Sherman.

Dr. Olivia Dorman Is Scheduled to Speak On The Latin Poet Horace

In cooperation with the celebration of the bimillenary anniversary of the Latin poet, Horace, Dr. Olivia Dorman has been asked by the American Classical league to be a national lecturer on Horace. Dr. Dorman is also a member of the committee on Cooperation with Educational Organizations, of which Professor G. M. Whicher of Amherst college is chairman.

At the FEA meeting in Jacksonville recently Miss Bella West of the Classics department addressed the Classical division, advocating that they endorse the plan of the American Classical league to celebrate the bimillenary of the Latin poet, Horace.

With the adoption of the plan, the Latin department and Eta Sigma Phi, Classics honorary, have planned various Horatian programs. The outstanding one is to be presented on the anniversary of the poet, December 8, 1935, requiring a national lecturer, not yet chosen. This will be only a part of an international celebration which is to include broadcasts from Belgium and England, lectures, and special educational programs.

As a part of the celebration the Latin department hopes to publish a collection of the metrical translations that the students of Florida State have done in the last ten years. This collection is expected to appear in the spring or fall of 1935.

To further the interest in Horace's Bimillenary in schools, the Latin department is offering a prize for the best metrical translation of an Horatian ode by a senior high school student taking third or fourth year Latin. To a junior high school student it is offering a Horatian medal for the best paper on Horace.

Dr. Josiah Game of the Classics department has been named as the chairman for Florida in relation to the Horatian celebration.

Library Honors Foster

Noting the anniversary of the death of Stephen C. Foster, "America's Troubadour," January 13, a number of his songs have been put on display in the library this week.

They are a part of an entire collection of reproductions which were received by the library last year as a gift from Dr. J. K. Lilly. They bring to mind such old favorites as "This Rose Will Remind You," "Our Darling Kate" and "Ellen Bayne."

Expert Speaks to Faculty Here

(Continued From Page One)

mary with the small child. His undeveloped mind cannot grasp whole situations, and he fails to see the bearing one thing has upon another. As he develops, however, he gradually discovers relationships. He grows to have definite ideas, attitudes, and skills of his own as a result of the integration which is taking place in his thinking. Then there is some integrating process which should take place toward the end of a child's school career. Through the social studies a panoramic view of the entire scope of the field of knowledge should be spread out before the child. He should be shown the relationships existing between the whole of human interests and knowledge and himself."

Answering the question, "Have definite moves been made to put orientation in high schools?" Dr. Campbell affirms that the system has been attempted and proved successful. "The orientation plan in Chicago seems to be a permanent factor," he declared.

"In Virginia the movement is statewide. The universities there have mapped out a course of study for grades one through eleven. There is no subject segmentation in the grades or high schools, and of course, the universities are little by little adapting themselves and fitting in with the new scheme of things.

"The educational board is at the present time studying out a few such problems, which will be thoroughly studied for a period of four or five years. A period of experimentation will follow this, at the end of which someone will be called upon to back the new system. Such progressive schools as Florida State College for Women will most surely do their share," the speaker predicted in conclusion.

Mistletoe Aids And Abets Cupid During Holiday

Echoes Wedding Bells Heard As Students Return

"Mistletoe: To be Used Discreetly but Effectively! Free to All Good Girls—Fifty Cents to All Others. (P. S. Just Boris Good Will Do.)"

Such a sign on a box of mistletoe which Dr. Raymond Bellamy placed on the campus just before the Christmas holidays may have been merely an expression of his sense of humor; but maybe a kiss under the mistletoe led to even "better things." Consider the number of girls who "got hitched" during the holidays — Frances Kelley, Letty Stonebraker, Helen Farber, Cecil Henderson Freeman, Frieda Collins [illegible], who returned to school, and others.

It would seem that mistletoe aided and abetted Cupid, according to the myth concerning the old Druidic custom of [illegible] a piece of mistletoe over the [illegible] only happiness can enter.

Happiness must have been [illegible] for these girls.

Marjorie Helveston is in Charlotte, North Carolina, having been called there by the death of her father.

Sharp Will Give Recital Here

Miss Anna Mae Sharp will give a violin recital Thursday night, January 31, at 8:15 in the auditorium of Conradi [illegible].

Miss Sharp has given numerous recitals during her seven years as professor of the violin department. This time her program will include Concerto A Minor by [illegible], Rondo Capriccioso by Saint-Saens, and Prelude and Allegro, Kreisler.

Miss Sharp will be accompanied by Miss Mary Esther Winslow at the piano. Miss Winslow is also a member of the music department.

Take the most Popular Course in College!

Helena Rubinstein's
First Steps to Beauty

It calls for no study. And you go quickly to the head of the beauty class! Take this daily course by the international authority, to a lovely skin:

1. Wash with Beauty Grains, the only washing preparation of its kind. Wonderful for blackheads and other impurities, large pores, oily skin. Keeps skin clear, fine-textured, velvety. 1.00.
2. Follow with Pasteurized Face Cream. Revitalizes. Builds new beauty in skin and contours. 1.00.

Set of both in special sizes, 1.00.

Bennett's

FINAL FALL CLEARANCE

It Starts Friday—the Greatest of All the Year SALES! Reductions So Great They Shout ACTION!

BEAR IN MIND when Linden's advertises a sale . . . it's a REAL SALE . . and this one is no exception! BARGAINS throughout the entire store! Your dollars buy DOUBLE value in this event!

A fast and furious clean sweep of Women's and Misses' Seasonable Apparel at about one-fourth their regular selling prices. Must make room for new goods arriving daily and these prices will clean our racks immediately. A terrific price slashing event which should interest all lovers of bargains. SALE BEGINS FRIDAY MORNING.

Never Buy Before You Try
LINDEN'S FASHION SHOPPE
Smart Apparel at Popular Prices

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Anna Sten and Fredric March
in
"WE LIVE AGAIN"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Ginger Rogers and Frances Lederer
in
"ROMANCE IN MANHATTAN"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Irene Dunne
in
"SWEET ADELINE"
THURSDAY
Fredric March
in
"AFFAIRS OF CELLINI"

RITZ THEATRE
FRIDAY
Bing Crosby in "Here is My Heart"
SATURDAY
Tom Tyler in "The Fighting Hero"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Grace Moore
in
"ONE NIGHT OF LOVE"

PETER PAN CREATES A FASHION FOR A LASSIE WHO GOES PLACES and your viewpoint changes

See your reflection in this gem of high styling and your whole outlook on life will perk up!

at $14.95

In this crepe dress you are smartly clad for the afternoon wherever the fashionables gather.

P. W. Wilson Co.
—Since 1837—

State
Celebrates First
FSCW Week

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

College
Extends Greetings
To Alumnae

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, February 1, 1935 NUMBER FIFTEEN

Plans Now Complete For Phi Beta Kappa

Will Establish Florida Alpha Chapter Here Early in March

INSTALLATION TO BE STATE EVENT

Famous Educators And Scholars to Speak At Ceremonies

The program for the installation of Florida Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at Florida State College for Women March 6 and 7 has been completed, Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, chairman of the committee on arrangements, announced yesterday.

The two-day installation exercises with its program of public addresses, receptions, luncheons, banquets and the formal installation, will bring to Florida State College distinguished educators from various parts of the country including Dr. Theodore H. Jack, president of Randolph-Macon college; Dr. Christian Gauss, dean of Princeton University; Dr. David Robertson, president of Goucher College and vice-president of the Association of American Universities; and Dr. Virginia Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard, the Women's College of Columbia. [illegible] Florida [illegible] of Florida State College for Women, and other prominent Floridians, will be among those receiving invitations to the event.

Dean Gauss to Speak

The opening feature on the program, scheduled for Monday March 6 at 8:15 in the college auditorium, will be given by Dr. Christian Gauss, who will speak on "The College Graduate and His Country." The speaker will be introduced by Dr. Edward Conradi after a short address of welcome.

At 9:00 o'clock Tuesday morning all Phi Beta Kappas who will be asked to wear academic dress will assemble in the [illegible] room of the library for the formal installation ceremony, which [illegible] Dr. Theodore Jack the installing officer.

At 10:30 there will be a lecture in the auditorium on "[illegible] in Memoriam," by Dr. David Robertson. Dr. Harold F. Richards, president of the local association of Phi Beta Kappa, will preside over this meeting, while the members of the newly installed chapter will sit on the platform.

Pepper Is Toastmaster

Following the lecture there will be a luncheon at the Floridan hotel for all members of Phi Beta Kappa and official guests. Mr. Claude Pepper, Tallahassee attorney and member of Phi Beta Kappa, will act as toastmaster for the occasion. Governor Dave Sholtz has been asked to speak, but has not yet been able to say whether he can accept. Other distinguished guests present will be introduced and asked to make brief remarks [illegible].

An afternoon meeting at 3:00 o'clock in the college auditorium will feature a talk by Dean Virginia Gildersleeve whose subject will be "Education for Today." Presiding at this meeting will be Dr. Olivia Dorman, dean of students at Florida State College.

All guests in the installation, faculty members, and representatives from other honorary societies on campus will be honored with a tea, which will take place Tuesday afternoon at 5:00 o'clock in the college gymnasium. Receiving in the receiving line will be Dr. Edward Conradi and Miss Louise Conradi, Dean William G. Dodd, Dr. Harold Richards, the newly elected president of Phi Beta Kappa, Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Jack, Dr. and Mrs. David Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. Christian Gauss, and Dr. Virginia Gildersleeve. Governor and Mrs. Dave Sholtz and Dr. and Mrs. John Tigert have been asked but have not yet replied. Others who help with the entertainment are Dr. Olivia Dorman who will introduce the guests to the line, Miss Margaret Dow who will receive them at the door and Mrs. Harold Richards and Mrs. William G. Dodd who will pour tea.

Close With Banquet

The concluding feature of the installation program is the ban-

(Continued on Page Two)

LECTURES HERE

Dr. William Trufant Foster, former college president, economist and lecturer, will talk in the auditorium Wednesday night on "The New Deal at the Moment."

Foster Speaks On Wednesday

Famous Subject Will Be "The New Deal At The Moment"

Dr. William Trufant Foster, economic adviser and member of the Consumers Advisory Board of the N. R. A., will appear at Florida State College for the second time when he speaks on "The New Deal at the Moment" Wednesday evening at 8:15, in the auditorium.

Director of the Pollak Foundation for Economic Research since 1920, Dr. Foster has had extensive opportunity for practical experience and observation of contemporary economic problems.

Pays Compliments

United States Secretary of War George H. Dern says of him, "Dr. Foster is one of the keenest and soundest economists in the United States. He is not bound by a lot of obsolete theories which many economists of the classical school are still expounding, notwithstanding the fact that they have been thoroughly exploded. I greatly admire his ability. He is a man of fine courage, energy and vision."

A graduate of Harvard, and the possessor of higher and honorary degrees from Columbia, Colorado, and Western Reserve Universities, Dr. Foster has held prominent positions on the faculties of several universities and was for ten years president of Reed College, Portland, Oregon.

His recent years have been spent lecturing before college and alumnae groups throughout the country and in writing books and articles for magazines and syndicates.

Among his best known books are "Profits," "Business without a Buyer," and "The Road to Plenty" which has been published in Japan, Germany, England, Holland and Norway.

International Club Discusses Problem Of the Chaco Boreal

International Relations Club met Tuesday night in the education conference room to discuss the problem of the Chaco Boreal, a controversy that has been going on for some time between Bolivia and Paraguay for predominantly commercial reasons. After introductory reports by Edith Patterson, Rebecca Keith, Marjorie Harris, and Ida Engel, the club took up the question in round table fashion.

International Relations Club came to this campus under the auspices of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Miss Marian D. Irish of the political science department acts as sponsor, and members include Goldie Lewinsky, Martha Whitaker, Anna Marie Mitchell, Ida Engel, Marjorie Harris, Rebecca Keith, Lorraine Hudson, Edna Hoffman, Rachel McKinnon, Florence Jennings, Cornelia Garrick, Clarissa Knight, Mildred Stevens, Melvyne Wahnish, Helen Wilson, and Edith Patterson, secretary.

Class To Give Dance Recital Here Saturday

Program Will Depict History of Rythm From Early Time

MILDRED STEWART DIRECTS PAGEANT

A Study in Black And White to Feature Modern Numbers

A dance recital showing the history of dancing from primitive times to the present day will be presented in the college auditorium tomorrow night at 8:15, by Miss Mildred Stewart's advanced natural dancing class. Original dance numbers created by members of the class will portray the gradual development of the dance from earliest times.

Two dances, "Incantation of the Medicine Man" and "A Maiden's Ritual," have been characterized to show that in primitive times men knew emotion and ritual before logic and speed. "Dressing To the Nile," will depict the Egyptian style of dancing with its stately and majestic poses, a style of dancing which preceded the Grecian dance developed by the Greek height of beauty with its harmonized movements of healthy bodies.

Depicts New Era

Following a period of obscurity in the history of dancing which lasted several centuries a new era was begun in which peasants played an important part in the dance which will be shown by the "Village Fair," by Reinecke. The "Sarabande," a noble and impassioned dance, preceded the very popular ballet form of dancing which was later changed in character so as to interpret, rather than to imitate, by means of natural movement. The modern dance which seeks to show movement as beauty is portrayed in the dance, "A Study in Black and White." Following the intermission a group of modern dances will be presented.

Members of Cast

Members of the advanced class participating in the dances include Carolina Oliver, Sarah Martin, Wilma Bristol, Francis Hin-

(Continued on Page Two)

Fifty-One New Students Enroll

Number of Transfers Are Among Those Entered This Semester

Fifty-one new students had enrolled for the second semester in the office of the registrar yesterday, January 31. Of this number, sixteen are freshmen, eleven are transfers, two are special students, and twenty-two are old students who have re-entered. Registration will continue until Saturday.

The new freshmen are: Margaret Adkins, Adele Barnard, Hattie Barre, Kathleen Grupps, Willie Hall, Audrey Hastings, Katherine Harmon, Ethel Jones, Betty Ann McKenzie, Allie Marks, Loree Lamb, Mildred Rogers, Sarah Sealey, Florede Taft, and Blanche Elizabeth White. The transfers are: Mary Brantley, Smith college; Eleanor Brothers, Birmingham-Southern; Margaret Edwards, Southern college; Marion Henderson, University of Tampa; Gwendolyn McReynolds, University of Wyoming; Bertie Mackey, Southwestern and Martha Berry school; Faye Poole, University of Miami; Kathryn Sutton, University of Tampa; Valerie Stubbs, University of Tampa; Erin Turner, Montreat Normal school; and Kathleen Watson, Randolph-Macon. The two special students are: Mrs. Mabel Hodgson and Jean Doster; and the old students who have re-entered are: Esther Blattner, Mrs. Myrtice Preston Bryan, Jr., Margaret Biggs, Adelaide Emmanuel, Adele Frain, Emma Lee Goodwin, Louise Hill, Harriet Vela Harper, Claudia Harper, Naomi Mallet, Mrs. Geneva Fisher Norris, Lawson May, Pamela Maxwell, Virginia McKaughan, Carroll Patterson, Jimmy Lou Richbourg, Ruth Rober, Ada Tullis, Mary Veach, Anna Irene Reedy, Mary S. Stalfee, and Louise Williams.

PROCLAMATION
STATE OF FLORIDA
TALLAHASSEE

WHEREAS, the Florida State College for Women will observe its first annual FLORIDA STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN WEEK, February 3-9, with members of the Alumnae association, college faculty, student body and interested Florida citizens participating, and

WHEREAS, the object of the observance is to better acquaint the people of the State of Florida with their State College for Women, and

WHEREAS, a large number of Florida young women are now attending and will attend the Florida State College for Women, and

WHEREAS, the state institutions of higher learning should have the support of the citizens of the State,

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the Week of February 3-9 be set aside for the observance of

FLORIDA STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN WEEK

by all the civic and service clubs, and all other public spirited organizations in the State interested in promoting and supporting institutions of higher learning, and in aiding the College in acquainting Floridians with the Florida State College for Women.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of Florida to be affixed at Tallahassee, the Capital, this 19th day of January, A. D. 1935.

DAVID SHOLTZ
Governor

ATTEST:
R. A. GRAY,
Secretary of State.

Emory Singers To Come Soon

Glee Club Concert to Be Given In Auditorium Next Saturday

The Emory glee club, internationally known for its rendition of the folk songs of the old South, will present a concert in the college auditorium on the evening of February 9. The members of the glee club, known everywhere as the "South's Sweetest Singers," will be accompanied by Dr. Harvey W. Cox, a former head of the teachers' college of the University of Florida, who is now president of Emory university.

The Emory club has made two European tours and a tour in Cuba in addition to its numerous tours of the United States. It has given concerts in such cities as London, Glasgow, Amsterdam, Havana, New York, and Washington. In London it was acclaimed as the "best choral combination ever to appear in the Coliseum," the playhouse where the glee club gave concerts daily for two consecutive weeks.

Last year the club gave a concert at the dedication of Georgia hall at Warm Springs, Georgia, which was attended by President Roosevelt. Later in the year the glee club appeared before a distinguished audience at the Mayflower hotel in Washington. The club has been heard over a nation-wide radio chain, and it has also made many phonograph records both in London and in the United States.

The "South's Sweetest Singers" will appear in concerts in Lakeland, Tampa, Miami, Ocala, Orlando, and West Palm Beach before they appear in Tallahassee. After the concert here a dance for the members of the glee club will be given by the senior class in the gymnasium to which all seniors and their dates, whether they be glee club men or not, and the members of the glee club will be invited. Davidson's orchestra has been asked to play for the dance. Tickets for the concert by the glee club will be on sale at thirty-five and fifty cents next week.

Sunday Vesper Program To Be Centered About Theme of "Friendship"

A special vespers program will be given in the Augusta Conradi theatre Sunday night, at 7:15, with "Friendship" for its central theme.

The program will open with the singing of "Father of Lights" by the Freshman Cabinet. Following this there will be a scripture reading by Lucy Gee Lynn, poems and readings on friendship by Mary Jeanne McKay, Ann Norris, Betty Peck, Helen Cate and Sue Whitaker. A musical number on the violin will be played by Betty Parker, and the recessional, "Hear Our Prayer, O Lord," will be given by the Cabinet.

Date Changed For Festival

Six Organizations Will Compete in Contest For Best Skit

The date for the mid-winter festival has been changed from February 22, 23, as previously planned, to March 1, 2, according to a recent announcement by Carolina DeMontigne, president of College Government association. This change was made due to a conflict with the Military ball in Gainesville.

One feature of the week-end's festivities is the annual skit night on Friday night at which time six skits, each of which will not last more than fifteen minutes, will be presented by sororities, organizations, and individuals. A prize of five dollars will be offered for the best skit. Those who will give skits are Kappa Delta, Chi Omega, Spirotaria, Alpha Chi Omega, Anne Norris, and T. N. T. jazz orchestra.

Other activities include the hockey and soccer games on Saturday morning. On Saturday night tentative arrangements have been made for an informal college dinner and the senior coronation, which is the crowning of the King and Queen of the festival who are chosen from the senior class by popular vote of the student body.

The coronation will be followed by the freshman carnival at the gymnasium. Plans for the carnival have not yet been completed, but there will be dancing during the evening although this will not be the main feature on the program, Carolina announced yesterday.

A.A.U.W. Loan Fund To Benefit From Picture

The local branch of the A. A. U. W. is selling tickets for the spectacular moving picture, "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer", which is scheduled for appearance here next Tuesday and Wednesday, February 5th and 6th.

This production has been acclaimed as one of the outstanding recent motion picture achievements. The A. A. U. W. will devote the proceeds of this benefit show to the Graduate Loan Scholarship Fund which is awarded to some graduate of F. S. C. W.

Tickets will go on sale Friday, February 1. They can be obtained from some representative in each sorority house, from the dormitory house chairmen, from a salesman in the hall of the Ad building, Monday 9-11, 2:30-5:30, Tuesday 9-11.

Penmanship Classes Meet

Penmanship classes for all students who are preparing to teach in the elementary grades will begin on February 5, Dr. Nathaniel M. Salley, dean of the school of education, announced yesterday.

Initial Florida State College Week Gets Underway Sunday

HEADS PLANS FOR WEEK

DEAN OLIVIA N. DORMAN

Seven Faculty Members Will Give Talks In Important Cities

FORTY ALUMNAE CHAIRMEN ASSIST

Two Thousand Pictorial Folders Are to Be Distributed

By governor's proclamation, February 3 to 9 will be observed as F. S. C. W. week throughout the length and breadth of the state. "Florida State College for Women—sound in the past, honored in the present, and prepared to meet the changed conditions of the future" will strike the keynote for the celebration.

Seven faculty speakers will start upon speaking tours, which will reach every important center in the state, before various groups including alumnae, Phi Beta Kappa, Panhellenic, A. A. U. W. and civic clubs. Each will be provided with a large book of campus views, including pictures of buildings, residence halls, sports, May day, and Torch night. Facts concerning the growth of the college, its activities, personnel of faculty and student body, and the recognitions it has received will be presented by the speakers.

Alumnae Active

In addition to these special addresses, forty alumnae chairmen throughout the state have prepared programs observing F. S. C. W. week, and every club in the state has been asked to have a special program in honor of the occasion. In most cities, dinners, banquets, or other forms of entertainment will draw alumnae from surrounding vicinities.

Exhibits are to be placed in the show windows of one store in each of Florida's ten largest cities during the week. These consist of a screen, the two outside panels of which bear factual information about the college, and the center panel of which bears photographs of the administrative officers. Two smaller panels will be placed in front of this screen carrying views of the college campus, camp grounds, and prints of various activities. Copies of the Flambeau, the Distaff, and the Flastacowo will be arranged on the floor of the show window.

Maps Advertise

S. B. Doyle, chairman of the committee on information, has prepared two maps for use in newspapers throughout Florida, one showing by counties the number of alumnae in the state, and the other presenting the number of students attending school at present from each county. Over two thousand pictorial folders of campus views, and approximately four thousand copies of this issue of the Flambeau will be distributed in addition to special information sent out by the alumnae office.

The seven faculty speakers include Dr. Conradi and Miss Louise Richardson, who will speak in Pensacola Tuesday and Wednesday; Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, who will speak in Fort Pierce Monday, West Palm Beach Tuesday, Ft. Lauderdale Wednesday, and Miami Thursday and Friday; Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, who will speak in Bradenton Monday, Tampa Tuesday and Wednesday, Tarpon Springs Thursday, St. Petersburg Friday, and Sarasota Saturday.

Miss Anna Mae Tracy will speak in Ocala Monday and in Gainesville Tuesday; Dr. Ralph Eyman will speak in Lakeland Monday, in Leesburg Tuesday, in Orlando Wednesday, Winter Haven and Plant City Thursday, and in Orlando and Sanford on Friday; and Dr. Harold F. Richards will speak in Daytona Monday, in Jacksonville on Tuesday and Wednesday, in St. Augustine Thursday, and in Ocala and Lake City on Friday.

Committee in Charge

The activities of F. S. C. W. week are being directed by six committees, of which Dr. Dorman is general chairman. The committee on information is composed of S. B. Doyle, chairman, Dr. Ralph Eyman, Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, and Dean Margaret R. Sandels; committee on contacting local clubs, Mrs. J. G. Kellum, chairman, for Federated Women's

(Continued on Page Two)

Infant Days of College Shown In Souvenirs

Papers, Catalogues, And Programs Depict Advancement

During F. S. C. W. Week the history of Florida State College for Women will be presented to students in the lobby of the library in the form of old pictures, old crockery, diplomas crackling with age, and ancient, yellowed commencement programs.

Among other things, old Flambeaux will be displayed. If one glances at the front page of Flambeau, Volume 1, Number 1, she will read that "the waiting list of the model school has grown to seven," and "the seniors are very enthusiastic about their work with the little ones." One will notice a column headed "War Briefs" in the issue of January 30, 1915; and in the Flambeau of November 27, 1915, the thrilling news that "College Avenue is to be paved."

The Flambeau is not favored, however, for copies of The Argo and The Talisman, fore-runners of the Flastacowo and the Distaff will be out for inspection.

Facts will be on parade about the college during the year 1889-1890, as a catalogue dated thus discloses many things unknown before. There were 6 freshmen and 3 sophomores attending the school at that time.

One is sure not to fail to see the picture of the faculty taken when that august body was made up of 21 members. Above all, notice should be taken of Dr. Pic, the spry-looking young man sitting on the front row between two young ladies.

Two quaint vases, one bearing a picture of College Hall, the predecessor of the Ad building, the other bearing a picture of the same hall shortly after the college was named Florida State College for Women, will be prominently placed among the things displayed.

The show windows of two stores down town will contain displays similar to the one to be arranged in the library.

Program Features Skit

The program for convocation Tuesday will be in keeping with the spirit of F. S. C. W. week and will feature a skit. The arrangements are in charge of Betty Bailey.

Church Group Convenes Here

Seven Florida Colleges Take Part in Annual Methodist Meet

Students from colleges all over the state are arriving at Florida State today for the third annual Methodist student conference, which will start here tonight with a reception at the Methodist student house and end Sunday with a holy communion service at Trinity church.

General Theme

"Daring to be Christians in the Present Economic Order" is the general theme of the conference and Dr. Leroy E. Loemker, of Emory university will give three addresses on this subject. Three interest groups, led by visiting pastors, will consider the relation of the present economic order to the church, to world peace, and to amusements.

A banquet for the Methodist students will be held in the dining room tomorrow night. Following a toast by Dorothy Moorhead, Dr. Edward Conradi will give the welcome. A cello arrangement by Mr. Owen Sellers and a song by a student sextet in charge of Joe Birdon will constitute the musical part of the program.

Featuring the traffic signals, stop, caution, and go, speeches by Dr. Raymond Bellamy, Miss Ruth Schornherst, and Miss Lillian Cross will end the banquet.

Schools Represented

Among the schools represented at the conference are the University of Florida, Stetson, Rollins, Southern College, Miami and Tampa universities.

Arrangements have been made with Miss Anna May Tracy to enable the visiting delegates to take most of their meals in the college dining room. The girls are being entertained in the dormitories and sorority houses while the boys are staying at private homes.

Complete schedule for the conference follows:

Friday
Afternoon
Registration at Student house
Evening
Reception at Student house
Saturday Morning
8:00 Breakfast
8:30 Worship, led by University of Florida group
9:00 Address, led by Dr. Leroy E. Loemker
9:45 Open forum, Dr. Loemker
10:30 Recess

(Continued on Page Two)

Kirtley Mather Talks on Ideals

Says Security is Gained Through Continual Readjustment

With his theme taken from the statement of Thomas Huxley "The World in which we live is absolutely governed by ideas," Dr. Kirtley F. Mather, economist, author, and lecturer of note, spoke on "Whence Came Our Ideals" in the auditorium Wednesday evening.

Emphasized by Dr. Mather was the distinction between ideas and ideals. "Ideas," he explained, "are created in human minds, the products of the working of the brain, but ideals are not manipulated, or produced. They are discovered. Ideals are there awaiting discovery. The idealist is not responsible for the ideal. He is responsible for discovering that there is an ideal."

Stating that ideas and ideals are powerful determining factors in the modern world, Dr. Mather emphasized the fact that it makes a great difference what goal man selects toward which he shall run his race. This selection of a goal, the acceptance of an ideal, will always, he declared, be a concern of religion, while science deals with ways along which man may move toward his goal and the means with which he may attain it.

Naming as the essential difference between man and other animals that of the brain with its powers of selection of impulses and desires, Dr. Mather pointed out that though we are the creatures of habit, there is no reason why we should be the victims of habit.

The brain, he declared, is much more than the sponge it would often seem to be, and its most important function is not as a storehouse of facts, but as a mechanism for the discovery of facts and through this discovery, the creation of ideas.

Contributing new ideas, he asserted, involves scientific habits of mind. It is an important function of the college to transmit inherited tradition from generation to generation, he continued, but more important is the discovering of facts, their general principles and their relationship to ideals.

He who has the scientific habit of mind, said Dr. Mather, has gained the habit of seeing beneath the surface, of gaining the full meaning of facts, while the one not accustomed to scientific habits looks and passes on.

Pointing out that to see involves more than the use of one's eyes, and that eyes are sometimes not at all involved in seeing, the speaker mentioned Helen Keller, who though blind, had the trained and sensitized mind which enabled her to "see" the world from the top of a tall building. She had the insight to see what many with physical sight could not see.

"Only as we get beneath the surface, only as we turn inside to see," said Dr. Mather, "do we discover the relationship between ourselves and the world in which we live and have our being."

A third point stressed by the speaker was that the path of life leads not to escape, but to adjustment. The only way to gain continuing security, he declared, is to continue along the path of adjustment. The responsibility of life, he said, rests with us and the decisions which we will be called upon to make will be of far-reaching importance.

Defining knowledge as the power to mold ourselves within the world in which we live, Dr. Mather stated it as his belief that we are beginning to learn the necessity of sharing. The necessity for loyalty, integrity, and good will, the passion for righteousness, is now to be described, he declared, as a cosmic demand to which man is subject, not as something produced by human hearts or minds.

Ideas are created within human brains, the most thoughtful of them leading to the discovery of ideals. Our path, according to Dr. Mather, must lead to the complete discovery of ideals and must commit the self to adjustment to the regulations of the world or else we shall suffer the fate of the dinosaur and go into oblivion.

Class to Give Dance Recital Here Saturday

(Continued from Page One)

lin, Janet Griffiths, Catherine Takach, Hazel Royall, and Claire Redfield. They will be assisted by the following members of the beginning class: Janice Borton, Victoria Crisp, Martha Makemson, Elaine Klepper, and Elizabeth Beach.

The director of the recital is Miss Mildred Stewart; the musician, Virginia Tucker; chairman of program committee, Janice Borton, chairman of poster committee, Martha Makemson; publicity chairman, Hazel Royall; chairman of lighting committee, Mary Mooty; and chairman of make-up, Martha Makemson. Costumes to be worn in the dance have been designed by Miss Henrietta Sivyer and her class in costume designing.

FORGIVE US OUR PREJUDICES

BY LUCY FULGHUM

In a recent issue of the New Movie, a magazine we, the students, read while waiting to be served at tea rooms or sitting under dryers in beauty parlors, there was a comprehensive article entitled "Movie Forecast for 1935" Mr. Romain Romero, the author, commented on the plight of our moving pictures with a disguised truculence. He spoke of last year's upheaval and said:

"Encouraged by box office receipts, and blinded by bad taste, the producers lost all perspective of the difference between entertainment and sensationalism, resulting in the censorship upheaval of 1934."

Could an explanation of the movie situation have been made more completely? Beginning at the end and working backward, his commentary might be made more explicit: There was a censorship upheaval in 1934 because the producers had forgotten what real entertainment in drama could be, and had mistaken in its stead a tawdry sensationalism. Colossal! Gigantic! Stupendous! The bywords of the pre-views became a laughing stock, but the movie-going populace didn't cut down on its attendance. No indeed; on the contrary, box office receipts maintained a better standard than almost any other depression industry. The public liked sensationalism and the producers were blinded not only by their own bad taste but by that of their public. It was another case of the people having as good a government as they deserved.

Included in Mr. Romero's article was a list of the most popular stars of the year, both male and female. This is the order in which they were listed, but the reasons for their popularity as here given are additions:

1. Clark Gable (He has what is commonly known as "sexy" eyes and a good tailor so he won first place.)
2. Will Rogers (He can make people laugh at themselves without resenting it, and was, therefore, accorded second place, though the voters probably didn't realize what they were actually voting for.)
3. Wallace Beery (Was very fortunately cast in sentimental roles which are as dear to the heart of the American people as Mother's Day.)
4. Bing Crosby (A crooner; it is surprising he didn't beat Gable. Recently the father of twins however, and it is never easy to forget that he is a homebody.)
5. George Arliss (A real actor, so he rated fifth place.)
6. Dick Powell (Crooner.)
7. Eddie Cantor (Makes whoopee and sings—according to some people.)
8. Joe E. Brown (The public can't help missing the point of his one big joke.)
9. James Cagney (Inexplicable.)
10. Frederic March (Does a lot of over-acting which women particularly enjoy.)

And now for the women:

1. Mae West.
2. Joan Crawford (Her acting is one of the chief evidences that the public likes to be fooled.)
3. Norma Shearer (She appeals to the movie-audience women who like to think themselves "ladies.")
4. Kay Francis (Movie audiences idea of suavity and sophistication.)
5. Janet Gaynor (Sweet, simple and girlish. We still like them pristine and nothing more. Purity is enough.)
6. Jean Harlow.
7. Claudet Colbert (Probably because of "It Happened One Night," another wearisome drama which took precedent over the much cleverer "Thin Man.")
8. Shirley Temple (Down at the bottom with the rest of the real actresses.)
9. Ann Harding (She has overcome a real handicap—that is actual ability, in making this list of favorites at all.)
10. Margaret Sullivan (A prophet is appreciated everywhere save in his own country.)

And so it goes, with the more lurid appeals ranking way above those actresses and actors who not only have talent but give it to the public. This list, like those of All-American football teams, is only one among many, but it is representative of the fan mail of the people who can afford to buy ten cent magazines—the middle class—the backbone of our civilization. Or so they say.

Church Group Convenes Here

(Continued from Page One)

11:00 Interest groups
12:00 Business session
12:20 Committee meetings
12:40 Lunch
Saturday Afternoon
11:30 Worship, led by Southern college
1:50 Forum suggestions for a program and organization of young people in college
2:20 Business session: election of officers
3:40 Recess
3:50 Interest groups
4:40 Recreation
6:30 Banquet
8:00 Address, Dr. Loemker
Sunday Morning
9:45 Worship, by Tallahassee group
10:15 Evaluation of conference and installation of officers
10:30 Address, Dr. Loemker
11:00 Holy communion, Trinity church

Plans Now Complete For Phi Beta Kappa

(Continued from Page One)

quet at 8:00 o'clock in the college dining room to which all guests and faculty members are specially invited. Speakers for the occasion are Dean Dodd for the College of Arts and Sciences, President Jack for Phi Beta Kappa, Mr. Claude Pepper for the Phi Beta Kappa of Florida, and President Tigert for the University of Florida. They will be presented by Miss Myrtle Dolbee who will serve as toastmistress for the affair.

The invitations, which will have an invitation of the college on the front and a program of events on the inside, are now being printed preparatory for mailing to about one thousand people. The tentative guest list includes Phi Beta Kappa national officers, chapters, and state members; faculty of the Florida State College for Women; representatives from alumnae chapters; state officials; students, representatives from Mortar Board and other honoraries; and distinguished guests including President Roosevelt, Mr. Rickards, president of the Florida Education association, the president of the American Bar association, the president of the State Bar association, the state president of the American Association of University Women, the State president of the Parent-Teachers association, the state president of the Federation of Women's Colleges, the presidents and deans of Stetson University, Southern college, Rollins College, Miami University, Tampa University and St. Petersburg Junior College, William J. Porter, James Hodges, A. P., and Ruth Bryan Owens.

In charge of the arrangements for the Phi Beta Kappa installation program is Dr. Kathryn T Abbey, chairman, Miss Anna May Tracy, Dr. Olivia Dorman. Mr Claude Pepper, and Dr. Harold P. Richards. There are also several sub-committees: registration, Dr. Venila Shores, chairman, Dr. Mildred Burlingame, Mrs. Arthur Seymour, and Dr. J. B. Game; stage arrangement, Miss Margaret Dow, chairman, Miss Amy Briggs and Miss Marian Irish; seating for luncheon and banquet, Miss Myrtle Dolbee, chairman, Dr. Viola Graham, and Mrs. Ralph Eyman; transportation, Mrs. Dorothy Breen, chairman, and Dr. Marion Hay; meeting guests, Dr. Hudson Rogers and Dr. Elmer Smith; invitations, Dr. Mildred Burlingame, chairman, Dr. Dorothy Disher, and Mrs. Dorothy Breen; and installation ceremony, Dr. Hudson Rogers, chairman. Rev. Mr. G. E. Benedict, and Mrs Ralph Eyman.

Judge Criswell To Talk Sunday

Activities of Religious Groups Are Widely Varied for Week

One of the more important events of the week sponsored by the denominational groups, is the talk of Judge Walter S. Criswell, of the juvenile court of Duval county, scheduled for Ruge Hall Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Judge Criswell, who is nationally known for his work with delinquents has chosen this work as his topic. Miss Kathleen Platt, student secretary, invites all students to attend, especially those interested in sociology.

The Episcopal student vestry is having its monthly meeting at Ruge hall at 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. After supper, in charge of Francis Ellis, Mary Mozzuss, and Mary Bennett, members will discuss plans for Lent.

Tonight the council of Presbyterian students meets at the home of Miss Sara Herndon, faculty adviser, to discuss plans for assisting with Religious Emphasis Week and to plan a joint retreat conference with Presbyterian students at the University of Florida. The business meeting will be followed by a social hour.

The Jewish women are having a social in Bryan atrium this afternoon at 5:15 with program and Evelyn Melten in charge of refreshments. They will also discuss plans for a tea honoring the Rabbi Edward L. Israel who will be here during Religious Emphasis week as a speaker.

Next week is missions week for Baptist students. Dr. W. F. Carson, a missionary on furlough from Africa, will meet with small groups of students throughout the week to talk on foreign missions in general with special emphasis on Africa. Miss Louise Smith of Jacksonville and state leader of young peoples' organizations, will also conduct classes on foreign missions from Monday through Friday at the First Baptist church.

The Baptist student council will have their regular monthly meeting February 4 to bring up business and read the monthly reports. Wava Godwin, president, is in charge.

Newly-enrolled Baptist students will be entertained at an informal after-dinner coffee February 5 at Baptist student headquarters, according to Miss Katherine Rawls, student secretary.

The Newman club is meeting this Sunday night to discuss The Meaning, Value, and Different Parts of the Mass," according to Rosa Daub, president. There will also be an election of delegates to the southeastern province convention of the Federation of College Catholic clubs which meets in Atlanta soon. Plans will be discussed for entering college intramurals and an athletic manager appointed.

This meeting of the Newman club will take the place of the regular monthly meeting which has been postponed until the last Sunday in February, at which time Mr. Robert Paleus, assistant attorney general, will talk about work among the various Newman clubs. Mr. Paleus was a member of the Newman club at the University of Colorado.

Rosa Daub also announced the recent appointment of Margaret Claire Lafferty as publicity agent for the Newman News, a newspaper published in New York City by members of the Federation of College Catholic clubs.

* * *

There is one doctor to every 800 persons in this country. This is the highest rate of any nation. Sweden, with one doctor for every 2860 persons, has the lowest rate.

College Academic Standing Is High

The academic honors that have come to the Florida State College for Women bear testimony to the high standards maintained by its academic system.

The first important recognition came in 1915 when the college became a member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Later it was put on the accepted list of the Association of American Colleges and Universities.

In addition, it is recognized by and affiliated with the American Council on Education, the American Association of University Women, the National Association of Schools of Music, and others.

The granting of a chapter of Phi Bet Kappa to this campus, based primarily on the outstanding quality of the liberal arts college, is the latest national recognition received, and is the last formal recognition that can come to the college.

Initial Florida State College Week Gets Underway Sunday

(Continued from Page One)

clubs, Miss Sadie G. Young for A. A. U. W., Miss Florence R. Tryon for Panhellenic, Dr. Herman Kurz for Kiwanis and Dr. Mark DeGraff for Rotarians.

The committee on exhibits is made up of Miss Edith West, chairman, Miss Bernice Detts, Miss Hazel Stevenson, and Miss Emma Keis. The committee on radio publicity is composed of J. G. Kellum, chairman, Dean Ella S. Opperman, and Mrs. Mary H. Buford. The committee on contacting Phi Beta Kappas includes Dean Dorman, as chairman, Dr. Harold Richards and Claude Pepper.

The committee on contacting alumnae consists of Miss Rowena Longmire, chairman, Dean Dorman, Miss Louise Richardson, Miss Anna Mae Tracy, Miss Ruth Schornherst, and Miss Flavia Gleason.

An alumna chairman, who has charge of local activities, has been appointed in each town where alumnae are located. The following are working in their territory: Miss Eloise Austen, Arcadia; Miss Grace Elizabeth White, Auburndale; Mrs. Roy T. Gallemore, Barton; Miss Belle Groff, Bradenton; Miss Dorothy McKethan, Brooksville; Miss Vergie Shelton, Cocoa; Miss Joy Miller, Daytona Beach; Mrs. Layton Dinning, DeLand; Mrs. Marshall M. DeWitt, Delray Beach; Miss Louise Lasserre, Fernandina; Miss Caroline Hamilton, Frostproof; Mrs. E. E. Marshall, Ft. Lauderdale; Mrs. Alto Adams, Ft Pierce; Mrs. Burton Ames, Gainesville; Miss Julia Smith, Green Cove Springs; Miss Madele Helms, Haines City.

Mrs. N. Knowles, Key West; Miss Eleanor Rosen, Kissimmee; Mrs. C. Huxley Coulter, Lake City; Mrs. C. H. Summers, Jr., Lakeland; Miss Margaret Scott, Leesburg; Miss Eunice Grady, Live Oak; Mrs. C. P. Finlayson, Marianna; Miss Charlotte Chase, Miami; Miss Katherine Johnson, Monticello; Miss Eleanor Wilkinson, New Smyrna; Miss Elizabeth Christian, Ocala; Miss Harriet Robinson, Orlando; Miss Dorothy Tait, Palmetto; Miss Margaret York, Pahokee; Miss Marjorie Mackey, Pensacola; Miss Louise Bailey, Perry; Mrs. R. S. Dowdell, Plant City; Miss Marie Jelks, Pompano.

Mrs. Henry E. Corry, Quincy; Miss Rebecca Stevens, Sanford; Miss Marion Hobson, Sarasota; Miss Louise Houck, Sebring and Avon Park; Miss Lois Varn, St. Augustine; Miss Carleen Vinal, St. Petersburg; Miss Florence Tryon, Tallahassee; Miss Mada McColskey, Stuart; Miss Margaret Boyle, Tampa; Miss Tobiah Lovitz, Tarpon Springs; Mrs. Billie K. Mattmuller, Vero Beach; Mrs. W. E. Cochrane, Wauchula; Miss Virginia Bird, West Palm Beach; Mrs. Louis Hornstein, Winter Garden; and Miss Emily Carleton, Winter Park.

Wherabouts of Former Faculty Members are Shown by Longmire

According to a check-up made by Miss Rowena Longmire, associate professor of English, former faculty members of the college are now actively engaged in various professions varying from that of college president to homemaker. The majority however, are teaching in other institutions of higher learning.

Paul C. Young is teaching at the University of Louisiana; Dr. Ernest Thelin is laboratory director at Syracuse university; Dr. Robert E. Browning has a government position at Washington, D. C.; Dr. Isabel Wallace is doing personnel work at Rochester university at Rochester, N. Y.

Dr. S. E. Tucker, who was the first professor of English that Florida State college for women ever had, is now teaching at Brooklyn Polytechnic institute and is president of the American Drama association; Dr. Marion Pottar married Friedich von Palkenburg and is teaching at Cleveland college in Cleveland, Ohio.

Mary Aythorp, is now living in Fort Myers as Mrs. L. A. Hendry; Isabel Davidson is a librarian in New York city; Miss Mabel Wheeler is social director at Wellesley; Agnes Ellen Harris is dean of women and professor of economics at the University of Alabama.

Dr. H. A. Brautlaucht is head of the chemistry department at the University of Maine; Dr. Mina H. Kerr is secretary of the International Student Organization with an office in New York city. She advises and arranges for American students studying in Europe; Dr. J. O. Knauss teaches history at Michigan State college for teachers at Ipsilanti; Dr. C. E. Boyd is in the classic department at Emory; F. L. Buchols is in the educational department of the R. C. T. C. at the University of Florida.

Miss Madeline Kelpp has a music studio in Atlanta; Miss Edith McMillan completed her work for a doctors' degree at Columbia

Miss Inez Abernathing, the first head of the art department, is a prominent business women in New York City. Dr. Hattie Mae Carmichael, who received her doctors degree from Columbia, is teaching in the University of the City of New York; Dr L. J. Marzenberger taught modern languages in Chicago until his death five years ago; Martha Stoffus, who started the geography department here, is now Mrs. Greg Richards of New York City. Her husband is a professor of geography in the city schools.

Dr Inga Olga Helseth is director of practice teaching in the education department of William and Mary college; Dr. Vivienne McClatchy worked for the Thompson advertising agency in New York City until her death three years ago. Miss Margorie Batchelder, formerly associate professor of art, is teaching at Ohio State university.

Miss Allie Lu Felton, former principal of the demonstration school, is a demonstrator for John C. Winston Publishing Company in Atlanta; Dr. Stevens has returned to his home in Pennsylvania; Miss Eleanor Sheldon is teaching school in Oswego, New York; Dr. Beulah Westermann has a position in a chemical laboratory in St. Louis, Missouri.

Dr. Edith P. Mols is a practicing physician in Tampa, Florida; Miss Myrtle McGraw is now in charge of a special clinic for abnormal children in New York city; ... Bessie Carter Randolph is now serving as president of Hollins College in Virginia.

Miss Longmire compiled this information in answer to the many inquiries made by alumnae and students of the college regarding former faculty members.

Mitchell and Hartness To Fill Vacant Places In Y. W. C. A. Cabinet

Anna Marie Mitchell and Helen Hartness have been selected to fill the positions of Olivia Embrey and Ida Engel on the Y. W. C. A. council. The resignation of these members was due to the interference of their Y. W. C. A. duties with their regular studies.

A Y. W. C. A. membership meeting was held in the Augusta Conradi Little Theatre at 11:30 Thursday. A. A. Smith's play, "The Rescue," was dramatized by members of the speech department. Mary Elizabeth Cooley was chairman in charge of all arrangements. The general programs of the finance drive and Sunday vespers were decided upon.

Y. W. Finance Drive To Be Completed By House Representatives Soon

The last lap of the Y. W. C. A. finance drive will extend from February 4-8. A girl will be appointed at the head of a group of girls for every floor of the dormitories and each sorority house to collect all pledges due before February 1, and to solicit new pledges. Sara Krentzman is in general charge of the drive and Elizabeth Weatherly is acting as her chief assistant. The following girls head the collecting groups: off-campus, Sara Hosea; faculty, Ruth Dickson and Lula Walker; Jennie Murphree, Ermine Lawrence and Elise Scarborough; Reynolds; Jane Rice, Blanche Lamar; Broward, Marjorie Fain; Bryan, Sue Whitaker; Gilchrist, Marie Spurlock.

Piano Normal Pupils Under Direction Of Reeder Plan Recital

The pupils of the Piano Normal Department under the direction of Miss Mary Reeder, will give a piano recital Thursday evening, February 7 at 8:15 o'clock in the Recital Hall of the Music Annex.

The music will feature themes about birds, bees dragon flies, katy-dids and other winged creatures. The students taking part include Mary Alford, Betty Campbell, Hazel and Marilyn Davis, Evelyn Ann Doyle, Louise Gordon, Sarah Isabel Hamlin, Harriet Kent, Jean McCord, Harry Middlebrooks, Betty Priestley, Francis Proctor, Vivienne Rainy, Ruth Terrell, Mary Ann Waller, Iris Watson, and Francis White.

The stage will be arranged by the class in stage craft under the direction of Miss Emma Keis.

Sophomore Art Student Receives Recognition

Mary Catherine Shryock, a sophomore in the industrial arts department, recently won second honorable mention in a contest sponsored by Parnassus, a magazine published by the College Arts association, for her study in black and white, a repetition of one object in perspective.

Florida State was only recently invited to enter material in this contest in which the schools of highest standing all over the United States participated, and the results of which were published in the January issue of Parnassus. Miss Shryock's entry was sent in by Mrs. B. B. Williams of the fine arts department, in which department Miss Shryock worked last year.

Winning Article To Be Awarded

Five Dollar Prize Will Be Awarded to Best Serious Prose

A five dollar prize for the winning article on the subject "Should College Set Up Life Situations as a Means of Preparing for Citizenship?" is being offered by Alpha Chi Alpha, journalism honorary in a recently announced contest to close Friday, March 8.

The subject may be treated negatively or positively from the aspect of college studies or student activities, and any point of view may be taken such as educational, sociological, political or psychological. The primary consideration will not be literary style but clear thinking.

The contest is open to all students except members of Alpha Chi Alpha. The subject was chosen because of the universal interest in the topic, its importance to the campus, and the varied points of view from which it may be treated.

The entries will be judged by a faculty committee composed of the following: Dr. David Briggs, chairman, Dr. Beulah Briley, Dr. Venila Shores, Dr. Christain Paul Heinlein and Miss Marian D. Irish.

All entries must be typewritten with the name of the author in a separate envelope clipped to the manuscript, and be in the hands of Louise Robertson, president of Alpha Chi Alpha, on or before March 8. No limit will be set on the length of the article. Further information concerning the contest may be obtained from any member of Alpha Chi Alpha.

Education Class Writers Article

Students Collaborate On Reply to Criticism Of Languages

The first student written article ever to appear in The Journal of the Florida Education Association, "The Value of Modern Foreign Languages," was written and submitted by the members of a class in methods of teaching modern languages under the direction of Dr. Marion J. Hay of this college.

The article was written in reply to criticism directed against the teaching of foreign languages in the high schools, and suggests that the primary needs for the improvement of foreign language teaching in Florida are preferably different textbooks or at least a new kind of supplementary texts, and more careful selection of the foreign language teachers, especially in the smaller high schools where teachers must be qualified in more than one subject.

Students who collaborated in the production of this article are: McDonald Campbell, Marjorie Carter, Ruth Feinberg, Becky Lou Hopkins, Narcissa Leland, Fortuna Lopez, Elizabeth Sponenbarger, Anita Walder, and Sally Walder.

* * *

BY AN eight to one decision, Justice Cardoza dissenting, the Supreme Court last week held section 9 c of the Recovery Act unconstitutional. Section 9 c authorized the President to "forbid interstate shipment of hot oil," hot oil being oil produced in excess of "amounts fixed by State authorities." Section 9 c was not only held unconstitutional but also all the orders issued under it by the President and by Secretary Ickes, the Petroleum Administrator.

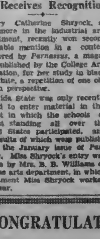
CONGRATULATIONS, F. S. C. W.!

Beautiful!
Wonderful!

That's what everyone says about our new Spring Dresses.

$4.95 and up

THE LADIES' SHOP
305 South Monroe



ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
131 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

Bennett's

75c BENNETT'S CLUB LUNCHEON 35c

CHOICE OF:
Baked Chicken with Home Made Dressing
Breaded Veal Cutlets with Tomato Sauce

VEGETABLES:
Asparagus on Toast
Pineapple Salad
Cream Carrots
Ice Cream Dessert
Corn Muffins or Hot Biscuit
Drink Included

15c Chocolate Milk Shake 5c
20c Maple Pecan Sundae 15c
15c Double Dip Ice Cream Soda 10c
30c Chocolate Marshmallow Whip Pecan Sundae 20c
25c Bennett's Special Hot Fudge Sundae 15c
20c Chicken Salad Sandwich 15c
20c Pimento Cheese and Olive 15c
Russell McPhail Ice Cream, pt. 25c

SUPERIOR
Dry Cleaners and Dyers

"SUPERIOR SERVICE SELLS CLEANING"
SILKS AND FANCIES OUR SPECIALTY

All Garments Insured Against Fire and Theft

306½ S. Monroe St. Telephone 216

Bennett's Beauty Salon

"The Smart Woman's Choice"

THE NEWEST IN
Eugene Permanents

Phone 900 for Appointment

Chairmen Plan For Kissling

Committees Arrange Last Program for Religious Emphasis Week

Committees for the Religious Emphasis Week, to be held here February 11 to 17, were announced this week and final plans arranged at a meeting of these committees at Bryan hall, Tuesday night.

Reverend Albert Kissling, pastor of the Riverside Presbyterian church of Jacksonville, will be the speaker of the week. However, Dr. T. Z. Koo, prominent Chinese speaker, will speak in convocation, Tuesday, February 12, at which time Reverend Kissling will be introduced to the student body. Reverend Kissling will hold open meetings every night except Wednesday and Saturday, two open forums during the afternoons, and Sunday morning a regular church service will be held in the auditorium.

The following are the committees appointed for Religious Emphasis Week: general publicity committee, advisor, Miss Katherine Rawls; chairman, Barbara Darfunkel; Jennie Rae Nall, Louise Robertson, Barbara Hubbard, Jane Hubbard, Martha Masterson, Lillian Shapiro. Entertainment, advisor, Miss Kath[illegible] Piall; chairman, Alma [illegible]; Clotilde O'Rourke, [illegible]ara Rutledge, Ruth Orlin. Banquet, chairman, Marie Certain; Dorothy Moorehead, Barbara [illegible] Marie Taylor.

Finance, advisor, Miss Luella Richie; chairman, Wava Godwin; Betty Hampton, Mary Bennett, Mary Ola Reynolds. Program, advisor, Miss Rachael Wylie; chairman, Katherine Blood; Frances Patrick, Anne Norris, Mary Etta [illegible]thwaite. Music, Margaret [illegible]ixie. Decorations, advisor, Miss Winnie Lee Davis, chairman, Virginia Clayton; Patricia Foster, [illegible] Embrey, Gertrude Kuhn, Evelyn Collins, Nell Mayes. Follow-up committee, advisor, Dr. Forbes Liddell; chairman, Lucy Lee Lynn; Rachael McKinnon, Lillian Turlington, Betty Ellen [illegible], Helen Eiseman.

Arrangements Underway For Examiners Course Under Ramone S. Eaton

All students of nineteen years of age who wish to take the examiners' test in Red Cross life saving, to be given in the spring by Ramone S. Eaton, national field representative of the American Red Cross, must sign up with Miss Marjorie Mayer, swimming instructor, before Tuesday. The first practice is scheduled for Wednesday night at 8 o'clock.

Those persons receiving appointments will be qualified examiners and teachers of Red Cross life saving and safety swimming work. A large number of reappointments are also expected, as it is necessary that the appointments be renewed each year.

Mr. Eaton, under whom the examiners' test will be given, comes to the college annually to supervise tests given students and teachers.

Advisors Plan to Start Orientation Course For Freshmen and Transfers

Two upperclassmen, Yvonne [illegible] and Maxine Ward, will now begin to prepare the freshmen and transfers who entered school at the beginning of the second semester for the orientation examination, which will probably be given in about three weeks. It is the duty of these advisors to make their pupils familiar with the customs and traditions of Florida State College, as well as with her rules.

The examination will cover only the rules and regulations found in the new judiciary handbook. Failure to pass will incur a penalty of two weeks campusment and a re-examination.

Super-Value Photos
25 for $1 or 50 for $1.50

Satisfaction Guaranteed
These photos are used extensively by college and high school teachers and students.

We will send you perfect copies from any size photo or snapshot, beautifully finished on genuine heavy weight photo paper, postpaid. Original returned unharmed.

Any size photo or snapshot can be copied.

NO FILM IS NECESSARY

Have a good photo to send friends or prospective employers.

Send for: Free Sample Today
William R. Lake
Suite 307
[illegible] Fifth Ave. - New York, N. Y.

Graduate Group Is On Faculty

Many Alumnae Employed By College Join In Festive Week

Among the most enthusiastic supporters of the state-wide F. S. C. W. week, February 3-9, are twenty-two members of the faculty and twelve members of the college administrative staff who are Florida State graduates.

The departments of physical education and library science claim a number of the alumnae who became teachers here while the others have specialized in widely diverse fields, including nutrition, English, education, mathematics, botany, home demonstration work, music, speech, art, and the exact sciences.

Members of the present administrative staff drawn from graduates of the college are employed in the bookstore, the infirmary, the dining hall, and in secretarial positions.

Those members of the faculty who graduated from Florida State College for Women are Elizabeth P. Autrey, 1933, assistant instructor in physical education; Mrs. Eva R. Culley, 1921, acting extension nutritionist; Miss Grace Fox, 1928, assistant instructor in physical education; Mrs. Clara Hayden, 1932, assistant librarian; Miss Emma L. Keis, 1929, instructor in art; Miss Olga Larson, 1915, assistant professor of mathematics; Miss Rowena Longmire, assistant professor of English who received an honorary M. A. degree here in 1932; Miss Margaret McCurdie, 1930, critic teacher and instructor in education; Miss Edna Mae McIntosh, 1932, instructor in foods and nutrition; Mrs. Irene Brunson Miller, 1929, critic teacher at demonstration school; Mrs. Lou E Miller, 1925, assistant instructor in English; Miss Katherine Montgomery, 1919, director of physical education; Miss Velma Ooton, 1930, library assistant; Miss Ruth Schoenherat, 1926, instructor in botany; Miss Lucy Belle Settle, 1927, district agent for home demonstration work; Miss Mary Settle, 1931, instructor in physical education; Miss Anna Mae Sikes, 1923, acting district agent for home demonstration work; Mrs. Dora Skipper, 1932, critic teacher and instructor in education; Mrs. Cecile Strong, 1932, instructor in public school music; Miss Elizabeth S. Thompson, 1927, instructor in speech; Miss Florence S. Tryon, 1926, critic teacher and instructor in education; and Miss Sallie Williams, 1926, instructor in industrial arts.

Members of the administrative staff who graduated from Florida State include: Miss Eita Burleson, 1919, bookkeeper; Lillian J. Cross, 1930, clerk in bookstore; Helen M. Davis, 1929, assistant detitian; Maude E. Flowers, 1929, secretary to Dean of Students; Julia Gehan, 1932, supervisor of dining hall; Carolyn Johnston, 1930, stenographer in registrar's office; Laura Strunk Lesley, 1929, executive secretary and publicity secretary of alumnae association; Sallie E. Nicholson, 1924, manager of bookstore; L. G. Papy, who received a B. L. degree from this college in 1900 before it became a woman's college; Sue Pitchford, bookkeeper, 1922; Velva M. Richbourg, 1933, head nurse in infirmary; and Mrs. Sallie P. Taylor, 1916, clerk in bookstore.

Organization of Local NSFA Unit is Urged In Report on Convention

"I have come back with the conviction that an NSFA club is exactly the sort of organization this campus needs," said Louise Robertson, senior delegate to the NSFA congress, in her report to the student body at convocation, "and I urge that it be organized immediately."

The NSFA clubs are the local units of the National Student Federation of America. They cooperate with the national organization in applying the program of the NSFA to the campus; they hold open forums and debates on public affairs and campus problems; they seek and express campus opinion on all questions of importance; they inform senators and congressmen of the stand they take on political issues; and they propose and carry out reforms on the campus. "In general," Louise said, "they work toward a more well-balanced, purposeful and civilized campus community."

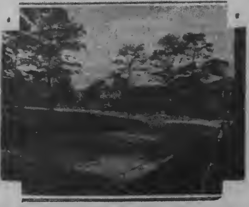
The most important accomplishments of the convention were listed as seven: affiliation with the International Student Confederation; official proposal of a Federal Youth Service; plans for a Congressional drive to abolish the compulsory aspect of military training; aggressive action as regards academic freedom; plans for student curriculum committees in all colleges; decision to weed out useless national and local student organizations.

Try Our Delicious
STEAKS
40c
M. & N. CAFE
119 E. Jefferson
Phone 1054

Years Change Campus Appearance

HISTORY BUILDING

DINING HALL



BRYAN HALL

JENNIE MURPHREE HALL

EAST HALL, 1905

WEST HALL, 1905

Art Department To Have Exhibit

Student Work to Feature Display as Part Of F. S. C. W. Week

As a feature of F. S. C. W. week the art department will exhibit student work of the first semester next week in room 307 Administration building.

The display which will feature different phases of work from all the art classes, will be open every day during the week from 9:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., and from 1:30 p. m. to 5: 00 p. m.

The art department also has a display case on the third floor of the Administration building which is filled each week with examples of the best work of the students. This week the case contains three costume illustration plates, each representing a different type of scene and costume. One is a beach scene, another shows a bedroom, and the third is a picture of several children at play.

Instruction is Offered In Horseback Riding

Classes in advanced and beginning horseback riding as an extra-curricula activity will be offered again this semester with Marie Taylor as instructor. The hours of instruction are to be arranged.

A regular course in riding will be given including instruction in how to mount, rein, trot, post, and canter. The fee for the course is five dollars a quarter or ten dollars a semester with fifteen hours of instruction per quarter.

Compulsory Meals and Church Were Rules in Mother's Day

Handbooks Since 1909 Show Freedom For College Student

A comparison of the 1934-35 handbook of the Florida State College for Women with those of the past twenty-five years indicates a decided trend toward greater student freedom and student responsibility in regulating the college government.

Beginning with the rulings which governed the students of 1909, the first handbook reveals that students could not leave campus without permission from a teacher, that visiting in bedrooms, practice rooms and loitering in the corridors was strictly forbidden, and that on Sunday afternoons from 2 to 4 o'clock a quiet hour was observed, during which time the student was required to remain in her room and be quiet. During this year, and several to follow, the college gates were closed on Sundays, and only members of a student's immediate family were admitted. The penalty for breaking one of these rules was a certain number of demerits per rule, given by the president of the college to the offender. One hundred demerits caused a student to be expelled from the college.

By 1914 students were allowed to go to town in the morning from 8 to 12:30, provided they had registered one hour before departure. In the afternoon registering was required before one o'clock, and students were to return by 5:30. The privilege of going to town was extended each girl once a week, with the exception of Saturdays or Sundays. Seniors were allowed an occasional special permission to go oftener, on urgent need.

Breakfast Was Compulsory

At this time attendance at breakfast every morning except Monday was compulsory and two unexcused absences were equivalent to one absence from a class or practice. Here again the seniors were granted a leeway in which they might miss breakfast six times a semester.

In the evening during study hours from 7:15 to 9:45, any student going from one dormitory to another was required to have a written permit from the house president of her hall.

In the succeeding handbooks can also be observed changes which were going on in the outside world. In 1914 moving pictures were still in their infancy, but all underclassmen were allowed to attend the theater one Monday out of each month providing they had the required number of juniors and seniors as chaperones. Once a month on Saturday a group of ten might go to the theater with a professor as a chaperone.

Clothing Regulated

In 1921 the first regulation of clothing is mentioned: "A student may wear a middy suit without a hat to town in the morning. Hosiery must not be rolled below the knees while taking gymnasium."

The 1923-24 handbook was enlarged to include many rulings heretofore unmentioned. It recorded that tennis, golf and sports were prohibited on Sunday, that no rag or jazz music was to be played on campus, that students were required to attend church and to keep record of their attendance on the register provided for this purpose, and that students were to sit in monthly assigned places at noon and evening meals.

Town On Saturday

By 1924, hours during which students might go to town were extended to include Saturday morning till 12:30 and Saturday night. But going to town on Saturday afternoon and Sunday was still taboo.

Interesting to the student of today are two rules in 1925 which state that no candles, oil lamps, chafing dishes, matches, or electrical appliances were to be used in buildings, and that residents were asked not to dry their hair in front of the buildings.

Today one hears some students object to attending compulsory chapel once a week. In 1926 a regulation required that each student attend convocation four times a week. Today there is a great troupe of girls who go to town regularly every Saturday night, rain or shine. But eight years ago, students were "requested as far as possible to stay away from town on Saturdays because of the crowded conditions."

In 1927 week-ends in Gainesville were permitted, subject only to the restriction of a required chaperone for University dances. In the following year the part of the rule referring to the chaperone was omitted and in its place was added a phrase requiring that dances be authorized and chaperoned by the University.

Advent Of Probation

In 1929 probation was first mentioned, and most of the present rules were drawn up. In this year attendance at house meetings was made compulsory, and the dining room for the first time published its own handbook containing guidance for behavior there.

Lindbergh's flight to Paris and the subsequent "boom" in aviation is echoed in the handbook of '31 which printed a new transportation rule stating that students must have permission from their parents to ride in an airplane.

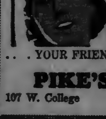
Further mention of music and lights came in the year of 1932, when "no radios are allowed in dormitory rooms" became a necessary ruling, and the first automatic light cuts were extended, to be granted after Artist Series programs, and to the seniors in the month of May. This year also brought Sunday moving picture privileges, a concession hailed with delight by the girls that year.

Two regular light cuts a month were first accorded to freshmen in 1933, and for upperclassmen the privilege was extended to include all week days. In 1934, girls on academic probation were first allowed one week-end absence per quarter provided no classes were cut.

The introduction of the cut system is one of the most significant features of the 1934-35 handbook. Three cuts a quarter are allowed to all students, except first quarter transfers and first semester freshmen. Radios are also allowed in the dormitories this year, and smoking privileges have been extended to include beauty parlors, rest rooms and private homes. The first provisions for regular dancing with men also came this year, in the sorority houses on the week-ends and at the regular Friday night dance at the gymnasium.

With the increasing number of changes in rules the size of the yearly handbook has grown accordingly. At the present time, the handbook shows signs of becoming larger and more liberal every year.

THE SWEET SHOP
703 W. Jefferson - Opposite Gilchrist
F. S. C. W. SPECIALS
Ice Cream Soda 05c
Hot Chocolate with Marshmallow 05c
PHONE 1001 - WE DELIVER



The bond of school-day friendships is sealed the more firmly by an exchange of photographs . . . .
. . . YOUR FRIENDS WILL WANT YOURS
PIKE'S STUDIO
107 W. College Phone 787

Freshman Says American Girls Would Like French School Life

Mollie Holden Tells of Hikes Up Alps, Teas, And Box Seats

If American students think French schools are the strict, confining places that the French classicists picture them they are due a surprise. Actually, the life of a student in France is so interesting and delightful that American student life almost suffers by comparison, according to Mollie Holden, a freshman at Florida State College for Women this year.

Mollie attended school for a year at the Cours Maintenon, in Cannes, France, a private school of some 375 students, forty of whom were boarders, or "pensionnaires." Mollie, however, was a day student, or "externe," and as she was a foreigner she spent the first three months of the school year in the "classe des etrangeres." In this class, foreign girls take all their subjects from October to December when they accustom themselves to the French language. "It's appalling," said Mollie, "at first, to have to take five hours of class work a day entirely in French. But the teachers are obliging about helping you get used to it."

Two outings, additional to regular curricula, are open to "etrangeres." They are allowed to take hikes up the Alps or the Esterel mountains, which are sponsored by the English Walking club, and they are taken to the beach on Saturday afternoon, which is a school day. There is one club that they are allowed to patronize, and it is there that they buy drinks or candy, and get any equipment that they desire for beach sports.

Attendance at concerts and recitals is greatly encouraged. There are special box seats for all the students at the Municipal casino, and the school turns out in a body when any famous musician, dancer, or singer is appearing there.

Thursday is a holiday instead of Saturday, and in the afternoon, the "pensionnaires," and any other students desiring to go, may take a bus to Nice and go shopping. They are chaperoned, of course. "But," said Mollie, "the chaperons aren't at all the severe, forbidding women that one imagines them. All the ones I knew were charming and friendly, and very eager to make life pleasant for you."

When asked about dating, she said that it was very uncommon for girls in their teens. The school itself discouraged masculine acquaintances and allowed girls only at the dances given there. Of course, the day students may do as they please outside of school, but the rule has to be adhered to strictly by the "pensionnaires."

"Knitting was quite an approved fad when I was there," said Mollie, "and we were allowed to do it in a Saturday afternoon lecture class. Most of the girls make their own Christmas presents. Just before the holidays there are afternoon classes for any who care to stay, and a teacher will help you with embroidery, appliqueing, hemstitching or any other needle work that you care to do."

Every afternoon from 4:00 to 4:30 is tea time. Teachers and students alike adjourn to the dining room after the school day is over for tea and toast, or "pain grille," and sweet chocolate.

Traveling is always a sufficient excuse for skipping classes. The faculty considers a trip just as educational as a classroom. "One time I went to Provence for a week, and all madame asked was that I bring back some pictures (we were studying Provencal art at the time) and to write a paper on my trip."

A month of holidays is given for Christmas and Easter. During the Easter vacation, Madame Palet, the principal, sponsors a trip to Provence for all students who care to go. During the week's stay, they live at a hotel, and spend the time going to the art galleries, the theater, and on sight seeing trips. When asked if such a trip would not be expensive for an ordinary student, Mollie replied that, on the contrary, the price was surprisingly low. "The Cours Maintenon itself is not a school for the wealthy. I have been speaking about regular, every day students all the time."

"From all I have said," she went on "you have no doubt received the impression that it is all play and no work over there. That is far from true. The educational standard is very high. Students there take all the subjects that American students do and many more besides. For instance, the history of art is required subject for everyone; also poetry, of which you have to memorize thirty lines a week; and a one hour class in dictation. Memory work is greatly stressed. When children are in the first grade they begin to learn the names of the French kings and queens in order until they can recite them without faltering."

Besides regular examinations, a two hour oral examination is given every year by state instructors, during which time they ask questions on every subject that is given.

Miss Anna Mae Sharp Gives Violin Recital

Miss Anna Mae Sharp, who is in her seventh year as head of the violin department at Florida State College gave a recital last night in the Augusta Conradi theater.

Miss Mary Esther Winslow, who was introduced to the public in her faculty piano recital in November, accompanied Miss Sharp at the piano. The program was as follows: Concerto in A major: Allegro, Adagio, Rondo, Mozart; Praeludium and Allegro, Pugnani—Kreisler; Chanson Arabe, Rimsky—Korsakoff-Kreisler, Slavonic Dance in E minor, Dvorak—Kreisler; D'un Matin de Printemps, Lili Boulanger; Introduction and Rondo Capricioso, Saint-Saens.

MAKE-UP ACCENTS for the smart collegiate by helena rubinstein

If you want make-up that is the last word in French chic — the first word in creating glamour and week-end dates, do use:

Helena Rubinstein's Lipstick with the marvelous new, secret ingredient that accents lip moisture! Gives fresh, dewy look. Stays on until you take it off. 1.00, 1.25 to 2.00 ... in the new "Evening" and glorious shades to match Helena Rubinstein's Unequalled Rouges. They go on smoothly — and stay on hours. Benefit while they beautify. Red Poppy, Red Geranium, Red Raspberry, Red Coral, and "Evening". 1.00.

Helena Rubinstein Powder is renowned for its misty-fine clinging qualities. Gives that English-fresh glamour to the complexion. 1.00 ... Persian Mascara — for silky lashed loveliness. Does not run nor smart. 1.00 ... A touch of exotic blue or blue-green Eyeshadow — to give lids that chic gleam. 1.00.

The Florida Flambeau

Newspaper Member

EDITORIAL STAFF
BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON ...... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Athea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchanges, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyna Wahnish, Copy Editor, Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedia McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Fain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF
ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS .. Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS .... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON ...... Circulation Manager
Ass't. Adv Manager, Mary Patterson; Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sora Beth Davis.

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee ,Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1679.

Florida State College For Women Will Meet The Public Eye Next Week

It is a wise tax payer who knows the institutions he supports.

Starting with this premise and acting upon the hypothesis that the majority of Floridians are not particularly wise in institutional ways, Florida State College for Women will begin next week a detailed program of information to enlighten the citizens of Florida concerning the State college for women at Tallahassee.

For thirty years now Florida State college has had local exhibits and celebrations. This year it has put its hand wagon on wheels and is going places to the tune of a State-wide F. S. C. W. Week.

Five members of the faculty will give addresses in the important cities of the State on the academic, physical, and social facilities available at Florida State College for Women and the service the institution has rendered to the State. Home demonstration agents will carry the same message into the rural districts. Windows of large business concerns will carry panels of campus scenes. Radio broadcasts will put Florida State on the air while news reels will put her in pictures.

It is in further keeping of the occasion that this week's issue of the Flambeau is dedicated to the alumnae of the college.

F. S. C. W. Week should prove to be a service to the State at large as well as a boon to the college. Tax payers will get the truth; Florida State college will get the public eye. Final result? A clearer conception of the relation of the State to education for all.

Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf? Endowed Colleges Are

At last, and in spite of the three little pig philosophy that has prevaded the country, we have found some one who is afraid of the big bad wolf. The answer is anyone who occupies the president's swivel chair in an endowed university.

American endowed colleges are waiting for little Nell to come home and pay the family mortgages. In the meantime they are applying for State aid and slashing faculty salaries.

Gerald W. Johnson, writing in this month's Harpers, questions the value of the effort that must be made to put these institutions back on easy street. According to Mr. Johnson, State institutions of learning are capable of carrying on pedagogical work at small expense to the student as well as research work; and therefore there is only one excuse for resusitating the endowed college, namely, the academic freedom fostered in these institutions.

Does Mr. Johnson mean to intimate that the one factor that justifies an endowed institution is absent in a State institution? Evidently, he does, for later on he goes into detail to explain how the State school, pledged to the support of its constituents, is irrevocably committed to a particular point of view.

Our knowledge of all State institutions is limited, of course. But we would like to point to Florida State College for Women as an exception to Mr. Johnson's rule. Florida State eschews provincialism. A cursory glance at the stories on page three and four of this issue of the Flambeau will reveal not only the physical growth of the college during the past two and a half decades but the growth of a philosophy that identifies education with life and life with the truth about life. Florida State offers its students information concerning all forms of government, all discoveries of science, all philosophies of life. It indoctrinates them in none.

Here, Mr. Johnson, is a State institution, a corporate body of students, faculty, and citizens of the State of Florida, not committed to a particular point of view, except the common belief that upon graduating from Florida State College for Women, every young woman should be four years better prepared to face the contingencies of life.

A Man Who Has Something to Say And Knows How to Say It

Men whose names have been far more popular—or shall we say popularized—have held forth from Florida State's platform. But we will venture the opinion that we have no thinker as acute and penetrating as Dean Christian Gauss will prove to be when he appears on the installation program of Phi Beta Kappa next month. The brilliant author of "A Primer for Tomorrow," "Life in College" and numerous articles in Scribners, Forum and other periodicals, Dean Gauss is dean of the college and chairman of the Romance language department at Princeton University.

The famous Princeton dean is not a pedant. Neither does he belong to that rapidly increasing host of writers who occupy themselves in "tracing the trends" of contemporary civilization. As a critic of human society he is essentially creative; he discovers for us not only the directions in which forces move us today but the point at which they will converge tomorrow. He possesses that rare capacity that we used to call "vision" without the sentimentality we used to associate with it. Dean Gauss may be right in his judgments or he may be wrong. But without question he has something to say and is quite coherent in the saying of it.

Would that we had more prophets and fewer priests in our sanctuaries of learning.

Third National Baby Party Incubating In Chicago

With an American buffalo as its perambulator and "U. S. Unite" as its favorite lullaby, a Third baby party, built on the foundations of the old Progressive Republican movement, will take its first airing in the Chicago moyoralty race.

Newton Jenkins, veteran Illinois Progressive Republican leader, is the new party's candidate for mayor of Chicago in the election to be held there, April 2.

But this baby party intends to use civic elections only to learn how to walk. After that it will branch out into bigger fields where it can accomplish the national aims it has promulgated in a primer of party objectives. Among these objectives is a plan to replace the United States Supreme Court with "a young court, and reduce its tenure to a definite term." It would make the United States a taxless nation by using profits from transportation, light and power, telephones, telegraph and radio to defray the cost of government.

As for the public debt it would liquify the entire amount by the systematic issuance of government currency over several years time. Further recommendations include an immediate payment of the soldiers' bonus and a compulsory period of service to the country by every young man and woman. The Third Party vouchsafes to all a chance to work and promises to put out of power any official of the party who breaks faith with the public.

The blossoming forth of third parties have never disturbed the tranquillity of America. Today, however, with the Republican party seemingly jettsioned and the Democratic organization evidently riding the crest of the waves, party consciousness is forced upon the nation. The question is how "liberal" does the Democratic administration mean to go. If it leans too far to the left a reaction against the present regime is not at all improbable, say in about 1940. If this happens a third baby party may come of age over night.

Actually the rattle of the Third baby party in discussion may not carry far. Nevertheless its buffalo and its "U. S. Unite" slogans will bear watching, as will any experiment in America along party lines within the next five years.

Magazine Thumbings

By Melvyna Wahnish

THE MENACE OF HUEY LONG

By Raymond Gram Swing.
The Nation, January 23.

If President Roosevelt is successful in restoring to a tired and wearied people their long-sought security, and provide for the vast majority of citizens a state of contentment, which they so greatly desire, Huey Long will not have very much of a chance in the forthcoming election. However, Swing hazards that in the event that the efforts of the president do not bear the desired fruits and if it so proves that the struggles of those directing the present administration are in vain, conditions will certainly be ripe for Huey to strike.

Citizens, particularly those from the north, are prone to laugh at Huey, and consider him a huge joke, but Swing soberly believes that Huey Long would be capable of Hitlerizing our United States. In believing that Huey is merely a clown the North is guilty of a grave mistake. One should consider that even his opponents say of him that he possesses almost irresistable appeal, and that once he talks to a group that group is forever more his. We find springing up throughout the land an appalling number of "SHARE OUR WEALTH" clubs which make elaborate, but impossible promises to the people.

However soon, very soon, the country at large will make the acquaintance of the gentleman from Louisiana for the Kingfish has installed a new radio station of 50-kilowat powers at "his" university for the purpose of personal broadcasts.

EDUCATION AND HAPPINESS A DEFENSE OF PROGRESSIVE SCHOOLS.

By James L. Mursell.
Atlantic Monthly, January.

Defending the so-called progressive schools against the indictment that they offer to the student no competent solid mastery, and that they have no element in them which makes for moral or intellectual discipline, Murcell offers a convincing plea for their encouragement by, "all earnest-minded men and women who desire human life to go on to better things in the persons of their children."

Mr. Mursell's young daughter, who is attending one of these so-called progressive schools, is undeniably happy in her work her father points out. To this Professor Friedrich answers, "teach her to follow happiness and you are setting her eyes upon a will o' wisp which may lead her into disasterous morasses. Happiness is a most deceitful guide. "This professor expounds his belief that value in the educational system lies in giving to the students those technical tools which will enable him to meet effectively the intense and inevitable situations of competition.

In Murcell's answers we find the humility of the true intellectual. He ably points out, "There is a magic which unites hard work and happiness. It is the magic called purpose. The WILL to learn, the purpose to achieve is what makes tools rich with value."

PERSONALITY AND AUTO BIOGRAPHY.

By Mary M. Colum.
Forum February.

Consciousness, or the awareness of self combined with the drives which make our personality individual compose to a large extent the field of study we should examine if we desire a fuller and richer understanding of those factors influential in bringing about a more complete realization of self.

Men who are no strangers to this field of study are convinced that they as humans are not fully conscious. Much may be said and written on the subject that this "spreading awareness of the unconscious was what more than anything else, upset the world in the twentieth century. We may go even further and say that the old order commenced its disintegration not with the World War, as is commonly believed, but with Dr. Charcot's research in the field of the conscious and the unconscious self and the personality."

In the matter of autobiographies more is revealed by what is left unsaid than by what is said. It is revealing to examine and compare the autobiographies of H. G. Wells and Marie of Roumania with this point of view in mind.

Indeed autobiographies are a challenge to the [illegible] art of accurate self analysis.

Spirit of the Week . . . . By Hoffman

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKER

THE HOUSE, getting down to work immediately last week, passed several appropriation bills which in former times would have astounded because of the number of 000's in the sums appropraited. On Monday, January 22, the Jones Bill authorizing $40,000,000 for farmers in drought and storm stricken areas was passed. On Thursday following the gigantic $4,800,000,000 work relief bill of the president was passed. On Friday a bill was passed authorizing the issuing of $11,500,000,000 in new securities by the Treasury Department.

Last Wednesday in the Senate a vote was taken concerning the entrance of the United States into the world court. Senators Borah of Idaho and Johnson of California were those who did the most strenuous arguing against the measure. They could not forget the days of 1919 and 1920 when they fought so valiantly against the United States' entrance into the League of Nations. But, alas, the measure did not even pass with reservations. The vote stood at 52 to 36, not quite making the 2/3 majority required to pass the Senate. And so the Senate turned down one of the most progressive measures that has yet been proposed in the stately halls of American legislature.

Meanwhile in the Senate a debate was going on about the advisability of the entrance of the United States into the World Court. Senator Borah (Republican, Idaho) bearing the brunt of the argument against such a procedure. The question of entrance into the World Court will come to a vote some time this week. It is most likely that the Senate will favor entering it with certain provisions, such as the Court's refraining to pass on any cases in which the United Ctates is involved. The President has signified that he will sign the bill if it passes.

On Monday the Senate passed a bill providing $100,000,000 for farmers for relief and crop production purposes (compare House Jones Bill). The Conally Bill preventing interstate shipments of oil produced in violation of State laws passed as did the Fletcher Bill extending the life of the RFC until February, 1937, and increasing its lending powers.

On Thursday both houses of Congress heard the message of the President on natural resources. The President proposes a plan which calls for the "orderly development" of the natural resources with the expenditure of some billions of dollars.

ON FRIDAY, January 25, from Manchuokuo came the news that Japanese forces had occupied Tunpengtse, a Chinese town on the Jehol-Chahar border. The Japanese say that on Tuesday Japanese airplanes were bombed for failing to withdraw from a position by the Chinese forces. Many observers, however, wonder if the Japanese move is not a beginning to a program to occupy the Chahar Province. Japan last year, one remembers, felt called upon to seize the Jehol district to "quiet border disturbances," and Japan has held Jehol ever since.

ALTHOUGH it was beginning to look as though the Mendieta government and the Cuban Revolutionary Party—ABC—were going to reach an agreement soon the truce now seems far in the distance. The government was ready to make great concessions to the ABC even to the point of "scrapping the present cabinet" with neutral replacements. The ABC now demands that the government be turned over to a body representing all rural sectors, which will choose a neutral president, who would have strictly restricted powers. The cabinet would be headed by a prime minister who would act more or less as the real president. Incidentally the ABC would bar university students and professors from representation in the body; this is rather unusual when one considers that the ABC is supposed to be a reactionary party organized mainly by university students.

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

OUT OF STEP

It is unfortunate that in our national congress, of all places in America that it might be, there is alarming evidence of mental stagnation on the part of several senators and representatives. True the percentage of this element is small; but it is formidable enough to hamper seriously the course of intelligent legislation.

It is undoubtedly true that Senator Hiram Johnson of California and Senator Borah, the gentleman from Idaho, are conscientious and well-meaning in their objections to American participation in the World Court. But the presence of their misguided sincerity does not alter the fact that they are distinctly out of step with the march of contemporary world affairs. When Mr. Johnson made seriously the statement a few days ago that "we want to enter the World Court simply to meddle and muddle in the hysterical controversies of Europe," he thoroughly demonstrated his incapacity to understand that our national life is in a constant state of change.

If this stand he takes could be attributed solely to political partisanship, he might be excused. But when it is occasioned by a legislative mind that is hopelessly blind, the situation takes on a new gravity. Such men as this are seriously impeding the much delayed progress of an international frame of mind in this country, something that we have needed for a long time and must inevitably arrive at in the end. The hysteria of Europe, that Mr. Johnson mentions, affects this country most pointedly; and our wisest course is obviously to get into the Court and into the League of Nations in order to control that "hysteria" for our best interests. Mr. Johnson, however, seems determined to consign himself to the limbo of mid-victorian minds, the Brisbane school of George Washington's advice, and that pitiful group known as "bitter-enders."

The opposite side of the congressional picture is just as bad, however, as the ultra-conservative element. Radical "left-wingers" such as the Townsendites and Huey Long are equally, if not more, undesirable than the slow-paced group who serve at least as a restraining influence.

"Townsend plans" and "share-the-wealth" bugaboos are extremely injurious to the development of a sane program of social security. President Roosevelt, with his customary political acumen, has demonstrated ,of course, that he is aware of this. By submitting to congress an old-age pension plan scaled down very low, he has anticipated a compromise and stolen all the thunder from the Townsendites. The ideas of our "gentleman from the South," Huey P. Long, are obviously too fantastic for serious thought. But a very real danger lies in the fact that he has an enormous appeal to millions of uninformed people who fall for his senseless ballyhoo.

Until these two unfortunate elements, the ultra-conservatives and the sensationalists, are eradicated, the march of intelligent national legislation will be seriously impeded.—Crimson-White

NEW POINT SYSTEM NEEDED

Several years ago, in an effort to keep the chief positions in the various student organizations from falling into the hands of a small minority, the Men's Student Council and the Key and Triangle decided to institute the "point system" at Drexel. A maximum number of points for those with certain scholastic averages was decided upon; and, if any student, because of his extreme ambition acquired more points than his scholastic work and the point system allowed him, he was notified by either governing body to give up certain activities, so that his total points would not exceed the limit.

This indeed was a great step forward in that it gave more students a chance to show just what capacity they had for managing an organization. The idea was practical, but as time goes on it becomes more obvious that the system is faulty and needs a general overhauling. It is very unfortunate that the systems employed by both governing bodies should be different. By this we mean that it is hard to understand why the Key and Triangle decided to award certain positions more points than the Men's Student Council thought they were worth. Essentially there are many corresponding positions amongst the men's organizations and the women's organizations. Why is it that in many instances the women are credited with more points than the men are for a certain position? It cannot be said with sincerity that the woman does more work than the man or vice versa. Therefore, it seems apparent that some new valuation should be placed on the various positions open to the student, especially amongst the women students.

Another evil of the system is the entire disregard for the importance of the position. Points in excess are assigned to some activities while others receive less than they should. In this way some students are forced to give up certain activities which they enjoy very much and which benefit them and the organization. A leader of any one organization at Drexel is practically exempt from accepting a position with very moderate responsibilities in any other activity. This is a deplorable condition, indeed, because it is evident that one person is able to handle two activities without any distress to their scholastic work. If it is ascertained that certain individuals are behind in their work due to extra-curricular activities then it should be the duty of the ruling bodies to inform that individual to abstain from activities until his scholastic work reaches the required grade.

In conclusion, let us say that both point systems should be subjected to a great number of drastic changes. That is, a new valuation should be set on certain positions, with regard to the importance of the position or activity, a certain degree of harmony between the two systems should be reached, and those organizations which have gained repute and those which have sunk into oblivion since the inauguration of the idea should be considered when making up a new schedule.
—Drexel Triangle.

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticisms. Letters should be signed, marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the postoffice.

LET'S BE FRIENDLY

In an attempt to better the morale and atmosphere of our students, dormitory lounges have been opened. Northern universities have set us an excellent example and if they maintain the purpose of their lounges, we should certainly be able to do likewise.

The primary purpose of the opening of these lounges is the inducement of more conversation and relaxation among the students. It is a distressing fact that girls rush to these domains with an unconsciousness of their co-smokers. Why should any student degrade her ability to make friends to the extent that she is incapable of conversing or relaxing as a group?

W. Trotter has said that man is a gregarious and social animal. Thinking of this statement in general, there is no doubt but that this is true, but on visiting the lounges and witnessing the solitary and unfriendly attitude of smokers there remains a doubt as to whether man even rivals the animal in social participation. It is abnormal to be lonely and live the life of a hermit among eighteen hundred students. To avoid being classified in this group we should mingle more with our co-smokers. The environment around us is most beneficial to our problem for it has been made comfortable and restful.

Make these lounges a place for saocial gatherings. If you are not the talkative type of girl, then read the magazines which will be placed on tables for your benefit. You will soon find that you have something in common with your neighbor and pleasant friendships will be made.

Every privilege within the means of college social committee's power has been granted to F. S. C. W.'s students, and it is the unappreciate person who does not take advantage of these privileges.

Signed: Nina Kirkland

Collegiate Come-Back

A new era has dawned with th opening of the refurnished redecorated Gilchrist lounge yesterday afternoon, and we a filled with rejoicing. No mo shall we be forced to smoke physical surroundings resembl nothing so much as a cross b tween Dead Eye Dick's Beer a Billiard Parlor and the ladies ro in the county jug. A wastebask can now be considered solely container for has-been paper stead of in its former versati capacity of match-scratcher, as tray, foot-prop, and cigarette stamper-outer. We desire demonstrate that, like the li sunflowers, we too can ad readily when transplanted favorable surroundings, and ha not forgotten how to behave li ladies, when treated as such.

* * * *

From the Handout come th origins for the following popul sayings:

I'm strong for you, kid—Sampson.

You can't keep a good ma down—Jonah.

The bigger they are the harder they fall—David.

So this is Paris!—Helen o Troy.

I don't know where I'm going but I'm on my way—Columbus.

Keep the home fires burnin —Nero.

It floats—Noah.

Keep your shirt on—Quee Elizabeth to Sir Walter Raleig

Step on it, kid—Sir Walter to her.

* * * *

According to Dr. Richard A. Bolt, "Persons of superior in tectual stock must be encoura to have more babies, or the Unit States will fail as Rome di So that's why Rome failed. Ou history teacher always said it because they were lazy. Suc conflicting opinions.

* * * *

As a penalty for being caugh drinking alcoholics at the University of Colorado, students ar forced to attend Sunday school fo three years—Vanderbilt Hustle Well, that seems to us to be a mysterious way of performin wonders.

From the exchanges this wee we conned this little gem, entitled "Pome":

* * * *

"When I asked her to wed,"
"Go to father," she said.

And she knew that I knew
That her father was dead.

And she knew that I knew
What a life he had led.

So she knew that I knew
What she meant when she said—
"Go to father!"

* * * *

Recent statistics show that generally women outlive men. The Kentucky Kernel reminds us that paint is a great preservative.

* * * *

From the Creightonian: "We all have some kind of phobia, something that stirs our ire to a white heat and usually something so insignificant that we become unbearable at times. I shiver my timbers when some guy gives me the salt and pepper when I asked for only the salt; my hair stands up when anyone strikes matches just for the fun of it, but when I find a horsefly buzzing around my beefsteak, oh, do I get suspicious!" . . . or a barrel stave in the gravy bowl.

State-Wide F. S. C. W. Week Honors College Growth

High Academic Standard Kept Through Years

Various Schools Expand With Improvement in Facilities

PHI BETA KAPPA IS LATEST HONOR

Vocational and Cultural Education Offered by Departments

Judging from the recognition which has come to the Florida State College for Women, its academic development as expressed in the College of Arts and Sciences, and the Schools of Education, Home Economics, and Music, has kept pace with its expansion and improvement in other fields.

The granting of a Phi Beta Kappa chapter to this institution was based primarily upon the objectives and quality of teaching of the College of Arts and Sciences, indicating especially the outstanding work in the Latin and Greek departments. The aim of the liberal arts college, according to Dr. William G. Dodd, dean, is two-fold: to provide necessary disciplines of precision, appreciation, ability to seek truth from hypotheses, and reflective thinking; and to orient the student in the field of knowledge necessary to an understanding of modern life, among them, those of science, social science, literature and fine arts.

From an organization which at first comprised a number of so-called schools, such as the School of Expression, the College of Arts and Sciences has developed into a unified aggregation of twenty-one departments, each offering its own major leading to the bachelor's degree after four years of study. Elimination of the last two-year certificate course was accomplished with the establishment of majors in art and speech last year, a step which placed the college among the more progressive institutions of the country.

COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES

Although the College of Arts and Sciences exists primarily to offer a liberal education, its students have opportunities for professional and vocational training such as that included in pre-medical and pre-law courses, and in commerce courses for training of secretaries and accountants. Properly arranged curricula in journalism, art, bacteriology, library science, sociology and speech have vocational value. Students in this school may also qualify for teaching positions by taking the correct amount of work in education and psychology.

On the other hand, according to Dr. Dodd, sixty to seventy-five per cent of all professional curricula, except in the School of Music, is made up of courses offered in departments of the College of Arts and Sciences.

An important step taken last year was the introduction of honors work, enabling students showing outstanding ability during their first two years to be excused from class routine for independent study under faculty supervision. Installation of honors work brings the college in line with the progressive movements in larger universities of the country.

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

The School of Education has for its purpose the professional training of teachers, and since its beginning in 1916 has graduated nearly a thousand with the bachelor's degree and over sixteen hundred with the two-year diploma. The four-year curricular leading to a bachelor's degree trains students to teach throughout the school system from the senior and junior high school subjects, intermediate and primary grades, kindergarten and nursery schools, to the specialized subjects such as physical education and industrial arts. In addition, the two-year diploma prepares a student for teaching from nursery school through the junior high level.

Observation and practice in the Demonstration school proves invaluable to the young teacher, according to Dean Nathaniel M. Salley, when she steps into her first job. This practical experience helps her to feel at home with pupils and teachers, to organize and present materials, and to face her problems intelligently. Physical education majors have the opportunity of training in one of the most modern plants in America, in the opinion of leading educators who have visited the college gymnasium.

SCHOOL OF HOME ECONOMICS

The School of Home Economics has a two-fold purpose, thet of training the young women of the state in the essentials of successful homemaking, and that of preparing its graduates for professional positions in this field. Facts show that ninety-five per cent of the graduates of this school earn their living for a shorter or longer period in occupations for which their training has prepared them, but also thet approximately two-thirds of them marry within five years after graduation and put into actual practice the principles of household management learned.

Courses offered by the School of Home Economics prepare its

(Continued on Page

See Many Years of Service at Florida State College

The numerous honors that have come to the college have been due in large measure to the high academic standards maintained during the thirty years of its existence as a woman's college. Seen above are some of the faculty members and administrative officers who have taken an active part in promoting the academic and physical development of the institution.

Library Adds Many Volumes

Growth of Stacks Keeps Pace With College Expansion

The growth of the library has more than kept pace with the growth in enrollment during the past quarter of a century, for while there are six times as many students in college today as twenty-five years ago, there has been an eight hundred per cent increase in number of books in the library.

In 1909 there were only 7,000 volumes, in 1919 the number increased to 38,000, while the last count sets the number at 56,300. Periodicals have enjoyed a similar increase; in 1909 there were only 50 magazines sent weekly or monthly to the library, in 1919 that number was doubled and at present the total subscription is 368.

In contrast to the 5,403 books borrowed by students from the library in 1909, this year 247,970 has been borrowed. The pamphlet collection in 1919 was 800, in 1929, 6000, and at present it is 14,000. There are 2,250 pictures in the library collection.

The size of the library has grown from one small room to an entire building and the staff has increased from one librarian to nine with nineteen student assistants.

At present the library is divided into four distinct departments, reference, periodical and binding, circulation, and cataloguing. In 1930 the reference department sent out 20,574 answers to questions from all parts of Florida. The periodical and binding department checks and cares for the 8,500 issues of magazines each year and oversees the binding of over 900 volumes annually.

Richards Announces Scope of Membership For Phi Beta Kappa

When asked to make a statement regarding the requirements for election of students to Phi Beta Kappa, Dr. Harold F. Richards, president of the Phi Beta Kappa Association of Tallahassee, said:

"Phi Beta Kappa traditionally emphasizes a broad, liberal, well-rounded education. In awarding charters Phi Beta Kappa is especially interested in those colleges and universities in which the liberal arts work sets the tone of the institution, and in electing students to membership it recognizes high achievement in non professional studies.

Phi Beta Kappa does not trespass in the provinces of honorary societies devoted to the interests of students in whose programs professional courses occupy first place. A moderate amount of undergraduate work in home economics or education, for example, does not prevent consideration; but the major must lie in literature, science, history, social studies, languages, philosophy or other non-professional field.

The scholastic standards of Phi Beta Kappa are very high, and in addition evidence of wide intellectual interests and a well-rounded cultural development is expected.

The present nation-wide movement towards liberalizing college curricula is in thorough accord with Phi Beta Kappa's traditional insistence that professional training should be in addition to, not a substitute for, a liberal education. Fortunately, this idea has predominated here for many years.

There could be no finer tribute to the far-sighted wisdom with which President Conradi has guided Florida State College for Women than Phi Beta Kappa's choice of this college from among so many."

Mortar Board to Select Senior Class Play Soon

The senior class play under the direction of Miss Kemper Moore of the speech department, will be elected within the next week, according to Marion Brantley, president of Mortar Board which sponsors the play annually.

Committee heads for the play are Barbara Garfunkel, advertising; Louise Robertson, programs; Georgia Ruth Work, ushers; Frances Parks, business manager. They will be assisted by members of the senior class outside of the active members of the Mortar Board chapter.

College Grows In Enrollment

Figures Exhibit Gradual Gain in Size Of Student Body

Twenty-five years ago this college consisted of a few scattered buildings, two wooden dormitories, a small gymnasium and one academic building accommodated the 263 students that registered.

In the year 1914-1915 the enrollment number was 473, and by the year 1924-1925 it had reached 1268. In 1930 the total number of students enrolled was 1734, and the college ranked sixth in size of all women's colleges in the United States. There were then seven times as many students as there had been in 1909. In 1931-1932 the enrollment figure stood at 1776. In that year there were 155 faculty members, 119 women and 36 men. In the year 1932-1933 the enrollment figure reached its peak. The number of students registered was 1792. Florida State college then ranged third in size of all women colleges. Hunter college in New York ranked first. This year the number of students who enrolled in September and are remaining in school for the entire 1934-35 term is 1573.

Chemical Society Head Speaks at Gainesville

Dr. Roger Adams, president of the American Chemical Society, and head of the department of chemistry of the University of Illinois, spoke in Gainesville last week on the recent trends of organic chemistry.

Preceding the lecture which was given in the P. K. Young Laboratory school there was a dinner held in honor of Dr. Adams.

Members of the chemistry department of Florida State College for women who attended the banquet and lecture were: Dr. L. J. Lewis, Dr. Jennie Tilt, Miss Isabel McKinnell, and Miss Gertrude Vermillion, a former student of Dr. Adams.

Moore Attends Meeting

Coyle E. Moore, associate professor of sociology, who has just completed an extension course in Jacksonville on marriage and the family, is now attending a meeting of the state board of public welfare in that city.

Conditions Are Different But Girls Are Same

Skirts Rise and Fall As Fashions and War Come and Go

BY BETTY SMITH

In any one room in Bryan hall, two girls are living today and two girls will live for years to come. But, do they ever think of the constant stream of college women who have lived in thet room for the past quarter of a century, who have known happiness and longing and homesickness, who have run the gamut of human emotions within its four walls?

In 1909 the room, fresh from the hands of the painter and plasterer, with the scent of turpentine and the clean smell of freshly-cut wood still lingering, was occupied by the first two of its long line of tenants. In spite of the changes time brings about, unpacking a trunk is the same yesterday, today and tomorrow.

FAMILIAR FASHIONS

"Oh, Sue," cried one of the roommates as she struggled with the top tray, "my new sailor is ruined. Why, the straw top is all crushed in. And I wish you'd look at my dress with the puffed sleeves—I'll never get them all pressed out again."

"What I'm worried about," answered Sue, "is where to put this hat with the plumes. The roaches will get it if I put it in the closet and it's too big to go in the drawer. Oh, and listen, they say Wilson's have the darlingest corset covers in—all hand embroidered with pink ribbon rosebuds around the bodice. I'm dying for one. Lottie Bell down the hall has a lovely one. Say, have you noticed Alice, how queer she acts sometimes? She pretends she's modest and won't have anybody in the room when she dresses, but have you noticed how her cheeks are red at times and pale at others? Don't you dare breathe a word of this, for I wouldn't have her know I said it for the world, but I wouldn't be surprised if she uses rouge."

"Oh, no, she couldn't. Why, she seems so nice."

"Yes, and have you ever gotten close to her and smelled her hair? Her own is all right, but her rat smells just like cigarette smoke."

"I don't believe it, Sue. Why, she's so well-mannered and dresses so nicely—her shirtwaist collars and cuffs are always starched so stiffly. Have you seen Miss Longmire and Miss Schwalmeyer's black shirtwaists?"

"I should say I have. They had them made by the same dressmaker and they say Miss Schwalmeyer told her to make them just exactly alike, even to putting the same number of stitches in each. And can Miss Longmire tie a four-in-hand! Her ties are just perfect. Mine look like it was a struggle to make both ends meet. Oh, there goes the bell. Wonder if we'll have prune whip again?" Chattering aimlessly the two roommates go down to dinner.

Although the next five years brought many changes to the campus the room in Bryan was unaltered by the life that went on around it, except perhaps for a little wear and tear and for a few souvenirs left by the girls. There is that long black smudge on the plaster that Lydie made back in 1912 when she threw the shoe polish at her roommate, all because Clarissa had said her waist was as big as any man's. Those worn spots on the floor show the favorite resting places of the dresser and the closet door bears the scars of many towel racks. The girls who lived there in 1914 were somewhat changed from those who occupied it first and they still talk a'la college girl.

"Sarah Mae, you missed it by not going to Convocation this morning. Alice Adams was expelled for wearing a skirt split clear to her knees."

"But they're the latest thing. Everybody will be wearing them."

"Yes, but she didn't have any petticoat underneath it and was wearing green hose besides. Just think of letting your knees be seen like that."

"She hasn't any modesty. What else happened?"

"Let's see. Oh, some girl was put on probation for staying home from church twice without an Infirmary excuse and Susie somebody was reprimanded for not signing up to go to the Library."

"Did Dr. Conradi talk?"

"Yes, he spoke about the finer things of life. You should have heard him. Oh, and I got a package from home. Mama sent me some starched ruffles—you know what I mean—to pin on the front of your petticoat to make your

(Continued on Page Four)

Opening of New Lounges Is Latest Social Improvement

As another feature of F. S. C. W. week the redecorated smoking rooms of Gilchrist and Broward halls have been opened for the use of guests of the college and students. The additional smoking rooms with their modern furniture and decorations represent the latest efforts on the part of Florida State College for Women toward improved facilities for the social activities of students.

The furniture in the rooms is made of steel chromium upholstered in fabricoid in shades of dark brown, light tan, brick and lemon yellow. The draperies are of a plaid design in red, yellow, brown and tan; the ash trays are also of steel chromium.

Until the fall of 1928 all social activity, such as the meeting and entertaining of guests and the gathering of students for informal social hours, took place in Bryan Atrium as none of the other dormitories had parlors. At that time there were no private date parlors on the campus. This lack of adequate social areas in the dormitories themselves greatly hampered and restricted the dormitory life of the students. Dean Minna Kerr, dean of students at that time, realized the need for additional social areas, particularly since the enrollment of the college was constantly on the increase and the students were being forced to go elsewhere for their recreational and social activities.

DATE PARLORS PROVIDED

Dean Kerr conceived the idea of having parlors in each of the dormitories and with Mrs. Virginia T. Sloan, director of residence halls, worked out tentative plans for them. They presented the plans to Dr. Conradi after telling him of the great need for the parlors. Dr. Conradi agreed with Dean Kerr and Mrs. Sloan and took up the matter with the Board of Control who in turn presented the plans to the legislature. The legislature provided the funds for the construction of the date parlors in Bryon hall, Broward lounge and the offices, large parlors, and date parlors in Reynolds and Jennie Murphree halls. It also provided the funds for the furnishing of the parlors and offices. Since Broward and Bryan halls operate as one dormitory Broward lounge was built as a private lounge for students only, instead of a public parlor. The work on the parlors was completed during the summer of 1928. No provision was made for Gilchrist hall in the plans since the plans for Gilchrist already included the parlors, the dining room, the office, and the date parlors.

Each of the dormitories was originally constructed with a candy kitchen for the use of the students and a pressing room in which they could launder and press small pieces.

Up until 1929 such sewing as was done by the students had to be done on one or two sewing machines placed about in the dormitories. Several students were in charge of the use of the machines and collected the small fees charged for their use. After the Alpha Delta Pi sorority moved to their own house in 1929 the room formerly occupied by them on the numeral floor of Broward hall was equipped as a sewing room for the students. Four machines were provided, and the money collected from the use of these machines has completely furnished, equipped, and maintained the sewing room. At the beginning of last year money was on hand to permit the free usage of machines, so no charges have been made since.

DISHES AND SILVER

The rent dish closet is another social convenience provided for the students, by the college. After the Y. W. C. A. gave up the operation of its tea room and association turned over the dishes thet had been used in the tea room to

(Continued on Page Four)

Faculty To Form Honorary Nucleus

Phi Beta Kappa Chapter Here Will Assist in Installation

The eighteen faculty members included in the membership of the Phi Beta Kappa association of Tallahassee will serve as the nucleus for the installation of a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at Florida state on March 4, and 5, Dr. Harold F. Richards, president of the local association, announced yesterday.

This number of Phi Beta Kappa faculty members in proportion to the total size of the liberal arts faculty gives this institution one of the largest percentages of Phi Beta Kappa faculty members among the liberal arts faculties of the college and universities of the country.

The Phi Beta Kappa association, which is one of seventy-seven groups of Phi Beta Kappa alumni distributed throughout the country, is comprised of faculty members and residents of Tallahassee who received Phi Beta Kappa keys while undergraduates at various institutions including a number of outstanding universities.

In January 1926 the local group was organized with Dr. Vivian McClatchey, president; Dr. Harold F. Richards, vice-president; and Miss Myrtle Dolbee, secretary-treasurer. Since thet time the association has been actively concerned with the promotion of the ideals of scholarship and educational activities held by the national organization.

The present officers are Dr. Richards, president; Miss Dolbee, vice-president; and Miss Anna May Tracy, secretary-treasurer.

Members of the local association include Miss Margaret Dow, Dr. Dorothy Disher, Dr. Kathryn Abbey, Dr. Mildred Burlingame, Dr. J. B. Game, Dr. Viola Graham, Mrs. Dorothy Breen, Dr. Marion Jewell Hay, Dr. William Rogers, Dr. Arthur Seymour, Dr. E. R. Smith, Miss Marion Irish, Dr. Olivia Dorman, Dr. Venila Shores, Miss Amy Ferris Briggs, and the following town members: Mrs. Arthur Seymour, Mrs. Ralph L. Eyman, Mr. Claude Pepper, and the Reverend G. E. Benedict.

Old Fireplaces Replaced With Steam Heating

Present Plant Built In 1930 at Cost Of $140,000

In the early 1900's it was almost a question of the professors at Florida State College making their own fires when they came to school of a wintry morning to find their classrooms cold.

Prior to 1917, the problem of heating was dealt with as well as possible by the use of small furnaces in each campus building, looked after by one fireman.

Today, a striking contrast is offered to the old regime in heating by the modern and effeciently-equipped college heating plant. In spite of Dr. Bellamy's ingenious theory concerning a malicious demon who lives in the 1233 foot concrete tunnel for the sole purpose of preventing the heat it conducts from reaching his class room, the plant supplies not only heat for all buildings on the campus, but provides softened hot water as well.

Those of the nightly congregation who chat and crochet in the parlors around the radios, had they been F. S. C. W.-ites of about 1910, would have enjoyed the same chatty evenings, spent then, however, in popping corn at an open fire and conversation to the accompaniment of victrola music. When Bryan hall was dedicated in 1900, its fireplaces remained closed, and were not used until a year later, when Mrs. Sarah Cawthon, then dean of the college home, asked to have them opened. Then followed those gay winter evenings around the fireplace which became a symbol of enjoyment. Its first andirons were purchased on a rumor. Someone described them to Mrs. Cawthon, who relayed the description to Mr. Kellum, and the andirons were ordered for approval, unseen.

The first step toward improvement of the heating equipment of the college came with the building of a central heating plant in

(Continued on Page

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Claudette Colbert
in
"THE GILDED LILY"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
"DAVID COPPERFIELD"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Gary Cooper and Franchot Tone
in
"LIVES OF BENGAL LANCER"
THURSDAY ONLY
Ann Harding and Frank Morgan
in
"ENCHANTED APRIL"
—AND—
"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT!"

RITZ THEATRE
SATURDAY
TIM McCOY in "SMOKING GUNS"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Claudette Colbert
in
"THE GILDED LILY"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
"DAVID COPPERFIELD"

This New Sheer
By
Co-Ed

$10.95

Co-Ed fashions this chic frock of a novelty waffle sheer. The ruffled sleeves of rows and rows of pleating are so flattering, and the delicate spray of posies so feminine.

Colors—Navy, Beige and Grey
Sizes—12 to 18

GELBERG'S
"Style Plus Economy"

Florida State Graduates Are Distinguished

Alumnae in Prominent Fields of Sciences And Education

ONE-THIRD ARE MARRIED WOMEN

Professions Vary From That of Actress To Writing

Florida State College for Women can point with pride to its graduates in the past twenty-six years. Many prominent and influential women throughout the country are the graduates of this college. Approximately one-third of the college alumnae are married and the two-thirds are pursuing careers.

The late Mary Bailey Sloan, one of the most prominent graduates, was the daughter of Mrs. Virginia Sloan, director of residence halls at the college. She took a medical course at the Women's medical college at Philadelphia and another at Detroit. She received one honor after another in medical work. Her final position was as chief bacteriologist in a church hospital in Shanghai.

Felicia Williams did war service with the American Red Cross as an office worker and at the same time earned her master's degree at George Washington university. She is now on the extension faculty at the University of Florida as Mrs. L. W. Traxler.

Agnes Edwards worked in Washington during the war and after the Armistice was principal of the government school for convalescent soldiers in that city. Later she was off-campus social director here for four years and is now dean of women at Southwestern Louisiana Institute, Lafayette, Louisiana.

Edna Rees Williams, daughter of Mr "Pi" Williams, has achieved her degree at Yale and has secured a position as teacher of English, language, and literature at Smith college. Kathryn Reese who is Mrs. Haun in private life studied voice at the Cincinnati conservatory of music. She sang the leading role in the light opera "Iolanthe" in New York and made a world concert tour.

Ireta Bradford, wife of Carl Van Doran, world known publisher, is the editor of the literary supplement of the New York Herald-Tribune. She was entered in the Who's Who in America.

Inga Olla Helseth may be found among the "Leaders of Education." Dr. Helseth has published two books, "Methods of Studying and Teaching History" and "Practice Supervision."

Edith Everett Taylor, now Mrs Verle Pope, represents Florida State in the literary field. She has written and published "Black Lagoon and Other Verse," 1926 and two novels, "Not Magnolia" 1928, and "Old Lady Esteroy," 1934

Among the graduates who are now members of the college faculty are Miss Katherine Montgomery, director of physical education. Miss Montgomery has written and published "Volley Ball for Women," the only textbook ever published on this subject.

Miss Elizabeth Love acts on Broadway during the week and broadcasts from Carnegie hall on Sundays. She has appeared in "By Your Leave," "Swing High Swing Low," "Strictly Dishonorable" and many others.

Mary Martini, the only woman agronomist in the United States and a recognized authority on berley, is doing experimental testing work with the United States Department of Agriculture

Evelyn Barnett is in the advertising department of Abraham and Straus in New York city.

Dempsey Creary is director of Girl Scouts in Santa Barbara California.

[illegible] Harris is the Health education curriculum consultant for the American Child Health association. She went on leave of absence in 1931-33 to serve as State Director of Health Education of Michigan.

Lonnie Landrum is the State [illegible] for South Carolina.

Natalie Moffett is teaching in a Mission school in Hangchow China.

Graduates of Florida State College for Women hold teaching positions all over the United States. Many graduates are holding positions as librarians, accountants, dietitians and in many other fields

View of the Front Campus

Completion of Education Building Marks Thirty Years of Construction

Growth in Physical Set-Up Has Been In Step With Campus Progress in Other Fields Of Achievement

With the new $25,000 dairy nearing completion and plans being made for occupancy of the $60,000 Education building in March, Florida State College for Women is keeping pace with the rapid advance made along other lines by the college.

The new dairy, located on the Bloxson farm about two miles from the college grounds, will be composed of nine buildings. The Education building, which will be completed in March according to H. D. Mendenhall, college engineer, will house the education, psychology and industrial arts departments. Both projects are being financed by joint FERA and college funds.

In 1929 the most expensive building on the campus, the gymnasium, was completed. The gymnasium, which has been called one of the best in the United States by such authorities as Miss [illegible] Bowers of the National Recreational association, is situated west and back of the dormitories and is surrounded by athletic fields. The building contains a 75 by 40 foot swimming pool, a large and small auditorium for games, several classrooms, rest rooms, a locker and shower room, and the offices of the directors of the physical education work. It is completely modern in appointments and equipment. The athletic fields are divided into tennis courts, basket ball courts, hockey, soccer, baseball and archery fields. The equipment for the widely varied physical education activities includes that for many indoor sports as well as that for outdoor sports and is the best of its kind available. The college laundry is also located in the gymnasium in the back basement room.

ADMINISTRATION BUILDING

The Administration building was the second brick building erected on campus. This was built during the term of 1909-1910, and was open for use September 28 1910. It contained twenty-one lecture rooms, twelve laboratories four art studios, six music studies and twenty-one practice rooms. There were ten store rooms, several offices of administration, the office for the dean, the book store, office for the Talisman, rooms for the library, and an auditorium which seated 1000 people. This was the only building in which classes were held

In addition, that same year, a kindergarten and modern school building was built where observation and practice classes could be conducted. The first laundry building was also erected in this year, at the rear of the campus, fitted with the newest and best equipment available at that time for steam laundry work

REYNOLDS HALL

In 1912-1913, increased enrollment made necessary the addition of a new dormitory, and at the beginning of the second semester, Reynolds, named for the Hon William Reynolds, was ready for occupancy. This building had accommodations for 133 students, a parlor [illegible] suite for the matron, a "com[illegible] playroom" and pro[illegible] In 1913-1914 [illegible] dining room was erected a one-story brick building, seating comfortably about 550 people. Three years later, Broward Hall, a dormitory for 108 students, was completed, and named for ex-Governor Broward.

Beginning in 1918 the next twelve years showed a remarkable expansion in the building on the campus. First, the Education building was erected in 1918. It contained eighteen large rooms and seven small rooms, and the offices of the dean. This building was the headquarters for the various activities of the School of Education and the Normal school. Two years later, the new Infirmary was ready for use. This was located back of Reynolds Hall, and contained the offices of the college physician and nurse, and operating room, a waiting room, living rooms for the nurses, and wards for the patients, including an isolation ward.

The year 1922 was one of great development. The Science hall, a duplicate of the Education building, was finished. The first floor was occupied by the home demonstration division, the second by the School of Home Economics, and the third by the department of chemistry. In this year, also a new wing added to Reynolds hall was named Elizabeth hall. It was provided with the same arrangements and appointments as Reynolds, accommodating fifty-eight students. In addition, a commodious new dormitory was built and named for Jennie Murphree, wife of the former president, A. A. Murphree. It was a three-story brick structure, with a total length of 190 feet, and in style and general appearance, harmonized with the other residence halls. It was connected with Reynolds hall by a closed arcade, and had accommodations for 158 students and a matron.

DINING HALL

Additions were also made to the dining room in 1922, now making it possible to seat 1000 people. In this year a central heating plant was added, located at the western side of the campus. Camp Flastacowo on Lake Bradford was also purchased and added to the college property. The possession and development of this camp furnished opportunity for week-end recreational parties. Here also were carried on the water sports of the athletic department

The legislature in 1923 provided appropriation for an addition to be made to the auditorium, since it was no longer large enough to meet the growing demands of the school. With this addition, the seating capacity was raised to 1800. A new $32,000 pipe organ was installed.

In 1925, an addition to Jennie Murphree was completed. The next year, one unit of the training school, which was being built on the unit system was finished for use, and an important step was taken in the completion of the west wing of the new Library building. On the main floor of the Library building was the library proper and on the lower floor was an assembly room, a seminar room and consultation rooms.

GILCHRIST HALL

Gilchrist hall, named in honor of ex-Governor Gilchrist, was begun in 1926, but at this time only the east wing was finished for use because of the lack of funds. Building was resumed when the legislature made an appropriation the next year for the purpose, and in 1923 the [illegible] new dormitory, the [illegible] luxurious of all, was finished. In addition to a large number of sleeping rooms with accommodations for 190 students, there was a drawing room beautifully appointed and furnished, a tea room, and several small parlors.

In 1926 a second dining room was added on the first floor of the

(Continued on page [illegible])

Constitution Exam To Be Given Feb. 9

The United States Constitution examination for prospective teachers will be given Saturday, February 8, ot 1:30 p. m., in Leon High School, according to Elizabeth G. Andrews, director of personnel. All students planning to teach next year who have not had the required courses to exempt them from this examination are urged to take it at the scheduled time and to sign up in the Personnel Office before February 8th.

All students who have not yet filed their application pictures are asked to do so within the week.

Education Group to Meet

Kappa Delta Pi will have a combined business meeting and anniversary party, February 19, according to an announcement made this week by Mrs. Dora Skipper, president of the organization.

Conditions Are Different But Girls Are the Same

(Continued from Page Three)

shirtwaist stand out. I feel so grown-up."

In a few more years thoughts of petty things were swept aside when war began to cast its sombre shadow over the campus. The dull khaki of the soldier's uniforms often mingled with the brighter dresses of the girls as brothers and sweethearts came to say goodbye. The room in Bryan was now seldom the scene of gay midnight feasts for its occupants went hungry to bed so that there might be enough fur the boys over there. One day there was a telegram on the door, a few words on a scrap of paper; but they meant that another boy had been made machine-gun fodder and that another girl would know Gethsemane.

The room really fared worse in the Armistice than it had throughout the whole of its checkered career. The closet door still bears the marks of darts which were aimed at a miniature dummy of the Kaiser. The doorknob never has worked right since they took it off to beat the coffeepot with. But there is still the nailhole in the plaster from which used to hang a picture with the handsome face of a young man smiling out from it.

The next few years brought great changes not as much in the room itself as in those it sheltered. The closet floor which used to be swept free of dust by skirts that billowed and swooped accumulated a blanket of dirt curls that scurried back into the corners when the door was opened. Slowly milady's skirts left the ground and slowly rose up and up until it was then almost as serious an indictment not to show your knees as showing them had been ten years previously. Conversation centered not upon doing up one's hair but upon doing away with it.

"Billy Jean, you ought to make that barber shingle your hair way up on your head. It looks so much better that way. And have him cut your sideburns a little shorter. You look grand in a boyish bob when it's cut close enough. Didn't you hate to have it cut the first time, though?"

"I was glad to get rid of all that [illegible] of hair."

"[illegible] you feel funny the first time you wore your hose rolled and all your skirt lacking two or three inches of making connections? I felt like I always do when I dream I went to church barefooted."

"Nothing like that affects me but say the first time I ripped out a cuss-word in front of the mater did she do the romp all over me. I tried to make her see how you just have to cuss and smoke and act hard and sophisticated to go over big these days, but she's so old-fashioned. She doesn't like the square-toed oxfords and mannish suits everybody wears now. You can't tell me women will ever go back to long hair and dragging skirts with at least three or four yards in them. These are so much more comfortable."

BUT TIME TOLD

Today the room in Bryan still harbors every year the belongings of two college girls. The little dust curls have lost their hold on the closet floor, for skirts have come down to earth again. The bobby pin which for a number of years usurped the place of the bone pitchfork has recently had to share honors with the wire-hairpin. A cuss-word is no longer a drawing card, there is no premium on a swoon. The American girl is the most (insert long list of complementary adjectives) ever known to mankind, according to (insert names of three-fourths of the public speakers that have visited the campus since Dr. Conradi became president).

Those girls that will live in the room in Bryan in the years to come will they be more beautiful and more intelligent than those in the past? What will they wear and think and do, how will they act? Nobody can say more than that in spite of customs, conventions and clothes, college girls yesterday, today and tomorrow are sisters under the skin.

Faculty Keeps Abreast With College Plant

Grows From Twenty To One Hundred-Two Members

In comparison to three administrative officers and a faculty of twenty members with which the Florida State College for Women opened for the first time in 1905 the college now boasts an administration of nine persons and a faculty of 102 members.

The college has grown gradually through the years between 1905 and 1935, new officers and faculty members being added as needed. When college opened for the term of 1914-1915 the administration had increased to four while the faculty was numbered as thirty-one. By 1924-1925 the administration had seven officers and the faculty numbered seventy. This term finds the administration increased to nine while the faculty now consists of twenty-five professors, twenty-three associate professors, twenty-one assistant professors, and thirty-two instructors bringing the faculty to a total of 102 members.

Statistics show that the faculty of the college is not only larger than in 1905 but is also much better trained according to their degrees. In contrast to three faculty members with degrees of doctor, six with masters' and two with bachelors' plus ten instructors with no degrees in 1905 the college at present has thirty-six faculty members with doctors' degrees, forty-six with masters' and nineteen with bachelors degrees. Only five have no degrees, but these have work equal to a degree in their own special field.

This faculty has not only been trained in the best schools of the United States and Europe, but many of them have done much outstanding research and original work besides their work as educators.

The college enrollment at the beginning of January, 1935, totaled 1573 with 320 of this number expecting to graduate. The new semester sees many new students entering and old students coming back. This in comparison to an enrollment of 204 and a graduating class of twelve in 1905. The college enrollment reached its highest figure in 1929-1930 when there were 1642 students and a graduating class of 260.

Old Fireplaces Replaced With Steam Heating

(Continued from Page Three)

1916, which assured students of hot water at all times, and professors of heated classrooms.

In 1930, the present plant was built at an approximate cost of $140 000 Now two large boilers, automatic draft fans, corrosion-preventives, feed-water heaters for using waste steam, automatic [illegible], a water softener added last year, and other modern efficiency [illegible] devices contribute to the modern system of heating the campus. All piping is enclosed in a large concrete tunnel, described at the time of its construction as large enough for Primo Carnera to walk through it, arms extended, without touching either the sides or top

During the school year the heating plant runs twenty-four hours per day, with two firemen on twelve-hour shifts tending the fireboxes, and a stoker hauling coal from the trestle near the plant to be fed to the boilers. Charts are made daily by dials on various instruments to show the pressure of steam in the boilers temperature in the fireboxes, amount of steam used, and temperature of the hot water. These charts make it possible for the business office to keep a complete record of the heating plant activities.

A railroad three-fourths of a mile long connects the boiler plant with the main line of the Seaboard railway, offering the possibility of the transportation of students directly from the college rather than from the depot, in the future. A second possible future improvement is provided for by space left in the plant sufficient for the installation of a third 400-pound boiler should the college ever generate its own electricity.

Fourteen Honoraries Reward Scholarship in Many Fields

Phi Beta Kappa Seventh National on Campus; Three Are Local

The number of honoraries on this campus will total foruteen, eleven national and three local, after the installation of Phi Beta Kappa, oldest academic society in America, March 4 and 5.

Phi Beta Kappa awards membership to those students in whose program high standards of scholarship in the liberal arts and sciences have predominated, while other honoraries on campus base membership upon achievement along special lines.

Gamma chapter of Alpha Chi Alpha, national journalistic honorary society, was the first to be installed here. Founded at the University of Tennessee in 1919, the sorority recognizes two years of successful service on college publications in admitting students to membership.

Pi chapter of Omricon Nu, home economics honorary, was the first to be installed in a southern institution. Omicron Nu's standards of admittance are based on scholastic achievement. The membership is limited to seniors and second semester juniors who can be admitted only after they have fulfilled a specified number of advanced home economics requirements.

CHI DELTA PHI

Chi Delta Phi, the only honorary literary fraternity, was installed on this campus in 1924, by Charles Morse, its founder. The society, which has thirty-seven chapters throughout the United States has for its purpose the stimulation of literary activities among college students.

Kappa Delta Pi, the honorary fraternity in education, although founded mainly for graduate men and women who are particularly interested in education and who expect to continue with the work admits students of the upper quartile of the school, if they have fulfilled certain requirements. Alpha Delta chapter was installed on this campus in 1925, succeeding the local educational honorary, Pi Delta.

PHI KAPPA PHI

Phi Kappa Phi, the first fraternity for honors in general scholarship, was organized by a group of students as a local society called Sigma Delta Pi in 1918. The Phi Kappa Phi chapter here was installed in 1925. Dr. Conradi who was instrumental in obtaining the chapter here, is a member of the fraternity.

The standards of the organization do not restrict its membership to any one branch of learning, but endeavor to maintain the high standard of scholarship. Chosen students who have had a little better than a B average during their four years of college work, are tapped during the second semester of their senior year. The motto of the honorary is "Love of learning rules the world."

Phi Alpha Theta, installed here in 1925, the same year of its founding at the University of Arkansas, recognizes high scholarship in history and relative subject matter. The society endeavors also to foster interest in the social aspects of history.

ETA SIGMA PHI

Eta Sigma Phi, the classical honorary society, was installed at Florida State college in 1926, and has for its purpose the fostering of appreciation of Greek and Latin culture through study of the lives of great men of Greece and Rome. Only juniors and seniors who have had five semesters of Latin or Greek with an average of B or better in these two subjects are admitted.

The local chapter, first to be installed in the south, maintains a bureau for Latin teachers in the high schools of the state. Each year a survey is made through this bureau of the progress of the teaching of Latin in schools all over Florida.

Theta Kappa chapter of Beta Pi Theta was installed here in 1925 to promote on this campus a greater interest in the study and understanding of the French language. Scholarship is its admittance requirements, both in the field of French and in the remainder of a student's courses.

PHI BETA SIGMA

Phi Beta Sigma, local Spanish honorary, was established here in 1927. The purpose of the organization is to maintain high scholarship in Spanish and a knowledge of the language, and promote interest in the customs and literature of Spain.

In 1931, the local senior honorary, Torchbearers, established here in 1925 to encourage leadership and scholarship in the four years of college life, was accepted as the "Torchbearer" chapter of Mortar Board, national senior honorary, whose standards are scholarship, leadership, service.

Orchesis, natural dancing honarary, was installed on this campus in 1927. The society exists for the purpose of study of and interest in the dance.

Two other local organization on this campus are Esteren, Even honorary, and Spirogira, recognizing outstanding members of the Odd class. Esterens, whose purpose is keeping high even spirits was established in 1930, and Spirogira, which stands for leadership, loyalty, and service, was organized in 1924.

Opening of Lounges Is Social Improvement

(Continued from Page Three)

the dormitories for the use of the students. It was then that the rent dish closet was started as the Y. W. C. A. rent dish closet with all money coming in from the use of the dishes being given to the Y. W. C. A. Later, the college took over the operation of the closet and the money accumulating from the rental of the equipment has been used from time to time to purchase additional equipment, such as the punch bowls and punch cups until now everything that is needed for serving at receptions and similar social functions may be rented from the closet. This year part of the rental monies was used to purchase two silver pitchers to use with the college silver service.

The college silver service was started by a gift of $500 for this purpose from the class of 1926. Dean Kerr purchased a great deal of this silver from an antique shop in New Orleans, but some of it was ordered direct from silver manufacturers. Some of that purchased by Dean Kerr bears the coats of arms of its former owners. The Colonial Dames of Jacksonville later gave a gift of $.00 for additional silver. Gradually through other gifts additional pieces have been added to the service.

In 1929 the college administrative officials asked the Board of Control for permission to purchase radios for Jennie Murphree, Reynolds, Bryan, and Gilchrist halls. The board granted the permission, and the radios were installed in the dormitories.

CAMP FLASTACOWO

It was Mrs. S. L. Cawthon, dean of the college home from 1910 until her resignation in 1925, who about 1918 first suggested the building of Camp Flastacowo to the students. This suggestion met with approval, but there was no money with which to realize such a plan. Mrs. Cawthon and the students, however, started working towards a goal of $3,000 with which to build the first camp house and equip it. They sent out letters to alumnae listed in the alumnae files, explaining their plans, and asking them to give whatever amount they could to the fund. The students also carried the plans out through the state in person. Those students on the campus staged benefit entertainments, made and sold candy, worked in tea rooms, and, it is said, two or three actually painted a barn roof and gave the money thus earned to the fund. When the fund lacked only about two or three hundred dollars of reaching the $3,000 mark, some friend of the college sent a check to cover the balance. The long cherished hope of the students was finally realized in 1922 when Camp Flastacowo was built and added to the college property. From time to time since then the college has gradually acquired more land out at camp, has built two additional camp houses, the dock and the boat house, and has purchased additional canoes and equipment for the camp. The lake front row owned by the college takes in 150 feet. The camp property is all fenced in, and a caretaker lives on it.

The browsing room, the first of its kind in the south, was begun by the class of 1929, which donated $500 towar its start in 1930. Miss Louise Richardson, librarian, applied to the Carnegie Library corporation for funds they were offering to college libraries. The corporation sent out a representative who investigated the suggested location in the library and the operation of the library. A few months later the library received a gift of $3000 from the Carnegie association with the offer of an additional twenty-five per cent discount if the books were purchased through the corporation. In this way the library secured $7000 more books than they would have otherwise. The college then built the book shelves in the room to match the woodwork. The class of 1932 gave $500 for additional furniture for the room.

The class of 1926 later voted to give the $450 they had left over in their class fund toward the purchasing of more books for the room, while the College Government association of 1930 gave $200 for books to the Browsing room fund.

Before any books were ordered for the Browsing room the students were called upon to hand in the names of selections they would like to see there. Hardly any of these selections were turned down by the library committee of nine which selected the books ordered for the room. This committee, of which Dr. Conradi and three members of the library staff were members, met on the average of every six weeks over a period of two years to discuss and select books for the Browsing room. Every book selected was with the unanimous approval of the committee. The books in the Browsing room include books on poetry, essays, biography, travel, art, popular history, science, and fiction. They each represent the best edition obtainable as to illustrations, paper, and binding.

At present the library is in the process of making a catalog of the books in the Browsing room, mimeographed copies of which will be available to the students as soon as they are ready.

With the addition of the FERA work to the college the library has been able to keep the Browsing room open part of each day in the week. Readings aloud by members of the faculty and students are held at intervals throughout the year.

The other colleges in the South having similar rooms include Randolph-Macon Woman's college, Duke university, and Emory.

Everything in the Browsing room has come as a gift to the room, and Miss Richardson believes that the students are responsible for the room.

High Academic Standard Kept Through Years

(Continued from Page Three)

students for a variety of occupations. Sixty per cent of the graduates of this school become home economics teachers, while fifteen per cent accept positions as dietitians and technicians in hospitals and other state institutions of Florida. Sixteen out of the thirty-nine state and county home demonstration agents are graduates of this college, while many others obtained jobs as social welfare workers, as home economists both with public and private welfare agencies and with business concerns. The great percentage of students finally accept the position of home-maker, for which their home economics training is preparation.

SCHOOL OF MUSIC

In a like manner, the School of Music serves two groups of students, those who take music as a cultural subject, and those who prepare for the professional field. The latter is divided into three categories, namely, major in piano, organ, voice, violin or cello, major in composition, and supervisor of public school music. Students enrolled in other schools of the college may take music as electives for its cultural value, although a few students meet requirements for a certificate in the respective major.

In addition to individual instruction, students have numerous opportunities for ensemble training. The college orchestra, composed of about fifty instrumentalists, gives a series of concerts each season, while the Little theater orchestra, a smaller group, contributes at dramatic plays and other functions. The College Glee club, of about fifty carefully selected voices, gives programs throughout the year, augmented frequently by the college chorus.

The music faculty contributes a series of recitals each year open to the student body and public without charge. Student recitals are also given by candidates for certificates in music and for the B. M. degree.

"But the college has for its primary objective not to make secretaries, accountants, doctors, lawyers, women of business, teachers, or even homemakers," according to Dr. Dodd. "The objective is, and should be, to present to society a superior product in its graduates, persons of a distinctly high tone and of high quality, who are able to serve the society of which they become a part in their chosen capacity. After all, to produce persons of better quality is the only justification of any kind of education. It is especially important as the objective of education in a college for women."

Seven Finish At Semester

Six Others Receive Two-Year Certificates At Mid-Term

According to the registrar's office there were thirteen candidates for graduation at the mid-term this year. Of this number, seven received four-year diplomas and six received two-year licentiate of instruction certificates. No commencement exercises were held, but the four-year graduates will probably return to take part in the graduation activities at the end of the year.

The graduates include, Mildred Elene Williams, bachelor of arts in the college of arts and sciences; Lily Martino Friscia, Mary Ella [illegible]ck, and Nell Elizabeth Price, bachelor of arts in the school of education; Mary Barco and Justine Martha Rutledge, bachelor of science in the school of home economics; Dorothy Bagley, two-year diploma for junior high school; and Frances Lorraine Allred, Audrey Blanche Cay[illegible] Louise Frisco, Marian Emma McDonald Mills and Dorothy Whittington, two-year diploma for primary grades. Mrs. Elma W Patronis, who had received her bachelor of science degree in education previously and was taking post graduate work here, returned to her teaching duties at Caroline Brevard school.

Mildred Elene Williams is now pursuing graduate work at Duke university. Nell Elizabeth Price has been placed as a first grade teacher in Haines City, Florida Mary Barco has been placed teaching home economics in Haines City, Florida, and Justine Martha Rutledge has been placed Martha Rutledge is teaching home economics in Sarasota, Florida.

Completion of Education Building Marks Thirty Years of Construction

(Continued from preceding page) old building. This completed the huge dining hall, which is considered one of the most attractive buildings on campus. The three entrances were connected with the dormitories by closed arcades. In 1927, the home economics practice house was finished. This house was especially designed for the purpose of giving actual training in housekeeping to advanced students in home economics, and is especially equipped for that purpose.

In 1929, the new library, one of the most imposing buildings on campus, was opened for use. This brick building, with a frontage of 31 feet, was constructed on the same architectural style as the other buildings on campus, and attractively decorated both exteriorally and interiorally. Besides the rooms for general library use, there were a number of reading rooms, lecture rooms, and rooms equipped for seminar use in the building.

Building in the last five years has continued the rapid expansion. The heating plant was established in 1930 back of the gymnasium in a $132,162.14 building of its own. The plant now makes it possible to furnish hot water end heat not only to all the dormitories at all hours of the day and night but supplies the heat and hot water to the laundries and other buildings on the campus as well.

In 1932, a new wing was added to the History building and during the same year, at a cost of $4,000, the attic of the demonstration school was finished. This was to supply additional classrooms needed when the Education building was condemned. In 1932, also, the college kitchen was remodeled and an addition built. Approximately $40,000 was spent in making the kitchen the most modern in the south, if not in the entire United States.

In 1930 the college laundry was established in the rear basement room of the gymnasium. At first it did only the laundering for the dining room and the gymnasium but after the installation of more equipment in 1933 it was able to take care of all student work as well as the laundering for the dining room, the infirmary, and the gymnasium. Here, too, the equipment is of the best available, and the fees charged for the work are set at the minimum, flat work being done free of charge. Students who so desire may do their own work in the student laundry in Reynolds hall.

Get That
SIZ-L HOT
WESTERN STEAK
at the Tallahassee
Cafe

BASKETBALL TEAM 1905

Social Sorority Group Includes Eighteen National Affiliations

Pan-Hellenic Association Governs Activities Of Chapters

The present system of eighteen social sororities was installed on this campus in 1904 when a group of girls with the aid of the Kappa Alpha fraternity applied for and received a charter for the Kappa Delta national sorority.

The chapter became Kappa Alpha chapter of the Kappa Delta sorority being named in honor of the fraternity that had helped secure its charter. All of the business and social activities of the sorority were carried on in one of the tower rooms in Bryan Hall. Now the sorority owns it house on Copeland street and has thirty-six active members and thirty-three pledges.

In 1903 Beta Rho, a local organization of several years' existence, was recognized by the national group known as Chi Omega. It became the Gamma chapter of Chi Omega and occupied the other tower of Bryan Hall. This sorority now owns a chapter house on West Jefferson street and has twenty-one active and thirty-eight pledges. It is the twenty-fifth chapter of the seventy-six Chi Omega chapters in the country.

In the same year a group colonized and sent in a petition to Alpha Delta Phi. Iota chapter was granted a charter some time later. Since that time the sorority has changed its name to Alpha Delta Pi, due to the fact that there is also a fraternity by the name first used. This group occupied the rooms in the basement of Broward hall that are now used as sewing and pressing rooms. Alpha Delta Pi sorority now has sixteen active members and thirty-nine pledges and owns a chapter house on Jefferson street.

In 1907 Eta chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi was granted a charter but since 1990 there had been a decline in the ranks of this sorority due to the loss of the mother chapter at St. Mary's college. The tendency of the chapters in "A" colleges turned to absorption rather than extension, so the local chapter was taken in by Delta Delta Delta in 1916 At this time Alpha Eta chapter of Tri Delta was established. The Tri Deltas own their sorority house on Park street and have, at present, twenty-two actives and twenty-two pledges.

In 1920 three charters were granted to organizations on the campus. A group was recognized by Sigma Sigma Sigma which became the fifth sorority here. It is an educational organization and there are twenty active chapters. This sorority rents a house on Jefferson St., and has eight actives and three pledges.

The Omega club aas given a charter by Sigma Kappa and became the Omega chapter of Sigma Kappa. The sorority now owns a home on Park avenue and has eighteen members and twenty pledges. It is the twenty-second of thirty eight chapters.

Alpha Omega, also a local organization, was granted a chapter by Phi Delta Phi. This sorority now has sixteen active members and thirty-six pledges and owns the chapter house on College avenue. It is the sixty-fifth of seventy-one active chapters.

Alpha Nu, a local club organized in 1923, received a charter from Delta Zeta several months after issuing its petition. It is the Alpha Sigma chapter. The Delta Zetas now are renting a house on College Ave., and have thirteen members and eight pledges.

Alpha Theta, recognized by the local pan-hellenic in 1922, received recognition from Kappa Alpha Theta in 1923. This group now consists of twenty active members and nineteen pledges. They rent a house on College Avenue.

Phi Epsilon, a local group, received a charter from Zeta Tau Alpha in 1924. It was given the chapter name of Zeta Gamma and is the forty-fifth of forty-eight active chapters. The sorority now rents a house on College Avenue and has eight active members an twelve pledges.

In 1925 charters were granted to four sororities: Alpha Gamma Delta, which now has nineteen members and twenty-four pledges and owns its chapter house; Theta Upsilon, which rents the chapter house and has eight actives and three pledges; Phi Kappa Sigma, now extinct on this campus, and Delta Phi Epsilon, national Jewish sorority which bought its chapter house and has ten actives and seven pledges.

Omicron Pi, a local established in 1926, received a charter from Alpha Omicron Pi in 1928. It is known as the Alpha Pi chapter. This chapter is now buying their chapter house and has seventeen members and ten pledges.

Phi Mu, which now rents a house on Jefferson St., and has eighteen actives and fourteen pledges, was organized from a local group in 1929 along with two other sororities, Alpha Xi Delta and Alpha Chi Omega.

Alpha Xi Delta has sixteen actives and five pledges. This group rents its house on south Copeland street.

Alpha Chi Omega, which was established from a local, Delta Phi, and now owns a house on Park street, has twenty-five members and ten pledges.

The sororities are governed by the local Pan-Hellenic association which is composed of two representatives from each of the social sororities on the campus. Its primary purpose is to better fraternal conditions and to advance co-operation among the groups.

Speech Students To Present Play

"As Husbands Go" to Be Given in February By Department

"As Husbands Go," a play by Rachel Caruthers, is to be presented by the speech department on February 22 and 23, according to Miss Kemper Moore, director of the play. It is being sponsored by the speech department and the Alumnae association, and rehearsals for it are already underway.

The cast, made up of college students of the speech department and several Tallahassee men who will portrey the male roles, is Lucile, Helen Hammond; Ronald, Ralph Stone; Emmie, Emilie Johnson; Hippie, Ben Meginnis; Charles, Kenneth Williams; Wilbru, Jimmie Richards; Christine, Sara Hosea; Peggie, Jimmie Lewis; Jake, Joe Hall; Katie, Betty Peck.

The following girls of the speech department are heads of the production committees: stage manager, Lois Hazel; assistant stage manager, Virginia Key; properties, Rosalie Powell; assistant properties, Betty Sweet Smith; business manager, Betty Boggs; house committee, Ruth Moc and Ella Markle Gay; publicity, Wilma Mays, Mary Lou Moore, and Catherine McGarry.

Cooperative Course Is Slated for Curriculum Experiment Next Year

"Introduction to Contemporary Civilization," the first cooperative course to be included in the currirulum at Florida State, will be placed experimentally on the program for 1935-1936, according to a decision of the faculty senate at a meeting last week.

This course is designed as an introductory course to the social studies. It will replace Economics 101, Sociology 191, and Geography 110, and will be taught by the professors formerly teaching those courses.

This is all that was done regarding the curricuum at the meeting last week, according to Dr. Kathryn Abbey, chairman of the curriculum committee, although there is the possibility that further progress in revision may be made in the future.

Co-eds Would Rather Flunk Than Go Crazy

Grandmother May Blush At Many of Modern Girl's Ideas

The Florida State girl considers insanity worse than "flunking," worries more about marriage than she does about food and is more interested in kissing than in athletics, according to a personality test given recently in a psychology class.

And wouldn't it bring the pink to grandmother's cheeks to find that her grandaughter is more concerned with the depression then sin, with parties than morals, with lies than her soul, and with weakness than religion or death. But cheer up, grandmother. By her own admission the college girl worries more about blushing than about guns! And doesn't it reassure you to know that she likes good boys better than handsome or rich boys? Perhaps she isn't so very different from what you were in your youth after all.

Statistics from the test show thet she like babies better than sailors and she prefers waltses to jazz. She also likes the country better than the city and reading better than dancing. But don't get your hopes too high, grandmother. Your modern granddaughter admits a preference for ragtime to hymns, Tarzan to Galahad, churches to prayer, traveling to college and sleeping to teaching.

Rats Escape to View World at Closet Bottom

Keepers Resort to Straws To Entice Them From Hiding Place

Probably the most babied creatures on the campus are the albino rats living in well equipped cages on the basement floor of the Science building. Rats live but to die, so why not make their brief stay on this earth a happy one, argue their keepers who became quite fond of their little charges.

One frisky little fellow received more than his share of attention when he decided to see the world by viewing the bottom of a huge closet in the corner of the room. In vain, the frantic keepers, fearful lest the rat find the forbidden vitamen A lying on the floor, pleaded, threatened, and finally sent another rat into the closet hoping thet he would be diplomatic enough to persuade his brother to return to captivity.

Three hours passed, to the increasing dismay of the keepers who passed the time away sticking broomstraws through cracks with which the rats, like kittens, amused themselves. The keepers thought seriously of getting someone to play a violin, for authorities on rats say that rats will even stop eating in order to hear the beloved music of a violin. One rat finally allowed himself to be coaxed through the crack with the aid of a broomstraw, and then there was only one little rat left. There is a limit even to the patience of the keepers, who went home to retire only to dream of rats.

The next morning the strength of two janitors was utilized in lifting the closet to seize the tiny culprit, quite wearied with seeing so much of the world and only too glad to be returned to his comrades to tell them of his escapade.

Freshmen Think Campus Pleasant

Commend Friendly Spirit Of Upperclassmen And Advisors

Hanging around Jennie Murphree and assuming a take-you-for-a-freshman air is one of the best ways to become truly acquainted with freshmen and find out their opinions of life on F. S. C. W's campus. The first thing to pop into Laura Belle Hopkins' mind when asked what she liked best on campus was "our freshmen advisors." Most freshmen seem to be equally fond of their floor advisors and of their social directors.

Marjorie Raulerson thinks thet F. S. C. W. girls are the friendliest she has met anywhere.

Louise Rodgers is most grateful for the privilege of operating a radio in her room. She also thinks the campus one of the prettiest she has ever seen. And Louise has traveled a lot.

Though Kasimir Mumby also appreciates a large, beautiful campus, she finds it difficult to read French after racing from the gym to the top floor of the administration building. June Meserve suggests that both the administration building and gymnasium be placed in the center of campus.

And while these are being transplanted, La Nelia Thames would have all buildings equipped with elevators. Never has she seen so many steps to fall up and down. Three inch carpets of velvet might protect the knees until the elevators are ready.

Steps don't mean a thing to Martha Wright, but she is sure the Friday night dances at the gym will keep her feet in shape.

Someone in warning Mary Elizabeth Ramsey against the hardships to be endured in college, informed her that campus food is always terrible. Naturally, Mary Elizabeth was delightfully surprised to find that we have good meals here. She hasn't a complaint to make.

At least one other freshman was happy to have a wrong impression corrected. Someone with a dangerous sense of humor said, "and every night they make you stay in your room from last light flash at 10:35 until morning." Well, this newcomer made extra space in the bottom of her trunk and came to college prepared.

Sport Slants

Tournament To Begin Thursday

Theta and Methodist Basketball Teams Start Contests

The intramural basketball tournament will begin Thursday morning at 11:39 o'clock with the Methodists students playing the Kappa Alpha Thetae and the Chi Omegas playing Jennie Murphree hall. The tournament is sponsored by the Women's Athletic association.

Points won by the teams in the tournament will be averaged in for the precentage points toward the trophy award which is given each year to the organization winning the greatest number of points in intramural sport activities. Last year the cup was won by Jennie Murphree hall.

The teams are requested to bring their own scorekeeper and timekeeper, and appear promptly, as failure to appear at the appointed time within fifteen minutes constitutes a default. Two division basketball will be played this year and the referees will be selected from the coaching class which will take the theory examination for the National Women's Basketball official rating Monday night.

The basketball games have been so arranged that every organization on campus will be able to compete. Teams that have entered the tournament are: Methodist students, Kappa Alpha Theta, Chi Omega, Jennie Murphree hall, Catholic Newmans, Alpha Omicron Pi, Delta Delta Delta, Alpha Chi Omega, Kappa Delta, Alpha Xi Delta, Gilchrist hall, Bryan hall, Presbyterian students, Alpha Gamma Delta, Beta Phi Alpha, and Town girls.

On The Spot With Sports

The theory examination for the National Women's Basketball official rating will be held in the large classroom at the gymnasium Monday evening, February 4, at 7:39. All those interested are asked to make application to Miss Elizabeth Autrey immediately.

Practice for the telegraphic swimming meet began last week. It is not too late for those who wish to enter it to start practice. The only requirements are a C scholastic average and A health.

Now that exams are over there is plenty of time to go out for hockey and soccer. If the Odds and Evens don't show a little more spirit there will be no Odd-Even clash this year in these two sports. Florida State College may be privileged to entertain the hockey team from the women's college at Montevallo, Alabama, but from present indications it will take all the Odds and all the Evens in both sports to make up a team to play the Alabama girls.

Classes in horseback riding will be continued this semester. Those who wish to take it may sign up on the bulletin board or see Marie Taylor.

Basketball intramurals start Thursday morning and if the clashes run true to form there are going to be quite a few exciting games which will be worth seeing. The teams may not be as well groomed as the Odd and Even teams but they have the same fight and spirit.

Don't forget to go out for hockey and soccer.

Local Fans Enthusiastically Receive Basketball Change

Former Players See New Game At Annual Homecoming

Visiting alumnae, famous in past years for their feats upon the basketball courts, and present stars in the game agree that the new two-court basketball game is much faster and more interesting than the old three-court type. Those who saw the new type of basketball played for the first time at the Odd-Even game Thanksgiving proclaimed it the most fascinating they had ever witnessed.

The chief difference between the new two-court basketball and the old three-court is the division of the court as is indicated by the tities given each game. In the two-court game there are three forwards and three guards in each side of the court. The forwards on each team alternate in receiving the center throw-in. In some schools, however, the center-jump is still being used. The new court division does away with center players thus leaving the additional territory to be covered by the three forwards and three guards in each of the two courts.

Eva Bird, who was president of the Athletic association last year, said that she liked the new game much better than the old because it gives the teams a better chance to show cooperation in their passes. She is not in favor of the center throw-in, however, for she believes the center-jump is the most exciting part of the game in many cases. Eva said that the one fault she had to find with the way the teams played Thanksgiving was their continual use of long shots which for the most part are not effective in scoring.

Edna Beatty, a 1934 graduate prominent in athletic activities, believe that there was too much bunching in the game as played here, but she thinks two-court basketball will prove to be a better game than the three-court type when the teams become accustomed to playing it.

Terry Oll, forward on the Even team last year, also likes the new game. She is sorry the game was not introduced while she was attending school.

Miss Katherine Montgomery, director of physical education, is very much in favor of the new type of game. In her opinion it is a faster and more interesting game. Miss Montgomery said it gives each team a chance to develop passes and trick formations that will inevitably make campus basketball more a test of team work than a haphazard trial-and error game as the old three-court game had tended to become.

Betty Bailey, president of the athletic association also likes the new game. Other players on the team agree that the new game is faster and more interesting to play.

Play-Nite to Have Music by Orchestra

As a special feature of the Play Nite to be held this evening in the gymnasium from 8:00 to 10:30 o'clock, the TNT orchestra will play the entire time. During intermission Miss Mildred Stewart's folk dancing class will give an exhibition, Edna Yacabian will sing, and Sara Hosea will give a recitation.

Choose Your Gifts and Greeting Cards
from
THE GIFT SHOP
North Monroe

University Will Have New System

Curriculum Will Do Away With Credit Hours And Grades

Gainesville, Fla., Jan. 30—(By Associated Collegiate Press)—By the time that the 1935-1936 school year is ready to open, the University of Florida's curriculum will have had a complete reorganization.

Under the direction of a special committee headed by Walter J. Matherly, dean of the college of business administration here, the work of the reorganization of the first two year's work at the Alligator school is progressing rapidly.

The new plan involves the formation of a new school to be known as "The College of the University of Florida," through which all students will pass before admission into the colleges and professional schools of the Upper Division, or final two year's of university work.

This preparatory curriculum will consist of a uniform two-year arrangement of studies designed to broaden the base of the students' education much more extensively than is possible at present.

One of the attendant developments of the new arrangement will be the complete separation of the Lower Division from the Upper Division. Progress is to be measured in terms of abilities, understandings, appreciations, and skills, instead of courses passed and credit hours accumulated.

Comprehensive examinations will be conducted under the direction of a special board, entirely apart from the teaching staff. For these students who do not desire to take up the professional work in any of the colleges of the Upper Division, a certificate of graduation will be issued upon termination of their studies.

A special program of vocational guidance and information will be instituted. The primary purpose of the reorganized Lower Division is to develop the abilities of the student. The eight major objectives of the new plan, as set forth in the copy of preliminary plans conceived by the committee for reorganization of the university curriculum, are listed as follows: to acquire and maintain a maximum degree of physical and mental efficiency; to use effectively the tools of thought and speech; to share fully in the changing duties and responsibilities of citizenship; to understand the scientific method and to become familiar with the relationships among, and the contributions of, the various sciences; to appreciate the best in religious and philosophical thought; to enjoy literature and the other arts and to grow in appreciation of aesthetic values; to choose wisely an occupation or a profession; and to make intelligent use of leisure time.

SIX LETTERS OF ALPHABET MAKE OR BREAK WORLD

Reactions to Grades Are Valuable Phenomena In Psychology

Pro list will be out this week. Worlds will be conquered and empires will crumble once again when probation list and grade reports come out.

The first girl who found her grades in her mail box last quarter and the first who spread the news that the pro list was out in Bryan hall, were the leaders of the day. The rush to the post office by all the dormitory girls, a similar stampede to the book-store by all the off campus dwellers, and the mob in every dormitory around the dreaded pro lists, left the rest of the campus practically deserted and any casual passerby might well have thought that the institution had hibernated for the day.

How the world had changed for some people since they sleepily got out of bed that same morning! They had either blithely slept away most of the time, or been abroad bright and early to watch the class volley ball and basket ball games. The announcement came when the all-important studies had been forgotten for the moment by most of the campus.

Then followed a half hour during which the psychologist of human behavior would have been in his element. He could have studied in every degree the varying expressions of ambition, confidence, hope, anxiety, fear, and dread as the individual, after a first glance at that fateful grade sheet, reacted temperamentally to what was there printed. Pride, complacency, joy, disbelief, despondency, shame, resentment, and anger were expressed in a myriad different ways on as many faces. General uproar continued for the remainder of the day, and food was neglected to discuss "A's" and "F's".

And campus history will soon again be repititiously engaged. Six simple letters of the alphabet will make and break our little world.

Male Dancers Will Perform

Shawn and Ensemble Do Interpretive Work Here Friday

Ted Shawn and his ensemble, internationally known interpretative dancers, will present a program Friday night, February eighth, in the college auditorium at 8:15. The entire ensemble is composed of men dancers and is the realization of Shawn's ambition to prove that the dance is an art for men even more, pehraps, than for women. He maintains that it requires every quality that any sport has, and that every sport has in it the same grace and poise as a dance.

The outstanding work along this line that Mr Shawn has done is a course conducted last fall in Springfield college, one of the foremost schools of physical education in the country. Here the most athletic minded student body in the country studied dancing under him with the same seriousness and enthusiasm as it studied football.

The first group of dances on the program will be primitive rythms. These rythms are not actual native dances but are Mr. Shawn's own creations on native themes. The second group is made up of labor dances; labor of the fields, labor of the forests, labor of the sea, and mechanised labor. The third group is called the Hound of Heaven and is inspired by the great mystic poem of the same name by Francis Thompson. The fourth group includes play motifs and folk themes, three of which will be American folk themes. The last group includes music dances and are done to the music of Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms.

The Toronto "Saturday Night" said of the ensemble after a performance there: "A remarkable performance—a miracle of art. The young men of the ensemble were as well proportioned as a group of Greek heroes, and admirable exponents of Shawn's doctrine, frankly stated, that the dance is fundamentally a masculine art. Shawn himself would be worth going to see if he did nothing more than walk across the stage. He is the very symbol in itself of the beauty of the free moving healthy human body with poetry contained in every movement of it."

Members of Ted Shawn's company appearing here this year are: Barton Mumaw, Frank Overlees, Wilbur McCormack, Donnie Landers, Fred Hearn, Foster Fitzsimons, William Howell, Ned Coupland. Jess Meeker will accompany them at the piano.

Social Workers to Meet

The Florida State Conference of Social Workers will be held in Miami March 17-20. Mrs. Emmeth Cochran of Tallahassee is president. About 300 persons are expected to attend.

TEA FOR VISITORS

On Friday afternoon Mrs. J. G. Kellum and Mrs. H. D. Mendenhall will entertain at tea in compliment to several charming visitors in the city.

The honor guests are Mrs. Clara Moren of Minneapolis, Minn., Miss Mollie Olsen of Fargo, N. D., mother and aunt of Mrs. H. F. Richards; Mrs. C. H. Wiese of Pittsburgh, Pa., and Charleston, S. C., who is the guest of her niece, Mrs. U. S. Deahl; and Mrs. Benjamin Good of Lancaster, Pa., who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Guy L. Diffenbaugh.

Mabry Sumner and Marjorie Moore are spending the week-end in Tampa where they will attend the South Florida Fair. They will also witness the annual Gasparilla invasion and coronation of his queen.

THE DUTCH KITCHEN
Bridge Parties or Afternoon Tea
Daily from 3:00 to 6:00
Park Avenue Entrance

The Social Week

Informal Opening Is Held For New Gilchrist Lounge

The joint committee on redocoration of lounges and the social committee were at home to students of Gilchrist hall from 4:30 to 6:30 yesterday afternoon in the Gilchrist lounge which is being reopened after redecoration.

The joint committee has hoped that through the improvements which have been made in the lounge, that the lounge will prove to be a popular place of the students during their leisure hours. Smoking, reading, and conversing with friends may be enjoyed in the lounge. The color scheme which has been emphasized is rust and tan, brown and yellow with modern chromium furniture.

The members of the lounge committee who were in charge of this work are Mrs. Beatrice Williams, Miss Henrietta Sivyer, Mrs. Virginia Sloan, Mr. H. D. Mendenhall, Miss Anna Tracy, Margaret Anderson, and Mary Mooty.

The above committee worked jointly with the college social committee which has for its members Elizabeth Stout, Sue Whitaker, Anne Lee Dunn, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Virginia Tucker, Edith Webb, Martha Makemson, Douglas Dabney, Lucy Fulghum, Jean amner, Sara Krentzman, Martha Whitaker, chairman, and Miss Edith West, faculty advisor. Miss Olivia Dorman, dean of students, has also contributed to this project.

The members of the committees were the hostesses and visited and conversed with the students of Gilchrist as they called to inspect the lounge. Coffee was served with Mrs. Virginia Sloan pouring.

Pi Beta Phi Sorority To Honor National Inspector Today

The members and pledges of the Pi Beta Phi sorority will entertain this afternoon from four to six o'clock at the sorority house on College avenue with a tea in honor of their national inspector, Mrs. Nita Hill Stark of Illinois, who is visiting the local chapter.

The house will be decorated informally for the occasion, and as friends, patronesses and rushees, of the sorority call to meet the honoree, they will be served tea and iced cakes by the hostesses.

Hostesses will be Betty Boggs, Jean Clark, Marguerite Groover, Evelyn Haynie, Marjorie Helvenston, Helen Kibler, Frances Lurvey, Mary Irene McKay, Frances Morrow, Frances Neeld, Ethel Fair Pillans, Charlotte Stevens, Mary Virginia Warren, Ruth Connor, Anne Durr, Marian Heper.

Betty Parker, Edwina Wakefield, Phil Asher, Dorothy Bellamy, Betty Chitty, Betty Clark, Laura Combs, Willie Mae Crosby, Anita Easton, Rose Evans, Eloise Frink, Elizabeth Gardner, Celia Gary, Sarah Graham, Patsy Johnson, Florence Kerr, Mary Kinser.

Mildred Long, Virginia Laughlin, Eunice Lawrence, Juanita McElhannon, Kasimer Mumby, Dorothy Ozburn, Shirley Pemberton, Mary E. Ramsey, Marian Alice Rodgers, Katherine Rogers, Ethel Mae Shaffer, Mary Lyle Shipley, Katherine Todd, Jean Treadwell, Marjorie Tumlin, Bobbie Wells, Virginia White, Ellen Wiggins, Genevieve Wilkins, Martha Lee Wilkinson, and Lois Adkins.

Tau Gamma Sigma Will Honor New Pledges

Members of Tau Gamma Sigma will entertain the new sprinklees at a dinner in the college dining room tonight. Decorations will consist of spring flowers and plumbing fixtures, and places will be designated by placecards originated by Edna Hoffman.

Members of Tau Gamma Sigma who will be hostesses are Betty Smith, Mildred Boss, Louise Robertson, Elaine Klepper, Edna Hoffman, and Edith Patterson. Sprinklees include Gertrude Kuhn, Barbara Garfunkel, Nedra McNamara, and Melvyne Wahnish.

◆

Eileen Masters is spending the week-end in Auburn, Alabama, where she attending the Auburn house parties.

If You Want Better Cleaning, Dyeing or Alterations
Send Your Work to the Central Cleaners
"Your Patronage is Our Pleasure"

COLLEGE CALENDAR

February 1 to February 9

Friday

4:00 p.m. Pi Beta Phi tea
4:00 p.m. Delta Zeta tea
8:00 p.m. Play Nite

Saturday

Informal dancing in Gilchrist parlors during the afternoon and evening.

Sunday

11:00 a.m. Church services
5:00 p.m. Alpha Xi Delta tea
5:00 p.m. Theta Upsilon tea
7:15 p.m. Y. W. C. A. Vespers

Monday

8:00 p.m. Beta Pi Theta meeting
9:00 p.m. Sorority meetings

Tuesday

11:30 a.m. Convocation, "At F. S. C. W. Yesterday and Today"
7:30 p.m. Home Economics club meeting.

Wednesday

8.15 p.m. "The New Deal at the Minute." Dr. William Trufant Foster

Thursday

11:30 a.m. Day students meeting
8:15 p.m. Music recital, piano normal students, music annex

Friday

8:15 p.m. Artist Series, Ted Shawn Dancers

Saturday

8:15 p.m. Emory Glee club concert.

Delta Zeta Sorority Plans Tea This Afternoon

The members and pledges of the Delta Zeta sorority will be hostesses at an informal tea this afternoon at the sorority house on College avenue.

Spring flowers will form greater part of the house decorations. The refreshments will also be in keeping with the informal motif of the occasion.

Among the mmebers and pledges who will be hostesses to the faculty members and students who have been invited to call are: Muriel Baker, Jean Boyd, Dorothy Edwards, Adelaide Ireland, Avaline Lancaster, Ruth Marvin, LaLuce Planck, Rosalie Powell, Marian Brantley, Clara Bridges, Mary Frances Burford, Margaret Pinkoson, Katherine Smith, Mary Smith, Edith Adkison, Esther Griffing, Mary Glenn Coarsey, Kathleen Harris, Betty Herrin, Jean Jackson, and Marjoris Jones.

Sorority Will Give Informal Tea For Faculty Members

The members and pledges of the Alpha Xi Delta sorority will be hostesses at an informal tea Sunday afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock at the sorority house on Copeland street for members of the faculty.

The house decorations will emphasize the informal motif of the tea and will consist mainly of spring flowers. During the hour as the faculty members call to visit with the hostesses refreshments of tea, chocolate cookies, and nuts will be served.

Among the members and pledges who will be hostesses are: Betty Bailey, Jean Crago, Carlota Cubillas, Elizabeth Filer, Helenmary Fritsch, Barbara Garfunkel, Jessie Mead, Juanita Pace, Ruth Rainbolt, Althea Smith, Elizabeth Stout, Monica Wiley, Martha Baker, Winona Ireland, Charlotte Kinzie, Mildred Lovell, Mary McCunagle, Clotilde O'Rourke, Mary Pollard, Marian Weeks, and Dorothy Hoffman.

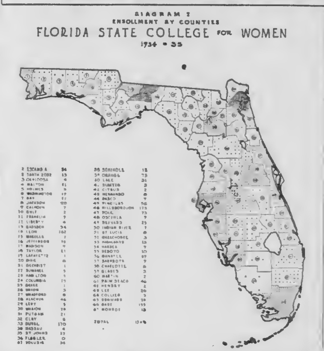
Liddell Entertains Freshmen at Tea

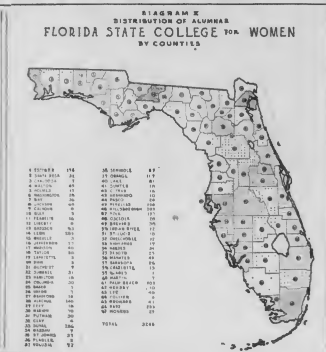
Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, professor of philosophy, entertained a number of her freshman students with an informal tea Wednesday afternoon in Reynolds hall parlors.

The occasion served as an informal get-together and the time was spent in visiting. Refreshments in keeping with the informal motif were served to the guests by members of the social committee who assisted Dr. Liddell as hostesses.

The freshmen who were invited to call during the tea were Helen Daniel, Ruth Follin, Dorothy Atkinson, Lorena Combs, Dorothy Watson, Janice Farwell, Marie Fergueson, Martha Evans, Rita Gilleylen, Evelyn Parrish, Ruth Orlin, Valdez Wadsworth, Margaret Blount, Jane Kirkeby, Jean Blount, Winnette Fountain, Jimmy Malone, Helen Peck, and Mary Katherine Scott.

Registrar Doyle's Diagram Showing Distribution of Enrollment and Alumnae





Dorman Points Out Three Gains

Convocation Talk Totals Achievements Of Semester

Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, dean of students, pointed out in an address to the student body at convocation this week three achievements of Florida State College for Women during the first semester of the college year. These were an increased faculty-student relationship, a more democratic and representative student government, and an improved social life.

The faculty and students have cooperated with each other in both work, as indicated by joint committees formed this year on convocation programs and readministration of the student activity fee, and in play, as illustrated by the faculty night dinners in the student dining room and by the various teas given by teachers for their students, especially for freshmen. Greater democracy of student government has been shown by the increasing participation in senate meetings, more liberal regulations concerning smoking and light cuts, and increasing interest of students in their government. Social activities have been iocreased and varied and their dates fixed enough in advance that their plans may be perfected. More attention has been given to physical surroundings in improving parlors and recreation rooms.

"This," said Dr. Dorman, "is only the beginning of what must be done. We must have fuller participation in student government, attention and behaviour at student body meetings, and more expressed interest in student government through constructive criticism." She listed as the four ways in which we can improve our student activity: a stabilizatioo or simplifying of life; an increased leisure time, a more general participation in activites, and improved social behaviour.

Theta Upsilon Will Have Informal Tea Sunday Afternoon

The Theta Upsilon house will furnish the setting for an informal tea Sunday afternoon at five o'clock.

The house decorations will be in keeping with the occasion and will consist of bouquets of spring flowers. Refreshments will be served during the afternoon.

The members and pledges who will serve as hostesses at the tea are: Marcia Buchanan, Helen Evans, Johnny Hardee, Virginia Tucker, Anne Donnell, Margaret Neff, Nelta Wright, and Gertrude Tomkies.

◆

Christine Griffin, Annette Harris, Clara Birdsall, Catherine Wilheim and Eleanor Fulford, spent last week-end in Madison.

Week-End Specials
Chocolate Pie . . . 5c
Ginger Ale and Ice Cream . . . 5c
Pecan Pie with Whipped Cream . . . 10c
WATCH OUR BULLETIN BOARD FOR SPECIALS
The
Three Torches

KAPPA ALPHA THETA FOUNDER'S DAY OBSERVED BY BANQUET AT FLORIDAN

The members and pledges of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority were guests last Tuesday evening at a banquet given at the Floridan hotel in honor of founder's day. The sorority was founded by Betty Locke Hamilton at DePauw university in Indiana.

The table decorations and place cards featured the aviation theme of the banquet which was carried out in the colors of black and gold. The place cards had a round black background across which had been placed a gold propeller. The color of the floral center pieces was emphasized by the candlelight of the black and gold candles.

Betty Kimball, president of the local chapter, served as toastmistress for the evening. Speeches in keeping with the occasion were given by Sally Cornell, Dr. Jennie Tilt, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Miss Edna Mae McIntosh, Nedra McNamara, Josephine Skeels, Virginia Holt, and Barbara Sandquist. Later in the evening a skit was presented by the following pledges: Iris Machen, Marjorie Horton, Patty Hamilton, Barbara Sandquist, Ann Chichester, Helen Donn, Jean Harris, Rachel Sherman, and Nedra McNamara. All the guests present joined in the singing of Theta songs which rounded out the program.

Personal Mention

Mertha Carlton, Anna Lee Dunn, and Adeline Tillman were among the students who spent last week-end in Tampa.

◆

Peggy McMichael is leaving today for Atlanta to visit friends.

◆

Edith Perkins and Josephine King are going to Jacksonville to spend the week-end.

◆

Mrs. Nita Hill Stark, national inspector of the Phi Beta Phi sorority, is visiting the local chapter this week-end. Mrs. Stark will be the honoree at a number of informal social functions.

◆

Martha Whitaker, Grace Whitaker, Dorothy Leach, Edith Toffaletti, Katherine Kyle, Jean Lykes, Pauline Spencer, Jean Gilmer, Mary Gannon, and Marjorie DeWitt will be among the students visiting in Tampa this week-end. While there the girls will attend the annual Gasparilla Carnival which is given in connection with the South Florida Fair now open.

◆

Flynn Moore, Betty Manning and Virginia Peyton are leaving this afternoon for Jacksonville where they will spend the week-end. The girls will attend the dance which will feature music by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra.

The FRENCH SHOP
presents
New Spring
Oxfords
and Ghillies
In Whites and Brown and White.
Widths: AAA to B.
Sizes 3-8.
"A FIT FOR EVERY FOOT"

Professors Find Boners In Grading Exam Papers

When grading the semester examination papers professors found the usual number of boners in the students answers. A few typical ones are:

Ques. Name the two arches in the foot.

Ans. Longitude and latitude.

Ques. What is another name for sleeping sickness?

Ans. Peristalsis.

Ques. Define Anemia.

Ans. Anemia is two little red corpuscles in the blood.

Ques. What was Priestly's contribution to chemistry?

Ans. He gave us oxygen in 1774. (The teacher would like to know what the people who lived before 1774 used in place of oxygen.)

Ques. What is the method of preparing a diamond artificially?

Ans. Porus iron is heated and when cooled suddenly the bubbles of air in the iron turn to diamonds.

Step With Style
in
New Spring
Footwear
from
Turner's
"YOUR STORE"
Navies
White
Greys
Brown and White
Black and White
Blue and White
$4.85
AAAA to B—2½ to 9

Tramp! Tramp! Tramp! Sites of Interest Are Viewed by Hikers

College Vicinities Have Charms Unrealized By Freshmen

Freshmen who see groups of upper classmen roaming down country lanes or semi-graded clay roads never realize that a college town may have interesting spots to hike to until they explore for themselves.

To the person interested in history, a quarter-mile walk along Park avenue brings one to the grave of Prince Murat. If meditation upon the legends of French nobility grows tiresome, there are no better surroundings than this to study native birds, for both solitude and subjects are abundant. Within the same radius of the college but west of the campus students enter Dr. Game's wood. Because of its proximity, the wood is popular with girls who enjoy cooking and eating out of doors.

Students really desiring to walk start out on the oak-sentinelled clay road west of the college stables and after following the road for two miles come to the haunted house, much talked about for its indefinite past. Toda, it is not the half-hidden, unpainted house inhabited only by a caretaker that attracts, but the ideal picnic grounds down beyond it where a spring supplies water and nature supplies fireplaces.

Those wanting to study plant life and birds prefer walking the extra two miles northeast of the haunted house to the ravine The ravine and Deep Cut, one and one-half miles east of the college grounds, are at the height of popularity in violet time but in any season have botanical features luring young naturalists

Girls determinedly striding southwest try to cover the five miles to Camp Flastocowo in order to have time to take a swim in Lake Bradford and eat the sandwiches they just purchased. On week days the only way to obtain permission to swim is by making arrangements with Miss Elizabeth Autrey s that she may be on life-guar duty.

Miss Katherine Montgomer director of physical educa'ion urges the freshmen, especially t indulge in this form of exercise and believes that more hikin parties would go out if the realized the little time and troubl it takes to make arrangements fo a day or an afternoon in the ope

Changed Trend In Gym Suits IsNoticeable

Yesterday's Middy Blou Has Become Today's Natty Outfit

According to the law of gra everything must come do (apologies to Newton for inte preting his law as such), but not so with the gymnastic s that have been worn ou th campus.

In 1905 the girls in the gy nastic classes wore large, da serge bloomers, serge waists, bla stockings, and tennis shoes. T bloomers came below the knees meet the black cotton stocking the sleeves to the middies we long and the collars came high on the neck. The only bare fle that was exposed was the head fraction of the neck, and th hands.

In 1909 a radical change too place in the costume. The hea wool waists were substituted white middies worn with bla ties which exposed the neck a arms of the girls. This suit dark bloomers and white midd was the regulation uniform u 1926 when the fullness of the ga ments began to disappear, but was still customary to wear th stockings and bloomers sans margin between.

In 1929 one-piece light su with split skirts were made off cial, and at this time stocks we first permitted to be worn. Th type of suit ushered in more i dividuality in gym costumes. N longer were the athletic fields mass of black and white for th suits were of amny differe shades and the girls could pic the colors they liked best.

In 1931 this suit was eliminate and a one-piece skirtless suit too its place thus ending the refuta tion concerning the law of gra ity, yet it remains to be see now much more evidence can b found to show that gym suits g op instead of down.

◆

Record for the lowest norma amount of rainfall of any state i the union is held by Arizona, wi 7.8 inches.

Wilson's Announces
the arrival of
New Spring
Dresses
Smart silk and acetate, in floral, geometrics and dotted designs. . . . Light and dark backgrounds. . . Sizes for misses and women, at $$12^{95}$
and $$14^{95}$
P. W. WILSON CO.
—Since 1837—

Don't Miss Shawn
Dancers
Or Emory Singers

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

Arrange to Hear
Reverend
Kissling Next Week

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, February 8, 1935 NUMBER SIXTEEN

Tomorrow Is Night of Glee Club Program

Emory Singers to Offer Spirituals and Songs From Old Masters

TWO TAMPA BOYS FORMER MANAGERS

Twelve Men Give Dutch Treat in Concert At Amsterdam

The Emory University glee club, which will present a concert in the college auditorium tomorrow night, will bring to the campus a program of selections from the old masters as well as a group of southern folk songs and spirituals. Some of the numbers the club will sing on tomorrow night's program are: Beethoven's Creation's Hymn," Palestrina's "Adoramus Te," Brahm's "Lullaby," Moussorsky's "Song of the Flea" and a selected group of negro spirituals.

Tampa Boys Managers

It will be of especial interest to students on the Florida State campus to learn that the club won its first real fame while under the management of two Tampa boys, James A. Dombrowsky and Raymond B. Nixon, both of whom were on the European tours of 1926 and 1928. The successfulness of the club on these tours may be somewhat realized by the fact that the club paid its own way on the tours.

One incident which occurred on the second European trip indicates why the glee club was and a successful. In Amsterdam where the club was booked for a week of concerts the theater manager threatened to break his contract if the club did not sing.

Give Dutch Treat

Half of the boys had taken Dutch flu. The club manager placed enough members of the orchestra on the back row to fill in and with only twelve men out of the twenty-two on the stage singing the club went through the program.

It is said by critics everywhere that the Emory glee club is one of the finest of choral organizations. This may be better understood when it is said that for eighteen years the club has maintained its high standards of music and presents a program that cannot be surpassed by a similar organization for tonal quality and harmony.

Methodists Hold Conference Here

Christianity in Present Economics Discussed

At the third annual state conference of Methodist students held here last week-end Virginia Clayton, sophomore at this college was elected treasurer. Other officers elected were: president, Milven McLeod of Southern, vice president, Hudson Burr of the University of Florida, and secretary, Bessey Fay Mires of Stetson.

The conference, which had as its theme "Daring to Be Christians in the Present Economic Order," was led by Dr. Leroy E. Loemker, of Emory college, who discussed this topic in his three addresses. Following each of his addresses there was an open forum held by the students of the four colleges represented, University of Florida, Southern College, Stetson, and Florida State College for Women.

Another feature of the conference were the three interest groups led by Dr. Harvey C. Brown, a representative from the General Board of Christian Education in Nashville; Dr. J. C. Peel, a member of the faculty at Southern; and the Rev. P. E. Boyd, pastor of the College Heights Methodist Church in Lakeland. The topics discussed in the interest groups were all related to the present economic order. The subject was discussed in the different groups from the standpoints of the church, world peace, and amusements.

Aside from the business sessions, forums, and interest groups the conference also sponsored two get-together parties at the Student house, a reception, and a banquet in the college dining room. The

(Continued on Page Three)

LECTURES HERE

Rabbi Edward Israel, author and social worker, will speak in the college auditorium Wednesday night.

Dr. Koo Will Speak Tuesday

Plans to Choose Subject After He Has Seen His Audience

Dr. T. Z. Koo, famous Oriental lecturer, will speak in the college auditorium at the regular Tuesday morning convocation, February twelfth. Now on a lecture tour, Dr. Koo has spoken in several Florida cities where he is reported to have received considerable acclaim.

A graduate of St. John's University in Shanghai, Dr. Koo served for nine years as an official in the administrative department of the Chinese railway service. Later he joined the staff of national committee of the Y. W. C. A. of China, and in 1925 he became a member of the Second Opium conference called in Switzerland by the League of Nations. Dr. Koo was one of three persons chosen through thirty-four organizations to represent China. His most recent years have been spent among students in China, and also in visiting countries as widely separated as India, Australia, Europe, and North America.

Dr. Koo is said to be one of the ablest and most interesting Orientals ever to have come to this country. He has been called by authorities "one of the most lucid, convincing, and impressive Oriental speakers in the world." The Archbishop of Canterbury has said that in many respects Dr. Koo has impressed him as the ablest Oriental he has ever met.

The topic for Dr. Koo's talk is not yet known, but in a letter to Miss B. Louise Woodford, chairman of Florida Chain of Missionary Assemblies, he states his desire to select his topic after he has seen his audience. It will probably however, be selected from among the following:

1. Some Living Values in Chinese Culture. 2. China in the Making. 3. Christianity's Contributions to Chinese Life. The above three topics are designated to give a picture of China from three aspects, the first of which is the cultural background of Chinese life. The last of which is the Christian contribution in that situation.

4. Pathways to the Reality of God. 5. The Revelation of God in Christ. 6. The Essence of Spiritual Life. These three topics bear on religion directly. They represent the heart of the religion Dr. Koo knows today. They are more or less of an individual nature.

7. Toward An Understanding of Modern Life. 8. Some Living Issues in Modern Life. 9. World-Mindedness This group of topics deals with his understanding and analysis of the life we are living today. Topic seven is designated purposely as a historical review of Oriental Life from the Middle Ages down to the present in order to help people see the trend of history in our life. The second topic of this group is a picture of the points of conflict in modern life out of which a new Jerusalem is being built. The ninth topic is again Dr. Koo's own experience in the field of building up attitudes of mind and spirit in the international world.

10. Manchuria and World Peace. 11. The Crusade of Women in Modern China. 12. Song and Poetry in China. These last topics bear more on isolated themes. Number ten is Dr. Koo's presentation of the peace and war issue in the world today. Man-

(Continued on Page Three)

Israel Speaks Wednesday on Unemployment

Eminent Representative In Many Phases Of Social Reform

NOTED AUTHOR AND MAGAZINE WRITER

Has Conducted Numerous Investigations Into Industrial Wars

Rabbi Edward L. Israel, A. B., chairman of the commission on employment stabilization of the municipality of Baltimore, will speak February 13 at 8:15 in the auditorium.

Rabbi Israel's subject will be the "Social Implications of Unemployment" on which topic he is qualified to speak with authority, having conducted investigations into industrial disputes, and appeared before committees of Congress in advocacy of such measures as mothers' pensions, unemployment legislation, old age pensions, etc.

Prominent in Social Work

In the capacity of member and former chairman of the commission on social justice of the central conference of American Rabbis Rabbi Israel has represented the [illegible] Jewish groups in America in all matters of social reform, and has been mentioned by President Roosevelt as the outstanding spokesman of Jewish social ideals. He is a member of the national executive board of the national council for the prevention of war, vice-president of the national public housing confernece, and serves on a number of national advisory boards, including the league for independent political action and the American association for social security. Rabbi Israel is well known as the author of "The Western Maryland Railway Strike" and the "Centralia Tragedy," and as contributing editor to "The World Tomorrow." He has also written magazine articles on current religious, social, and economical problems.

Together with the national Catholic welfare conference and the federal council of churches, the Rabbi has conducted a number of investigations into industrial disputes. In the 1932 presidential campaign, Mr. Roosevelt in his Detroit address mentioned Rabbi Israel as the outstanding spokesman of Jewish social ideals.

Following the lecture, which is the third of the forum series, an open forum will be held for all who wish to discuss the subject with the speaker, in the Augusta Conradi theater.

Doyle to Attend Registrars' Meet

Is Preparing Study For April Convention

S. R. Doyle, registrar of Florida State College for Women, has just been placed on the program of the National Association of Collegiate Registrars, which will meet in Raleigh, N. C., on April 20, according to information received here this week.

Mr. Doyle has been asked to prepare a paper treating the subject: "A Picture of the College Registrar of the Colleges and Universities of the Sonthern Association." He is to find out what kind of person the college registrar is, the type of preparation he receives, and what he does. He is to "present the college registrar at work in southern colleges."

This request has grown out of a similar study made last year by Mr. Doyle when in his spare time, as a sort of avocation, he prepared a survey of the negro registrars in the southern association. He has now been asked to extend his field and take in all registrars in the southern association.

Holley to Talk Before University Professors

Mrs. C. O. Holley, of the state vocational education department, will speak at a meeting of the American Association of University Professors at the home of Dr. Edith Mildred Burlingame, professor of psychology, Thursday evening. The discussion will center about vocational education in Florida.

Southern Intercollegiate Meet to Bring Prominent Group Here

Representatives of Forty Colleges to Convene With Educators

The executive council of the Southern Intercollegiate association of women's student governments met at Agnes Scott college in Atlanta last week-end to make plans for the coming convention to be held here March 28, 29, and 30, according to Carolina DeMontigne, vice-president of the council.

A tentative program was outlined to include general talks by prominent educators from all over the country and discussion groups on campus life led by student delegates.

Educational leaders who have been invited to speak here on various topics include Dr. Hamilton Holt of Rollins college on modern experiments in education: Dr. Henry MacCracken, president of Vassar, on students and student government; Dr. Evelyn Newman, professor of English literature at Rollins, on woman's place in international affairs; and Dr. Theodore Jack, president of Randolph-Macon, on student government.

Governor David Sholtz will be asked to give the welcoming address Thursday morning, March 28, also the president-elect of the Nations' Student Federation of America, Thomas Neblitt, has written expressing a desire to attend the convention. If he comes, it is expected that he will talk on the student's stand on national and international questions.

Subjects for the discussion groups include denominational schools, campus honor, the technique of presidency, extra-curricula activities, campus interest in public affairs, and social problems concerning dormitory life and freshman orientation.

Delegates are expected from the forty member colleges in the Southern Intercollegiate association and also visiting representatives from five or ten colleges outside the association.

Officers of the executive council are Mary Virginia Barnes of Randolph-Macon, president; Carolina DeMontigne of Florida State, vice-president; Doris Davis, of Sophie Newcomb, secretary; and Alberta Palmour of Agnes Scott, treasurer.

Gleason, Sykes Home from Meet

Annual Agricultural Convention Held

Miss Flavia Gleason, state home demonstration agent, and Miss Anna Mae Sykes, extension nutritionist, and at present acting east coast district agent, attended the thirty-sixth annual convention of the association of Southern Agricultural workers in Atlanta, Ga., January 30-February 1.

Miss Gleason made two addresses during the convention. Her first address before the extension conference was on the responsibility of the extension service in connection with rehabilitation. Her second speech was before the Home Economics section on The Home Economics extension work.

The general theme of the convention was agricultural-industrial relations. The meetings took up the subjects of rural rehabilitation, federal emergency relief, and problems confronting the farm home of the future. Outstanding speakers from the United States Agricultural Department were present and spoke on agricultural problems.

French Honorary Will Initiate Five Members In Ceremony Monday

Beta Pi Theta, French honorary, will initiate five new members, Monday night, February 11, at 8.00 o'clock, at the home of Dr. A. R. Seymour. The qualifications for membership are a B average, with an A— average in French. Pledges must be taking or must have completed third year French. They must also give a play before being pledged. The new initiates gave Moliere's "Le Medecin Volant" last November, and were pledged January 29. The initiation has been delayed because of the French movie, "Poil de Carotte," sponsored by Beti Pi Theta, which was shown here last December.

The girls who will be initiated Monday night are: Frances Mauvis Lussier, Anita Michell, Alice Porter, and Ruth Mock.

Foster Talks On New Deal

Higher Material Standard Of Living is Aim Of Administration

"The New Deal at the Minute" was the basis of a talk by Dr. William Trufant Foster, economist, author, and member of the Consumers' Advisory Board of the NRA. Wednesday evening. He outlined as the aim of the New Deal a higher standard of living on a material plane, or in other words, he said, an increased consumption of goods.

"We hear everywhere complaints that workmen are buying too much. During the recent period of bank crises, the bankers were complaining that workers are not thrifty, and yet, at that very period," said Foster, "people were saving more than they had in years and thus were directly assisting in bringing on the depression."

To the many criticisms of the New Deal, Dr. Foster added among his own that of price-fixing by a board, maintaining that such a procedure is against the interest of the people, aside from the fact that it is unworkable. As an example of the confusion of the New Deal, Dr. Foster cited the FERA in that it attempts to undertake so many details utterly impossible save for local authorities. He pointed out, however, that the present administration did not start where it wanted to, where the best results could be effected at the beginning of the depression. Nor did it have adequate unemployment statistics with which to develop a comprehensive plan.

In their attempt to better conditions, not only the capitalists, but the labor unions too, strove to reduce production thereby reducing the production of wealth and thus ultimately woring against the consumer, according to Dr. Foster.

With production reduced to a level 54% below normal, thirty billion dollars a year have been lost by our not producing the wealth of which we are capable.

In answer to the assertion that "we cannot maintain our present standard of living Dr. Foster declares there is no reason why we should not do so for we have everything necessary—men, management, raw materials, inventions, machines. He maintained that men will continue to buy more materials and to produce more goods so long as they can

(Continued on Page Three)

Newmans Name Meet Delegates

Baptists Honor Christie At Birthday Party

Activities of the various denominations on campus the past week included a business meeting of the Newman club, and a birthday party given by the Baptist students for the Baptist minister.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Newman club, delegates to the Southeastern province of the Federation of College Catholic clubs to be held in Atlanta in the near future, were elected. Margaret Roe was elected senior representative, and Mauvais Lussier, junior representative. Marie Joffre was elected athletic manager of the Newman club basketball team which will enter intramurals, Friday afternoon. An announcement was made that the featured speaker of the next meeting will be assistant attorney general of the state, Robert Pleus, a former member of the Newman club of the University of Colorado.

Tuesday evening, at the regular council meeting of the Baptist students, a birthday party was given honoring Dr. L. R. Cristie, pastor of the first Baptist church of Tallahassee, and Mrs. Cristie. Guests included Joseph David Burnett, president of the Baptist Student union at the University of Florida, and Dr. and Mrs. Cristie.

Bishop Frank A. Juhan of the Episcopal diocese of Florida will be in Tallahassee, Sunday, to administer the Apostolic rite of Confirmation.

At the Presbyterian league meeting, Sunday night, Jean Crago, chairman of social work, will talk on "the Private Life of a Chinese Gentleman."

Ted Shawn's Men Dancers Here Tonight

Ensemble Will Interpret Primitive and Labor Rhythms

PROGRAM TO BE IN AUDITORIUM

Solo by Leader Inspired From Poem "Hound Of Heaven"

Ted Shawn and his internationally known men dancers will appear tonight in the college auditorium at 8:15 in a program of interpretive dances.

The five groups on the program will include primitive rhythms and free creations on native themes, a labor symphony depicting various forms of manual labor, a solo dance by Shawn, folk dances of various nations, and dances inspired by the compositions of great musicians.

Company Entirely of Men

For many years Mr. Shawn has been advancing his theories of dancing for men. The plan for a company composed entirely of men dancers had for years, due to prejudices, not been offered to the public.

To those who think dancing is a sport wholly for women Mr. Shawn points out that every sport such as football, wrestling, hockey and tennis requires the utmost of vitality, stamina and efficiency of movement. Dancing also requires these qualities, and besides a "coordination which very few athletes ever acquire, plus being able to move in rythm to music, a problem which the athlete never has to meet."

Mr. Shawn organized his first school of dancing in Los Angeles in 1912. Since then he has had more than 5,000 pupils, many of whom have taught the Shawn dance theories to thousands of other pupils. In all his previous companies of dancers he has had women though he made it a practice to feature group numbers by men alone.

Program Is Varied

Mr. Shawn's program will include five groups of dances. The first group is of primitive rhythms and are his own free creations on native themes. The second group is a labor symphony depicting the labor of the fields, the forests, the sea, and mechanized labor, these being continuous, the theme of each movement being given solo by Shawn and followed by the development of the entire ensemble.

The third group is called the Hound of Heaven and is a solo by Shawn. The dance was inspired by Francis Thompson's great mystic poem of the same name.

The fourth group is of folk themes including a choric dance from an antique Greek comedy, a Spanish Flamenco dance by Shawn, and three American folk themes. The last group includes music dances taken from the music of Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms.

Critics Comment Favorably

The New York Times said of Shawn: "Shawn is one of the leaders without whose insurgency the dance might not have developed to its present status."

The Chicago American adds: "Ted Shawn alone, or with a company, is an artist that America can be proud of—and his company are worthy of the great man with whom they appear."

Members of Ted Shawn's company appearing here this year are Barton Mumaw, Frank Overlees, Wilbur McCormack, Donnie Landers, Fred Hearn, Foster Fitzsimons, William Howell, and Ned Coupland. Jess Meeker will accompany them at the piano.

Dean Salley Addresses Rotary Club Wednesday

At the weekly meeting of the Rotary club of Tallahassee held Wednesday, Dean Nathaniel M. Salley, of the School of Education, spoke to the members of the organization on the advances made by the college. Dean Salley presented and interpreted to the Rotarians the statistics of the growth of Florida State College in all its activities from the year 1905 to the year 1935.

Religious Emphasis Week Opens Monday

LEADER OF WEEK

Dr. Albert Kissling of Jacksonville will arrive Monday to lead students in their annual Religious Emphasis week.

Mortar Board Makes Survey

Over-Organization Not Revealed in Former Investigation

Because the survey of student organizations begun last year failed to reveal a condition of "over-organization" on campus, Mortar Board began this week a new investigation based on the activities in which individual students are engaged. The individual activity record cards in the personnel office which were made complete last week with the addition of religious activities, will be used for the compiling of statistics.

The results of last year's survey do not indicate the prevalence of over-organization, over-lapping or of "useless activities." The fourteen organizations which were investigated have a total membership of 410. Two of them—the classical club and the home economics club have virtually automatic departmental membership; in eleven membership is honorary; only one has voluntary membership. Excluding the membership of the two departmental clubs with the exception of officers, there are, out of a total of 290, one student holding four memberships, 21 holding three memberships, 43 with two memberships, and 137 with one.

The organizations, judged by their stated purposes, present programs and future plans, are all making a contribution to the intellectual and cultural life of the college, it was concluded. Meetings range from three to twelve a semester with an average of six. The time taken by these meetings ranges from 45 minutes to one and a half hours per meeting with an average of one hour. Attendance is good in all cases, and student

(Continued on Page Three)

Plans for NSFA Club Discussed

Dr. Foster Speaks Of Forming Local Unit

Dr. William Trufant Foster, who lectured in the auditorium Wednesday evening on "The New Deal at the Minute," discussed informally with a small group of students yesterday morning plans for forming a local N. S. F. A. club on this campus. Dr. Foster is a member of the advisory board of the National Student Federation of America and was a speaker at the recent convention in Boston.

Dr. Foster's next stop will be at Louisiana State University, while there he will discuss with Thomas Neblett, newly elected president of the Federation, plans for an enlarged program for the coming year. He will carry to Mr. Neblett assurances of students here that they are interested in the nationwide student federation and in local clubs which are rapidly being formed among leading universities of the country.

Reverend Albert Kissling Of Jacksonville Is Leader for Event

COMMITTEES PLAN VARIED PROGRAM

Will Feature Daily Talks, Forum Discussions, And Conferences

The third Religious Emphasis week to be held at Florida State will begin Monday evening when Rev. Albert Kissling, the speaker of the week will speak to the committee in charge. Jennie Rae Nall is general chairman.

A program of daily talks, forum discussions, and personal conferences with Rev. Kissling has been arranged. The meetings are open to all students, faculty members, and town people. Rev. Kissling is not announcing his topics in advance, preferring to speak on subjects suggested by the students themselves.

Studied Abroad

Rev. Kissling received his bachelor's degree at Westminster College, Fulton, Missouri, and his bachelor of divine ministry degree at Union Theological Seminary, in Richmond, Virginia. He then studied at the University of Tuebingen and the University of Berlin in Germany, and at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland where he received his Ph. D. He was a pastor in Edinburgh for a year, and student adviser at Westminster college in 1928.

Monday night, there will be a banquet in the dining room in honor of Rev. Kissling, attended by the committee in charge of Religious Emphasis week, the members of the Religious Workers Council, and the members of the student councils of the various denominational groups.

Following this, coffee will be served in Jennie Murphree parlor from 7:30 until 8:00. Rev. Kissling will give an informal talk on his plans for the week. A student trio composed of Martha Reddick, Yvonne Tait and Margaret Nickle will play.

Introduced at Convocation

At convocation Tuesday, Rev. Kissling will be introduced to the student body by Jennie Rae Nall. He will, in turn, introduce Dr. T. Z. Koo, prominent Chinese lecturer, who will give the main address of the morning.

Tuesday night, at 7:30, the first regular Religious Emphasis week meeting will be held in the Augusta Conradi theatre, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite will present Dr. Kissling. There will be a harp solo by Miss Mary Reeder.

Wednesday afternoon, from 4:30 until 6:00 there will be an open forum in room 203 Administration building. Frances Fabrick will present the speaker. The forums are open to students only.

Rabbi Israel to Speak

Wednesday night, the program will be temporarily suspended for the Rabbi Israel, who is speaking on the regular lecture series program.

Thursday night, at 7:30, another meeting will be held in the Augusta Conradi theatre. Frances Fabrick will introduce the speaker. There will be special music by the student trio.

Friday afternoon, from 4:30 until 6:00, the second open forum will be held in 203 administration building. Katherine Blood will be in charge. That night, at 7:30, another evening meeting will take place in the Augusta Conradi theatre. There will be a vocal solo by Miss Etta Mae Robertson. Frances Fabrick will again present the speaker.

There are no meetings scheduled for Saturday. It will be given over to entertainment for Rev. Kissling, the nature of which will be decided by him when he arrives.

Main Service Sunday

On Sunday morning, at 11:00, the main service of the week will be held in the auditorium. It will open with an organ prelude by Miss Margaret W. Dow, followed by a Latin chorale and the selection "Going Home" by the college glee club. After this, Rev. Kissling will speak.

Sunday night, at 7:15, the final service of the week will take place in the Augusta Conradi theatre

(Continued on Page Three)

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF

BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON .... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS

Features: Athea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchanges, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyne Wahnish, Copy Editor Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claira Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedia McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Fain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anna Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF

ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS ... Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS .... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON .... Circulation Manager
Ass't. Adv Manager Mary Patterson, Ass't Circulation Mgr. Sara Beth Davis

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Kissling's Message Holds Spiritual And Intellectual Enticements

Man's effort to find a way of life ultimately leads him into the field of religion. And it is to this section of life that Florida State College for Women will give its attention when Religious Emphasis Week begins here Monday.

It takes no great amount of perspicacity to note that religion is not a static thing. "Where has there been a religion that could long hold aloof from the beliefs, the intellectual formulations that the educated among its adherents employed?"

Randall asks this question in his "Modern Religion." We should like to ask another. For instance, What intellectual beliefs do the educated votaries of orthodox religion in America hold today? Sounding recent legislative trends, we would say that America today is pointing toward collectivism as the means of national salvation and cooperation as the magic word by which it shall enter the promised land.

And just as sure as one and one make two you might know that now we want the answer to How does modern Protestantism correlate with the twentieth century principles of collectivism?

No doubt this and other pertinent questions will be asked of Reverend Albert Kissling, principle speaker for Religious Emphasis Week. Whatever the question, we are assured by those who have heard Reverend Kissling, of an unbiased, honestly-thought-out answer. Complying with the speaker's request, many questions were mailed to him before Christmas in order to afford him time to ascertain their answers.

Every student at Florida State will recognize the opportunity that will be theirs to hear Reverend Kissling. Those who have fitted religious behavior into their pattern of life may go and be inspired. Those who have not yet reconciled the religious response with intelligent living may go with no fear that their "intellectual integrity" will be insulted. Those who have given no thought to religion may go and receive the stimulus to cerebrate.

Patriarchs And Collegians Wary of European Entanglements

Preserving her characteristic antipathy toward foreign entanglements and refusing to enter the World Court, the United States has forfeited a gesture for peace. Lukewarmness is a precarious state, capable of many interpretations. It is possible then, that an act that denies peace may be interpreted to mean a sanction of war?

Just what does the nation think of war? Next to the Hauptmann trial, this subject seems to be the salient topic of the day. Apropos of the question comes the ballot of the College Peace Poll being sponsored by the Literary Digest and the Association of College Editors. To date sixty colleges have answered the poll.

In early reports majorities in all sixty colleges voted that the United States could stay out of another great war; that they would fight if this country were invaded; that they would not fight in the invasion of the borders of another country; that a navy and air force second to none is not a sound method of keeping us out of a war; that they advocated government control of armament, munitions industries and universal conscription of capital and labor in time of war.

But there is still another question in the poll. Should the United States enter the League of Nations? Only 50.07 per cent voted "yes" to this question, a hairbreath majority. American youth, even as their gray-haired patriarchs, eschew European relations.

Rather reluctantly we forgive such wariness in the fathers of the nation, but we must confess we are rather disappointed, nay, even shocked, at the inconsistency of American college students who would extirpate war by avoiding movements for peace.

Which Way Progress?

There should be no news of more significance to a citizenry than what is being done to the minds of its young men. The attention which has been given the curriculum revision now being made at the University of Florida is but justly and duly received.

The revision at Gainesville is radical only in the sense that it is radically different from the curriculum formerly in use. Viewed from a national aspect it is just the event of one more institution following the lead of the colleges now using the "Chicago Plan." The Chicago plan is of course not the only plan. In the state of flux in which education now finds itself no one plan can yet be acclaimed as "the solution" to our educational ills. It is for each institution to work out its own system, accepting what it finds practical in one "plan," rejecting the rest.

The last fifteen years has seen much bewilderment and confusion in our philosophy of education. Bewilderment first, because of the recognition that there was coming a revolutionary break with the past. The chief defects in our former educational system were seen to be that it completely ignored the synthetic point of view, and that it had neglected to explore those fields which have to do with the relationship between thought and action. Ever since Dewey said fourteen years ago that "our failure is due largely to the segregation of subjects in our curriculum," academic voices have chanted in agreement, but when it came to the creation of a new system, there resulted a confusion of tongues. The question then was "which way out?" A multitude of plans were offered which have only now come to a stage when the fittest may be said to survive.

A struggle has been going on in practically all American colleges during the last ten or twelve years—a struggle between the "radicals" who have insisted on doing something even to the point of doing things which had never been done before, and the "conservatives" who ever since before Noah have wanted to wait until the flood came. "Change," they have sagely pointed out, "does not necessarily mean progress," to which the opposition has answered "but progress does necessarily mean change."

None except the leading colleges, of course, have experimented for themselves; they have waited to see which way the academic wind should blow. Such a course finally gives all the benefits of an improved curriculum without the risk of pioneering into the unknown. It is true, of course, that in social situations we can never know by reason which reason is right; we must wait for the decision of the umpire, "Experience." But it is equally and obviously true that the untried will remain untried until it is tried.

There is no question but that the problem ahead will tax the qualities of our educators to the uttermost. To forge a great and enduring educational system requires generosity, knowledge, balance, imagination, a critical attitude, a certain amount of idealism, and finally, nerve. Institutions as well as civilizations can perish from loss of nerve. While caution is indubitably a virtue, it can be carried to a dangerous extreme. One college can continue to say to the others, "You go first," until it falls behind in the march of progress and can no longer be called a "leading" institution.

We would not be so grandiose as to point out "the way" for our salvation. But all the curriculum "plans" now replacing the former plan have certain characteristics in common: integrated courses, a modified grading system, more or less individual direction, and comprehensive examinations. A new educational philosophy is in the making. Permanent points of reference have been established. A trail has been blazed, and although the path is not yet beaten by tradition, it is clear enough.

To the question "which way progress?" we do not offer the answer. But we do appeal for concerted thought and action on the part of those who should be able to answer. Progress is no escalator. It is an achievement.

Magazine Thumbings

By MELVYNE WAHNISH

WITHOUT A TOWER.

Anonymous.

Harpers, February.

The plight of the young people today who are in love among the ruins of economic institutions which can no longer support them is the theme of this article. Who can tell these perplexed men and women who are honestly in love what action they should follow? John Hyde Preston in his article LOVE AMONG THE RUINS outlines three courses of action that might be taken. The young author of this poignant article endeavors to show how unsatisfactory any of the courses outlined truly are and yet heartbreakingly enough she asks what else is there for the lovers to do?

Even a casual observer may detect a great inconsistency. We have a cultural pattern which says that certain behavior is right and certain behavior is wrong. Society gives us a psychological set towards its institutions and bids us follow in the way of its teachings. There is among us a group of people, by far the majority group, who ask nothing better of life than that they be allowed to follow in the grooves tradition has already made. These people do not wish to make new philosophies; they desire only to take their place in the design of living which generations have molded. Yet society does not give these people who are thirsting to carry the banner of traditional patterns a chance to function as members of this pattern.

We have a heartbreaking picture painted of high tragedy. Writers whom society believed plumbed the depths of grief and frustration in their writing should witness the general hopelessness and lack of chance for happiness which is actually being faced by the men and women who are so unfortunate as to be in love today.

THE KINGDOM COME.

By Dmitri Merejkowsky.

The Yale Review, Winter.

A Russian speaks to warn "the soul of all men." Convinced of the fact himself, the author says "Religion is indeed the supreme human bond which unites individuals into society. Break that bond and the social body disintegrates, becomes an inert mass. It is not without reason that atheistic socialism uses precisely this term to designate the multitude of human beings: it speaks of them and treats them like physical masses, inanimate bodies!"

In Merejkowsky's opinion we are lower than the caveman. He says we are no longer looking toward the sky, but our heads are bent toward the earth.

"We rush along the road, and we fly through the sky like a flung stone." Schiller says, "Look where we are, naked, fearful, savage, the troglodyte in the depth of the cave."

This writer would have us believe that because religion, the uniting factor, the cause for looking skyward has broken, the living bodies of human society have degenerated into inert masses to devour one another, to kill, to stab, and to misjudge.

RECOVERY AFTER GRADUATION.

By Stephen Leacock.

Golden Book, February.

Leacock sounds an encouraging note. He tells us that even though it is commonly believed that a man comes out of college with his mind, "hopelessly impaired" he has known many cases of recovery, although not complete, at least permanent.

The secret of recovery appears to lie in not brooding over one's education, or dwelling on what one has been through in college, he advises further:

"Be up and doing when you leave college, forget all about education, act as if you never had any, cultivate bright thoughts, cheerful ideas, and you will soon find yourself on the level of those about you."

Leacock goes into a bit of detail to show how subject matter which should be read for the sheer enjoyment may be horribly ruined. ruined.

He shows us how the analytical, scientific attitude is painstakingly carried over indiscriminatingly into all fields of teaching regardless of the appropriateness of the attitude. We are all painfully familiar with the type of instruction he cites.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By C. Williams

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKER

FOR MANY months Great Britain has been doing all possible to persuade the French to abandon the idea of building up a defensive alliance among Italy, Russia, Great Britain, and France. This alliance, of course, would be aimed at Germany, thus again dividing Europe into two hostile camps as in 1914. France, by no means, has been advocating alliance because of a mere whim. Germany by her constant repudiation of the Versailles Treaty in regard to rearming has been causing France great and not undue alarm; Germany has held that she was unduly disarmed by the Versailles Treaty and that the Treaty must be revised. And this demand seems reasonable; Germany had little more to do with the starting of the war than England or France.

Seemingly, British diplomacy has achieved one milestone in alleviating this feeling of animosity and fear in Germany and in France with the announcement of the Anglo-French Pact reached by Foreign Minister Pierre Laval and Prime Minister MacDonald over the week end. France and England by the pact agree (1) to revise parts of the Versailles Treaty now limiting Germany's arms and forces; (2) to an alliance against 'aerial' aggressions by which one nation would immediately come to the aid of the other if 'attacked' without 'recourse to Geneva;' (3) to have Germany return to active membership in the League of Nations if the Versailles Treaty be revised; (4) to have Great Britain support the Franco-Italian pact guaranteeing the independence of Austria; and (5) to invite Germany, Italy, and Belgium to subscribe to a general European pact 'which would guarantee the above provisions.'

The pact, of course, should be a source of relief in Europe, as far as treaties and such can bring relief. Pacts and alliances in the past have only furthered war, but let us hope that the old order is yielding place to the new.

One dark thought is provoked by a sentence in Hitler's official newspaper, Voelkischer Boebacter. This organ said that when Germany again considers entering an "international agreement as a free and equal partner she will consult her own interests first and foremost, and not the interests of others." But, no doubt, England and France and the rest have been doing that but have not the indiscretion to say so.

ON THE OUTER Mongolian border between Mongolia and Manchukuo Japan claims that 'invading Mongols' are advancing on Manchukuo. Japan as usual is not just claiming; she is acting. An expedition under Colonel Wada is advancing to the border to expel 'invading Mongols from Manchukuo territory.'

The advance is important in that the outer Mongolian government at Urga is under Soviet domination—and inspiration, perhaps. The Japanese House of Representatives announced Saturday that the question may cause 'serious trouble.' Can it be that the war prophets' Russo-Japanese war is materializing?

FORGIVE US OUR PREJUDICES

BY LUCY FULGHUM

Rumor has it, as rumor is persistently and perpetually having something, that there is a group of "intellectual snobs" on campus. From all reports this snobbishness is most prevalent among the coterie which last year was termed "la grande clique." The rumor is spreading along what one is apt to think of as a sour-grape-line route. But setting aside the aspersion that the criticism is coming from an envious group, let us consider the situation which seems a little confused at best.

It is encouraging to learn that we have a group of intellectuals in our midst, snobbish or not. But it seems an inherent virtue of intellect that it leaks snobbishness of an offensive kind almost completely; intellect is unselfconscious of its aristocracy. Katherine Fullerton Gerould, I believe it was, who wrote an article "In Defense of Snobbery" and condoned the attitude of the intellectuals who would take nothing less than the best, but she did not hold them as highhatters of personality, or in anywise ruthless toward their fellowmen.

Ah, well—there must be some confusion somewhere. Either our group of snobs lacks the intelligence which their critics have not yet denied them, or an attitude of absorption has been confused with an attitude of snobbery.

It is not unreasonable to expect any individual to choose his interests and his activities from among those interests and activities which he finds pleasant or profitable. If those girls on this campus who have risen to some small height of intellectuality are no longer interested in the old ways of passing their college days, it is no stranger than that the rest of us flock to pay obeisance to Myrna Loy, but would no doubt "snoot" Clara Bow, by way of the box office, if she should attempt to regain our attention.

It is rather difficult to please the public. Whereas there is this new criticism of "la grande clique" or its reincarnation being too intellectual, this column has been given two severe scaldings for being "low brow." Such is the tragedy of he who is in the newspaper game. Write on a level which you think will reach the select group, and half the world accuses you of being mad; make an effort to capture the plebe, and it turns on you for being too mediocre. The newspaper man is just another Sir Launfal in pursuit of a new Holy Grail—probably a golden mean.

Back in the day's when Margaret Sanger's cause was not espoused in the whole-hearted maner that it is now, she wrote an article which made some cryptic remarks about "goodness." She said that the good man was he who complied with the folk ways of his time, and he who forged even slightly ahead was immediately damned as immoral. Goodness, she then concludes, is nothing more than complete mental stagnation. And no doubt there is as much truth as satire in her invective.

The general tenor of modern treatises on science which were written for the layman is a missionary spirit. They insist that not how much, but what science has done is its chief claim to value. If it should turn into a Frankenstein which would rise and destroy its creator, then science has failed. Robert Duffus, in an article which he entitles "This Unscientific Age," cites the awful misapplications of applied science and suggests that we bring our reversed "scientific attitude" into its own field.

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

"A WORD FOR THE UNIVERSE"

"I wish I had formed the habit of reading three years ago," moaned one senior, "It makes me mad to see so many good books in the library which I can't possibly read now that this is my last semester here. I think I'd like to have a whole semester at Winthrop with absolutely nothing to do but read at large in the library. If I were to begin again as as a freshman, there is one thing I'd make myself do—I'd read more and from a wider selection, exploring those books in fiction, biography, fine arts, useful arts, history, books of travel, poetry, drama, short stories, philosophy, psychology, children's literature, and even myths and legends."

Freshmen and Sophomores have a good chance to avoid such a regrettable state of mind during their senior years. It is quite easy to form the habit of keeping at least one book from the library in our rooms at all times whether we read every word of it or not. The chances are we will read more in so doing, and furthermore, we will become familiar with a larger number of authors, titles, and publishers. All of this information add to our general knowledges, and make us more interesting as personalities.

Even now it is not too late for juniors and seniors to acquire the habit of reading more. We had better get as broad a knowledge as we possibly can while we're at Winthrop—we need it!—Johnsonian.

"COLLEGE DAZE"

A rather interesting pamphlet, "What The Colleges Are Doing," published by Ginn and Company, and carrying numerous articles clipped from the leading student newspapers of the nation, includes in the January issue "College Daze," a timely, and, in many ways, truthful criticism of the college student of today.

"Because it is the 'thing to do'" says "The Daily Illini," in which the article originally appeared, "most students read the headlines of the daily newspapers. They feel obligated to be informed as to whether the president is in Honolulu or Chicago, and whether handsome Tugwell has startled more lawyers with his fluent vocabulary.

"Of course, the student is busily engaged with committees, coke dates, and sororities and fraternities. He does not have the time to investigate trivial affairs such as our government."

The Daily Illini" is bluntly stating the truth to some extent. However, it is our belief that more of the students of today are able to tell more about the NRA, the codes, etc., than "The Daily Illini" would have us believe. The writer evidently asked one student the question, "What does the New Deal mean to you?" and the student said, "I'm for it, I guess. I was making $15 a week last summer and the NRA raised it to $18."

The Daily Illini calls that the characteristic answer of the students.

Is it characteristic? If it is, then the student "might as well take a correspondence course in etiquette as attend a university."—Campus Chat.

Collegiate Come-Backs

One of the greatest honors that has come to the Florida State College for Women in lo, these many moons, is the founding on this campus of Tau Gamma Sigma, plumbing honorary, which sprinkled four new members at lunch Wednesday. The society, whose name stands for "Thanks for the Cold Shower," aims to recognize and reward ability to take it, and to provide more heat for the plumbing. According to "Soapdish" Patterson, Exalted High Spigot of the fraternity, the persiparagut (pronounced per-si-para-gut) ideals and the pluerpetitic (pronounced plu-er-pe-titic) purpose of the group are contained in its motto, "As ye sewer so shall ye reek."

"Tau Gamma Sigma is the oldest plumbing honorary in any women's college south of the Mississippi valley and Florida State College for Women can puff itself up with pride at having been the cradle of an organization destined, like Sherwin-Williams paint, to cover the earth," said the college plumber who has been designated faculty advisor of the fraternity with the title, Celestial Cesspool.

• • • •

The Readers Digest says "Women become nags because their husbands behave so like mules." But after all, it puts a kick in life.

• • • •

Little Miss Muffet
Sat on her tuffet.
—Some more slang, huh?
—Red and Black of Georgia.

• • • •

Wonder why a certain student government official keeps her week-end jaunts at student-body expense such a deep, dark secret? What's the matter, sister, can't you take it? Or could it be that you have seen the handwriting on the wall?

• • • •

Rabbi A. H. Silver thinks the jazz age is at its ragged tailend. "It is no longer smart to be immoral," he says. Since we have succeeded in putting salt on the tail of that rara avis, the "intellectual snob,"—and not so rare as that—we are inclined to think its worse than immoral to be smart.

• • • •

Headline in the Mississippian: "New Arrival Writes Home." Are we to infer that the stork brought him, and, being just a stranger here, heaven is his home?

• • • •

"Punning is a horrid vice,"
said he, as though to curse her;
In fact, 'tis such an evil vice,
I know of no vice versa."
—Exchange.

(That's what you call taking it for better or for verse.)

• • • •

A high-brow is one who says, "Possess your soul in patience."
A medium-brow is one who says: "Hold your horses."
A low-brow is one who says, "Keep your shirt on."
—Skull and Bones.

To which we would like to add our definition of the prevalent "intellectual snob" as one who chirps:

Negations, negations, numerous negations—
Filthy lucre cannot purchase amorousness.
Negations, negations, numerous negations,
I'd rather perish than acquiesce!

As for us, no, no, a thousand times no!

• • • •

From the papers we learn that more than twenty-five tons of dessert are used at the University of Minnesota hospital every year . . . They don't say what it was used for, but you'd think they'd have to have to make poultices and shine shoes with it to put away that much. . . . Flash, Flash. (Idea!) An extra portion of ruby pie, please.

• • • •

From a men's university paper—the name is censored—came the following:

LAWYER TO HIS LOVE

A London professor chap, Jeffery,
Says women incline to be heifery,
Flighty, irrational, silly and vain,
Because of an underfed gland in their brain!
Professor, how could you?
Such infantile rot!
An underfed gland in their WHAT?

• • • •

It's funny, but lots of people in America laugh because it takes five million rubles in Russia to buy a pair of shoes, and these same people are saving up cigar and soap coupons to get a grand piano.

• • • •

We could hardly wait for grades to come out so we could reprint a little number for those who fondly imagine the way to a professor's gradebook lies in his ego. (We gave it the name ourselves.)

THE DISILLUSIONED DIRTY-NOSER

I worked on you for many a wee'.
With everything I had to show,
I tried my best, I used technique,
And still you answered, "No."
I sought to please in every way,
I laughed at jokes I couldn't see.
You made me think you were okay,
And then, you rat, you gave me "D."

New Courses Are Installed

Salley Announces Change In Curriculums For Nursery Teachers

The Florida State College for Women in its School of Education beginning with the year 1935-1936 will offer a two-year curriculum for nursery school teachers and a four-year curriculum for the same group, according to Dean Nathaniel M. Salley of the School of Education.

Dean Salley further stated that it is the purpose of the School of Education to work in co-operation with the school activities of the Federal Government. With the addition of these two new curricula, the School of Education will be offering professional training in all phases of school work from the nursery school to the college.

During the coming year it will be Dean Salley'e policy to stress the importance of adult and rural education in the present economic order. Beginning with the summer school of 1935 it will be possible for a young woman to register in the School of Education to get professional training in the following fields: high school work, elementary school work, including primary and kindergarten, and work in the nursery school.

In regard to the constants in the four year curriculum Dean Salley said, "All four-year degrees in the School of Education meet all constants laid down by the Florida State College for Women for a general education.

Methodists Hold Conference Here

(Continued from Page One)

parties which were in the form of old-fashioned folk dances, and games were directed by Miss Eulalie Gunn of Lakeland.

It was decided at the last business meeting that the next conference will be held in Gainesville, at a date to be decided by the conference committee. At this meeting Mery Etta Thistlethwaite was elected chairman of the findings committee.

According to Miss Winnie Lee Davis, Methodist Student secretary, the convention, sponsored by Dr. Ira Barnett, Secretary of the Board of Christian Education in Florida, was one of the most successful ever to be held. She attributes a great deal of this success to the co-operation and hospitality of the college and especially to the dining room staff.

Sophomores Not To Be in Graduation

The senior class, at a meeting Monday night, voted to dispense with the custom of having sophomore sisters walk down the aisle carrying daisies at commencement exercises but to continue the part that underclassmen, both sophomores and juniors, take in Class Day.

It was further decided to retain the usual procedure of having Dr. Conradi turn the mortar board tassels at graduation. Dr. Rogers, chairman of the commencement committee, agreed to see Miss Sallie Nicholson about the possibility of having hoods given out on the Saturday before graduation instead of commencement morning.

Dr. Koo Will Speaks Tuesday

(Continued from Page One)

churia, however, is only used as a background; it is rather a presentation on the Sino-Japanese conflict in Manchuria. Number eleven is self-explanitory. The twelfth topic is useful for informal groups.

In order to come to the Florida Chain of Assemblies Dr. Koo is postponing lectures at Oxford University in England. Because of his engagements in England, Dr. Koo is able to speak in only a few cities in Florida. Miss Woodford has tried for several years to obtain him for the Florida Chain of Missionary Assemblies, but it was not until this year that he could find the opportunity to accept the invitation.

BECAUSE a large proportion of America's most prominent stores feature and refer to them as "Best Sellers," you owe it to yourself to see our

Spring 1935 Showing

of

DINNER and DANCE FROCKS

at $10.95 and up

For beauty, originality, style, this collection outshines anything we've shown previously.

Linden's Fashion Shoppe

VISIT OUR NEWLY OPENED COTTON SHOP

STATE THEATRE

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

Geo. Raft and Carole Lombard

in

"RUMBA"

SUNDAY AND MONDAY

Myrna Loy and Cary Grant

in

"WINGS IN THE DARK"

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

Cary Grant and Elissa Landi

in

"ENTER MADAME"

THURSDAY

George Brent

in

"THE RIGHT TO LIVE"

"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT"

RITZ THEATRE

SATURDAY

TIM McCOY in "HELL BENT FOR LOVE"

SUNDAY AND MONDAY

Geo. Raft and Carole Lombard

in

"RUMBA"

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY

Myrna Loy and Cary Grant

in

"WINGS IN THE DARK"

Sport Slants

Odd-Even Hockey And Soccer Games to Begin

The first of the series of Odd-Even hockey and soccer games will be played tomorrow morning at 9:30. The teams were elected this afternoon at the regular practice hour.

The first two Odd-Even games will give the same point value toward an F that class games would ordinarily give, and the third game will count as a regular two-point game. The second of the Odd-Even hockey and soccer games will be played at 3:30, Friday, February 15, and the third games will be played Saturday morning, February 16, at 9:30.

If the teams are not ready to play by ten minutes after the game is scheduled the game must be forfeited. Each captain of the teams must bring two officials, a scorer and a timer.

On The Spot With Sports

Practice for the telegraphic swimming meet is coming along fine and the swimmers are showing a splashing good style. It is not too late for those interested in the meet to come out for practice.

Every freshman should enter the big swimming meet held every year for freshmen. The meet draws a large crowd and is one of the most thrilling events of the year.

This column sounds more like a "you should enter this and you should do that" column than anything else, but the hockey and soccer games are going to be interesting tomorrow morning and an audience adds a great deal to the spirit of the game. Everyoue be on hand!

The intramural basket ball games that were played yesterday proved to be quite exciting. The teams were evenly matched and there were quite a few spectacular plays made.

Foster Talks On New Deal

(Continued from Page One)

sell; they will sell so long as the consumer buys; the consumer will buy so long as he has the money. Following this line of reasoning Dr. Foster reduced the answer to the problem 'Why don't we use our power to raise consumptive power?" to the fact that the consumer hasn't the money because it was driven out of circulation during the recent bank crises. More than 90% of business is carried on by checks on bank deposits and when that went, employment and everything went with it, for eight and a half billion dollars, almost half of the total volume, was crushed out. Dr. Foster did not, however, lay the blame for the closing of the banks at the door of the present administration, for he asserted that if the government had not closed the banks they would ultimately have been forced to close themselves.

Increase in powers of consumption was stressed by Dr. Foster as of utmost value in recovery. "As long as consumption is adequate, the rest of business will take care of itself; the whole intricate process hangs upon the final step, consumption of the production.

"Fundamentally," he declared, "we've been absolutely wrong. Instead of production taking care of consumption as asserted by such thinkers as John Stuart Mills, it's just the other way around; consumption takes care of production."

As one of the basic causes of the present economic state of the country, Dr. Foster named the practice of the thory of laissez-faire, the deeply interwoven and according to the speaker, false, idea that there are certain natural laws, vaguely termed "supply and demand," "reaction," etc., which will make everything turn out right.

In the future, he declared, "we shall regard it as the primary purpose of banking and of all social legislation, to sustain purchasing power." Means toward this end were outlined as follows: (1) the establishment of a monetary policy directed toward stabilizing the consumptive power of the dollar so that it would always be approximately the same; (2) the development of a monetary system wherein the treasury and the system will not be working at cross purposes, which could be done by taking definite steps in bringing about collective control of our monetary system; (3) the foundation of an old-age pension, and (4) the introduction of a national system of employment and exchanges for suitable placing, and compulsory health insurance.

Relative to the current gold discussion, Dr. Foster declared, "We have been kidding ourselves for years that we could pay obligations in gold without the gold to do it. Gold is a fine security excepting when you need it."

Dr. Foster closed his lecture by sketching the events of the past six months in the favorable light of improvement. "For the past three months," he said, "the New Deal has been engaged in removing the phases proved unworkable and in strengthening those phases found fundamentally good.' "

HOW COLLEGE GIRLS

Keep their skin above the Passing Mark!

Helena Rubinstein, authority on skins, tutors them when beauty begins to fail. They quickly learn that BLACKHEAD AND OPEN PORE PASTE answers the problems of blackheads, large pores, oily skin. 1.00.

ACNE CREAM makes the grade against "breaking out" skin. Excellent for pimples, "spots", blemishes. Medicated—healing—soothing. 1.00.

Bennett's

ADAMS STUDIO

"Photographs That Please"

121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

FLORIDAN DRY CLEANERS

"There's a Difference"

PHONE 811

Elizabeth Dickinson

College Agent, Lower Bryan

Annual Freshman Swim Meet Will Be Special Feature of Play-Nite

The annual freshman swimming meet will be held in the college pool next Friday evening at 9:30 as a special feature of Play-Nite. Entrants must sign up in Miss Marjorie Mayer's office by 6 o'clock, Wednesday, February 13.

Any freshman with A health may enter, but those with B or C health must have written permission from the college physician to enter. No scholastic record is necessary and entrants may enter any one event, or as many as two speed and three other events. Each race, form, stroke, or dive counts as an event.

The events of the meet will include: 40-yard free style, side stroke for form, standing front dive, plunge for distance, 25-yard free style, breast stroke for form, jack knife dive, 25-yard side stroke, crawl for form, back dive, 25-yard breast stroke, back crawl for form, swan dive, 25-yard back crawl, resting back stroke for form, and optional dives.

Committees are: publicity, Griffitts; officials, Takash; records, Evans; and programs, Cooper.

Mortar Board Makes Survey

(Continued from Page One)

members are responsible for planning the programs.

Nine of the organizations are nationally affiliated and five are local. Initiation fees of the nationally affiliated groups range from no fee at all to fourteen dollars, with an average of $6.83. Annual dues range from nothing to five dollars with an average of $2.36. The amount of the total budget contributed to the national organization varies from two and a half per cent to eighty-eight percent, with an average of fifty-one percent. On the whole, publications are considered the primary contribution of the national organizations, with conventions as secondary in importance, and correspondence as third. Seven of the national organizations have publications; two do not. Five of the seven chapters which receive the publications feel that they make an important contribution to the local unit; two are not enthusiastic.

The initiation fees of the local organizations range from nothing to three dollars with an average of sixty cents. The annual dues range from nothing to one dollar with an average of fifty cents.

The publicate memberships cannot be taken as a serious indication of over-organization, it is said. "The most illuminating fact brought to light in these statistics is that only one of these organizations has voluntary membership. We have also found that out of the seventy-four other organizations and sub-organizations on campus which were not included in this survey, only one has voluntary membership. These facts should be viewed in conjunction with figures secured from last year's Flastacowo which show that approximately one-fourth of the seniors had never participated in any campus activity while here on campus, while several students had individual records of from thirty-five to forty activities. While these figures cannot be taken as accurate and do not form part of Mortar Board's survey, they do indicate that our problem is not one of over-organization but of over-centralization," according to Louise Robertson, who has been made chairman of the survey.

"We over-burden a few students with responsibility until they are unable to maintain a scholastic record to the level of their ability," Louise said, "and we make but little effort to provide activities for many girls who are in need of the type of training which extra-curricular activity affords. Many of these girls are capable but just haven't the "push" to make themselves noticed. When we have a task to be done we always give it to someone who has "proven" her ability in some other performance, instead of seeking a student who is free from other responsibilities. Many offices come by virtue of holding another office. All our campus activities seem to flow uphill. It is my own personal opinion that we need a radical revision in our whole campus set-up based on the premise that every student should participate in at least one extra curricular activity in which she has ability and interest. Otherwise we cannot claim to offer a well-balanced educational program for all."

In an effort to secure accurate statistics as to the distribution of activities, Mortar Board began the new investigation this week, taking the individual activity record cards in the personnel office as the main source of information. Results are expected to be made public within a few weeks, and recommendations will be made to the student senate as to measures of reform.

I am overstocked and will sacrifice my entire lot of Spring Hats.

SATURDAY AND MONDAY

February 9th and 11th

The Band Box

North Monroe

ALUMNA WORKER

Mrs. Beeson of Groveland, state president of college alumnae, took an active part in F. S. C. W. week activities in Polk county.

Religious Emphasis Week Opens Monday

(Continued from Page One)

Katherine Blood will lead the service. The faculty trio composed of Miss Anna Mae Sharpe, Mr. Owen Sellars and Miss Mary Esther Winslow will play.

Conferences with Mr. Kissling may be arranged for every morning and afternoon by students who wish to talk with him privately or in small groups. The schedule will be posted on the Y. W. C. A. bulletin board and students may sign up for the time they would like to see him.

Committees Appointed

The following are the committees appointed for the week: general chairman, Jennie Rae Nall; publicity committee, Miss Katherine Rawls, adviser; Barbara Garfunkel, chairman; Louise Robertson, Barbara Hubberd, Jane Hubberd, Martha Makemson, and Lillian Shapiro, members; entertainment, Miss Kathleen Platt, adviser, Alma Loudermilk, chairman; Clotilde O'Rourke, Sara Rutledge, and Ruth Orlin, members; banquet, Marie Certain, chairman; Dorothy Moorehead, Barbara Green, and Marie Taylor, members.

Finance, Miss Luella Richie, adviser; Wava Godwin, chairman; Betty Hampton, Mary Bennet, Mary Ola Reynolds, members; program, Miss Rachael Wylie, adviser; Katherine Blood, chairman; Frances Fabrick, Anne Norris, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, members; music, Margaret Nichle; decorations, Miss Winnie Lee Davis, adviser; Virginia Clayton, chairman; Patricia Foster, Olivia Embrey, Gertrude Kuhn, Evelyn Collins, Nell Mayes, members; follow-up commitee, Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, adviser; Lucy Gee Lynn, chairman; Rachael McKinnon, Lillian Turlington, Betty Ellen Smith, and Helen Esman, members.

Intramural Basketball Tourneys Under Way

The first of the series of basketball games in the intramural tournament sponsored by the Women's Athletic association were played yesterday morning. The Methodist students defeated Kappa Alpha Theta by a score of 25-6 and Jennie Murphree Hall won over Chi Omega by a score of 27-21.

This afternoon at 3:30 the the Catholic Newmans will play Gilchrist hall and Alpha Omicron will play Bry anhall.

Schedule of the other games are:

Delta Delta Delta vs. Presbyterian, 9:30 Saturday, February 9.

Alpha Chi Omega vs. Alpha Gamma Delta, 5:30 Saturday, February 9.

Kappa Delta vs. Beta Phi Alpha, 4:30 Monday, February 11.

Alpha Xi Delta vs. Town girls, 4:30 Monday, February 11.

The semi-finals will be played Thursday, February 14 and the final game will be played Saturday, February 16.

President of New York University is Visitor On Campus Here Tues.

Dr. F. P. Graves, president of the University of New York, commissioner of Education of that state, and Senator of Phi Beta Kappa, was a visitor on this campus Tuesday, having come here from Gainesville, where he made the baccalaureate address at the mid-term graduation exercises. He was accompanied by Dr. John J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida.

In the party with Dr. Graves were Mrs. Graves and Dr. A. R. Mead of the University of Florida. After touring this campus the party visited the A. and M. college.

The FRENCH SHOP presents

New Spring Oxfords and Ghillies

$2.95 and $3.95

In Whites and Brown and White.

Widths: AAA to B.

Sizes: 3-8

"A FIT FOR EVERY FOO

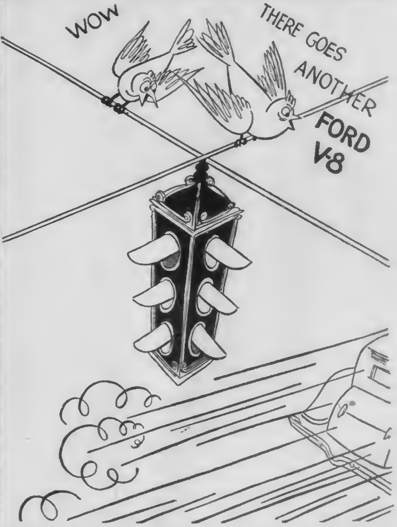
New Way Laundry and Dry Clean

Tallahassee's Olde d Largest

"Wear Clean Clothes"

Representative in Lower Bryan Hall

Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 18



TALLAHASSEE MOTOR CO.

134 N. Calhoun Telephone 141

The Social Week

Kissling Is Honor Guest At Banquet Monday Night

Dr. Albert Kissling will be the honor guest at a banquet in the dining room Monday night at 6:30. At this time Dr. Kissling will be honored by the members of the Religious Workers' Council, the student councils of the different churches, and the members of the committees for Religious Emphasis week.

The tables at which the banquet guests will be seated will be arranged in a special order and will be decorated with sweet peas. Members of the Glee club have been invited to sing the blessing for this dinner.

Among the guests at the banquet will be Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, Dr. Arthur Williams, Dr. Edward Conradi, Miss Louise Conradi, Dr. Elizabeth Andrews, Father Carroll, Mrs. C. Mayo, Mrs. Blanche Goldsmith, Miss Luella Richie, Miss Olivia Dorman, Rev. Jeffrey Alfriend, Rev. E. N. Caldwell, Rev. W. F. Dunkle, Rev. L. R. Christie, Miss Kathleen Platt, Miss Winnie Mae Davis, Miss Katherine Rawls, Miss Rachel Wylie.

Committee members who will be present are Jennie Rae Nall, Barbara Garfunkel, Louise Robertson, Barbara Hubbard, Jane Hubbard, Martha Makemson, Lillian Shapiro, Alma Loudermilk, Clotilde O'Rourke, Sara Rutledge, Ruth Orlin, Marie Certain, Dorothy Moorhead, Barbara Green, Marie Taylor, Wava Godwin, Betty Hampton, Mary Bennett, Mary Ola Reynolds, Katherine Blood, Frances Fabrick, Anne Norris, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Margaret Nickle, Virginia Clayton, Patricia Foster, Olivia Embry, Gertrude Kuhn, Evelyn Collins, Nell Mayes, Lucy Gee Lynn, Rachel McKinnon, Lillian Turlington, Betty Ellen Smith, and Helen Eiseman.

Among the members of the student councils who will attend the banquet are Elizabeth Kirby-Smith, Mildred Seekins, Louise Lingo, Yvonne Tait, Billy Faxon, Mary Mooty, Mary Wing, Betty Peck, Ann Hendry, Mary Meginniss, Frances Lewis, Betty Ostlund, Frances Ellin, Rebecca Keith, Georgia Ruth Work, Virginia Taylor, Lillie McGuire, Jean Crago, Janice Borton, Louise Burgess, Mary Wylie Kleppelburg, Virginia Cromartie.

Jean Hamner, Dorothy Godman, Katherine Kyle, Eleanor Murrill, Evaline Rankin, Cora Boyett, Gladys Oliver, Cornelia Morford, Sara Rutledge, Emily Johnson, Mary Frances Pemberton, Jane McCowan, Mercia Scott, Eva Alonso, Rae Reddick, Mervin Everett, Mary Ola Reynolds, Mary Ellen Loveless, Louise Frisco, Jewel Drawdy, Dimples Turner, Jean Clark, Joe Beth Foreman, Edith Smith, Lu Walker, Sara Hosea, Anne Marie Mitchell, Mary K. Williams, Belle Henshaw, Carl Brigman, Margaret Kader and others.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
February 8 to February 15

Friday

8:15 p.m. Artist Series featuring Ted Shawn and his dancers

Saturday

4:30 p.m. Alpha Chi Omega Valentine tea dance
8:15 p.m. Concert of Emory Glee club
10:00 p.m. Dance for members of Emory Glee club in college gymnasium

Sunday

11:00 a.m. Church services
7:15 p.m. Y. W. C. A. Vespers

Monday

5:30 p.m. Orchestra rehearsal
6:30 p.m. Banquet honoring Dr. Kissling in dining room
7:30 p.m. Glee club rehearsal
9:00 p.m. Sorority meetings

Tuesday

11:30 a.m. Convocation. Dr. T. Koo, speaker. Dr. Kissling in charge
1:15 p.m. Coffee for Dr. Koo in Bryan sun parlor
7:30 p.m. Dr. Kissling speaking in Augusta Conradi little theater

Wednesday

7:30 p.m. Forum lecturer, Rabbi Edward L. Israel. "The Social Implications of Unemployment"

Thursday

5:30 p.m. Orchestra rehearsal
7:30 p.m. Dr. Kissling speaking in little theater

Friday

7:30 p.m. Dr. Kissling speaking in little theater
8:00 p.m. A. A. U. W. meeting

When You Think
of
Cleaning, Dyeing and
Alterations
Think of the
Central Cleaners
"Your Patronage is Our Pleasure"

Personal Mention

Margaret Edwards is leaving today for Atlanta where she will spend the week-end visiting with friends.

Josephine King and Mary Claire Moore are spending the week-end in Lakeland where they are visiting with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Shirley Long of New York a charter member of Kappa Delta chapter here, arrived Monday to visit with the members of the local chapter. Mrs. Long will be in Tallahassee a week.

Mrs. R. S. Garcia and Mrs. D. Coates of Daytona Beach were among the visitors at the Beta Phi Alpha house last week-end where they visited with Ruth Garcia.

Katherine Manford of St. Augustine, graduate of the class of '32, is spending the week-end in Tallahassee visiting her sister, Edith Manford, and friends on the campus.

Margaret Nickle spent last week end in Jacksonville where she attended the concert given by the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

Mrs. Charles Kenneth Strickland of Jacksonville was the honoree at an informal tea at the Alpha Chi Omega house Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Strickland was formerly Mary Limerick and received her A. B. degree at the end of last semester.

Alpha Xi Delta sorority entertained as its guests last week Mrs. A. Crago, of Gainesville, Mrs. O. C. Smith, of Fort Myers, and Miss Jessie Smith of Wilmington, Ohio, all of whom are members of the sorority; and Bessie Faye Mires, Jimmy Mires, and Dorothy Fuller, from Stetson University, who attended the Methodist conference here.

Koo to Be Honored At After-Lunch Coffee

Dr. T. Z. Koo, who will speak in convocation Tuesday, will be honored by a number of informal social events. Following lunch Tuesday at which time a special table will be reserved for Dr. Koo in the dining room, an after-lunch coffee will be held in Bryan sun parlor. Among the guests who will call at this time to meet Dr. Koo will be Dr. Edward Conradi, Miss Louise Conradi, Miss Katherine Rawls, Miss Winnie Mae Davis, Miss Kathleen Platt, Miss Rachel Wylie, Dr. Margie Burks, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Seymour, Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, Miss Olivia Dorman, Mrs. Virginia Sloan.

EMORY GLEE CLUB

ALPHA CHI OMEGA SORORITY WILL BE HOSTESSES AT VALENTINE TEA DANCE

From 4:20 to 7:30 tomorrow afternoon the Alpha Chi Omega house on Park avenue will furnish the setting for a Valentine tea dance given by the members and pledges of the sorority for their guests.

The valentine motif will be carried out in the house decorations. Bowls containing bouquets of pink and white sweetpeas will be placed throughout the front rooms which will be thrown open ensuite to the guests. Red hearts fastened to red and white crepe paper streamers arranged attractively will emphasize the theme of the party.

During the afternoon as dancing is enjoyed by the guests and the hostesses, punch will be served. At 7 o'clock the guests will be invited to the dining room where a buffet supper will be placed on side tables decorated in the valentine motif.

The chaperones for the dance will include Miss Marion McKay, sorority chaperone, Mrs. R. Johnson, Miss Bernice Deetz, Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, Mrs. U. S. Deahl, and Mrs. H. W. Cooper.

The guest list for the tea dance will include Kent Littig, Bill Cooper, J. B. Scott, Donald Starr, Bill Bassett, Allen Geiger, Buddy Nuzam, Vance Duncan, Frank Williams, Bob Flipsie, Sam Deahl, Noyce Fannin, Shaw Foster, Gorden Moyer, Byron McNaley, Jack Sharp, Charles Turney, John Marshall Green, Dr. A. J. Ott, Dr. W. R. McCollum, Fred Bosse, Dan Clark, Joe Hall, Ben Krentzman, Marvin McKinnon, Ben Partridge, Marshall Watkins, Jimmy Pless, Chet Holly, Ed Brown, and Sylvester Tunis.

The members and pledges of the sorority who will be hostesses during the afternoon are: Yvette Breaux, Betty Brooks, Juanita Buchanan, Linna Cheney, Irene Collins, Marguerite Cordes, Carolina DeMontigne, Mary Key, Harriet Lawrence, Dorothy Leach, Narcissa Leland, Anna Belle Linger, Sara Mikell, Margaret Phillips, Katherine Sands, Edith Toffaletti, Betty Wheeler, Margaret Murray, Eleanor Flint, Rosemary Hamley, Margaret Graham.

Janice Borton, Edwina Hamilton, Katherine Kyle, Mary Wing, Beverly Brown, Elizabeth Carter, Helene Cordes, Cora Cheney, Helen Cate, Lurline Goodman, Adelaide Jones, Mildred Seekins.

New Students Take Psychological Test

The psychological test required of all students will be given for all mid-term freshmen and new students who have not had this test, tomorrow morning at 9:00 a. m. in room 208 Administration building, according to Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews, director of personnel. Students who are to take the test are asked to come promptly and bring two pencils.

Lakeland Students And Alpha Xi Deltas Are Mendenhall Guests

Mrs. H. D. Mendenhall was hostess at a tea honoring jointly the local chapter of Alpha Xi Delta and a group of girls from Lakeland, which is her former home, last Saturday afternoon at her home on Jefferson street. Ruth Daniels poured, assisted in the dining room by Sara Graham and Julia Daniels, all three of Lakeland, and by Miss Mary Lucy Mendenhall.

Lakeland girls called from four to five, and members of Xi Delta called from five till six. The candlelit dining room was beautifully decorated with calendula, roses, sweet peas, and narcissi, and dainty cakes, nuts and mints were served with tea to the guests.

Among those present were: Mrs. J. G. Kellum, and her mother, Mrs. Mary A. Conibear, Mrs. Mary Bland, and Betty Bailey, Marion Weeks, Elizabeth Stout, Juanita Pace, Barbara Garfunkel, Helenmary Fritsch, Ruth Rainbolt, Althea Smith, Jean Crago, Jessie Mead, Lula Walker, Mildred Lovell, Mary Pollard, Carlota Cubilias, Elizabeth Filer, Dorothy Hoffman, Mildred Boss, and Mrs. Geneva Fisher Morris, Alpha Xi Deltas, and their guests, Mrs. A. Crago, of Gainesville, Mrs. O. C. Smith and Miss Jessie Smith, of Fort Myers, and Bessie Faye Mires, Jimmy Mires, and Dorothy Fuller, from Stetson University.

Among the Lakeland girls who attended were: Margaret Edwards, Irene Collins, Margaret Graham, Ruth Davis, Ruth Daniels, Julia Daniels, and Sara Graham.

Longmire is Hostess To Freshman Group At Informal Tea

Miss Rowena Longmire, associate professor of English, was hostess at an informal tea yesterday afternoon in Reynolds parlor from 5:30 to 6:30 for a number of her freshman students.

The decorations and refreshments for the occasion were arranged in keeping with the informal motif of the tea. Miss Longmire was assisted in serving her guests by the following members of the college social committee: Rachel McKinnon, Phylis Gewin, Dimples Turner, Mary Virginia Warren, Edith Webb, and Mary Etta Thistlethwaite.

Freshmen who were invited to call during the afternoon were June Bebinger, Elizabeth Bow, Emma Bradford, Esther Griffing, Adelaide Jones, Florence Jones, Mary Lynn Massie, Geraldine Meyers, Elizabeth Wartman, Maxine Whitehurst, Isabel Dillard, Mary Jane Gallemore, Esther Goodwin, Jean Harris, Elizabeth Knapp, Eloise Knox, Mildred Long, Antinette Courtney, and Hazel Anderson.

Beta Phi Alpha Has Informal Evening Party Friday

Members and pledges of Beta Phi Alpha were hostesses to about thirty friends at an informal party Friday night at the sorority house on Park avenue.

The informal motif of the party was carried out in the house decorations of spring flowers. After the evening's entertainment of games and dancnig, refreshments of popcorn, hot chocolate, and cookies were served.

Hostesses for the party were Genevieve Crowley, Margaret Nickle, Maxine Ward, Jean Willis, Gladys Anderson, Carl Brigman, Virginia Duke, Grace McKee, Lula Mae Mooty, Grace Rummell, Alice Biddulph, Carolyn Blount, Lucille De La Haye, Ruth Garcia, Esther Goodwin, Lorine Guin, Jessica Jane Mackey, Dorothy A. Smith, and Julie Whaley.

Opperman Gives Report At Florida Convention

Ella Scoble Opperman, dean of the school of music, will give a report of the National Music Teachers association convention February 13 before the Florida State Music Teachers convention meeting in Orlando.

Miss Opperman has been recently appointed assistant secretary for the National Music Teachers association.

Basketball on Thursday

Thursday evening at 7:15 in the gymnasium there will be a double-header basket-ball game between Florida high and Crawfordville and between Leon high and Monticello. The object of the games is to work up interest in basketball. A nominal admission will be charged.

Bishop to Speak

The Right Reverend Frank A. Juhan, bishop of Florida, will speak at a meeting of the Episcopal Student auxiliary Sunday afternoon at 4:30 at Ruge hall.

MILITARY DANCE DRESSES
Suitable for the College Miss!
Try Our Vanity Fair Silk Hose
ONLY
79c
THE PAIR
Steyerman's Style Shop

For That Beautiful
Permanent Wave
Go to CLEO'S
Beauty Shoppe
Lively Bldg. - Phone 1170

The Laundry Does It Best! ☞ Phones: Laundry 808 Dry Cleaning 666
The White Way Laundry & Cleaners
Scientific Sanitary Service
The Best by Test—Let Us Prove It

Bennett's
75c LUNCHEON AT BENNETT'S 40c
CHOICE OF TWO MEATS:
Fried Chicken, Country Style
Meat Loaf with French Dressing
VEGETABLES:
New Boiled Irish Potatoes
Fresh Turnips
Frozen Fruit Salad
Banana Pudding
Corn Muffins or Hot Biscuits
Drink Included
20c MAPLE PECAN SUNDAE 10c
10c CHOC. MILK WITH McPHAIL CREAM 5c
30c CHICKEN SALAD SANDWICH with ORANGEADE 20c
25c MARSHMALLOW WHIP SUNDAE 15c

The Only Sound Buys
At This Time of the Year
Are Those That Will Look
Smart Right Through Spring

An Interesting Co-Ed Sheer!
You'll love this Co-Ed sheer. It's so different! The simple high neck, the corded clusters and matching belt all combine to lend distinction. A touch of rhinestones adds gaiety.
Colors—Navy, Beige and Grey
Colors—14 to 20

The Co-Ed All-Day Dress!
Something new in a Co-Ed suit. A combination of acetate and novelty matelasse linen. The blouse boasts a pert pleated jabot, and the jacket is lined with the same printed linen of the blouse.
Colors—Navy with red, navy with blue, and navy with navy.
Sizes—12 to 20

GELBERG'S
"Style Plus Economy"

Spring Silks
THE NEW SILK LINEN IN PASTEL SHADES
$1.69 at per yard
A pageant of beautiful shades, important for Spring!
Crepes
Ginghams
All-Over Embroidery
SPRING PRINTS
in florals, plaids, stripes, polka dots, geometrics and the popular necktie prints.

NEW SPRING HANDBAGS
in navy, red and white.... Patent and rough leathers.
Smart surface fabrics for every type of costume for every hour of the day.
P. W. WILSON Co.
—Since 1837—

See the Faculty
"Bad Boys"
Frolic Tuesday

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

Attend the Closing Meetings of Religious Emphasis

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, February 15, 1935 NUMBER SEVENTEEN

Rev. Kissling Is Religious Week Leader

"Along Life's Highway" Is Theme Tying Up All Talks Here

MAIN SERVICE IS SUNDAY MORNING

Students Raise Problems To Discuss at Open Forum Meetings

During this week of religious emphasis, students have been guided in their intellectual and spiritual thought by the Rev. Albert Kissling, who is giving a series of talks in the evening, open forum discussions in the afternoon, as well as personal conferences throughout tha week. Dr. Kissling is pastor of the Riveraida Presbyterian church of Jacksonville.

The theme of the week around which Dr. Kissling is building his talks is "Along Life's Highway".

In his address tonight he will speak on "The Rules That I Must Observe Along the Road."

Sunday Services

The main service of the week will be held Sunday morning at 11:00 in the college auditorium, when Dr. Kissling will speak on "The Warrior Woman and God." Following up this thought, he will speak in the evening on "How Can I Know That I Have Found Him?" This final service of the week will take place in the Augusta Conradi Little Theater at 7:30 o'clock.

In his address Tuesday evening he discussed "Walking in Lifa's Highway with Christ", called to mind the problems that one must face, and offered suggestions as to how one can solve those problems. Thursday morning he spoke on "My Companion on Life's Highway." Thursday evening the discussion centered around the question, "What is at the end of the road?" This evening Dr. Kissling will speak on "The Rules That I Must Observe Along the Road."

Open Forums

Open forums were held Wednesday afternoon and this afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock, the topics for discussion being "God and Myself," and "Morals, Myself, and Others". Students raised varied problems for discussion, such as "What can we expect to receive from college that will make us better Christian women?" "Is prayer an obligation or a privilege?" "How can we convince others that there is a God?" and "Just how important are petty differences in doctrines?" A sincere, honest search after truth was manifest in these discussions.

In order that students might meet Dr. Kissling personally and talk with him, conference hours were arranged for every morning during the past week. "The attitude manifested in the group meetings and conferences," Dr. Kissling said, "shows a real interest and concern about religious matters."

As a follow up to Religious Em-

(Continued on page three)

Far East is Subject Of Discussion at Meeting Of International Club

A discussion on the far East problem was featured at the regular fortnightly meeting of the International club, Tuesday, when talks were given on various aspects of this problem by members of the club.

Goldie Lewinsky spoke on the history of Manchuria, Lorraine Hudson explained the Chinese interests in this territory, and Mary Steffee, the Japanese interests. Recent happenings in Manchuria were reviewed by Florence Jennings, ad the attempt of the League of Nations to settle the Japanese - Chinese controversy was discussed by Clarissa Knight.

Members present were Edith Patterson, Goldie Lewinsky, Martha Whitaker, Anna Marie Mitchell, Ida Engel, Marjorie Harris, Rebecca Keith, Lorraine Hudson, Edna Hoffman, Rachel McKinnon, Florence Jennings, Cornelia Garrick, Clarissa Knight, Mildred Stevens, Melvynne, Wahnish Helen Wilson, Mary Steffee, Hazel Bowman and Miss Marion D. Irish, faculty sponsor of the club.

HAS BIRTHDAY

Dr. Edward Conradi will celebrate his sixty-sixth anniversary Wednesday with traditional serenading and gifts.

FSC Students Honor Conradi

Sixty-Sixth Birthday Is To Be Celebrated On Wednesday

Next Wednesday evening students of Florida State College will celebrate the sixty-sixth birthday of President Edward Conradi. In accordance with an annual custom they will serenade Dr. Conradi outside his home on College avenue, after which the seniors and presidents of the classes will be invited inside to partake of the birthday cake.

Helen Wilson, president of the senior class, will present Dr. Conradi with the cake; while the president of the junior class, Margaret K. Anderson, will give him a book; Janice Borton, president of the sophomore class, a box of candy; and Anne Misell, president of the freshman class, flowers.

Sixteen years ago a group of students went to Dr. Conradi's home and serenaded him on their own initiative thus beginning the traditional ceremony. Six years later the custom of having each of the class presidents bring a gift, the senior class a cake, the junior class a book, the sophomore class candy and the freshman class flowers was initiated and has been in practice ever since that time. It has also come to be the custom that the president of the senior class cuts the cake.

Dr. Conradi came to Florida State College for Women in 1909, at which time there were only fifty college students enrolled. In 1915 he aided in putting the college on the list of the Southern

(Continued on page three)

Moore Goes To Social Meetings

Governor's Commission to Plan Legislation

Dr. Coyle E. Moore, professor of sociology, is today in Orlando attending a meeting of the Governor's commission on Social Legislation. This commission is attempting to formulate a legislative program to present to the next session of the legislature when it convenes here in April.

The commission has had the expert advice and assistance of a number of nationally known people in the field. A tentative legislative program has been drawn up for the commission by Henry Epstein, solicitor general of the state of New York.

At the meeting the entire program is being carefully studied so that social justice may be better attained in this state, according to a statement made by Dr. Moore.

Following this meeting Dr. Moore will attend a meeting of the State Board of Public Welfare, of which he is a member, in Orlando tomorrow.

Irish to Conduct Forum

Miss Marian Irish, associate professor of political science will lead an open forum discussion on "The World Court" in the Augusta Conradi theater February 27. This meeting, to which all students and town people are invited, is sponsored by Phi Alpha Theta, national history honorary society.

Siamese And Javanese Art Shown Here

Eleventh and Fifteenth Century Works Are Unique in Kind

BRIGGS TO GIVE SPECIAL TALKS

Pieces Include Masks, Shadow Puppets And Sculptures

An unusual and unique exhibition of Javanese puppets and masks together with pieces of Cambodian and Siamese sculpture is now being shown in Room 307 Administration building. This exhibit is sponsored by the art department as a feature of the Artist Series program of the college and will be open to students and the public through next Friday.

The art works on display are said to have been executed between the eleventh and fifteenth centuries, the puppets being the familiar type of shadow puppets used in the orient.

Briggs Will Lecture

Of special interest to art students and others who may be interested in oriental art is the announcement made yesterday by Mrs. Beatrice Beyer Williams, head of the art department, that Miss Amy Ferris Briggs of the art faculty will lecture on the exhibit on Monday at 3:30 p. m., and Thursday at 4:30 p. m. Miss Briggs will discuss the mediums, methods, and processes used as well as telling something of the history of the pieces.

Among the pieces of sculpture being shown are several heads and busts of the God Siva, one of the Gods of the supreme Hindu triad. To the Hindus Siva represents the principle of destruction as well as the reproductive or restoring power, since destruc-

(Continued on page three)

All is Set For Swimming Meet

Play Nite Will Feature Freshman Contest

The annual freshman swimming meet will be held at 9:30 in the college pool this evening as a special feature of Play Nite. Only those freshmen with A health may enter. However, freshman students with B or C health may enter provided they have obtained a written permission from the college physician.

The officials of the meet are: referee, Eleanor Flint; judges of form swimming and diving, Claire Redfield, Frances Hurlin, Martha Makemson, Betty Bailey, Wilma Bristol; judge at finish, Janet Cook: clerks of course, Miss Grace Fox, Margaret Flook, Felicia West; property and judge of plunge, Mildred Lovell, Mary Ward Peterson; first aid, Dr. Eleanor Valentine; announcers, Helen Evans, Catherine Takach; errands, Jane Tombeugh; time keepers, Evelyn L'Abbe, Georgia Ruth Work, Caroline Oliver, Janet Griffitts, Cecil Levy, Juanita Buchanan, Evelyn Meitin, Rose Panowsky; score keepers, Lila Devore, Louise Sigman; life guard, Sara Hethcox; starter, Marie Taylor; recorder, Kathryn Beyer.

Committees: advertising, Janet Griffitts; officials, Catherine Takach; forms, Juanita Buchanan: programs, Mary Frances Hales.

Events: 40 yard free style, side stroke for form, standing front dive, plunge for distance, 25 yard free style—first heat, breast stroke for form, 25 yard free style—second heat, jack knife dive, 25 yard side stroke, crawl for form, back dive, 25 yard breast stroke, back crawl for form, swan dive, 25 yard back crawl—first heat, resting back stroke, 25 yard back crawl — second heat, optional dives.

Entrants: Margaret Holway, Viola Brooks, Frances Thill, Felicia West, Dorthea Marsh, Erma Engel, Florence Karr, Frances Sadler, Margaret Stout, Betty Bow, Edythe Taylor, Ruth McClain, June Meserne, Sara Nance, Dorothy Johnson, Margaret J. Rogers, Audrey Cooper,

(Continued on page three)

Faculty Requests Ideas for Course

Students who have experienced one or more years of college will be given an opportunity to suggest ways in which the new social studies course, "An Introduction to Contemporary Civilization," to be given here next year, can best meet the needs of freshmen in carrying out the aim indicated by its title.

Any upperclassmen who are interested are invited to meet with the instructors organizing this new course, in room 203 Administration building at 7:30 Thursday evening. They are asked to come prepared to make franks comments and to present definite plans or ideas.

Israel Would Have Justice

Rabbi Compares Social Unemployment With Apocalypse

In a profound discussion of "The Social Implications of Unemployment" in which he stressed the crying and inescapable need of social justice, Rabbi Edward Israel, eminent authority on current economic problems, as speaker Wednesday night on the forum series, likened the implications of unemployment to the dread figure of the four horsemen of the apocalypse bringing famine and destruction in their wake—fascism, intolerance, war, and individual demoralization.

Prefacing his enlargement of these themes with the observation that the present condition is not a result of the present depression nor the Wall Street crash, and pointing out that there have always been from two to four per cent of our population out of work, at times even normally from ten to twenty-five per cent, Dr. Israel declared that even the conservatives are beginning to realise that the cry of "rugged individualism" and "devil take the hind-most" can not build a balanced system wherein social justice will be attained.

"There is no system greater than the fundamental rights of human beings, and these rights," he declared "are the right to work and to maintain a decent standard of living. If a system cannot give the people this ability to live in the fullest sense of the term, if, several years from now, we shall still have from twelve to fifteen per cent of our population unemployed, that system cannot survive."

Dr. Israel described the first of his metaphorical four horsemen, fascism, as a fanatical chauvinism, and declared that unemployment is feeder to the storm troops of fascism. Robbing the individual of every iota of democracy, fascism, he asserted, dominates education, political, social, and religious life, making of the individual an automaton. Yet, he pointed out that millions of people in other countries, even real-

(Continued on page three)

309 Students On Honor Roll For Semester

List Headed by College Of Arts and Sciences With Total of 106

SENIOR CLASS IS BEST REPRESENTED

Eight Girls Have Average Of Straight "A" For First Term

Three hundred and nine students have qualified for places on the scholastic honor roll for the first semester by making an average of B or above. Students in the College of Arts and Sciences lead the list with a total of 166; the School of Education is second with 106. The School of Home Economics has 20; the School of Music, 6; the graduate school, 8; and special students, 3.

The senior class has ninety-eight members on the roll, the largest representation from any class. The juniors are second with eighty-one. Freshmen are next with sixty-one, and then then sophomores with fifty-eight.

Eight Have "A" Average

Eight girls made a straight A average. Opal Nadine Gray, senior in the School of Education, has the highest average with sixteen hours of A. The following six girls have fifteen hours of A: Marion Brantley, senior in the School of Education; Barbara Garfunkel, senior in the College of Arts and Sciences; Ida Engel, senior in the College of Arts and Sciences; Clarissa Knight, senior in the College of Arts and Sciences; Lillian Turlington, junior in the College of Arts and Sciences; and Frank Martha Wildman, sophomore, in the School of Education. Margaret Virginia Campbell, graduate student, has six hours of A.

The following nine students had fourteen or more hours of A, missing a three point average by a small margin. Mrs. Mabel Armes, fifteen hours of A and one of B; Elisabeth H. Barker, fourteen hours of A and one of B; Frances Forth, fifteen hours of A and one-half hour of C; Anna Cone Groover, seventeen hours of A and one-half hour of C; Avaline Lancaster, fourteen hours of A and four of B; Anna Marie Mitchell, fifteen and a half hours of A and three of B; Daisy Parker, fifteen hours of A and three of B; and Wilma TerBush, fifteen hours of A and two of B.

Graduate students who are on approbation are Mrs. Mabel Armes Frances Bryson, Helen Everett, Edna Hoffman, Virginia Morris, Eunice Nicholson, Isabel Perkins.

Special Students Rank High

There are three special students on approbation: Margaret

(Continued on page three)

Shawn Dancers Describe Themselves Assuming Viewpoint of Florida Co-ed

Make-Believe Driver Of Truck Lets Us in On Life of Troupe

BY ALTHEA SMITH

"Oh, you don't want to talk to me, ma'am; I'm only a truck-driver. The Shawn boys are all inside." This was my greeting when, after a full twenty minutes of uneasy procrastination I finally summoned my reportorial courage and deserted by observation post in the balcony of the auditorium to approach one of the men who were busily unloading two silver-lettered trucks outside.

Sitting down suddenly on the top step was the best I could do about expressing my infinite relief. The moment for which I had practised so many official-sounding queries had come and gone, leaving me just where I had been before, and I was unspeakably glad of it. So glad, indeed, that I began to talk quite naturally again, and I was well-launched into a perfectly reasonable set of questions about the company of dancers that my journalistic dignity never would have permitted me to ask them in person, before my attention was attracted by peculiar sounds behind me. I turned to find three or four young men making elaborate signs over my head to the man I was talking to.

Wa had, I thought, been getting along famously until I had asked him if he had never wanted to dance. The pathos of his reply to the effect that be only drove trucks while waiting for Mr. Shawn to give him "his big chance" seemed to me quite touching, but it proved too much for the gravity of the audience we had collected, and "Mac" was forced, amid genial hilarity, to admit his identity as the "McCormack" of the Shawn ensemble.

Needless to say I was thoroughly nonplussed, but I had gotten myself into this and I was going on if it ruined my dignity for life. Having by this time established the basic facts that all the dancers were single and under twenty-four, I proceeded, with the assistance of several of the troupe, to delve assiduously into matters that the collegiate audience would enjoy.

"Now, if you were a college girl," we asked, beginning on 'Denny,' and disregarding his emphatic refusal to become a co-ed even for a moment, "what would you like to know about the life of a Shawn dancer?"

In this manner I gleaned all sorts of opinions, which I care-

(Continued on page four)

Dr. Koo Plots Course From Local To World Mindedness

Noted Chinese Lecturer Says There Are Three Strains of Life

Dr. T. Z. Koo, noted Chinese lecturer, addressed an unusually large and enthusiastic audience Tuesday morning in convocation on the subject, "World-Mindedness," a talk on his own personal experience in the field of building up attitudes of mind and spirit in the international world.

"After the close of the war," said Dr. Koo, "there developed in Europe a new movement toward international cooperation and understanding." Two groups of people were taking active part in this new movement. The first group, according to Dr. Koo, was interested in creating new international organizations to express international good will and understanding. The second group was interested in creating new attitudes of mind and heart, realising that citizens can do little about creating organizations but they can do a great deal in making new attitudes.

Explain Mind Growth

Dr. Koo presented at this point the question, "What does constitute a mind and a heart that can go into the international field to change other minds and hearts in favor of cooperation in these organizations?" In the remaining portion of his talk he answered this question, coloring each of his points with personal stories.

"We begin in a 'local mind,' and from that we grow to take an interest in national affairs and finally in international affairs." When first traveling to a foreign country people face an enormous area of ignorance about the people of that country in spite of the present day advantages of travel, education, communication. That ignorance is mutual and one of the most prolific breeding grounds for misunderstanding among nations. A knowledge of other people is necessary, for getting knowledge is getting understanding and only understanding be-

(Continued on page three)

Andrews Leaves Sunday for Meet

To Attend Conference Of Personnel Groups

Dr. Elisabeth Gordon Andrews, director of the personnel department, will leave Sunday to attend a joint conference of the American College Personnel association and the Vocational Guidance association at Atlantic City.

The conference will feature reports by various members on studies of progress being made by the association. Dr. Andrews will give a report on "Factors of Leadership Among College Women," based on research and observation she has made over a period of years.

Among the noted educational leaders who will make similar reports will be F. H. Kirkpatrick, who will discuss "The Measurement of Personality."

As chairman of the program committee, Dr. Andrews has secured authorities on matters related to personnel problems as speakers for the conference. Among them will be Dr. Vincent Lecky, of Columbia, who will discuss his ideas on "The Theory of Self-Consistency as Applied to Personnel Problems". It is expected that this new theory will create a great deal of controversy and to lead the discussion, Dr. Andrew has secured Dr. Esther Lloyd-Jones, also of Columbia, and author of one of the best books on college personnel, and Dr. B. V. Moore of Pennsylvania State College.

Other speakers will include Dr. R. A. Brotemarkle, personnel director of the University of Pennsylvania, who will discuss "Personality, the Functional Determinant of Personnel Counselling," and Dr. Isabel M. Wallace, now vocational counselor at the University of Rochester and formerly director of personnel at Florida State College, who will speak on "Crucial Points for Students in their Response to Vocational Guidance."

Enroute to Atlantic City, Dr. Andrews will stop in Washington to visit her brother, John Andrews, editor and writer on political subjects and member of Senator Nye's committee on Senate Investigations. While in Washington, Dr. Andrews will attend sessions of the House and the Senate.

CHINESE SPEAKER

Dr. T. Z. Koo, widely-traveled scholar, addressed an enthusiastic audience in chapel last Tuesday.

Carnival Will Begin March 1

Dinner, Skits, Games And Dance Included In Festivities

Plans for the annual Mid-Winter Festival to be celebrated the week-end beginning March first include a faculty dinner, skit night, Odd and Even hockey games, coronation of the King and Queen, freshman carnival and dance.

The faculty dinner, in charge of the social committee, opens Mid-Winter Festival activities Friday night in the dining room. It will be followed by annual skit night in the auditorium at which a five-dollar prize will be awarded the best skit of the nine presented. Groups who have signed up are Kappa Delta, Chi Omega, Spirogira, Alpha Chi Omega, Tau Gamma Sigma—the new plumbing honorary, T. N. T. jazz orchestra, Delta Phi Epsilon, Pi Beta Phi, and the "F" club.

Odd and Even

Saturday morning Odd and Even hockey games, ranking second in rivalry to the basketball games at Thanksgiving, will be played on the hockey field.

At a special dinner in the dining room Saturday night, the King and Queen with their court, chosen from the student body, will be presented in a promenade around the dining room, according to Margaret Edwards, chairman of cornation.

Elections for the King and

(Continued on page three)

Yearbook Staff Starts Rec Fund

Advanced Design Classes Will Plan Murals

The Flastacowo, college yearbook, has started a fund to which all other organizations on campus have been urged to contribute, in order to finance the rapidly progressing plans being made for the redocoration of Reynolds recreation hall.

The class in advanced designing under the diection of Miss Amy Ferris Briggs is designing murals for the walls. Furnishings are to be purchased in harmony with the decorations as soon as sufficient funds are raised.

Members of the lounge committee in charge of redecoration are Mrs. Beatrice Williams, Miss Henrietta Sivyer, Mrs. Virginia Sloan, Mrs. H. D. Mendenhall, Miss Anna Tracy, Miss Margaret Anderson and Miss Mary Mooty.

The college social committee working jointly with the lounge committee, is composed of Elizabeth Stout, Sue Whitaker, Anne Lee Dunn, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Virginia Tucker Martha Makemson, Douglas Dabney, Lucy Pulghum, Jean Hamker, Sara Krentzman, and Martha Whitaker, chairman, and Miss Edith West, faculty advisor.

Richardson Appointed

Miss Louise Richardson received word this week of her appointment to serve a two-year term as a member of the policy committee of the Southeastern Library association.

Faculty Will Present Frolic Tuesday Night

Featured Scene Depicts Village Schoolroom With "Bad Boys"

MANNIKINS SHOW LATEST FASHIONS

Honors Work Exam And Musical Renditions Are on Program

Florida State College Students will have a chance to see which members of the faculty were the proverbial "bad-boys" of grammar school on Tuesday, February 19, at 8:15 p. m. in the college auditorium when "Faculty Frolics" will be presented under the auspices of the American Association of University Women. Miss Edith E. Lynn, instructor in physics, is in charge of the program.

The main features of the program will be the village schoolroom scene, a musical number, a fashion show and a scene of an honors work student coming up for examination. The junior A. A. U. W. will furnish the intermission entertainment.

School Scene

Miss Anna May Tracy, head dietitcian, will be the teacher of the village school, directing spelling bees and judging in recitation contests. Her scholars, in pigtails and overalls, will include Dr. Harold F. Richards, professor of physics; Dr. Raymond Bellamy, professor of sociology; Dr. Leland J. Lewis, professor of chemistry; J. G. Kellum, business manager; Dr. Kathryn Abbey, professor of history; Miss Eada M. Deviney, assistant professor of soology; Dr. Coyle Moore, associate professor of sociology; Mrs. Harold F. Richards and Miss Adrienne Taylor.

Miss Mildred Finnegan, instructor in French, will be the saleslady in a department store presenting her mannikins to prospective buyers. All the latest models in both dresses and hair dressing styles will be presented. Among the models will be Miss Luella Richey, assistant professor of accounting; Dr. Annie Marie Therese Popper, assistant professor of history; Miss Mary Settle, instructor in physical education; Miss Lula Margaret Wyly, instructor in speech; Miss Anna Mae Sharp, associate professor of violin; Miss Isabel McKinnel, instructor in chemistry; and Mrs. Adabelle Patrick Allan.

Dodd Cramming

Dean William G. Dodd will be the honors work student coming up for his final examination in general education. It is rumored that Dr. Dodd has been cramming for this examination for some three weeks. The examining committee will be composed of Dr. Anna F. Liddell, chairman of the committee; Dr. Dorothy Disher, assistant professor of psychology; Mr. Earl Vance, professor of journalism; and Mr. Henry F. Becker, associate professor of geography.

The personnel of the musical number under the direction of Mr. Walter Cowles has not yet been announced, but it will have a place on the program.

Superintendent of State Boys' Industrial School Will Speak Here Feb. 28

Millard Davidson, superintendent of the state Boys' Industrial school at Marianna, will speak in the Augusta Conradi theater, Thursday night, February 28, at 8.00 o'clock. The occasion will be a meeting of the local chapter of the American Association of University Professors, of which Dr. H. L. Waskom, associate professor of psychology, is president.

Mr. Davidson's address will be primarily on the work done at the boys' school. The meeting is open to all faculty members and students.

Boyd Sails for South

Dr. Mark F. Boyd, director of the division of malaria research of the Rockefeller foundation which is located in the Infirmary building, sailed on the United Fruit Company liner Tolos for South America last month. He sailed from New York and will be gone for several months.

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF
BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON .... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Athea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchanges, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyne Wahnish, Copy Editor, Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedra McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Pain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF
ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS ... Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS .... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON .... Circulation Manager
Ass't. Adv. Manager, Mary Patterson; Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sara Beth Davis.

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Birth-Control Comes of Age.

The birth control movement reached its majority this week when its outstanding proponents met in Washington and heard Mrs. Margaret Sanger, as one of the most indefatigable crusaders of all time, trace the story of her twenty-one year fight for freedom in limiting the size of families.

Among the guests were Senator Daniel O. Hastings and Representative Walter M. Pierce, who will address the 74th Congress as introducers of the new birth control bill to legalize the dissemination of birth control information.

That 250,000 babies were born last year to families on relief was reported to the Birth Control League which adopted a resolution urging a plan whereby families on relief rolls should be informed where to obtain "medical advice concerning the limitation of families by methods in accordance with their religious convictions."

Meanwhile the other side again lays plans to smother any attempt toward legislative action. Opposition has been voiced by the Methodist Episcopal Church Sonth, the Home Mission Board and Social Service Commission of Southern Baptists, and the United Lutheran Church of America. The Catholic church, of course, has historically been opposed to birth control, regarding it as a violation of divine and natural law. Among the influential individuals who have come out against reform legislation are Canon William Sheafe Chase and the Right Reverend Ernest M. Stires, Episcopalians; Bishop Warren A. Chandler, Methodist; and John A. Ryan, professor of industrial ethics at the Catholic University of America.

Suppression of birth-control information can not be supported by any argument of a secular nature. From a sociological point of view the present legislation results in poverty and crime; internationally, it causes population pressure and war; economically it lowers the standard of living, increases unemployment in the working classes and runs up the dole; politically, it is a violation of the rights of free press and free speech; from the standpoint of health, it necessitates improper medical attention and inadequate child-care; from the eugenic viewpoint its result is the survival of the unfit and a decline in the intelligence level of the race; ethically, as a consequence of the aforementioned reasons, it is detrimental to the welfare of man and therefore an anti-social measure.

As for the "natural law" argument, if one stops to think only a moment he must recognize that it is the genius of man that he has risen above his "natural" state. The use of eye-glasses, glandular extracts; tooth brushes, air-conditioned homes and airplanes are not natural, but artificial devices which have turned natural law to the progressive needs of man. They are the things on account of which we call ourselves civilized.

And as far as "divine" law is concerned, religious conceptions that are found to be incompatible with intelligence sooner or later have to go. That is the history of it. Whatever else God may be He is at least as intelligent as man is. But man still apparently prefers to think of a divine law as a taboo, even though thet taboo bring about the degeneration of mankind end the destruction of civilization.

College Students Can Fight Political Control of Schools

The American University has been the recipient of much adverse criticism in recent years from both internal and external sources, but Mr. Henry W. Holmes, author of an article entitled "Politics and the Schools" which appears in the current issue of The North American Review, believes that in the college lies the most potent weapon of society against political control of the public school system.

The method of certificating teachers by examinations, the merit lists, and tenure laws have been tried, says Mr. Holmes, but they are not an adequate safeguard against political interference. According to Mr. Holmes, graduation from a college may not be a perfect guarantee that a person will have the scholarship and professional power desirable in a teacher, but it is the best guarantee that we can require in our present civilization.

On the other hand, attendance at a college may not develop the qualities necessary for competent social workers, secretaries, home demonstration agents, dietitians, community leaders, or statesmen. College graduation may not insure more useful, intelligent, far-sighted citizens, but what better training do we now have to offer?

Certainly we agree that the colleges do need to take inventory and have a general "clean-up." However, the aimless criticism which has been hurled at the University by many writers without suggesting a possible improvement is abhorrent.

In this article Mr. Holmes advocates the appointment of college graduates, with graduates of institutions of the highest standing given preference, as a counteraction to the chicanery, bribery, and favoritism of the system now in widespread practice. He attempts to undermine the prevalent movement in support of the position: "Give the local boy or girl the best chance for a job. Keep the money paid in taxes for education within the city!"

The popularized argument favoring the "home-town product" is fallacious. The local boy or girl may not be the best teacher for a certain position. Then the school child, who should have sole consideration, is the one who suffers.

Florida State College for Women will graduate at least one hundred prospective teachers this June. The attitudes of these future teachers will have much influence toward the perpetuation or the disappearance of political influence in the schools. Will the college graduates be willing to assume their part of the responsibility for securing legislation which will raise the standards for teachers of the public schools?

Cynicism is Enemy of Campus Sororities.

American fraternities have seen the handwriting on the wall, and the message is not written in Greek.

A poll recently taken by the New York Times of student editors, faculty members, and college presidents in thirty-two key institutions in all parts of the country, gives little evidence that the fraternity system is in immediate danger of annihilation on college campuses. It does indicate, however, that certain reforms are incumbent upon the system if it is to combat three new enemies that have become storm centers in the fraternal world.

The first of these enemies, quite naturally, is hard times; the second, a new student seriousness and cynicism; and a third, the sudden concern of the colleges themselves with undergraduate housing and social life.

The poll advises the fraternities of three forces they must combat. Concerning our own campus, and of course, substituting sororities for fraternities, we would say that only two of these enemies are besieging Florida State.

The first of these forces, hard times, we admit even here. The third, the sudden concern of colleges with housing of students is not a new thing on this campus and therefore no menace to sororities. But the second, a new student seriousness and cynicism, is. No longer can sororities convince students that "you have to belong to a sorority if you want to get anywhere on campus." The theory has been quietly, firmly, and consistently disproved. No longer can a sorority as easily convince a students that after one week's rushing theirs is the group she is ready to swear life-long allegiance to.

We are not advocating the abolition of sororities at Florida State College for Women. But it would not be an ill-timed idea if sororities here, if they really desire to serve the campus, would face their "intelligent enemy" with reforms equally intelligent.

Magazine Thumbings

By MELVYNE WAHNISH

WHAT WILL THE SUPREME COURT SAY?

By Raymond Clapper

Review of Reviews January 1934

The New Deal is now lined up to take the last hurdle which blocks its pathway to complete success. We have seen how the administrative tide has swept down all that lay in its way: the congress of the country, the elections which were held, the bankers throughout the nation, and also the United States Chamber of Commerce. It is fast nearing the end of the road where the nine black-robed solemn deities stand ready to give final inspection. The question which is raised is simply, Will the New Deal engulf them too?

The Supreme Court will consider the administration's most fundamental assumptions of power: the abrogation of the gold clause, NRA, AAA, railroad pensions, and the engrossing Frazier Lemke farm mortgage moratorium. Undoubtedly, there appears to have grown up a fiction about our justices. It pleases us to believe that the operations of these nine super-human minds are devoid of all "human emotions, sympathies, social and political background, prejudices, and life-long mental conditioning". We appear to take a peculiar delight in believing that these qualities have been extracted from the justices and there remains only "pure legal thought processes."

Reviewing the past history of former cases which have been up before the Supreme Court we find that the associate justices, Van Devanter, McReynolds, Sutherland, and Butler seem to line up on the right wing. On the left is found Cardoza, Brandeis, and Stone. It is believed that much will depend on the decisions of Roberts and Hughes.

CORRUPTION IN THE WORLD WAR

By Marvin Robert Bendiner

American Mercury, February

Bendiner tells us that during the period of the World War "brazen alliances between private producers, and men in the government service were rife. Tip-offs, unscrupulous manipulations and the most shameless favoritism were the rule of the day."

We are told further that a great deal of money was expended supposedly for the purpose of building airplanes and yet, after the smoke had somewhat abated, we find that not a single American-made ship of any description ever reached the front. Bendiner trys to make us see what is behind the failure of the aircraft program. He tells how those who were guilty of sending contaminated food to the soldiers should themselves, in his opinion, have been lined up and shot.

The authors concludes that there is a dead certainity of graft in a war managed wholly by profit seekers. "No phase of American wartime period," he says, "was free from well-organized and systematic looting at the hands of business men."

COULD THIS REALLY BE AN "AGE OF PLENTY"

By J. George Frederick

Current Review, February

The question raised here is, Can we produce "plenty?" Those most intimately acquainted with the status of American industry believe staunchly that it would be quite impossible to reach within the next two years the production point necessary for universal plenty.

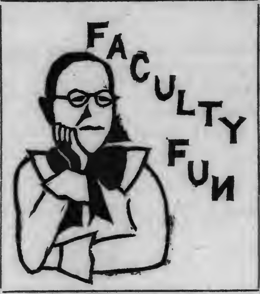
Paradoxically, just when we find the Utopian securities prospering on the Pacific coast we find that the main supports under the Eastern economic Utopias are falling down.

Let us face the actuality. We have reduced hours of labor from fifty-one to about forty (with the A. F. of L. clamoring for thirty). We find it would take a twenty-five per cent increase of efficiency to bring production to where it was in 1929. But, the author points out, there has been a decrease in efficiency.

Undeniably, one of the main difficulties with such a system of "plenty," is that a surprising portion of that production, "does not hit the moving target of desire." We need to closer coordinate production and desire.

Frederick deplores a "plenty" civilization which might develop "in which each citizen would be a virtual duplicate of another, well fed, well led, and well subdued." He concludes that such a society goes contrary to all laws of individuality.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By C. Williams



BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKER

ANYONE seeking to describe the tenor of European news in one word this week would have to search only a moment for such a word. Sinister and awe-gripping is the one syllable three letter word that is south—war.

In Italty Sunday night a call to the colors went out to 75,000 young men of three different classes—a mobilization order that is perhaps the greatest since the World War ended. The situation prompting the conscription is a further clash of Italian troops and Ethiopian forces on the Italian - Abyssinian - Somaliland border in Northern Africa. This clash, reported to have occurred January 29, resulted in the death of five native soldiers fighting under the Italian standard.

For the past several months, you remember, Italian-Abyssinian clashes have been recurrent on the border with the death toll of approximately a hundred lives. Abyssinia has repeatedly appealed to the League of Nations to arbitrate the matter, but Italy has contended that she and Abyssinia are bound by a treaty to negotiate directly all disputes arising between them. And the League of Nations has certainly shown great weakness and fear of Mussolini in its dodging of the Abyssinian appeals.

Italy is contending that the clashes have been caused by Abyssinian raids into her border lands. Abyssinia maintains that the skirmishes have been a display of high spirits on the part of the local Italian officers. But Abyssinia is attempting to arbitrate the matter, proposing the establishment of a neutral zone between the border patrols of Italy and Abyssinia. On the other hand, Abyssinia is amassing between fifty and eighty thousand troops in case of "emergency".

As to the outcome of this affair the general consensus of opinion is that Italy will seize Abyssinia using the same excuses for the seizure of Abyssinia that Japan used for that of Manchukuo. This doesn't seem improbale when it is remembered thet Italy has been land-hungry in a hurt way ever since the spoils were divided unfairly in the last war according to her way of thinking.

IRONICALLY the Anglo-French Peace pact of last week helps give European news a war like tenor. It is reported that England and France have informed the German Government in no uncertain terms that unless it agrees to the Anglo-French pact an iron ring of 'unfriendly powers' will be thrown around Germany. It would be folly to try to predict whether or not Germany will accept the plan as proposed by Great Britain and France. A certainty it is, however, that the creating of a larger army and the instituting of universal conscription will follow in Germany if Germany refuses the pact and no other alternative is offered. And such a course on the part of Germany will give rise to an armament race in Europe.

THE American Association of College Editors through the intrumentality and kindness of the Literary Digest is now conducting a 'peace poll' among college students. The ballot sent out asks these questions:

1. Can the United States stay out of war?
2. Would you fight if the United States were invaded?
3. Would you fight if the United States were the invader?
4. Should the United States have the largest navy and air force?
5. Should the government control munitions manufacture?
6. Should there be universal conscription?
7. Should the United States enter the League of Nations?

The final results of the poll are to be eagerly awaited and evaluated. The Middlebury Campus well summarises the importance the vote may have: "War is youth's business, after all, and if youth can lift a protest loud enough that protest cannot be ignored."

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

COLLEGE IS STILL A GOOD INVESTMENT

Ever since the day that the Apostle Paul, while leaving Rome on the Appian Way, was confronted with the question "Quo Vadis," which translated means, "whither goest thou," this classical question has been seized upon frequently and applied to innumerable problems, social, economic, and political.

Even today many current observers are interpreting the present problems in the light of where they are leading us.

Millions of college students throughout the nation today, on the road to something which they have no means of determining, are asking themselves, 'Where am I headed for?" the modern phrasing of the old "Quo Vadis."

It does not necessarily infer that a student is afflicted with an overdose of pessimism when he asks the question, and after sizing up the situation, decided that his future destiny is dimmed by clouds that show no evidence of possessing that silver lining.

The young law student, looking about, sees the great surplus of barristers, and begins to become skeptical of a future in the law profession. Likewise, the future doctor, reading of the unwarranted low incomes in the medical profession, wonders if the ultimate attainment of his dreams is possible.

The individual who has chosen teaching as his life contribution stands bewildered when enlightened for the number of unemployed teachers in the state and nation. And if he is so far visioned as to actually picture himself having a position, he sees himself receiving a salary that makes him envious of relief workers.

After taking inventory of current conditions, it is possible to come but to the conclusion that the road of higher education over which we trod leads only to a questionable destination. Although we cannot answer the question of where the college student is headed for, and in spite of the fact that conditions justify a pessimistic outlook, the one who can see beyond the breadlines is able to vision opportunities that transcend those of the past.

It is true that college students are finding it difficult to obtain positions, or even jobs, and it is a certainty that there is a surplus of applicants for every opening.

While the present crisis continues, it must be expected that such a situation should prevail, and carrying the thought further, it must be expected that when the depression ends, as it must, the field of opportunities will again open. There will be just as much of a demand for the educated individual as there has been in the past.

The wealth of the nation is still intact, the same desire for advancement motivates the people, and it will be the trained mind that will again come at a monetary premium.

Thus the answer of where we are headed for, the modern "Quo Vadis," can be answered only by the conclusion thet our present course will lead to key positions of each one's special line of endeavor, and that following the road of higher education will be as good an investment as it has ever been in the past.—D. H.

—Michigan State News.

WORLD COURT!

This week the United States Senate repudiated the World Court and voted, as it has previously done, to avoid "foreign entanglements." The action comes somewhat as a surprise, as it had been advocated by the President and it was anticipated that the overwhelming Democratic majority in the Senate would ratify the American entrance.

The action of the Senate may be wise, but we wonder whether or not the clamoring of the nationalists and even of the militarists had something to do with it. Public opinion is the chief concern of politicians and without doubt a substantial majority of the lawmakers would vote not so much as they thought, but, rather, as many of the "people at home" thought.

The World Court has become well established. Its place in deciding international disputes has been recognised. American jurists have served with honor on its bench. American thought and action has had much to do with its rise to power and influence.

Yet the American nation refuses to adhere. The nation hears much of some doctrine which was enunciated many years before airplanes, fast steamships, radio and rapid communications were thought of. "Entangling alignments" are considered the great evil of evils and the greatest power on earth must contribute nothing toward internationalism.

The League of Nations, conceived by Woodrow Wilson, a great American president despite the World War, was early refused. Here again it was held that America had best steer clear. The World Court, child of the league, has received the same welcome.

Our knowledge of international affairs is indeed limited. But the signs of the times are apparent even to the ordinary man This nation, nor any other nation,

(Continued on page three)

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticisms. Letters should be signed, marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the postoffice.

OPEN POLITICS

The time has come, the Walrus said,
To talk of other things,
Of seas and ships and sealing wax,
And cabbages—and politics.

With apologies to John Runyan—or was it Shakspeare—we meant to cast no asperions upon cabbages. After all, a cabbage is a cabbage. It admits it's a cabbage, while our politics—(we'd better start a new paragraph).

After all, why can't we have open politics? Why must we vote blindly for Susie Purplepitz because she's a sorority sister, for Lulu Ogglehector because she sits next to us in French class and was so sweet as to loan us her sentences to write on the board (the idea that Lulu might have had other motives than love of us never occurs to us) and for Abigail Simp because she's so blonde and would look nice making announcements in a black cap and gown.

Is there any good, logical reason why students who would like to run for a certain office, who have ideas for greater efficiency, who stand for certain things, cannot come out and say so? After all, the sooner we learn to vote for the principle we believe right and would like to see in practice, rather than for the girl who has managed to make the most acquaintances, we will approach adult status.

There is no sense in saying we have no politics, because we have. And the whispering, under-cover, you-vote-for-my-candidate-and-we'll-vote-for-yours system is certainly not one worthy of college women of today who pride themselves on facing things squarely, in the open. And if college is to prepare us for life, or if it is life, not the least important of our duties and privileges as citizens will be casting votes. Our political system here cannot be said to contribute towards our ability to do so intelligently.

Signed: Betty Ellen Smith.

Collegiate Come-Backs

As an antidote to that annual feast of the lovelorn, St. Valentine's Day, a celebration which we personally think is sponsored by candy and salutation card manufacturers, we offer an essay on men.

"Men are what women hope to marry. They have two feet, two hands, two eyes, and sometimes two wives, but never more than one idea or one dollar at the same time. Like cigarettes men are all made of the same material—the only difference is that some are a little better disguised than others. Generally speaking they may be divided into three classes: husbands, bachelors and widowers. Husbands are of three varieties—prizes, surprises and consolation prizes. An eligible bachelor is a mass of obstinacy surrounded by suspicion. A widower is one who has experienced life and is now ready to enjoy it.

"Making a husband out of a man is one of the highest known arts. It requires science, sculpture, common sense, faith, hope and charity. (And the greatest of these is charity). They want to marry a woman like "mother," but marry one just the opposite and spend the remainder of their lives in an attempt to make her like "mother"—(Both conceptions accepted).

"If you flatter a man you frighten him to death; if you don't you bore him to death. If you permit him to make love to you he tires of you in the end; if you don't he tires of you in the beginning. If you join him in drinking and smoking he swears you are driving him to the devil. If you don't approve and proceed to reform him he swears you are driving him to the devil anyway. If you are the clinging vine type he doubts whether you have a brain. If you are modern, advanced and indifferent he doubts if you have a heart. If you are popular with other men he is jealous of you; if you are not he wonders what he sees in you.

"But gosh darn men—we love 'em anyway."

—The Log

• • • •

We wonder how many know that abstemious and facetious are the only words in the English language that have all the vowls following in their proper order . . . Well, were we right?

• • • •

Mary, Mary quite contrary
How does your garden grow.
With seeds, you dope!

—Miami Hurricane

• • • •

The editors of the Cincinnati Bearcat suggest as a topic for an editorial "Has the University Any Place on the Campus?" Some progressive student should bring this up at a senate meeting.

• • • •

A learned gentleman writing in a popular magazine remarks that a bore is a person who, when you ask him how he is, tells you. We have always heard that a bore is one who talks so much about himself that you can't get in a word about yourself. A bore makes time an eternity (some wag is already saying "That's the hell of it!")

• • • •

Following a wedding ceremony in Burma it is customary for the bride's mother to escort the couple to the nearest beach and push the son-in-law's head under the sand for a full minute—then they are considered man and wife . . . Sounds like an ostrich honeymoon to us. The American mother-in-law gives her maternal blessing by taking up residence in the guest room of the new home.

• • • •

Things we could do without on campus:

1. The two-hundred pounder who sings "All of Me" in the shower every night.
2. Regulations which prevented student attendance at "Green Pastures" last week-end.
3. The "A" student who goes around betting candy bars that she flunked that math exam.
4. These much-discussed intellectual snobs?

• • • •

History tells us that slavery was introduced into the United States in 1619 . . . but we're willing to bet that many a marriage took place between 1492 and 1600.

• • • •

The moon is just a scare-cat
Afraid to make a sound
So scared, no matter where it goes
It's always looking 'round.

• • • •

(Exchange Ed's note: Two orchids and a nasturtium to Grace Mary Webster, our guest columnist this week.)

Faculty Plans Guild Program

American Composers Will Feature Meeting On Thursday Night

A program featuring the works of American composers, including original compositions of Walter R. Cowles, professor of theory and director of the orchestra here, will be presented Thursday evening in the college auditorium at the open meeting of the Tallahassee branch of the Florida chapter of the American Guild of Organists. Four faculty members, Miss Mary Winslow, Miss Etta Lucile Robertson, Miss Margaret Whitney Dow, and Miss Anna Mae Sharpe, who are members of the organization, will appear on the program.

Miss Winslow, instructor of piano, will play The White Peacock and Scherzo by Griffes.

Miss Robertson, associate professor of voice, and pupil of Yeatman Griffith, will sing Twilight, at the Spring, and The Shepherd to His Love, all of which were composed by Mr. Cowles.

Miss Dow, associate professor of organ and theory, will play Told by the Campfire by Goodwin, The Kettle Boils from Fireside Fancies by Clokey, Black Butterflies by Jepson, and Rejoice, Ye Pure in Heart by Sowerby.

Miss Anna Mae Sharpe, associate professor of violin, and pupil of Remy in Paris and Michael Press in New York, will also play selections from American composers.

This is the only meeting of the American Guild of Organists that will be held this year to which the public is invited.

Carnival Will Begin On March First

(Continued from page one)

Queen and their court will be held in convocation soon. The King and Queen and two couples of their court are chosen from the senior class, two couples from the junior class, one couple from the sophomore class and one couple from the freshman class.

Freshman Carnival

After dinner, the freshman carnival and dance will be held in the gymnasium. Six booths for hot dogs, cold drinks, candy, popcorn, fortune-telling, and various side-shows will be constructed in the lobby of the gymnasium by freshman committees who were appointed yesterday by Ann Misall, general chairman.

The King and Queen with their court will be crowned on the dance floor following the carnival. All students are invited to the dance which will be on the order of a regular Play Nite, said Margaret Edwards, who is in charge.

When You Think
of
Cleaning, Dyeing and
Alterations
Think of the
Central Cleaners
"Your Patronage is Our Pleasure"

Sport Slants

Odds and Evens Share Hockey, Soccer Honors

The first of the series of Odd-Even hockey and soccer games were played last Saturday morning, resulting in a victory for the Odds in hockey with a score of 6-1. The Evens won the soccer game with the close score of 1-0.

Line-up for Odd hockey team: Ferguson, Barton, Takash, Mitchell, Makemson, Ireland, Simpson, Taylor, Weeks, Hamilton, Seekens, Lewis, and Maxwell.

Line-up for Even hockey team: Panowski, Cooper, Bissel, Pierce, Pratt, Barret, Dickson, Macker, Holloway, Nuzam; official, Autrey.

Line-up for Odd soccer team: Royall, Daane, Bailey, Miller, Redfield, Stevens, Hubbard, Devine, Lyle. Line-up for Even soccer team: Tuten, Brooks, Lewis, Marsh, West, Levy, Wilkinson, Cook, Sands, Oslund, Hales; official, Fox.

Dr. Koo Plots Course Of World Mindedness

(Continued on page three)

tween countries will bring about any cooperation.

Dr. Koo then faced the problem of meeting other countries against their own background instead of pitting the conditions of one country against the background of another. He told a story in illustration of his point of a Chinese man, traveling with him in America who, when passing through a section of the country where elections were underway, and seeing the numerous political advertisements with pictures on the telephone posts remarked. "They must have a great many criminals in this section of the country." Dr. Koo hastened to explain the situation to him. In China the only posters on telephone poles concern state prisoners.

People Are Individuals

The next great mistake travelers make, according to Dr. Koo, is the practice of gathering all the people of a country in a lump and having only one viewpoint of them, rather than treating them as individuals which they most surely are. People from one country sometimes fail to realize that all peoples are alike in spite of superficial differences such as race and color and dress. All people have the same heart and experience, the same joys and sorrows.

"There are three clear strains of human life," Dr. Koo said. "The first is displayed in India, where the country is organized around the dominant idea of man's relation to God. In China the country is organized around the dominant idea of man's relation to man. In the West the dominant idea is man's relation to material surroundings. There are other ideas, but these are the fundamental ones. Each strain is incomplete without the others. The three should be integrated into a whole as it was in the life of Christ. The peoples of all countries are dissatisfied. It is because isolated strains are incomplete."

Plays Chinese Flute

Dr. Koo closed his lecture with several selections on his Chinese flute. The flute was a single stick of bamboo with several holes bored in one side. It had no mechanisms, no parts, no reeds. In China it sells for less than ten cents.

Dr. Koo is a graduate of St. John's University in Shanghai and served for nine years as an official in the administrative department of the Chinese railway service. He was a member of the opium conference in Switzerland called by the League of Nations.

Dr. Koo was introduced by Reverend Albert Kissling, of Jacksonville, who is the leader of Religious Emphasis Week.

On The Spot With Sports

It seems that the Odds and Evens are dividing honors in athletic games this year. At the hockey and soccer games last Saturday the Odds and Evens both claimed a victory.

* * *

The rainy weather put a damper on the intramural basketball games that were scheduled to be played this week, but if the weather permits they will all be run off before next week-end.

* * *

An announcement has been received from Betty Bailey that Mary Miller will manage Odd basketball for next year, Mildred Emmelhains will be in charge of Even basketball, Beth Daane is to handle Odd volley ball, and Doris McKenzie will manage Even volley ball.

* * *

Tonight is the night for the freshmen to shine. Their annual swimming meet will be held in the college pool at 9:30.

309 Students On Honor Roll For Semester

(Continued from page one)

Green, Alice Summerville, and Mrs. Rose Williams.

The following seniors are on approbation: Margaret Ansley, Bessie Bailey, Mary Ellen Bailey, Elizabeth Barker, Beth Barnes, Barbara Bell, Mildred Bess, Jean Boyd, Betty Bradford, Elizabeth Brown, Anne Burgess, Nancy Bush, Mary Catherine Carter, Marjorie Carter, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Esther Daffin, Ruth Daniel, Carolina DeMontigne, Lila DeVore, Margaret Louise Dodd, Marian Dow, Anne Duval, Virginia Early, Margarette Early, Frances Ellenberg, Olivia Embrey.

Mary Louise Filer, Esther Ruth Finlay, Mary Helen Forth, Adielyn Fox, Liley Priscia, Helenmary Fritsch, Lucy Fulghum, Cornelia Garrick, Anna Marie Good, Hazel Goza, Jane Graham, Irene Green, Jean Hamner, Elizabeth Hampton, Violet Hayward, Lois Hasel, Margaret Henderson, Belle Henshaw, Mollie B. Holden, Florence Jennings, Lucille Jones, Mary Claire Kimball, Evelyn L'Abbe, Avaline Lancaster, Alma Loudermilk, Sara Maxwell, Mrs. Ovieda McPatter, Margaret McLaughlin.

Nedra McNamara, Anita Mitchell, Ellen Moore, Mary Mooty, Jennie Rae Nall, Muriel Nelson, Margaret Nickle, Julia Norfleet, Juanita Pace, Frances Parks, Edith Patterson, Elinor Payne, Helen Phillips, LaLuce Planck, Nell Price, Evaline Rankin, Claire Redfield, Carol Reeves, Hazel Royall, Lela Rushing, Doris Seals, Helen Shelley, Josephine Skeels, Marie Slack, Alice Slone, Thelma Smith, Dorothea Standley, Mildred Stevens, Bertha Stulpner, Virginia Tucker, Melvyne Wahnish, Mary Virginia Warren, Elizabeth Wheeler, Martha Whitaker, Jessie Lee Wilder, Frances Marie Williams, Lois Virginia Williams, Georgia Ruth Work.

Juniors on Approbation

Juniors on approbation are Silvia Atren, Elizabeth Beach, Mary Bennett, Kathryn Bayer, Katherine Blood, Elizabeth Brooks, Mary Carson, Virginia Cary, Roberta Clifford, Jean Crago, Virginia Cromartie, Barbara Crosland, Barbara Curry, Esther Davis, Ruth Dickson, Mary Catherine Drenan; Minna Dunn, Ruth Feinberg, Patricia Given, Lucille Gould, Margaret Graham, Barbara Greene, Janet Griffitts, Anna Cone Groover, Helen Hammond, Winifred Hansen, Marjorie Harris, Mrs. Alberta Hinson.

Becky Lou Hopkins, Melba Hutchinson, Emily Johnson, Rebecca Keith, Jewel Kelly, Charlotte Kinzie, Harriet Knapp, Sara Krentzman, Gertrude Kuhn, Mary Evelyn Lanehart, Opal Langley, Rosalie Lastra, Dorothy Leach, Floy Lenert, Goldie Lewinsky, Lucy Gee Linn, Jessilee Lumpkin, Mauvis Lussier, Zula Marchetta, Mary Elizabeth Marshall, Marian Mason, Sadie Matthews.

Laura Mathis, Mary Irene McKay, Betty Mayer, Sara Mikell, Dorothy Osincup, Sara Bell Palmer, Rosiland Parker, Frances Passmore, Laurita Pearson, Mary Frances Pemberton, Virginia Peterson, Alice Porter, Mary Frances Price, Dorothy Purse, Murae Reddick, Joyce Anderson Reed, Dorothy Marcia Shaw, Edna Lee Shuler, Nettie Taylor, Vivian Teate, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Bertha Veith, Alice Wahl, Mrs. Frances Wall, Edith Webb, Grace Mary Webster, Grace Wicks, Nancy Wilkinson, Edna Irene Williams, Katherine Yongue.

Sophomores Rank High

The sophomores are Bernice Allen, Ellen Anderson, Helen Ayala, Muriel Baker, Vera Barefoot, Josephine Binion, Hazel Bowman, Marian Carson, Mary Jo Clayton, Mildred Clein, Dorothy Crews, Rosiland Daum, Elise Davis, Margaret Delaney, Mary Elizabeth Dolfin, Robbye Estes, Sara Everett, Mrs. Jessie Ferrell, Anna Glen, Betty Ann Graham, Silvia Guito, Rosemary Hamley, Esther H. Hodek, Lottie Ruth Howard.

Lynelle Kennington, Alma Lester, Virginia Long, Betty Mack, Martha Makemson, Virginia Merry, Lillian Messie, Anna Marie Mitchell, Dorothy Moeller, Carmen Moran, Fay Muchel, Marjorie Noggle, Bernice Oliver, Clotilde O'Rourke, Pearl Overhultz, Ethel Pacheco, Anna Louise Pates, Julia Radford, Anne Sams, Marie Spurlock, Yvonne Taft, Viola Taylor, Mary Ellen Tiller, Julia Vanderite, Sue Whitaker, Eleanor Williams, Mary Wing.

The freshmen are Grace Adams, Kathryn Andrews, Edith Arbuthnot, Phil Asher, Frances E. Baldwin, Dorothy Barclay, Ann Bayly, Judith Bell, Rosalee Berga, Beverly Brown; Lillian Burford, Marie Busselle, Charlotte Carlton, Kitty Craney, Louise Doyle, Helen Eisman, Phyllis Gewin, Evelyn Glazier, Annette Harris, Amy Marie Harris, Barbara Ruth Hendry, Ann Hickman, Marjorie Horton, Elizabeth Jenks, Marie Joffre, Edwinola Jordan, Genevieve Kenly, Elizabeth Knapp.

Nellie Lamar, Ermine Lawrence, Louise Lingo, Lois C. Long, Fortuna Lopez, Mary Virginia Lopez, Hazel Manuel, Dorothea Marsh, Hazel Myrick, Geneva Nelson, Sallie Burt Nusum, Ethel Ogden, Elizabeth Ostlund, Gaynelle Perry, Mary Margaret Pfeiffer, Elizabeth Pierce, Ruth Prather, Annette Quinby, Rachel Rothstein, Eleanor Ruff, Rose Safer, Isabel Sands, Margaret Schmidli, Violet Shampine, Marguerite Sjostrom, Virginia Schultz, Marianna Swank, Jean Tilden, Sara Wells, Virginia White, Helen Wilhelm, Constance Williams.

Chi Phi Installs U. of F. Chapter

Alpha Delta Fraternity Celebrates Occasion This Week-End

This week-end in Gainesville will mark the installation of the local Alpha Delta fraternity as Theta Delta chapter of the Chi Phi, oldest National social fraternity in the United States.

The formal installation will terminate twelve years of growth by the chapter which was granted its charter unanimously at the Chi Phi congress held in Atlanta in August, 1934. Chi Phi will be the twenty-fifth national fraternity to come to the University campus since 1904.

Activities in connection with the installation will cover a period of two days. The active chapter of Alpha Delta will be initiated into Chi Phi this afternoon, and alumni tomorrow. There will be a buffet supper and informal dance at the chapter house tonight.

Tomorrow afternoon Mrs. George Edward Holt, of Miami, wife of a charter member of the Vanderbilt chapter will be hostess at a tea at the Hotel Thomas for the lady guests of Chi Phis.

A formal invitation banquet and ball, also at the hotel Thomas, will round out the week-end festivities Saturday night.

Officers of the fraternity for the current year are Edward L. DuBois, president; Elmer Z. Griffin, vice president; Roger A. Barker, treasurer; Everett A. Clay, secretary; William Dabiels, chaplian, and John B. Stormes, sentinel. James E. Chase, professor of economics at the University, is the faculty advisor.

Among the Florida State College girls who will attend the installation are Irene Edwards, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Margaret Kay Anderson, Evelyn Kennard, Edith Hayes Effinger, and Kathryn Todd.

* * *

The ukulele was reproduced by the Hawaiians from the guitar introduced by Portuguese traders.

Library Recommends Books on Religion

In conjunction with Religious Emphasis week the Library is offering a bulletin board display of books on religion and has set aside a special table of new books to be browsed among in spare moments. The following are recommended as food for religious thought.

Teaching Religion Creatively—A. J. William Myers.

The Unknown God—Alfred Noyes.

What Can We Believe?—James Gordon Gilkey.

Do Dead Men Live Again?—V. F. Storr.

Religion Meets The Modern Mind—Russell Henry Stafford.

The Right To Believe—Eleanor Harris.

The Ordeal Of Western Religion—Paul Hutchinson Rowland.

Twelve Modern Apostles—G. K. Chesterton.

The Meaning And Truth Of Religion—Eugene William Lyman.

Jesus And Human Personality—Albert Edward Day.

The Hope Of The World—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

The Reason For Living—Robert Russell Wicks.

Does Science Leave Room For Religion?—R. O. P. Taylor.

Israel Would Have Justice

(Continued from page one)

lying this, have traded freedom for such a system because they feared the dread of unemployment.

As one explanation to the fact that over 4,200,000 families and 800,000 single people, physically capable of employment are out of work, Dr. Israel stated that until recent years the normal development of a million and a half young people demanding work has been balanced by the release from work of an equal number to retirement or death.

Since, however, our present economic state forbids retirement at the normal period, this balance no longer exists and youth has no respect for the system which denies them what they have a right to demand. Dr. Israel showed how this struggle for jobs leads to his second dread horseman, intolerance and prejudice. "You can make beautiful sermons to the effect that you should love thy neighbor as thyself," said Mr. Israel, "but if you are going to have a system in which the fundamental rights of social justice are denied, you will have to discard the ideals of brotherhood and cooperation."

Unless there is more social justice, he declared, our present economic system can but lead ultimately to war, the third horseman. By the spirit of freedom, and the emphasis of initiative, the American system has opened up pioneer realms, but unfortunately, said Dr. Israel, capitalism will always need a frontier, either physical in the way of land, or as an economic frontier of some new industry.

In answer to the rhetorical question "Can capitalism work in a closed society in which there are no frontiers?" Dr. Israel declared that the economic system will either have to undergo drastic revisions, or some additional markets must be found, of which there are now but two extensive ones, China and Africa, for those countries, formerly our markets, are now for the most part our competitors. It is the inevitable push of this pressure, warned Dr. Israel, that is going to drive us into war.

Individual demoralization was named by the speaker as the fourth horseman of his social implications under discussion. "When the crash came," he stated, "in our effort to avoid the necessary dole, we even made begging legitimate, and thus we tore away every vestige of dignity only to leave scars on many for life."

One inalienable right of every human being stressed Dr. Israel, is the right to marry and to have a home. Because of the scarcity of jobs, we are, he said, presenting young people with a serious dilemma which requires either a decision to violate conventions and morals or else to hazard the whole thing and find their dreams shattered on the rocks of economic disaster.

Dr. Israel closed his lecture with the hope that in answer to these problems presented by unemployment, some solution will be found which will lead to ultimate social justice.

Following the lecture, a large number of faculty members and students adjourned to the Augusta Conradi theater where a half hour open forum was held in which Dr. Israel discussed questions raised by the group.

Emory Glee Club Is Well Received

Varied Program Includes Many Folk Songs

The internationally known Emory glee club opened its program last Friday night with the fourteenth century hymn, "Concordi Laetitia" arranged by Deems Taylor. This song and the fourteenth century Roman "Adoramus Te" by Palestrina, were written definitely in the Catholic spirit while "Creation's Hymn" by Beethoven and "Now Let Ev'ry Tongue Adore Thee" by Bach are in the spirit of Protestantism.

The second part of the program included "Give A Rouse" by Bantock, which is based on the "Cavalier Tunes" of Browning, "Song of the Flea" from Goethe's Faust, and "The Sleigh" by Richard Kountz, emulative of the Cossack chorus.

Between the second and third parts of the program Ralph Gibbs, the club's accompanist played Brahms's "Rhapsody in G Minor" as a piano solo.

In the third part of their program the "South's Sweetest Singers" presented a group of negro spirituals including "Ezekiel Saw De Wheel" by Burleigh, "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" by Huntley, and "Joshua Fit De Battle Of Jericho," which was especially arranged for the club.

A group of folk-songs from other lands made up the next part of the program. "Doctor Foster," arranged by Herbert Hughes and "Simple Simon", arranged by Hughes but based on Couperin. "Old King Cole", Cecil Forsyth. "Chit Chat," and English folk-song, completed this group.

The glee club concluded its program with a second group of negro spirituals most of which have never been set down in music but are handed down from member to member in the glee clubs at Emory University.

Moore Visits New House

Miss Virginia Moore, home improvement specialist of the State Home Demonstration staff, last Saturday, inspected a Steelasco house of Spanish type that is being constructed in Orlando by its inventor at approximately one third the cost of the usual house. Miss Moore had received a letter from Puerto Rico asking about the Steelasco house which she discovered last fall while making a study of the subsistent farm houses at Crossville and Norris, Tennessee. The Steelasco house, constructed largely of steel, is a recent invention according to Miss Moore, and is said to be more durable than former methods of construction.

Rickards Will Address A.A.U.W. on Financing Of the Public Schools

The legislative committee of the American Association of University Women, meeting Monday evening, February 18, at 8 o'clock in the library of the Demonstration school, will hear James S. Rickards, executive secretary of the Florida Education association speak on the subject "How Public Schools are Financed."

This, the second meeting of the committee, which is discussing present tax systems of the state of Florida, is open to faculty and students who are interested.

Rev. Kissling Is Religious Week Leader

(Continued from page one)

phasis week, discussion groups will be held on each floor one evening during the week, and vesper services for the next four weeks will be planned with this in mind. Various church groups will be in charge of these services.

Committees for Week

The following committees have been functioning during Religious Emphasis week: general chairman, Jennie Rae Nall; publicity committee, Miss Katherine Rawls, advisor, Barbara Garfunkel, chairman, Louise Robertson, Barbara Hubbard, Jane Hubbard, Martha Makemson, and Lillian Shapiro; entertainment, Miss Kathleen Platt; advisor, Alma Loudermilk; chairman, Clotilde O'Rourke. Sara Rutledge, and Ruth Orlin; banquet, Marie Certain, chairman, Dorothy Moorehead, Barbara Green, and Marie Taylor.

Finance, Miss Luella Richie; advisor, Wava Godwin, chairman, Betty Hampton, Mary Bennett, Mary Ola Reynolds; program, Miss Rachael Wylie; advisor, Katherine Blood, chairman, Frances Fabrick, Anne Norris, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite; music, Margaret Nickle; decorations, Miss Winnie Lee Davis; advisor, Virginia Clayton, chairman, Patricia Foster, Olivia Embrey, Gertrude Kuhn, Evelyn Collins, Nell Mayes; follow-up committee, Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, advisor, Lucy Gee Lynn, chairman, Rachael McKinnon, Lillian Turlington, Betty Ellen Smith, and Helen Eisman, members.

FSC Students Honor President Conradi

(Continued from page one)

Association of Colleges. He is a member of the N. E. A., the American Geography Society, and the Society for the Scientific Study of Education.

Dr. Conradi was born in New Bremen, Ohio, on February 20, 1869. He received his A. B. and A. M. degrees at Indiana university and his Ph. D. at Clark University in 1904.

From 1896-1902 Dr. Conradi was superintendent of schools in Carlisle, Indiana, after which he came to Florida where he was principal of the Normal and Industrial school of St. Petersburg until he came here.

Contemporary Students

(Continued from page two)

cannot isolate itself. The United States trades and communicates with every other nation under the sun. Communication has removed barriers and internationalism may come some day. At least, we are learning a great deal about other people and other nations.

America cannot remain aloof and exert a great influence. Its power should be coupled with that of the other nations in working for the adjustment of territorial, economic, military and other world-wide affairs.—The Tulane Hullabaloo.

All Is Set For Swimming Meet

(Continued from page one)

Sarah Graham, Carol Jones, Louise Gehan.

Frances Lewis, Mary Katherine Scott, Celia Gary, Marguerite Sjostrom, Hazel Bennett, Frances Bishop, Mollie Holden, Betty Bary, Helen Donn, Betty Ostlund, Kathryn Pratt, Annette Quinby, Madge Glenn, Jean Lykes, Elizabeth Korst, Barbara Wells, Eleanor Pulford, Jane Kirksby, Mary Beaver, and Betty Clark.

Athletic Group Names Delegates

Meyer, L'Abbe To Be In Charge of Basketball

At a meeting of the Athletic Association Wednesday night two delegates were elected to attend the American Federation of College Women's convention which will be held in Greensboro, North Carolina March 22-25. The incoming president and the outgoing president of the association were elected to attend the sessions which will be held on the campus of North Carolina State College for Women.

A date was set for baseball and tennis season. Practice will begin a week from Monday with Betty Mayer in charge of Even baseball practice, Evelyn L'Abbe in charge of Odd baseball practice, and Dorothy Lancaster in charge of Even tennis.

The Athletic association voted to do away with the practice of giving blazers to those who win a certain number of athletic F's and readopt the plan of giving emblems in their place.

Eta Sigma Phi Holds Second Horace Program

Eta Sigma Phi, classical honorary, met Thursday evening at the home of Dr. Olivia Dorman and Miss Edith West. The program, in charge of Martha Whitaker, was the second of a series of the Odes of Horace, a famous Latin poet whose bimillennium will be celebrated this year.

Various members of the honorary gave talks based on the second book of the Odes. Avaline Lancaster spoke on "Philosophy", Mary Leila Lumley on "Nature". "Friends of Horace" was the topic of Catherine Ash, and Dorothy Moorhead discussed "Government as Portrayed by Horace".

Dorman and West Speak At Next Meeting of Club

All groups of the Classical club will meet in 102 Library at 7:30 Thursday night to hear an address by Dr. Olivia N. Dorman on Horace's stay at Athens and his university life there. Miss Edith West will also speak on "The Topography of Rome".

Siamese and Javanese Art Shown Here

(Continued from page one)

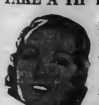
tion in Hindu thought involves restoration as a consequence, and in this respect his symbol is the linga. In a third aspect Siva is the great ascetic, the worker of miracles by virtue of penance and meditation. He is also God of the arts, especially of dancing. Siva is said to have upwards of 1,000 titles because of his many aspects.

The heads and busts of Siva are usually crowned with elaborate diadem known as usnisha bhusana, with matted hair dressed high (known as Jata Mukata) on the form of a cone in tiered bands and the symbol "Om" in relief on front of the cone within a rectangular niche. It has been said by authorities in this field of art that single heads may be identified as Siva with fair plausibility whenever the symbol "Om" appears in the coiffure.

Other pieces in the exhibit include several heads and busts of Buddhas, twenty Javanese Wajang leather polychromed puppets and ten Javanese carved masks.

This exhibit was arranged by a New York importing firm under the auspices of the College Art Association.

TAKE A TIP FROM US....



From friend to dear friend nothing more fittingly expresses sentiment than a good portrait—one that is really you. You will not be disappointed if it is made by

THE PIKE STUDIO

THE SUPRISE STORE
"TALLAHASSEE'S BUSIEST DEPARTMENT STORE"
SHOWING A COMPLETE LINE OF NEW SPORT OXFORDS
$1.95 and $2.95
SANDALS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION $1.00 AND UP!
Phone 299 Cor. Jefferson and Adams Sts.

SPRING SHOWING
of
DRESSES AND
HATS
THE LADIES'
SHOP
"Where Styles are Shown First for Less"
205 SOUTH MONROE

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 207

Bennett's
75c BENNETT'S CLUB LUNCHEON 40c
CHOICE OF:
Baked Chicken with Oyster Dressing
Tuna Fish Salad with Boiled Egg
VEGETABLES:
Cream Carrots
Baby Lima Beans
Pineapple Salad
Ice Cream
Corn Muffins or Hot Biscuits
Drink Included
15c CHOCOLATE SYRUP SUNDAE 10c
20c MAPLE PECAN SUNDAE 15c
15c DOUBLE DIP ICE CREAM SODA 10c
25c CHOCOLATE NUT SUNDAE 15c
20c CHICKEN SALAD SANDWICH 15c
20c PIMENTO CHEESE AND OLIVE 15c

The Social Week

St. Valentine Rules Over Alpha Omicron Pi Formal

Continuing the series of Valentine parties which have been given on the campus by the various sororities and organizations this week, the members and pledges of the Alpha Omicron Pi sorority will entertain the rushees and friends of the sorority with a formal Valentine party tonight. The setting of the party will be furnished by the sorority house on West Park avenue.

In order to emphasize the Valentine motif of this occasion the house decorations, favors, and refreshments have been planned to contribute to the one central color scheme of red and white. The front rooms of the house which will be thrown open ensuite to the guests will be decorated with red paper hearts, red and white crepe paper streamers, and bowls of red and white sweet peas which will be arranged in prominent places.

A program featuring specialty dances by members of the sorority, songs, and games will form the main part of the entertainment for the party. The remainder of the evening will be spent in dancing after which refreshments of coffee, small red and white iced cakes, and heart shaped candies will be served by the hostesses.

The hostesses for the evening will be Opal Atwater, Edith Ayers, Charlotte Cameron, Mary Carson, Marjorie Carter, Mary Louise Filer, Agnes Goss, Sara Graham, Laurita Pearson, Alice Porter, Alice Slone, Alline Freeman, Evaline Rankin, Virginia Weldon.

Dorothy Finneran, Doris Godard, Angela Griley, Betty Bary, Ruth Daniel, Lucille Finley, Elizabeth Fenn, Saidee Finney, Dixie Gist, Mary Frances Hala, Nina Hughes, Janice Logan, Mary Joyce Moorhead, and Floris Sinquefield.

COLLEGE CALENDAR

Feb. 15 to Feb. 23

Friday

7:30 p.m. Evening meeting lead by Dr. Kissling in Augusta Conradi theater.
8:00 p.m. Alpha Omicron Pi formal Valentine party.
9:30 p.m. Annual freshman swimming meet in gymnasium.

Saturday

4:00 p.m. Chi Omega formal Valentine tea for all sorority pledges.

Sunday

11:00 a.m. Dr. Kissling conducting Sunday services in college auditorium.
4:00 p.m. Alpha Xi Delta tea for faculty members.
7:15 p.m. Closing service of Religious Emphasis Week, Dr. Kissling speaking in the Augusta Conradi theater.
7:30 p.m. Kappa Delta Pi birthday party at the homa of Mrs. Dora Skipper.
8:00 p.m. Theta Upsilon popcorn party.

Monday

5:30 p.m. Orchestra rehearsal.
7:30 p.m. Glee Club rehearsal.
8:00 p.m. Beta Phi Theta meeting.
9:00 p.m. Sorority meetings.

Tuesday

11:30 a.m. Convocation.
5:30 p.m. Orchestra rehearsal.
7:00 p.m. Kiwanis banquet.
8:15 p.m. "Faculty Frolic", in college auditorium.

Wednesday

7:15 a.m. Worship service.
5:30 p.m. Freshman tea in Gilchrist parlors with Miss Edith West as hostess.

Thursday

5:30 p.m. Orchestra rehearsal.
5:30 p.m. Freshman tea in Bryan sunparlor with Miss Elizabeth Lynn as hostess.
7:30 p.m. Social Studies meeting.

Friday

Washington's Birthday, half holiday.
Military Ball at the University of Florida.
8:15 p.m. Speech Department play "As Husbands Go".

Saturday

8:15 p.m. Speech Department play "As Husbands Go".

Chi Omega to Honor Other Pledges At Tea Tomorrow

The pledges of the Chi Omega sorority will entertain the pledges of all other campus sororities at a formal Valentine tea, tomorrow afternoon from four to six o'clock at the sorority house on West Jefferson street.

The house will be decorated with red and white hearts, flowers, and streamers to carry out the Valentine motif. The refreshments consisting of punch, strawberry ice cream, and individual cakes decorated with hearts, will also carry out the Valentine theme.

Hostesses for this affair will be: Margaret Adkins, Bay Bacon, Margaret Blount, Jean Blount, Martha Campbell, Sara Carter, Jane Cralle, Ruth Follin, Claudia Harper, Edith Huddleston, Jane Kirkeby, Nina Kirkland, Frances Lewis, Jean Lykes, Anna Massey, Althea Mebane.

Sara Nance, Catherine O'Bryan, Edith Merrill Ramsaur, Annette Quinby, Mary Shackleford, Hilda Spradlin, Lillian Thorton, Peggy Van Dyke, Genie Whitside, Dorothy Watson, and Elizabeth Yockey.

For the dazzling skin
that's the talk of the Campus!

SKIN CLEARING CREAM
(Beautifying Skinfood)
by Helena Rubinstein

You've never used a beauty cream like it! Skin Clearing Cream frees the skin of the film of sallowness. Clears dull, freckled conditions. Brings out a smooth radiance — refines the texture. The answer to many beauty problems! The daily beauty diet you can count on for the skin you-envy. 1.00, 2.50.

New Way Laundry and Dry Cleaners
Tallahassee's Oldest and Largest

"Wear Clean Clothes"

Representative in Lower Bryan Hall

Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 183

Personal Mention

The many friends of Dr. David H. Briggs, associate professor of education, will be sorry to learn he is carrying the little finger on his left hand around in a bandage this week. "But", said Dr. Briggs, "you ought to see the other fellow."

Miss Marion Irish, associate professor of political science, left Thursday morning for Atlanta on a combined business and pleasure trip. Miss Irish will return to Tallahassee tonight.

Among the Florida State students who will attend the Chi Phi installation at Gainesville this week-end are Margaret K. Anderson, Evelyn Kennard, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Edith Hays Effinger, Irene Edwards and Kathryn Todd.

Among the students who are leaving today for Daytona Beach where they will attend the carnival and races this week-end are Genevieve Crowley, Virginia Duke, Ruth Garcia, Frances Philips, and Katherine Barrs.

Yvette Breaux and Juanita Buchanan will spend the week-end in Jacksonville visiting friends.

Yulee Way has returned to school to resume her studies after an absence which was necessitated by injuries received in an automobile accident during the Christmas holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Filer of Miami spent Thursday in Tallahassee with their daughters, Mary and Elizabeth Filer.

Harriette Lawrence and Annabelle Linger are spending the week-end in Orlando.

Mrs. D. C. Thompson of Jacksonville is spending the week at the Kappa Delta sorority house as the guest of her daughter, Margaret, and members of the sorority.

Mildred Smoak will leave for DeLand today for the week-end. She also will attend the races in Daytona Saturday.

Mary Catherine Drennan will spend this week-end at her home in Palatka.

Westa Wilkins and Marianna Swank are leaving today for DeFuniak Springs to spend the week-end with friends.

Barbara Stimmel is a visitor at the Sigma Kappa house this week.

Alpha XI Delta Will Have Informal Tea Sunday Afternoon

The pledges and members of the Alpha Xi Delta sorority will give an informal tea for members of the faculty Sunday afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock at the sorority house on Copeland street.

The house will be decorated with spring flowers. Refreshments consisting of tea, cookies, and mints will be served during the course of the afternoon.

Among the members and pledges who will be hostesses are: Betty Bailey, Jean Crago, Carlota Cubillas, Elizabeth Filer, Helenmary Fritsch, Barbara Garfunkel, Jessie Mead, Juanita Pace, Ruth Rainbolt, Althea Smith, Elizabeth Stout, Monica Wiley, Martha Baker, Winona Ireland, Charlotte Kinsle, Mildred Lovell, Mildred Boss, Mary McGunagle, Clotilde O'Rourke, Mary Pollard, Marian Weeks, and Dorothy Hoffman.

Actives Entertained Thursday Evening

The pledges of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority entertained the actives with a surprise Valentine party last night. The house was appropriately decorated in red and white colors carrying out the Valentina motif. The program consisted of skits, novelty dances, and songs. Refreshments of coffee, cookies, and candy hearts were served.

The hostesses at this party were: Anna Belle Baker, Ann Chichester, Mamie Jane Clark, Sara Clark, Kitty Craney, Marjorie Horton, Iris Machen, Nedra McNamara, Margaret Schmidli, Madge Williams, Helen Donn, Dagmar Fripp, Virginia Godwin, Patty Hamilton, Jean Harris, Mary Kimball, Virginia Lide, Rachel Sherman.

Israel Entertained At J.W.O. Coffee

The Jewish Women's Organization entertained Dr. Edward Israel, forum speaker of the week, with an informal coffee at the Delta Phi Epsilon house on West Pensacola avenue, Wednesday afternoon from 4:30 to 8:30.

Invited to meet Dr. Israel at this time were members of the Jewish Women's Organization, members of the faculty, and town guests.

EDUCATION HONORARY CELEBRATES ITS BIRTHDAY WITH PARTY SUNDAY NIGHT

Members of the local chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, national educational honorary, will celebrate their club's birthday at the home of Mrs. Dora Skipper on West Jefferson street Sunday night at 7:30 o'clock.

The house decorations on this occasion will consist mainly of bouquets of spring flowers. The program for the evening is in the hands of the Home committee which is headed by Miss Margaret McCurdie assisted by Miss Velma Ooton. The program will consist principally of songs and other musical entertainment.

Following the program refreshments consisting of coffee, cake, and mints will be served by the hostess. Mrs. Skipper will be assisted by Mrs. P. F. Finner who will pour and Mrs. R. L. Eyman who will cut the birthday cake.

Among the faculty and student members of Kappa Delta Pi who will attend this annual event are: Mrs. Charlotte M. Beckham, Dr. Ruth Connor, Dr. Ralph L. Eyeman, Dr. Paul F. Finner, Miss Margaret McCurdie, Dr. Nathaniel M. Salley, Miss Leona Smith, Mrs. Ruth Taylor, Miss Florence Tryon, Mr. Kenneth Williams, Miss Lillian Cross, Mrs. Paul F. Finner, Mr. Robert Moon, Miss Helen Smith, Miss Velma Ooton, Mrs. W. P. Shelley.

Marian Brantley, Carolina DeMontigne, Marie Black, Betty Wheeler, Betty Ellen Smith, Marjorie Carter, Opal Grey, Louise Burgess, Doris Bourgeoise, Elizabeth Barker, Bertha Stulpner, Helen Wilson, La Luce Planck.

WEST AND LYNN WILL BE HOSTESSES NEXT WEEK AT TEAS FOR FRESHMEN

The series of teas being given by individual faculty members for their freshman students will be continued next week with Miss Ewith West, assistant professor of classics, and Miss Elizabeth Lynn, instructor in physics, as hostesses.

The tea which will be given by Miss West will be held in Gilchrist parlors Wednesday afternoon from 5:30 to 8:30. At this time Marie Anderson, Lornelle Ball, Marian Conn, Bernice Crowley, Dorothy Detrick, Helen Eisman, Maxine Fugate, Dixie Gist, Margaret Greene, Patricia Hamilton, and Evelyn Hammond have been invited to call and visit informally with Miss West. Miss West will be assisted in serving her guests by Mary Etta Thistlethwaite and Katherine Ash.

A similar event has been arranged for Thursday afternoon from 5:30 to 8:30 in Bryan sun parlor with Miss Lynn as hostess. Among the freshmen who are expected to call at this time are Marjorie McCary, Nancy Stewart, Anne Elizabeth White, Madge Glenn, Frances Gates, Margie Creel, Marjorie Jones, Wilma White, Beverly Brown, Mary Beaver, and Ruth Hoskins.

Assisting Miss Lynn will be Helen Miller, Mrs. Geneva Fisher Morris, and Mrs. Constance Wyndham.

Theta Upsilon Plans Rushee Party For Saturday Night

The members and pledges of Theta Upsilon sorority will entertain rushees and friends with an informal pop-corn party at the sorority house Sunday night.

The house will be decorated in the Valentine motif, with spring flwers in shades of red and white predominating. Refreshments in keeping with the informal theme of the party will be served.

Hostesses for this affair will be Marcia Buchanan, Helen Evans, Johnnie Hardee, Virginia Tucker, Anne Donnell, Margaret Neff, Neita Wright, Gertrude Tomkies, Barbara Greene, and Lillian Trotter.

Theta Upsilon Gives Valentine Party

The actives of the Theta Upsilon sorority were hostesses at an informal Valentine party for pledges, rushees, and friends at the sorority house last night.

The house decorations were arranged to feature the Valentine motif which was carried out in flowers, paper hearts, and red and white streamers. During the evening refreshments of coffee, cookies, and heart shaped candies were served to the guests.

The hostesses for this occasion were Marcia Buchanan, Helen Evans, Johnny Hardee, Virginia Tucker, Lillian Troter, Anne Donnell, Margaret Neff, Neita Wright, Getrtrude Tomkies, and Barbara Greene.

Psychology Seminar To Meet With Dr. Finner

The regular monthly seminar of the psychology department will be held Thursday at the home of Dr. Paul Finner. At this meeting Elizabeth Stout will speak on the subject, "From Law to Custom and Fashion", and Barbara Garfunkel on "Americans Who Count Rosaries do not Count Sheep", an informal discussion of the trend toward Catholicism in America today.

Three Alpha Delta Pi Pledges Honored

The pledges of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority entertained with a waffle supper at their house on West Jefferson street last Saturday night honoring three new pledges, Martha King, Margaret Rogers, and Mary Brantley.

The hostesses at this supper were Elise M. Baird, Lily M. Barnett, Gwen Blake, Betty Lane Campbell, Josephine Davis, Mary Crane, Isabel Dillard, Mary Isabel Hardin, Barbara Holmes, Ann Jeter, Eloise Jackson, Charmian Lufburrow, Phoebe Messer, Margaret McCall, Sara Moor, Grace Munroe, Helen Peck, Dora Risk, Wennie Rogers, Ann Summerlin, Leone Thornton, Josephine Trantham, Judy Whidden, Tommie Grace Faircloth, and Helena Ruth Grace Faircloth, Helena Ruth Powell, Ellen Fleming, Flossie beth Whidden, and Isabel Yon.

Baptist Student Group Plans Several Parties To Be Held Next Week

With individual denominations devoting all their efforts towards participation in Religious Emphasis Week, only Baptist students have planned meetings and parties outside of their regular program next week.

The council of the Baptist Student union is to meet at Baptist student headquarters Monday night at seven o'clock for devotionals and a general discussion. Wava Godwin, president, will be in charge.

A cabinet composed of officers of Baptist Young Women's auxiliary will meet Tuesday night to discuss business plans for the month of March, according to Evelyn Collins, president, who is in charge.

Four circle groups of the Young Women's auxiliary will meet Thursday night at homes of Baptist women in town. There will be general discussions followed by short social hour. Also in old-fashioned costumes next Friday afternoon, Baptist students will entertain local Baptist women at a "colonial" party, to be held at the home of Mrs. O. P. Cowart.

Resolved
TO LIVE BY THE TRUTH

$52.50

Perhaps you have been living for years by a watch whose time is always too fast —or too slow. Make a resolve NOW to get a Hamilton— and live by the truth. We have a selection of new Hamilton models for 1934— many at prices lower than ever. Let us show them to you.

MOON

"It's ... to P... the Moon Way"

"Please Be My Valentine" Is Day's Question

History of Traditional Lovers' Celebration Is Explained

"Won't you be my Valentine?" It's been asked in a thousand ways this week with the aid of the post office and the Western Union. Cards all frills and ribbons asked it. Ridiculous caricatures asked it. Flowers with every breath of fragrance asked it. Whitman's and Russell McPhail's chocolates together with Kress's lollypops asked it with every taste. Telegrams rushed it to favored ladies and special deliveries bulged with it. Thus Cupid has done another good year's work.

History says the day is set aside to celebrate the feast of the St. Valentine but the etymologist points out that "v" and "g" were frequently interchangeable in popular speech and as a notable instance produces the words gallant and valiant which both spring from the Latin word "valens". He then explains that the Norman word Galatin means a lover of the fair sex, or what in these slangy days might be called a smasher," and was frequently written and pronounced valanton or valentin. And from these premises he concludes that by a natural confusion of names Bishop Valentine was established as the patron saint of sweethearts and lovers although he had no real connection with that class of beings.

But with all that history or legend presents as the reason for Valentine's day let's just say lovers created it, celebrate it and are celebrated by it, and let it go at that. What worthier creators could it have, or celebrators or celebratees? It's hard to imagine a Bishop Valentine patronizing this:

Helen of Troy was a beauty, Oh Boy!
Cleopatra was onto her line
But if they lived right now
I'd walk by them I vow
And choose you for a Real Valentine!

Shawn Dancers Describe Themselves Assuming Viewpoint of Fla. Co-ed

(Continued from page one)

fully copied down for the good of F. S. C. So here it is—what members of the Shawn ensemble, could they turn co-ed, would like to know about themselves!

First of all, they're quite human, and off-stage have a decided dislike for being classed as "Exhibit A." They are all college men; five from the south, two from New England, two from Kansas, and Shawn himself is from Missouri.

Six months of the year all members of the group spend in camp in the Berkshires. Nine miles away from civilization of any kind, in surroundings purposely made as primitive as lack of electricity, running water, telephone, gas, or radio can make them, they live on a farm which dates back to 1775, in a genuine New England atmosphere. Spending from four to eight hours a day rehearsing, and the remainder in work on the farm itself, these men, under the guidance of their leader, live their philosophy of the dance.

Regular hours of sleep, and a daytime program that includes rehearsals, farm work, sunbathing, lectures or reading by Shawn, cooking, and building construction, makes up the life of the group for six months. During their last season on the farm the dancers built a swimming pool, and several log cabins are in the process of construction. The company's standing joke is their rule which allows one night out a week, "with no questions asked" to each member of the ensemble, usually spent at the Berkshire playhouse where a summer stock company performs.

The boys design and make all their own costumes, and after six months of practice become adept seamstresses. Buttonholes, however, are their Waterloo, and costumes needing them have to be sent out, to be done by professionals. Two weeks were spent in making each of the costumes used in the Ponca Indian dance.

During eight weeks of their encampment, the company gives demonstration teas, one each Friday afternoon, to which the public is invited. From four until five the dancers, dressed identically, in yellow sweaters and white ducks, serve tea in their studio followed by Shawn who lectures on a single phase of the dance. Later, the dancers go through exercises pertaining to the phase treated. These teas became so popular during the last season, that the studio, whose seating capacity is one hundred and ten, often overflowed with crowds approaching the three hundred mark.

Preparations for the tour, which occupies the other six months of the year, are long and careful, including not only the fundamentals of costuming and rehearsals, but with attention also to such details as the fixing of teeth, removal of warts and tonsils, and numerous several-months-growth haircuts.

And when the lads start on tour, they begin a rugged regime. This year they drove through the blizzard in the Pennsylvania mountains that brought the recent coldwave to Florida, often having to break four-foot snow drifts and sliding precariously around icy hairpin curves thousands of feet above railingless chasms. In the Kentucky region—hillbilly country—they were shot at several times, and one of the trucks still bears the mark of a glancing bullet.

The dancers exclaimed over Florida's mid-winter weather as "tropical" and their reaction to this campus was: a bewildering but delightful sufficiency of girls. And, oh yes, they thought we were "among the best of audiences."

Work Continues On Landscaping

Campus Department Sets Out Number Of Small Trees

The college campus department is employed at present in setting out small oak trees on the grounds along the new Midway-Quincy road. These saplings are live oaks grown in the college green houses from the acorns of trees about the campus.

The campus department is also carrying out a beautification project at the new dairy, setting out legustrum and pitosporum plants, which are varieties of ornamental shrubbery, as well as cedars and arbor vitae between the buildings.

During the past several weeks pine trees have been set out on the campus in various places. These were chiefly the second growth variety which are preferable because they are many branched, casting a dense shade and having superior ornamental value. However, a few long leaf pines were added to the campus for the sake of variety.

A project of the near future is the planting of ornamental palms on the campus to give it a more tropical aspect.

German Club Discusses Outstanding Literature Of Sixteenth Century

Continuing their survey of German literature, the German club discussed the period from 1500 to 1625, at a meeting held Tuesday evening in Mr. O. F. Seller's studio.

Ida Engel sketched the historical background of the period with special emphasis upon the life and works of Martin Luther. Luther's translation of the Bible, a great contribution to the language and literature of Germany, was discussed.

Characteristic of the period under discussion were the Volksbuecher, humorous tales current among the people of that time. Two of these tales are still popular. The first, Die Schildbuerger, reviewed by Sarah Beth Davis, is a story of the citizens of Schilder, where the men are noted for their wisdom. In order to stay home after their wives have threatened to get new husbands because they are always away giving counsel, the men deliberately pretend foolishness.

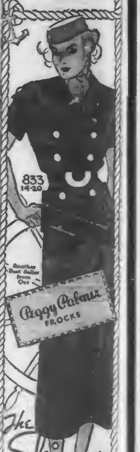
Till Eulenspiegel, which Anna von Dohlen reviewed, deals with the adventures, prompted by mischief, of a highly original arch-rogue.

Duke University
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE
DURHAM, N. C.

Four terms of eleven weeks are given each year. These may be taken consecutively (graduation in three years) or three terms may be taken each year (graduation in four years). The entrance requirements are intelligence, character and at least two years of college work, including the subjects specified for Grade A Medical Schools. Catalogues and application forms may be obtained from the Dean.

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Warner Baxter and Janet Gaynor
in
"ONE MORE SPRING"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Ronald Colman and Loretta Young
in
"CLIVE OF INDIA"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Pat O'Brien and James Cagney
in
"DEVIL DOGS OF THE AIR"
THURSDAY
Barbara Stanwyck
in
"THE WOMAN IN RED"
—ALSO—
"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT"

RITZ THEATRE
SATURDAY
Buck Jones
in
"WHEN A MAN SEES RED"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Warner Baxter and Janet Gaynor
in
"ONE MORE SPRING"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Ronald Colman and Loretta Young
in
"CLIVE OF INDIA"



GELBERG'S

$2.98

A Two-Piece suit with a nautical air!

In Navy—permanent linen finish, Duralin — with bright red ascot. Sizes 14 to 20. Sunfast and tubfast.

GELBERG'S
"Style Plus Economy"

Invite Your Date Now For Midwinter Fete

The Florida Flambeau

Don't Miss The Two-Piano Recital Monday

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, February 22, 1935 NUMBER EIGHTEEN

Mission Group To Speak Here Tuesday Night

Japanese Opera Star To Give Twenty-Minute Vocal Recital

INDIAN WORKER TALKS THURSDAY

Students May Also Hear "World Ambassadors" At Baptist Church

A special convocation on Tuesday evening, February 26, will feature important personages connected with the Florida chain of missionary assemblies, which is visiting Tallahassee for the first time this year. Of the nine "World Ambassadors" who will be in the city for three days, five will be introduced to the college students on this occasion.

The major entertainment of the evening will be furnished by Miss Kosko Saito, a Japanese opera star who has been favorably received in many lands. She will render a twenty-minute vocal recital accompanied by Miss Mary Esther Winslow.

China and India Represented

Miss Lucy Wang, president of Hwa Nan college in Foocnow, China, and Miss Ida Scudder, founder of the Vellore medical college, India, will speak briefly on the work being done in their respective countries.

Miss Machel Bonfer, of New Mexico, and Mrs. Minnie Deer Spocogee, missionary to the Indians, will bep resented to the audience by Miss B. Louise Woodford, state chairman of the movement.

Open house will be held for the guest speakers in Ruge hall at five o'clock Wednesday afternoon to which all students have been invited. Dr. John Nevin Sayre, identified with the movement for world peace and former editor and president of The World Tomorrow, will speak informally at this time. Miss Rachel Benfer, famous for her impersonations of Spanish speaking people, will also be on the program.

Appear on Y. W. Program

The regular Y. W. C. A. month-

(Continued on Page Three)

Library Exhibit Honors Florida

Shells, Birds and Maps Are On Display

An exhibit accentuating the theme of the "Outdoor Florida Week,, being observed throughout the state, is on display in the college library.

The bulletin board bears a colored map showing the location of the natural resources of Florida, picturing each product in the section where it is found. The legend of the map gives statistics on the amount of exports, imports, water borne transportation, and value of Florida's commerce. It names the chief manufactured products of Florida, and gives their values. It gives the statistics on the annual electric power production, the amount and kind of timber cut annually, the growth of the banks, and the length and cost of the highway and bridge construction of Florida. It averages the carload shipments of fruits and vegetables produce of three years, and gives Florida's produce rating as compared with other states.

The glass show case offers a display of Florida shells, collected near Fort Myers, labeled by Marjorie Harris, and lent by Miss Deviney of the zoology department. The shells are classified according to their construction as "univalves or bivalves," and are [illegible] the common names well-known to the average shell collector. Miss Deviney is also the [illegible] bird collection, containing [illegible] than ten kinds of birds [illegible] different states. It [illegible] the mocking bird, robin, [illegible] flycatcher, blue jay, [illegible] towhee, English sparrow, [illegible] sparrow, California jay, [illegible] Arizona oriole, [illegible] blue bird, and the common tern.

Of interest along the resource line is a display lent by Dr. Herman Kurz. It includes a small cy-

(Continued on Page Three)

Conradi Beams Proudly On First Granddaughter

Those who have been wondering the reason for Dr. Conradi being "all smiles" the last few days will be glad to know that his first granddaughter was born last Thursday night to Dr. and Mrs. J. Lunsford Boone of Jacksonville. The little girl weighs eight pounds and was named in honor of her two grandmothers: Harah, after Dr. Boone's mother, and Dorothy after Mrs. Boone's.

Mrs. Boone is the former Miss Elizabeth Conradi of the class of '21 and she also was a teacher in the speech department of Florida State College.

Freshmen Will Enter Contest

Gainesville Frosh Choose Ball Sponsors From Florida State

Pictures of twenty-five freshmen at Florida State College for Women were sent to the University of Florida yesterday where the freshman class will vote for five girls to serve as queen and attendant at their freshman prom on March 15.

The girls whose pictures are being submitted were selected on the basis of their popularity, personality, and beauty, one freshman being elected by popular vote from each sorority, four non-sorority girls from Jennie Murphee, and three from Reynolds.

No names will be sent with the pictures but each will have a number, a list of the names and corresponding numbers being kept in the dean of students' office here. While the entire freshman class at Gainesville will vote on the five best pictures, there will be a committee who decides which of these five will be queen.

The girls who were elected are Mercedes Carriga, Mickey Conn, Martha Battey, Martha Bishop, Jennie Murphee; Betty Ash, Mary Jane Gale, and Myrtice Harvey, Reynolds; Sara Moor, Alpha Delta Pi; Spurgeon Pulford, Alpha Gamma Delta; Floris Sinquefield, Alpha Omicron Pi; Dorothy Hoffman, Alpha Xi Delta; Carolyn Blount, Beta Phi Alpha; Betty Wheeleas, Delta Delta Delta; Muriel Liebermann, Delta Phi Epsilon; Rachel Shuman, Kappa Alpha Theta; Jane Gray Stevens, Kappa Delta; Shuman, Kappa Alpha Theta; Jane Gray Stevens, Kappa Delta; Phil Asher, Pi Beta Phi,; Letitia Bond, Phi Mu: and Blanche White, Sigma Sigma Sigma. Chi Omega, Delta Zeta,. Zeta Tau Alpha, Sigma Kappa and Theta Upsilon have not yet elected girls to represent them.

Student Recital Given By Organ, Piano, Cello, Violin, Voice Majors

The school of music began its season of student recitals Wednesday afternoon, February 20 in the college auditorium. These recitals by students of piano, voice, organ, violin, and cello, will be presented every Wednesday afternoon hereafter.

The program presented this week was as follows: Etude Melodique, Rogers, played by Mary Ida Wheeler; Etude Mignonne, Schutte, played by Marjorie Stump; Waltz, Chopin, played by Mary Ellen Tharpe; Berceuse, Jarnefelt, played by Bettie Routh; Romance, D'Ambrosio, played by Betty Parker, violinist, and Emma Lee Goodwin, accompanist; Rondo, Op. 51, No. 2, Beethoven, played by Anita Eve Easton; May Night, Palmgren, played by Isabelle Sands; Theme and Variations, Boellmann, played by Yvonne Tait, cellist, and Margaret Nickle, accompanist; Prelude (Holberg Suite), Grieg, played by Clairnelle O'Steen; Eroica Sonata (first movement), MacDowell, played by Margaret Nickle.

Longmire is Speaker At City Pan-Hellenic

Miss Rowena Longmire, associate professor of English, will speak at the city Pan-hellenic meeting Saturday afternoon, February 23. This meeting was to have been a part of the program for Florida State College for Women week. Her theme will be, to quote Miss Longmire, "—the same old F. S. C. W. and its wonderful progress."

Two Pianists Offer Recital Monday Night

Bartlett and Robertson Will Give Concert In Auditorium

"BLUE DANUBE" IS ON PROGRAM

Have Been Successful In Solo and Joint Tours Through Europe

Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, two artists of the piano, will present a two piano recital in the college auditorium Monday night, February 25, at 8:15.

According to the Manchester Guardian "these artists show that playing on two pianos need not be the mechanical thing which most duettists make it. Perhaps there must be some mysterious bond greater than that of common artistic insight linking two people who are to become so wholly one at the keyboard—two musicians of whom we are inordinately proud and who have justified our pride by playing with immense success in foreign countries."

Bartlett From London

Ethel Bartlett was born and educated in London. She comes of a musical family, and very early in her career won the Associated Board scholarship. She studied at the Royal Academy of Music with Frederick Moore and Tobias Matthay.

Later she went to Berlin where her teacher was Arthur Schnabel. Returning to England, she made a highly successful debut in London, and for a time played and toured extensively as a virtuoso. At this time she also specialized in the harpsichord, and frequently played at the Queen's Hall Promenade concerts, besides appearing at most of the provincial cities in Great Britain.

Robertson Always Played

Rae Robertson was born in In-

(Continued on Page Three)

Schwalmeyer Is Given Honor by Kadelpian Frat

Half-Century of Service To Education Brings Its Recognition

Kappa Delta Pi, national education honorary, extended honorary membership Wednesday to Miss Maud Schwalmeyer, critic teacher at the Florida High school, in recognition of her half-century of distinguished service in the field of education. When intesviewed yesterday she said she was pleased that this honor came during her fiftieth year of teaching, twenty-three of which have been spent at the Florida State College for Women.

During her years of service she has pioneered actively for higher standards in education. At the beginning of the century, first, second, and third-grade certificates were the only ones issued until certificates in music, art, etc. were introduced, and Miss Schwalmeyer personally wrote the first laws governing the professional certification of teachers in the elementary grades, as well as later revisions. She also served as a member of the first committee ever to formulate and draft a uniform course of study for elementary grades in Florida.

Miss Schwalmeyer was born in 1862 in Richmond, Virginia, two blocks from the historic St. Johns church where Patrick Henry delivered his famous "liberty or death" speech. She received her secondary education at the old Higby School in Memphis, Tennessee, which was then the second ranking private school in the south. After her graduation in 1881 she attended college at the Institution Chicago, now the Chicago Teachers' college, graduating in 1886 as a "ranking A" student.

After teaching twelve years, she was told by her doctors that she could on no account stand the rigors of another northern winter, and was sent south with three months to live. But, as she herself said, "somebody queered the

(Continued on Page Three)

GIVE TWO-PIANO RECITAL

Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, well known piano artists, will present a two-piano recital in the college auditorium at 8:15 Monday night. They have studied extensively in Europe and have filled numerous engagements both here and abroad.

New Rules Are Before Senate

Proposed Changes to Be Put Before Students For Final Vote

The senate of College Government association will vote next week on recommendations which have been made for changes in the constitution, according to Carolina DeMontigne, president.

If these proposed changes pass the senate a copy of them will be posted on the C. G. A. bulletin board where it will remain for one month at the end of which time the entire student body will vote on them.

The recommendations include a change in the personnel of the senate which will eliminate house chairmen while the chairman of off-campus and president of the day students' organization will be added. It will also stipulate that the freshman class shall elect two representatives since heretofore the constitution has read that there shall be two representatives from each class, but the freshman class has never taken advantage of this.

The rule stating that the secretary of C. G. A. shall be secretary of the senate will be changed to read: "the senate shall elect one of its members to act as secretary of the senate."

Concerning the executive council article V, section 1 shall be changed to read: "the president of the association, the vice-presidents, the chairman of judiciary, the secretary, the treasurer, and the freshman advisor shall constitute the executive council," thus relieving the president of Y. W. C. A. of this duty.

In the judiciary department article VI, section 1, which now reads: "the department shall consist of a lower court and of a judiciary which shall act as a higher court" will be changed thus: "the department shall consist of a higher court," the judiciary, and two lower courts, residence halls committee and an off-campus committee."

"Regarding the set-up of lower court the new rule will read: "the residence halls committee shall be made up of the six chairmen of residence halls and the chairman of the residence halls committee who shall be elected to her position by the student body. The chairman of the residence halls committee shall not be a house chairman but shall devote her time to guiding and unifying the work of her committee."

"The off-campus committee shall be made up of six seniors living off-campus and a chairman of the off-campus committee who shall also be a senior and also live off-campus. All members are to be elected to their positions by the student body and not more than one member of the committee shall come from a given house. They shall live off-campus at the time of their election. All off-campus committee

(Continued on Page Three)

Honorary Will Tap Monday

Proficiency in Spanish To Be Recognized By Phi Beta Sigma

Phi Beta Sigma, local Spanish honorary society, will issue bids on Monday to six students, who will be pledged on the following Wednesday, according to Marjorie Carter, president.

Students considered for election to this honorary are either juniors or seniors who have completed at least one semester of third year Spanish with a B plus average in all Spanish taken and a general B average.

The new members were selected and voted upon at a business meeting held Wednesday night at the Methodist student house. Among other things discussed at the meeting was the possibility of securing a Spanish motion picture to be presented here.

Entertainment for the evening consisted of a program on Spanish art. The artists discussed were Valasquez by Julia Norfleet, El Greco by Mary Helen Forth, and Goya by Ruth Feinberg. Reproductions from famous works of these artists were passed around after a short biographical sketch of their style and technique was given by the speakers.

Social Service Course Is Planned for Summer School By Dr. Moore

Dr. Coyle E. Moore, of the sociology department, while attending the meetings of the state board of public welfare and the government commission of social legislation in Orlando last Friday and Saturday, conferred with Miss Mable Barrie, social service director of the Florida FERA, concerning social service training at Florida State College for Women during the summer session of 1935.

As a result of this conference, tentative plans have been made to offer courses and hold a series of institutes here this summer in order to prepare students for social work. Dr. Elinor Nims, of the sociology department will be on the campus this summer as one of the instructors for the courses.

The discussions of the welfare group and the Committee on Social Legislation, which met in Orlando, centered around the report of Mr. Henry Epstein, solicitor general of the state of New York, and Mr. Conrad Van Hyning, comissioner of public welfare in Florida, who have just completed a survey of public welfare problems of Florida. Proposed legislation to meet these problems and to seek Federal funds for old age, unemployment, and maternity benefits was discussed in detail. The legislature of the state of Florida will receive the proposed legislation during its session in April.

Plans Virtually Completed For Gala Weekend

Skit Night Scheduled For First Evening Of Midwinter Fete

ROYALTY ELECTED IN CONVOCATION

Freshman Carnival Will Be Special Feature Of Week-end

Plans for the Midwinter Festival next week-end are rapidly nearing completion with election of the Midwinter King and Queen and their court in convocation Tuesday, the naming of committees for the Freshman Carnival by Ann Misell, president of the freshman class, and the announcement of the skits entered in the annual skit contest.

After faculty dinner Friday, which is first on the festival program, annual skit night will be held in the college auditorium at 8:15 o'clock. Eight groups have entered the contest which offers a five-dollar prize for the best skit.

Varied Skit Program

The Chi Omegas are having a Chinese fantasy as their skit under the direction of Mary Jeanne McKay, while the Kappa Deltas will offer a musical comedy, according to Carolyn Oliver, chairman. Janice Borton is in charge of the Spirogira skit which will be a mystery farce while Alpha Chi Omega is holding a "peanut court" with Martha Wolliston as chairman.

Tau Gamma Sigma, the new plumbing "honorary," will present a "mellerdramer of the first water" entitled "She Was Just a Plumber's Daughter," and the "F" club will give "Modern Mother Goose Rhymes" under the direction of Betty Bailey.

"School of Rime" is the title of the Delta Phi Epsilon skit of

(Continued on Page Three)

Diet Worries Make College Life Complex

No Justice as Fat Girls Gain While Slim Girls Seem to Lose

Mr. and Mrs. Spratt had their diet worries, but they seem mild when compared with the precautions that some of the fair "Misses Spratt" must take today in order to keep their figures trim and sylph-like.

When a tempting dish is set before a college girl she is obliged to keep her hostess waiting while she mentally calculates the calories found therein and decides to do without something else later and eat the food at hand. True, it usually is "something else" that must be given up.

Consider the plight of the young ladies who trust the dining hall diet plan to make them grow thinner or fatter, as the case may be. Those who wish to gain are given sweets, cream, fruit juices, and all the butter and deserts they can eat. The ones who would like to be called "dainty" and are now nicknamed "Cow," are fed mostly fruits, vegetables, lean meats and eggs.

Some girls gain and some lose, which is a sad state, when those who gain are ones who do not want to gain and vice versa. Miss Helen Davis, assistant dietition firmly believes that if these girls would stick to their diet they would lose on an average of two pounds each week, and that if those who want to gain would eat what they are given they would gain approximately one pound a week.

However, anyone knows that being persnickity and declaring, I don't like corn sandwich" or "All I want is epinuts" will get one nowhere within a given time. On the other hand, speaking in government terms, something should be done to reduce the consumptive powers of the "get-thinners."

Malicious doctors and stylists insist that, "Some Misses Spratt, should eat no fats; others should eat no leans." As if life isn't complex enough already.

First Chapter Named By Phi Beta Kappa

Conradi and Dodd Asked To Join Honorary Organization

FIVE STUDENTS ARE GIVEN BIDS

Rigid Requirements Are Observed in Making Selections

Dr. Edward Conradi, president of the Florida State College and Dr. William G. Dodd, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences were recently extended invitations to honorary membership of the Florida Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, national academic honorary society, which will be officially installed here March 4 and 5.

Five seniors and seven alumnae of Florida State College for Women were also elected to membership. Initiation for students, alumnae, and honorary members will take place in the browsing room of the college library immediately following the installation services of the Tallahassee chapter.

Seniors Bid

Students who received bids are Barbara Garfunkel of Miami; Rachel McKinnon, Marianna; Ida Engel, Key Largo; Florence Jennings, Ocala; and Frances Parks, Miami.

In consideration of members-in-course the following limitations were observed, according to Miss Margaret Whitney Dow, chairman of the membership committee: Only seniors in the school of Arts and Sciences were eligible. Of these, only those whose curriculum included at least one hundred hours of liberal subjects, excluding all courses in professional, vocational, and fine arts subjects were considered for membership; and only those students who have exhibited wide interest in things intellectual and who are well regarded for moral and cultural qualities. Only those students who met a high scholastic standard as established by the by-laws of the chapter were elected.

Alumnae Bid

Alumnae members are Miss Agnes Edwards who is now dean

(Continued on Page Three)

"Hay Fever" Named Senior Class Play

The senior class play and the characters selected for it were announced this week by Marion Brantley, chairman of the Mortar Board play committee. The play selected was Noel Coward's Hay Fever which will be presented in the Augusta Conradi theater on March 21 and 22, the week-end of the Junior Senior prom. The second performance is to be especially for members of the senior class and their dates.

Those who have been selected for parts in the play are Lois Hasel, Carolina DeMontigne, Nancy Bush, Esther Daffin, Frances Hurlin, W. R. Cowles and O. F. Sellers, both of whom are members of the music faculty, and two men from Tallahassee, Dr. A. J. Ott and C. W. Gregory. Miss Kemper Moore of the speech department will direct the play.

Local Talent Stars In Play

Tallahasseeans, Faculty, And Students Cast In "As Husbands Go"

Dr. Raymond Bellamy and Dr. Arthur (Pi) Williams will play the parts of French waiters in "As Husbands Go," a three-act play to be presented by the speech department, under the auspices of the alumnae association in the Augusta Conradi theater at 8:15 tonight and Saturday. Louise Schwaderer, a transfer student, has also been given a part in the play.

The theme of the prologue, which takes place in Paris, concerns the two leading ladies who, as Lucile and Emmie, two American women who feel that they have found in Europe a deeper culture and more perfect expression of their own personalities, have the good fortune to meet and fall in love with European men. During the three acts of the play, however, complications arise, due to Lucile's and Emmie's return to middle-western American families, the setting for which is laid in Dubuque, Iowa.

The members of the cast are actors and actresses who have had dramatic experience and many of whom are familiar to the college audience. Joe Hall, principal of Leon high school, who took part in "The Square Peg," given at the college last spring, appears in "As Husbands Go" as the sweetheart of the American girl Peggy. Ben Meginniss, who attended this college in its early days, has appeared in two plays given by the faculty. Ralph Stone, besides appearing in this production, is also played in "Black Eyed Susan," which was presented by a local high school. Mr. Meginniss and Mr. Stone are the two Europeans, English and Venetian respectively, with whom Lucile and Emmie fall in love.

Kenneth Williams, who plays the part of a husband left at home, took an important role in "Enchanted April," given here last year by the speech department. Jimmy Richards, a sixth grade student in the Demonstration school, will make his debut in this performance.

Helen Hammond, who played a leading part in Odd demonstration this year and who appeared last year in both Odd demonstration and Junior Minstrels, takes the part of Lucile, and Emily Johnson, who, besides directing Even demonstration this year, has also played in a number of one-act plays, will portray the role of Emmie. Jimmie Lewis, director of Odd demonstration this year, appeared last year as Captain Absolute in "The Rivals." Sara Hosea has played in several one-act plays and has taken charge of numerous production committees.

Stagecraft for "As Husbands Go" is under the direction of Miss Emma Keis.

Incidental music and music between the acts will be furnished by Mr. Owen Sellers' string orchestra.

Woman's Economic Status Questioned

Investigation Considers Employment Data

What chance does the college woman have in the economic world of today?

Questionnaires sent out for the purpose of discovering the changing economic status, occupational opportunities, and responsibility for dependents of women in professions and business as revealed during the course of the depression were received recently by Dr. Beulah B. Briley, chairman of the local A. A. U. W. committee on the economic and legal status of women.

The investigation is being sponsored by the American Association of University Women and the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Department of Labor. Questionnaires are being sent to all A. A. U. W. chapters in the United States, where they are distributed to members to be filled out. The results will be sent sealed to Washington where statistics on the issue will be compiled.

The questionnaire is divided into four parts dealing with personal data, financial status and responsibility, employment status, and occupational history. It includes questions as to type of employment, size of income, discrimination of employers against women, number of people supported and cut or increase of wages.

The plan by which the nation[illegible] committee is attempting to [illegible] definite knowledge on the [illegible]

[illegible] four [illegible]

A comprehensive [illegible] analysis of the employment [illegible] unemployment of national members of the various branches of the A. A. U. W. with special refer-

(Continued on Page Three)

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF
BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON .... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Athea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchanges, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyne Wahnish. Copy Editor Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Parabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedia McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Fain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF
ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS ... Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS .... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON .... Circulation Manager
Ass't. Adv. Manager, Mary Patterson; Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sara Beth Davis.

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee ,Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

It's Tough Going For The Intellectual These Days

If there is any truth in the present foreshadowing reactions, let us forecast we can't be less accurate than the weather man that the word, intellectual, will be obsolete at Florida State College for Women within the next five years.

Notice, we say the "word," intellectual, for "Hope springs eternal in our breasts" that somehow the intellectual himself will manage to strive on in this ungracious world even under an assumed name.

The situation is funny, not funny ha-ha, but funny peculiar. Here at an institution of learning we are finding the student who reads the better magazine being dubbed an intellectual snob, the student who phrases his sentences in more than puerile jargon, - intellectual plagiarist, one who merely culls intelligent phrases without knowing whereof he speaks. And finally we find students—this is a true story—asking in heart-breaking tones, "What, after all, is the good of thinking anyhow?"

Far be it from us to call down the stigma of intellectuality upon ourselves by pretending to hold the answer to this question. We merely wish to point to one discrepancy in the attitude back of such a question.

The average student thinks compartmentally. Therefore he says the reputed intellectual does not live life. He puts the intellectual here and life there. And we are compelled to admit that his dispute of the intellectual, based on this reasoning, is probably justified.

But such reasoning itself is false. Let the judging student interest himself in intellectual pursuits and he will soon discover there is no cleavage between intelligence and life. And until he has embraced the disinterested, impersonal method of judging that characterizes the intellectual, it would be the part of discretion for him, student or otherwise, to restrain his accusations against the student who is earnestly trying to attain this pattern of life.

As we said before, it is a funny situation, some times even funny ha-ha.

You Have Heard of Students "At Sea?"

Did you ever see a dream floating? "Well, I did," says Dr. James E. Lough, and he proceeds to tell about the Floating University in the Education magazine for January.

The Floating University is in fact a floating campus. It is equipped with classrooms, study halls, library, gymnasium and living quarters for faculty and students. The voyage on the Floating University occupies an academic year and includes visits to more than a hundred cities and places of educational interest in forty or fifty countries and colonies in Asia, Africa, and Europe.

Such wide travel experience, according to Dr. Lough, combined with systematic study under a capable faculty, and the close association of students and professors from every section of the United States is a constant challenge to the students to think clearly in world terms and to acquire accurate information at first hand.

Any institution, floating or otherwise, that extends such a challenge to its students is a justifiable one. Therefore we rescind the jibe on the tip of our tongues about already having enough students "at sea."

More Felicity, Please!

While we're arguing about whether modern college courses prepare us adequately for Life (capital L denoting that vast realm of generalities so dear to the collegiate heart), while we bemoan the lack of correlation between the prof's lectures and the life-situations those lectures should be training us to meet, and while we hold up our hands in horror at a "mechanized curriculum" and a campus life that turns us out as a stereotyped product, we're forgetting entirely the ever-present "other angle of approach."

We look ahead to the not-so-distant day when we'll be starting on the universal quest for that rare specimen known as the job, and in a beautiful outburst of reproach, glibly transfer the blame for our anticipated failure to the already over-laden shoulders of the educators of the present system, and so, relieved of all necessity to struggle against our neatly-labelled fate, take refuge in our cynical speeches (and have a great deal of fun, after all, in between times.)

But while we're probing so deeply into values we completely overlook such opinions for example as those of Carl Holliday, California State College professor of Englihs, and of John R. Tunis, author of articles on the subject of present-day education, both of whom believe that imagination is the quality that determines our advance in life.

"A job is waiting for you," Mr. Tunis tells us, and he goes on to offer a word of advice to all college graduates, saying that employers are not looking for the "experience" we insist on expecting to gain from our college education, but that they want background, youth, energy, enthusiasm, and ability to work.

Professor Holliday also names these qualities as essential in a plea for an "awakening of the heart, the imagination, and the spirit," which he believes can and does come through education.

Our future employers, these men tell us, will be investing in our futures because they will believe that our four years of university training have brought out and pointed into channels of usefulness these qualities. If this is true, why not prove that we have these qualities and play them up? Surely we have youth, energy, enthusiasm, imagination. If these are the prerequisites for employment, and if our college years are expected to develop these qualities, we are certainly being well-prepared for a life seen from this point of view. It looks as though we have what it takes, and as much of it as any graduates in the years before us. Then what's all the hubbub about?

Huey Has a Daughter, Afraid of Papa's "Friends"

If you would have an unperturbed college life, you must train your father not to go about the country crying, "Every Man a King," and organizing "Share-the-Wealth" clubs.

Some one should have told this to Rose Long seventeen years ago. But no one did. And today Rose, daughter of senator Kingfish Long and a student at Louisiana State university, doesn't dare to leave the campus alone or unguarded for fear that the sins of her father will be visited upon his children.

It is difficult to put your finger on Huey Long, this fellow who, according to Russel Owen writing in last week's New York Times, denies he is a dictator and doesn't believe dictatorships belong in American life, this fellow who doesn't drink or smoke, who eats potlikker and thinks "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" the greatest book ever written.

Along with Huey's other thoughts is the conviction that there will be a third party in the next election that will sweep the country. If we could rely upon the judgment of a certain newspaper editor that the intelligence of the American people is increasing, we could afford to laugh at theKingfish. But the yen of America for captivating shibboleths, for instance, "Every Man a King," makes us open our mouths not to laugh, but to wonder.

The University of Chicago recently adopted as its new official song, "Flag of the Maroons," written in 1904 by Donald Richberg, the N. I. R. A. co-ordinator, while he was a student at the University. At least we can point to one definite result of the New Deal.

There is always room for one more—tradition. Why can't the students don evening clothes and take reserved center section seats five minutes before the next annual Faculty Frolic? The faculty have had their innings. Turn about is fair play!

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticisms. Letters should be signed, marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the postoffice.

MORE POLITICS AND CABBAGE

The time has come to talk cabbage and politics! The time has come to do more than that.

Although, of course those persons who might well fill a responsible position are required to keep their ideas, plans or principles a secret, there is no earthly reason why a studentw ho is so abnormal as to show an interest in campus politics cannot quietly investigate past records and future possibilities of such students as seem capable of holding office. If we are going to vote for a candidate because some one told us to during our college days, doesn't it stand to reason that we will follow the same path of least resistence when we come of age to vote in state and national politics? And if our universities cannot turn out interested, fair-minded citizens, what will?

We hear on every side complaints of corruption in politics, local state and national. Yet less than half the eligible voting population of the United States takes the trouble to go to the polls. A like situation holds on this campus. Every student is given a vote, yet how many make use of the opportunity? And how many who do go to the polls look with amazement at the names on the ballot, mark an "X" mostly beside names they've heard somewhere in a class, and consider their duty fulfilled? And, least admirable of all, how many students go to vote with a list of memorized names in their heads and vote as quickly as possible before they forget? The very students who complain of the "lobbies" and underhandedness in campus politics are often the ones who do the least in the way of open-minded voting to help correct them.

If every Florida State College girl would collect her scattered and little-used gray matter long enough to observe and consider possible candidates, and then vote for every office with some degree of intelligence we could have some semblance of decent politics on this campus.

Signed Grace Mary Webster

Once again Fate clothed in all her irony has descended on the students of Florida State College for Women—this time with a half-holiday on Friday afternoon. The avowed purpose of this holiday, according to the college calendar, is for the celebration of or at least the observance of Washington's birthday.

The cause is splendid in itself except for the fact that the anniversary of "the father of his country" comes this year on what is ordinarily a holiday for girls here anyway, for the course schedule is so arranged that few persons have classes on Friday afternoon. And right here is where the rub comes in.

Those who wish to celebrate the holiday properly will go home for the week-end. They will wish in many cases to cut a class or two. What is the direct result? That dread swordsman, the registrar, who seems to travel so frequently in the company of Fate on this campus, will give double cuts to all those who miss classes the day before or after the holiday.

With this situation recognised no visitor to the campus this week-end need fear for his life if or when he hears dire shriekings and sad lamentations. 'Tis only the outcrying of those pitiful damsels who perforce are dismally passing their brief respite from academic work by remaining on the campus.

Signed, Hazel Bowman.

VOTE INDIVIDUALLY

With the approach of campus elections comes the dreaded fear of campus politics. One hears rumors of "cliques," secret meetings, sheltered conferences and hidden confabs. Each year there has been a stir of protest against these underhand methods of forcing candidates before the public eye. Each year those who stir the protests have talked much and hurried to join their own little secret "defense machines."

If all this be true, to such members of the student body the Nominating and Elections Committees offer a challenge. We promise the absolute fairness which is expected of us in these elections. In return we ask your cooperation in nominating and voting for only those girls whom you believe capable and trustworthy of best performing the duty you are assigning to them. It is not too much to ask that you prove yourselves able to stand in your own right and voice your own opinion as individuals, for the trend of public sentiment has been shown as just that for the entire year. Are you going to live up to your own standards? It is for each of you to decide.

Signed, Carolina DeMontigue.

Spirit of the Week . . . . By C. Williams

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

VALUES AND VALUABLES

". . . the things which are seen are temporal; but the things which are not seen are eternal."

During the past decade or more the emphasis in American life has been placed upon valuables rather than upon values. Material gain, social prestige and outward appearance have been the ends toward which people have striven. Colleges have been interested chiefly in larger buildings and in more students: advertising their wares as a cigarette advertiser does, and loudly claiming that their graduates would be the most "successful." Statistics were gathered and widely distributed to show that the college graduate was worth more in dollars and cents than the high school graduate, and that the high school graduate was worth more than the elementary school graduate. Little thought was given to whether the graduate was socially more valuable to his community or whether he had learned enough of the business of living to find happiness and meaning in life. Human values were considered of no consequence; only material values counted. It was an era of spiritual starvation.

In 1929 there came a tremendous shock. Material gain was not all that counted; college degrees did not bring high salaries; the sordid films and tabloid newspapers were no longer satisfying. Slowly a new conception of success began to emerge. There was a new meaning and a new purpose in life: a new type of riches was sought. Although the colleges were slow to realize that they should train the rich mind rather than the strenuous mind, slight changes have come about in the methods and purposes of the best of them. It is time that colleges as well as individuals were coming to the realization that values are more important than valuables, and that a rich mind is of far more consequence than a strenuous mind.—Crimson-White.

CONFORMITY

There are found in modern life certain sets of traditional institutions with definitely-formed handed-down ideas of what the individuals supporting these institutions should do. The formula for a certain type of acknowledged success in these institutions is conformity—adapting one's self to the institution—and the degree to which one is successful is measured by the degree to which one conforms to the system presented.

For instance, in working in the great military organization of a country, a man of ability receives promotions to the degree that he adapts himself to the system. In the field of scholarship a student is rewarded to the degree of efficiency with which he conforms to the prescribed curriculum. In the field of athletics a man is rewarded to the degree of efficiency with which he conforms to the system of competition under which he plays. The social leaders of a college campus achieve their positions because in addition to having ability they have conformed to the concepts that other people have of social leaders. Given two men of equal ability in almost any field of endeavor, the one who adapts himself more to the system presented will apparently be the more successful.

Institutions and set systems of ideas with which one must deal represent the accumulated experience and ideas of man for a period of time and undoubtedly contain much that is of value. Since the specific needs of man are not static, some superfluous aspects are also found. Hence one should not be blinded by the immediate and apparent success which follows conformity to the system, nor be intimidated by the social disapproval which greets violent opposition to the system. Rather one should question his actions and conform intelligently only to those phases of a given institution which really serve the needs for which the system was created. One should develop the foresight to suggest improvements to meet changed present needs and to suggest the axe for those phases no longer of any value.

By such conscious efforts can contributions be made in the evolution of institutions to fit them to the changing needs.—Normal College News.

RELAXATION IMPORTANT

Relaxation is of importance. In our busy, tense days of the modern world, it is difficult to get our minds and thoughts away from the present worries, cares and troubles, and relax. We always feel very worried or troubled about things which are so vital, yet futile. If we but knew it, many times the secret of success lies in that little bit of a word "relax."

"Why!" you may say, "that is the whole trouble now, people, generally, are too 'relaxing.' If they would brace up and get to work, things would begin to pick up." Yet people, tense and trouble, have never really let their minds dwell on the sunny side of life. They are like the poor, miserable frog that never looks up at a shining sun and blue summer skies, but always and always keeps its head down in the mud and the gutter. Its mind never rises to higher levels—like yours and mine do. When we relax our minds drift to spiritual things. We are inclined to dream and hope for better things, and the future looks rosy. We go back to the worries and fretful cares of our real life, braced to meet new and fresh disappointments of life with fresh courage and sweet dreams to boost us up. So—relax—gather strength for the future.—The ? ?

Cupid's Day Increases Package Mail Ten-Fold

That Florida State girls are not only loved by certain ones at home but are also missed while away absorbing a college degree is a proven fact, according to Miss Sallie Nicholson of the college postoffice.

Sweethearts, dads, mothers, and maybe even kid brothers and sisters with a spark of sentimentality for their older sisters came across and with Valentine greetings on February 14 to the tune of 156 packages in the morning mail. It must have been for love because the usual mail brings only 15 or so boxes.

Needless to say the letters and cards received about this time increased in proportion to the packages, and local followers of St. Valentine helped to swell the campus mail by asking all their friends and pals to "be my Valentine."

Flint Visits College

Chancellor Flint of Syracuse university was a visitor at the college Friday. While here Chancellor Flint was taken on a tour of the collage and grounds.

Magazine Thumbings

By MELVYNE WAHNISH

Hazel Bowman has functioned as our guest columnist this week, and is responsible for the following reviews.

HOW A NAVY KILLS PEOPLE

By Bruce Winton Knight

American Mercury, February

"The killing technique of a navy comes into full view" when "it cuts off essentials from the enemy." Direct methods of warfare like gun-fire, bombing, spreading poison gases, and planting germs are very inefficient in the killing process. In Germany during the World War people were starving. Diets were never balanced even if adequate. Disease and famine were the great indirect cause for the loss of the war by the Germans.

With these things in mind Mr. Knight shows, in making his main point, that the United States has nothing to fear from Japan if she can keep the naval ship ratio at 5-3, for Japan imports things absolutely essential to her people on their present low level of existence and cutting off these supplies by a naval blockade in time of war would wreck this island power.

Says Mr. Knight, "A navy is not to kill sailors directly. It is to kill civilians in a general way. It is to give germs and food deficiencies the maximum opportunity to cause scrofula, rickets, scurvy, beriberi, pellagra, and the like; to spread tuberculosis, influenza, typhus, typhoid, scarlet fever, cholera, the plague, yellow fever, everything which can become rampant among a weakened population."

WHO IS ON RELIEF?

By C. Hartley Grattan

Scribner's, February

In September, 1934, there were 4,460,000 workers totally unemployed and receiving relief with 12,000,000 others on the relief rolls. There were 10,925,000 urban and 7,373,000 rural workers on the rolls at this time.

The low-income groups compose the majority of those requiring help. The urban relief population shows regional concentration. This is accounted for by considering whether these workers were employed in durable-goods manufacturing or in consumption-goods. The latter have not suffered as much as the former. There is a disproportion of large families receiving aid; therefore many minor children are bearing a large per cent of the actual suffering synonymous with unemployment and depression. As is usual "the [illegible]o is at the bottom of the [illegible] heap," as Mr. Grattan puts it. They were pushed out of employment with the first evidences of depression.

The skilled city workers have fewer of their number on the relief rolls than have the unskilled. In the rural population it is the marginal commercial farmer who is suffering. He started on the downward road with the agricultural depression of 1920, and the drought of 1934 finished many of his numbers.

The pitiful thing to Mr. Grattan is the fact that it is "the step-children of America" who always suffer most, and in this case it is almost impossible to help them because of the inadequacy of federal and private relief funds.

AN UNOFFICIAL SURVEY

By Walter Dan Griffith

Journal of Adult Education, January

The hobo college, a direct result of the depression and attempts to help the unemployed to help themselves, is shown vividly here. In the particular college under discussion the management attempted to be cultured, classical, refined, yes, even dainty, in its dealings with those down-and-out men of the road.

Here professors tried to teach Castilian Spanish to a sailor who required a lingo characteristic of the South American waterfront. China-painting was another of the subjects upon the college's rather ridiculous curriculum. The director of the college could not see that common sense and practicability must be the rules in an effort of this sort. He went straight ahead on his chosen course with the result that even the unlearned hobo laughed at him.

Mr. Griffith, rebuffed in his effort to set this college president right says, "The job of rehabilitating those ever-present Shakespearan characters: Shallow; Slender; Snug, the joiner; Bottom, the weaver; Doll, Tearsheet, the bawd; and Wart, the recruit, I leave to the many degreed Educational Director.

"I wish him well." But Mr. Griffith has already proved conclusively that the Director will not be successful.

Collegiate Come-Backs

We are inclined to agree with the Creightonian when it says that even if Bruno Richard Hauptmann is guilty of murder, "he should not be electrocuted, nor even imprisoned. . . . He is the greatest man since Lincoln."

"Never before has one man without the aid of anyone else done the things he has done. For years men have fought and struggled in vain for a national police force such as Scotland Yard in England. Hauptmann forced the government to do it in a few months. Five years ago kidnaping was punishable only under the ordinary extortion laws; today it is considered a felony, thanks to Hauptmann, that fearless worker, that human dynamo, that greatest law-giver since the code of Napoleon."

Personally we think it would be a crime against civilization to execute any man with the mental faculties of Hauptmann. When asked, "Where were you, Bruno, the night of March 16, 1931, at seven and a half minutes past six p. m.?" Hauptmann answers readily, "I was half-way between 167th and 188th sts, looking in a jewelry store window wondering whether to get pigs knuckles or sauerkraut for supper." Such a marvelous memory should never be sacrificed. What a help he would be in filling out income tax returns for some of these millionaires with bad memories.

* * * *

Thanks to Temple we learn more definitions:

Goal—A precious metal.
Tackle—Expressions, as, "I think I'll tackle little walk."
Penalty — Sufficient, as, "That's penalty."
Wingback—Command, as, "Wingback the bacon."
Eleven—Used in defiance, as "Eleven give you odds on the fight."
Pigskin—A Winchell, one who "pigskin a keyhole."
Lateral—An exact rendering from one language to another, as "lateral translation."
Touchback — Borrowing from someone who once borrowed from you.

* * * *

Says the Concordiensis, "Local AMERICAN papers published a quarter-page photograph of Mr. William Randolph Hearst talking at the microphone. It looked as if Mr. Hearst were wearing a Phi Beta Kappa key on his watch chain." (And do you mean to tell me we actually petitioned for a chapter?) But the squib continues, "The picture was blurred a little in that region of Mr. Hearst, and the dangling object might just as well have been a 1913 Indian head penny with a hole big enough to admit a sturdy watch chain." (A toy cannon would have been more appropriate.)

* * * *

The Drexel Triangle contributes a short short story:

"Algy saw a bear; the bear saw Algy;
The bear was bulgy; the bulge was Algy."

* * * *

The Crimson White tell us popcorn boompiah the glad rackety tidings that Gertrude Stein bees Stein is coming for, by, of Birmingham. My, persiflage how delighted agilely skimming are beauteous carrots and green-spotted rutabagas. Gerty simply radiator sawdust. Pigeons curls become permanent are rusty drainpipes slither, slather, slither. Boola!

* * * *

The Mercer Cluster says that William Shakespeare, Notre Dame football star, was declared ineligible his last year for flunking English. . . . Aw well, what's in a name?

* * * *

Any professor, after reading an exam, "Cows may come and cows may go; but bull goes on forever." —Florida Alligator.

* * * *

"The funniest thing we have seen in the United States was a college newspaper reporter," says John Cripps, a member of the Oxford University debating team now touring the United States. . . . Are you laughing at us, buddy? Or with us?

* * * *

This little poem is dedicated to the curriculum revision committee, in memory of those who have gone before.

Most of us do not know, I fear,
What it's like within the stratosphere.
But those of us who've sat and sat
Thru a class in this and that
Have got, I think, a fairly good idea.

—Johnsonian.

* * * *

Headline in the Red and Black: 'Pandora to Be Ready May 1, Says Hubbard." And then some men fuss if their dates are a half-hour late.

Three Positions Are Now Filled

Board of Control Holds Meeting Last Week

One of the objects of the state board of control heeting held in Key West was to fill positions in the college formerly occupied by Mrs. Beulah White of the business office and Mrs. Eleanor McBride of the industrial arts department. Mr. William Budd of Chipley, Fla., and Bessie Ruth Falk, senior, are the new appointees respectively. The board also appointed Esther Hodek, student, of Orlando assistant in the business office at the college. Another matter acted upon by the board was the changing of Dr. Olivia N. Dorman's title from "acting dean of students" to "dean of students."

Dr. Edward Conradi and Mr. J. T. Diamond, secretary of the board, also attended the meeting. Dr. Conradi returned to the college Monday afternoon, but Mr. Diamond continued with the board to Miami and the Everglades, returning to Tallahassee Tuesday night.

While in Key West Dr. Conradi, Mr. and Mrs. Diamond and Mrs. Dave Sholtz, together with other members of the board and their wives, and presidents of state institutions and their wives, were guests of honor at the luncheon and dedication Sunday afternoon of the new Key West Tropical Aquarium, the only open air aquarium and garden in the world.

New Rules Are Before Senate

(Continued from Page One)

members except the chairman shall act as house chairmen in their own houses.

"The chairman of the off-campus committee shall call together and preside over all meetings. The committee shall meet at least once in every two weeks. All other off-campus house chairmen shall be asked to meet with the committee from time to time.

"The committee shall deal with infractions of minor house rules in off-campus houses and its recommendations shall be approved by the chairman of judiciary.

"The committee shall cooperate with the dean of students and the director of off-campus housing in handling governmental problems which arise off-campus."

Changes were also proposed for the personnel of the judiciary. These are: the elimination of the vice-presidents, secretary, and treasurer of college government association; the addition of the chairman of off-campus and one representative from each of the sophomore and junior classes making two sophomore and three juniors on judiciary; and the chairman of the residence halls committee instead of the chairman of house chairmen.

When You Think
of
Cleaning, Dyeing and
Alterations
Think of the
Central Cleaners
"Your Patronage is Our Pleasure"

Pleus Will Talk At Meeting of Newman Group

Baptist Girls Entertain Local Women At Colonial Party

One of the most important meetings of denominational groups this week will be the monthly meeting of the Newman club, Sunday night, at which time Robert Pleus, assistant attorney general of the state, will speak on a phase of Abraham Lincoln's life.

Mr. Pleus was a former captain of the debating team of the University of Colorado and member of the Newman club there. Mauvis Lussier, is in charge of the program. After Mr. Pleus' talk at the Catholic rectory, Rosa Doub, president, will conduct a short business session.

A play entitled "Seed Time and Harvest" written by Betty Ellen Smith, will be presented by seven Presbyterian students before a young men's Presbyterian group in Cairo, Georgia, tonight. Besides the play which centers around a student's work in the university, there will be special music in charge of the students. Those who will take part on the program are Alma Loudermilk, Sara Hethcox, Catherine Todd, Janice Borton, Nell Mayes, Margaret Nickle, and Betty Ellen Smith. Miss Rachel Wylie, student secretary, will accompany the girls.

The Presbyterian league program next Sunday night will include a study of foreign countries, preparatory to the chain missionary programs which will begin next week. Betty Ellen Smith is program chairman.

Baptist students are entertaining the Baptist Women's Missionary society tonight at a colonial party in the colonial home of Mrs. O. P. Cowart. The party will be a progressive affair with guests going from room to room for entertainment, according to Eleanor Murrill, general chairman.

Wava Godwin and Sara Rutledge will greet guests in the first room where the minuet and special old-fashioned music will be presented. Evelyn Collins is in charge of the second room where a scene from "Will You Marry Me?" will be enacted. Alice Fletcher and Alicir Meacham will be in charge of a series of games in the third room. Doris McKenzie and Mary Nell Pinckard will be hostesses in the last room where refreshments will be served.

Jewish women are meeting in Bryan sun parlor at 3:30 this afternoon to reorganize their group activities, according to Helen Ehman, president.

Methodist students are having a joint party with the local young people of the Methodist league Monday night at the Methodist church. Hugh Williams and Dimples Turner are in charge of the plans.

There will be an after-dinner coffee for Episcopal students and their friends in Ruge hall tonight, according to Miss Kathleen Platt, student secretary.

Mission Group To Speak Here

(Continued from Page One)

ly membership meeting which will be held at 11:30 Thursday morning in the Augusta Conrad theate. and which is open to all students will feature Mrs. Minnie K. L. Karnell, a nationally known lecturer on America's immigrant problem, and Mrs. Minnie Deer Spoonegee, a full-blooded Creek Indian and a worker among the Seminoles of Florida. Because of the fact that the Y. W. C. A. has a fund set aside for helping the Seminoles, Mrs. Spoonegee's talk will be of particular interest to students. She will tell something of her work among these people and of the ways in which student money is being used.

These speakers are a part of a group of World Ambassadors from China, Japan, India, Europe, and Latin America who are making a five week tour of Florida, touching sixteen centers in a Florida chain of missionary assemblies.

On February 27 and February 28, the "World Ambassadors" will hold interdenominational meetings at the First Baptist church in the afternoons and evenings.

Sport Slants

Engel Sets New Swimming Mark

Thill and Lewis Score High in Meet

In the freshman swimming meet held last Friday night in the college pool Erma Engel was high scorer with 25 points, setting a new record for the 25-yard breast stroke, the only record broken this year. Frances Thill was second high with 19½ points and Frances Lewis scored third with 17 points.

Results of the meet: In the 40-yard free style, first place was womb y Frances Thill with a time of 26.4 seconds, second place, Gehan; third, Lewis. In the side stroke for form first place was won by Glenn, second place by Holden, and third place by Stout.

In the standing front dive Brooks won first place, Scott was second, and Lewis was third. The plunge for distance was won by Thill with a plunge of 42 feet 7 inches, Marsh came in second, and Cooper, third. In the 25-yard free style Clark won first place with the time of 15.2 seconds, Lewis second, and Thill third. Hostlund and Glenn tied for first place in the breast stroke for form while Pulford and Kirkeby divided honors for second place. Engel won first place in the jack knife dive, Scott won second, and Clark was third. In the 25-yard side stroke Ostlund won first place with a time of 21 seconds, Pulford came in second, and Holway, third.

The crawl for form was won by Thill, with Holden and Lykes tying for second place. In the back dive first place was won by Lewis, second place by Glenn, and third place by Brooks and Clark. The 25-yard breast stroke was won by Engel with a time of 21.2 seconds, Kirkeby came in second, and Stout, third.

Ostlund won first place in the back crawl for form, and Pratt and Thill tied for second place. In the swan dive Lewis was first, with Engel second, and Clark third. Cooper was first in 25 yard back crawl, Scott, second, and Engel, third. In the resting back stroke first place was won by Pratt, second place by Brooks, and third place by Korst. Engel won first place in the optional dives, Brooks came in second, and Clark won third place.

First Chapter Named By Phi Beta Kappa

(Continued from Page One)

of women at the Southwestern Louisiana Institute in Lafayette, Louisiana; Miss Ruth Reynolds, head of the English department of one of the New York city high schools in New York; Mrs. Felicia Williams Traxler, Gainesville, Florida; Mrs. Irita Bradford Van Doren, editorial offices of the New York Herald Tribune, New York, N. Y.; Dr. Inga Olla Helseth, professor of education at the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Virginia; Miss Effie Pettit, Waldo, Florida; and Miss Edna Williams, instructor in English at Smith College, Northampton, Massachusetts.

In consideration of alumnae membership the committee observed the following regulations: No alumnae of Florida State College for Women has been elected to alumnae membership of Phi Beta Kappa who has not been graduated fifteen or more years from the college. Election of alumnae was based on the undergraduate record of the candidate and on her interest in cultural and intellectual fields since her graduation.

Included on the membership committee are Miss Margaret Dow, chairman, Dr. Venila Shores, Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, Miss Myrtle Delbee, Dr. William H. Rogers, and Mr. Elmer Riggs Smith.

On The Spot With Sports

The freshmen are to be congratulated on the fine exhibition they gave at their freshman swimming meet last Saturday night. A great deal of credit should go to Miss Marjorie Mayer and the student swimming instructors.

At the first Odd-Even hockey and soccer games the Odds won the hockey game and the Evens claimed a victory in the soccer contest. Monday, the Odds and Evens each won a game again, but they switched victories. Wonder what the outcome will be?

Now that spring is in the air practice for baseball and tennis will begin Monday. The fact that going out for one of the two sports will result in a coat of tan should be a good inducement to all.

These last basketball games in the intramural tournament, if they run true to form, will be worth seeing. All of the teams have varsity material besides a fighting team spirit.

Two Pianists Offer Recital Monday Night

(Continued from Page One)

vernass. He cannot remember the time when he did not play the piano. His home was near some military barracks and he would repeat by ear all the tunes he heard there, whether band or pipe music.

Whe he was six, his playing at a party attracted the attention of a lady who had been a pupil at the Leipsig conservatoire. She immediately offered to give him free tuition, and the offer was accepted. Later he went to Edinburg University to prepare for his M. A. degree, and while there continued his piano work with Philip Halstead. He won the Bucher Scholarship for music, and was preparing to go to Berlin to study with Carreno when the war broke out. He studied in London for a few months with Tobias Matthay at the Royal Academy, and finally threw up his scholarship to join the army.

Marries After War

After his return to the academy he married Ethel Bartlett. For several years they played separately here and therew here they could to keep themselves going. Steadily they built up considerable reputations as solo pianists, and engagements and tours became frequent.

In 1925 they gave their first joint recital, the first two English artists to play works for two pianos. They have since played in Holland, Belgium, Poland, Spain, Germany, and in America, meeting with enthusiastic praise everywhere. Arnold Bax has dedicated four works for two pianos to Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson.

The program here Monday night will include: Sonata in D major, Allegro con spirito, Andante, and Allegro molto from Mozart; Variations on a theme of Beethoven, by Saint-Saens; Polka, by Lennox Berkeley; The Poisoned Fountain, by Arnold Bax; Les Nymphes, by Glieve; Malaguena, by Lecuona; Scherzo (from Midsummer Night's Dream) by Mendelssohn; Romance by Avensky; and The Blue Danube Waltz by Strauss-Schultz-Evler.

Library Exhibit Honors Florida

(Continued from Page One)

set of eucalyptus book ends, and press sewing table, a sang lamp, a a lignum vitae paper weight. A cedar cane is the contribution of Dr. Raymond Bellamy.

At the table set aside for the topic of the week, books and magazines are available on every phase of out-door Florida life. The following are recommended: Florida Birds, edited by the game and fresh water fish department; Florida Fishing, by Stewart Miller; The Plant World in Florida, by Dr. Henry Nehrling; Florida, by the Florida State Hotel Commission; Florida Trails, by Winthrop Packard; Florida Wild Life, by Charles T. Simpson; Florida Woods and Waters, by Game and Fresh Water Fish Department; Florida Forest Trees, by the Florida Forestry Association.

Neophytes Are Shuddering As Goating Nears

Goat Court, Odd Costumes Will Keep Pledges Awake Nights

With initiations just around the corner sorority pledges are padding ye old anatomy and looking into all dark corners carefully. Who can tell what the future holds for them? Is it a cute little paddle with a star appropriately carved into its larger end?

Usually goating at Florida State does not step this far back into man's past to find its ways and means, however, and if what has happened to pledges in the past may be used as an example of what they can expect in the final goating next week then they had better prepare for something more than brute woman-handling.

One sorority is famed for its goat court at which it tells the prospective member just what her faults have been and are. They spare no words nor mince them, the rumor is.

Nearly all the sororities have goat courts, to which the pledges come dressed as various famous people, as things from nature, as animals, and even as articles created by the machine age. Some of the noted figures that have appeared in the history of Florida State goating are: Ye old favorite, Don Quixote; that hawker of nostrums and cure-alls, Lydia E. Pinkham; the Florida State hero of the dance, Ted Shawn; and that old question mark, the Sphinx. The machine age gave sorority leaders and goaters the idea of the motorist's horror, Burned-out Cylinder. John Gorrie and cellophane (preferred) lent the idea of Miss Ice. From poetry comes Babbling Brook; English teachers suggested Split Infinitive.

The goat songs occupy great lengths (of both time and human endurance of nasal singing) and often decide the court's final decision.

Among the famous sentences received in goat courts on this campus are the following: washing windows, procuring the stomach of a fish, measuring lawns with a foot-rule, asking motorists what their favorite cereal is, and generally worrying all the inhabitants of Tallahassee and surrounding territory for such articles as coffins, black horses with white tails, and ice-skates.

The newest 'honorary' fraternity on campus requires its pledges to take baths and cold showers and to become acquainted with the vernacular of the common plumber (in place of learning the Greek alphabet). This society is said to go even so far as to see that its sprinkles carry out all the measures required.

Plans Virtually Completed For Gala Week-end

(Continued from Page One)

which Lilian Schapiro is in charge, the T. N. T. orchestra skit has "Symphony in Black and White" for its title, according to Julia Baker and Hamel Bowman, chairman.

PROMENADE DINNING HALL

Saturday night at dinner the Midwinter King and Queen with their court will promenade the dining room to avoid the usual crowding at the door, said Margaret Edwards, chairman of coronation. Students receiving the highest number of votes at the election in convocation last Tuesday will not be made known until that time.

At 8 o'clock Saturday night the Freshman Carnival begins in the lobby of the gym. Later the King and Queen will ascend their throne to reign over the dancing which will follow the Carnival. The T. N. T. orchestra will play for the dance to which all students are invited.

Six booths containing hot dogs, drinks, ice cream, candy, fortune tellers, an F. S. C. W. art gallery, and other amusements will be open before and during the dancing.

Spradin is Carnival Chairman

The general committee in charge of the carnival is composed of Hilda Spradlin, chairman; Viola Brooks, Sara Graham, and Martha Lester. On the committee for the hot dog and drinks booth are Alucia Crowell, Lorraine Gibbon, Martha Battey, Hazel Anderson, and Helen Waldo, chairman; for the ice cream booth, Sally Beri Nusum, Frances Lewis, Inez Seabrook, and Louise Lingo, chairman; for the candy booth, Mary Sadler, Virginia White, Beverly Brown, and Marjorie Raulerson, chairman.

On the fortune telling committee are Betty Bow, Mary Frances Hales, and Marguerite Sjostron, chairman. The booth for the F. S. C. W. art gallery is under the direction of Nina Kirkland with Jean Lykes and Phil Asher assisting. Ermine Lawrence is in charge of the amusement booth, at which a prize will be awarded for the funniest contribution.

An art major on each of the committees will be in charge of the decoration of the booths.

There will be no Odd and Even hockey games Saturday morning as previously announced.

Philosophy Underlying Cambodian, Siamese and Japanese Art Unfolded

Oriental Artists Are Subjective Inclining Toward Spiritual; Undergo Religious Rites Before Working

To give students a more comprehensive understanding of the Oriental art represented in the form of Cambodian and Siamese stone and wood sculpture and Javanese puppets and masks, on exhibit during the past week as part of the artist series, Miss Amy Ferris Briggs briefly discussed the two universally different types of art, natural and symbolical and of the philosophy underlying them.

Naturalistic art she defined as that in which forms of nature are depicted as interpreted by artists who enjoy and love nature. To illustrate her meaning, Miss Briggs pointed out the naturalistic art of the Greeks, who above all the races, were lovers of nature.

The contrasting art type, symbolical art, has arisen, said Miss Briggs, from a fear and awe of nature as exemplified in primitive art, an awe which the Oriental, despite his knowledge, still retains.

Miss Briggs further distinguished Oriental from Occidental art by explaining their relation to what we know as the old classical art, not at present so much in favor. "The classic influence is still felt, however," Miss Briggs declared, "although we may not like classical art so well as we used to, still, what made classic art good is still good—balance, symmetry, proportion, order, restraint, simplicity. These are still our standards of defining good art in the naturalistic school."

In the oriental geometrical art, however, there is no restraint as in Greek sculpture. There is instead, unlimited exaggeration as exemplified in the oriental architecture with its lavish ornamentation.

"The most important difference lies," she declared, "in that occidental art is very objective. It is interested in the material aspect, while the East, more concerned with spiritual matters, inclines largely toward subjective art, as revealed in the following passage quoted by Miss Briggs:

"Asia is one. The Himalayas divide only to accentuate two mighty civilizations, the Chinese with its communism of Confucius, and the Indian with its individualism of the Vedas. But not even the snowy barriers can interrupt for one moment that broad expanse of love for the ultimate and universal, which is the common thought-inheritance of every Asiatic race, enabling them to produce all the great religions of the world, and distinguishing them from those maritime peoples of the Mediterranean and the Baltic, who love to dwell on the particular, and to search out the means, not the end, of life."

Unless we know something of the religion of the oriental, we cannot understand their sculpture, for, as she said, "religion and art are names for one and the same experience." The displays represented a mixing up of Buddhism and Hinduism, said Miss Briggs while stating that the aim of Oriental art generally is towards the spiritual, and is attained through the losing of one's own identity and thus ultimately realizing oneself by meditation, in an infinity. She quoted, "The object of human life is not to waste it in ence to their employability, responsibility for dependents and equity in the recognition of women.

(Continued on page four)

Woman's Economic Status Questioned

(Continued from Page One)

A study of the NRA codes and the NRA compliance boards with special reference to men and women in the same occupations.

A study of the function of state departments of labor with special reference to women in industry.

A study of federal relief agencies conducting public relief work, with special reference to the type of women being employed, their preparation and salaries.

The investigation will be accomplished through branch committees. The Tallahassee A. A. U. W. committee on the economic and legal status of women is composed of Beulah B. Briley, chairman; Sallie Nicholson, Anna Mae Sikes, Olga Larsen, Katherine Waler and Zoa Manning.

Schwalmeyer Is Given Honor by Kadelpian Frat

(Continued from Page One)

assignment," for she has spent thirty-eight useful years since then in Florida. She obtained a position at Summerlin Institute in Bartow, then the outstanding high school in Florida. In an era when women taught on third-grade certificates Miss Schwalmeyer was thought unutterably progressive to apply for and receive a first-grade certificate for elementary work.

Miss Schwalmeyer was serving as vice-president of the Florida Education association when the Southern Education association, then the largest of its kind, and of which the former was a member, voted to hold its convention in Florida in the year 1904. At that time it was necessary to hold the meeting in Jacksonville as that city was the only one of a size sufficient to house the delegation, the largest ever to visit the state. Her speech before the convention, which besides appearing in the proceedings was copied in several education journals, was "Child Study and Primary Methods."

She has recently written a textbook, "As a Child Learns," which is used in education classes here and in extension work at the University of Florida.

It is Miss Schwalmeyer's hope that she may teach two more years in order that she may reach the three-quarter mark in years

Odds Win Soccer Game; Evens Score in Hockey

In the second of a series of Odd-Even hockey and soccer games played Monday afternoon, the Evens triumphed in hockey with a score of 3-1 in their favor. The soccer game was won by the Odds with a score of 2-0.

Lineup for Odd hockey team: Barton, Takash, Taylor, Mitchell, Bristol, Hurlin, Weeks, Maxwell, Lewis, Simpson, Baskins, Ireland, Hamilton, L'Abbe, Ferguson.

Lineup for Even hockey team: Panowski, Cooper, Bissel, Pierce, Pratt, Barret, Dickson, Macher, Holloway, Nusom.

Lineup for Odd soccer team: Miller, Stevens, Devine, Bailey, Deane, Lyle, Redfield, Hubbard, Royall.

Lineup for Even soccer team: Hales, Osthund, Levy, Tyson, Marsh, Wilkinson, Brooks, West, Gehan, Athon, Lewis, Cook.

Basketball Tourney Is Now in Progress With Twenty-one Contesting

The largest basketball tournament ever held in Tallahassee is in progress in the gymnasium of the Florida State College for Women. The Carrabelle and Crawfordville high school teams, two of the twenty-one entrants, opened the tournament yesterday afternoon at 6:00 o'clock.

Games are scheduled today from 1:00-6:00 p. m. and from 7:00-10:00 p. m., Saturday from 8:30-11:30 a. m. and 2:00-6:00 p. m., with the final and championship game at 8:00 p. m. Saturday night.

The surrounding towns whose teams compose the tournament include: Madison, Jennings, Greensboro, Carrabelle, Crawfordville, Chattahoochee, Bristol, Havana, Aucilla, Cross City, Mayo, Sopchoppy, Pinetta, Perry, Jasper, Monticello, Quincy, Foley, and Tallahassee, who has both Leon High and Florida High entered.

Tennis Teams Will Be Chosen in Tournaments

Two tennis tournaments will begin Monday, one for advanced players and one for beginners with Dorothy Lancaster in charge. All interested in entering the tournaments must sign up on the bulletin board in the Administration building by Saturday night.

No points will be given toward an F but the tournament will determine the class teams. A or B health is required.

Basketball Intramural Games Are in Progress

In the intramural basketball games scheduled yesterday morning Gilchrist hall won over Sigma Kappa by a default, and in the consolation game the Catholic Newmans won over the Delta Phi Epsilon sorority.

This afternoon the Delta Delta Delta team will play the Kappa Delta, and the Methodist students will play Jennie Murphree hall. The games will be held at 3:30.

LET'S GO TO EUROPE
IN JUNE
SMALL PRIVATE PARTY, PERSONALLY CONDUCTED, TRAVELING TOP-CLASS ON SHIPS.
Write for Folder
James A. Dasher
Valdosta, Ga.
(Mr. Dasher will be at the Three Torches at 4:00 P. M. Sunday, February 24, to interview anyone interested).

MELVIN AND ANNIE RUTH
will announce the opening of their new Beauty Shop Soon
(No Longer Connected with the Artistic Beauty Shop)

New Way Laundry and Dry Cleaners
Tallahassee's Oldest and Largest
"Wear Clean Clothes"
Representative in Lower Bryan Hall
Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 183

MAE'S SHOP
presents for your approval
Dresses for Prom Week-End
Evening Gowns, Tea Gowns and Sports Wear

THE SURPRISE STORE
"TALLAHASSEE'S BUSIEST DEPARTMENT STORE"
SHOWING A COMPLETE LINE OF NEW SPORT OXFORDS
$1.95 and $2.95
SANDALS OF EVERY DESCRIPTION $1.00 AND UP!
Phone 299 Cor. Jefferson and Adams Sts.

75c LUNCHEON AT BENNETTS 40c
CHOICE OF:
BREADED VEAL CUTLETS WITH TOMATO SAUCE
CHICKEN PAN PIE
VEGETABLES:
FRESH TURNIPS
NEW BOILED IRISH POTATOES
FROZEN FRUIT SALAD
ICE CREAM
CORN MUFFINS OR HOT BISCUITS
DRINK INCLUDED
25c MARSHMALLOW MINT SUNDAE 15c
25c HOT FUDGE SUNDAE 15c
15c DOUBLE DIP ICE CREAM SODA 10c
20c CHICKEN SALAD SANDWICH 15c
20c PIMENTO CHEESE AND OLIVE 15c
RUSSELL McPHAIL ICE CREAM, pt. .... [illegible]

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

The Social Week

College Girls Will Attend Military Ball at University

The annual Military ball and attendant activities this week-end in Gainesville will draw many Florida college girls. Sponsors of each regiment, the officers and their ladies, and the guests of the University will bring the guest list to several thousand people.

The frolics will open on Friday evening with a concert in the University auditorium by "Red" Nichols and his orchestra who are playing for the dances. There will be four dances, the first of which will be the Military ball on Friday evening between 10 p. m. and 2 a. m. At the same time the Junior Interfraternity conference will sponsor a pledge dance for pledges of the national fraternities on the campus. Saturday afternoon the Interfraternity conference will sponsor a tea dance and on Saturday evening there will be another dance at the new University gymnasium.

Girls who will be sponsors include: Anne Lee Dunn, Virginia Rogers, Banks Wood, Betty Kimball, Evelyn Ballard, Wilma Bristol, Ava Scott, Margaret Adkins and Juanita Pace. Peggy McMichael will be an honorary colonel.

Other girls from Florida State College for Women who will attend include: Marian Turner, Katherine McGarry, Nadie Granger, Marcia Scott, Margaret Roe, Doris Isted, Dorothy Williams, Marianna Swank, Nellie Lamar, Margaret Murray, Helen Cordez, Narcissa Leland, Irene Collins, Charmiar Lufburrow, Elizabeth Whiddon, Mary Lou Moore, Tommy Grace Faircloth, Sara Moore, Judy Whiddon, Laurita Pearson, Alice Slone, Marjorie Carter, Mildred Williams, Floris Sinquefield, Mary Pichard, Lois Long, Clara Lankford, Marjorie Stump, Ruth Esther Rosen, Adele Goldstein, Marjorie Helvenston, Francis Morrow, Martha Neeld, Carold Patterson, Celia Cary, Genevieve Wilkins, Anne Durr, Ellen Wiggins, Mildred Hurst, Helen Gray, Margaret Anderson, Evelyn Kennard, Edith Hayes Effinger, Lou Chilson, Barbara Curry, Clarice Sanchez, Mary Ennels, Dagmar Fripp, Rachel Sherman, Irene Edwards, Anne Chichester, Virginia Lide, Lillian Burford, Muriel Watson, Mamie Jane Clark, Mary Waller McCormick, Mary Laura Kelley, Virginia Armann, Mary Frances Whisnant, Perry Pollock, Janet Griffitts, Virginia Richards, Sara Wilkerson, Mary Francis Smith, Rosalie Powell, Betty Peck, Betty McKinnon, Janet Charles, Betty Wheeler, Nancy Wilkinson, Charlotte Pelsang, Francis Lowrie, Adelaide Duval, Virginia Kee, Betty Manning, Dot Ryan, Viola Taylor, Jean Gilmer, Pat Given, Martha Goddard, Francis Lewis, Marjorie Moore, Mary Baird, Elizabeth Yockey, Edith Merrill Ramsaur, Bay Bacon, Margaret Blount, Marion Knight, Annettee Quinby, Frances Gates, Caroline Oliver, Julia Lamar, Cecil Hicks, Helen Miller, Edith Perkins, Mary Jo Clayton, Mary Claire Moore, Grace Whitaker, Sue Whitaker, Joe King, Dot Hill, Virginia Northcutt, Mary Litschgi, Jane G. Stevens, Clara Birdsall, Christine Griffins, Francis Thomas, Katharine Rogers, Edwina Wakefield, Mary Elizabeth Ramsey, and Shirley Pemberton.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
Feb. 22 to March 2

Friday

Half Holiday for Washington's birthday.
5:00 p. m. Annual tea honoring Olivia M. Dorman, dean of students in Gilchrist parlors.
10:00 p. m. Military ball at University of Florida in gymnasium.

Saturday

Informal dancing in Bryan sunparlor during afternoon and evening.

Sunday

11:00 a. m. Church services.
7:15 p. m. Y. W. C. A. Vespers. Dean Dorman speaking.
8:00 p. m. Alpha Gamma Delta reception for patrons and patronesses.

Monday

5:30 p. m. Orchestra rehearsal.
7:15 p. m. Religious Workers' Council meeting.
8:15 p. m. Artist series, Bartlett-Robertson, two piano concert.

Tuesday

5:30 p. m. Orchestra rehearsal.
5:30 p. m. Dr. and Mrs. Harold Richards giving tea in Reynolds parlors.
7:30 p. m. Convocation. Chain of Missions Program. Missionaries in native costume.

Wednesday

7:15 a. m. Worship service.
5:30 p. m. Tea in Gilchrist parlors with Miss Edith West as hostess.
7:30 p. m. Phi Alpha Theta open forum on World Court in Augusta Conradi little theater.

Thursday

5:30 p. m. Tea in Jennie Murphree parlors with Miss Isabel McKinnell as hostess.
7:30 p. m. Glee Club rehearsal.
8:00 p. m. A. A. U. P. meeting, Augusta Conradi theater Mr. Millard Davidson speaker. Public invited.

Friday

6:30 p. m. College Dinner.
8:00 p. m. Skit night-Mid winter festival.

Saturday

9.00 a. m. Try-outs for Junior minstrel. Auditorium.
6:30 p. m. Coronation.
8 30 p. m. Carnival in college gymnasium.

Philosophy Underlying Cambodian Siamese and Japanese Art Unfolded

Continued from page three

a feverish anxiety and race after physical objects and comforts, but to use it in developing the mental, moral, and spiritual powers, latent in man."

Believing it of interest to know just how the Oriental artist proceeds before beginning a work of art, Miss Bridges quoted this enlightening passage, "The artist, after ceremonial purification, is to proceed to a solitary place. There he is to perform the "Sevenfold Office," beginning with the invocation of the hosts of Buddhas and Bodisattvas, and the offering to them of real or imaginary flowers. Then he must realise in thought the four infinite moods of friendliness, compassion, sympathy and impartiality. Then he must meditate upon the emptiness or non-existence of all things, for "by the fire of the idea of the abyss, it is said, there are destroyed beyond recovery the five factors" of ego consciousness. Then only should he invoke the desired divinity by the utterance of the appropriate seed-word (bija) and should identify himself completely with the divinity to be represented. Then finally pronouncing the dhyana mantram, in which the attributed are defined, the divinity appears visibly, "like a reflection," or "as in a dream," and this brilliant image is the artist's model."

Following the discussion, Miss Briggs took up separately the forms represented in the exhibit, consisting chiefly of various types of heads, one of which serves as an example of the major points of all.

Symbolic of the antithesis of Eastern art, the Siva, bronze bust, is represented by the artist as destroyer, creator, and possessor of highest spiritual knowledge, with this latter particular mood of meditation symbolized by matted hair. Embedded in the background of hair is also a sign, a symbol of invocation which can never be pronounced aloud.

The Siva, said Miss Briggs, is often represented with four arms, five faces, and other variations, symbolizing the many conceptions of the god. Every minute detail, pattern of the ear, arrangement of hair, etc., has some symbolic meaning, so that the idea of renunciation, spiritual freedom, and of meditation can all be represented by one head.

From the serious thought implied with this form of sculptured art, puppets, said Miss Briggs, are entirely different as they are much more playful in mood, and are a manifestation of unreal things in symbolical design.

On material made from the treated skins of buffalo, little mallets are used to chisel out the figures which generally portray romantic stories. A varying type of puppet is the shadow puppet which is played before a screen so that the women see the real figure while the men see only the shadows. The puppet play has existed for centuries as a means of entertainment, said Miss Briggs, though in Turkey today it has degenerated to a low form of vulgar humor.

Correcting a mistaken belief concerning the origin and use of puppets, Miss Briggs declares "It is sometimes understood that puppets are used because the Mohammedan religion prohibits the portrayal of human figures. This is not exactly true," she exclaimed, "for this forced modification depends upon the sect. The puppet form is really but a furtherance of the unreal art."

For a Limited Time Only!

PHOENIX HOSIERY

WITH CUSTOM-FIT TOP

69c

Here is your opportunity to save handsomely on your hosiery needs. Every pair is first quality, delightfully sheer — with such exclusive features as Custom-fit Top, Duo-Heel and Allover Tiptoe. All the new spring shades are included.

LINDEN'S
Fashion Shoppe

Personal Mention

Mr. Solon Klepper of Orlando and Miss Beatty Lefkowitz, of New York, visited with Elaine Klepper Saturday and Sunday at the Delta Phi Epsilon house.

Mrs. Pasco Palmer, sorority chaperone of Beta Phi Alpha, was a visitor in Valdosta, Georgia last Sunday.

Mrs. L. Stein of Miami Beach arrived in Tallahassee last Saturday night and has been spending the week with her daughter, Miriam Stein, at the Delta Phi Epsilon house.

Mrs. F. C. Willis of Pensacola is a visitor on the campus. She will be accompanied home today by her daughter, Jean Willis, who will spend the week-end in Pensacola.

Among the visitors at the Beta Phi Alpha house last Sunday and Monday were Mrs. R. F. Garcia and Miss Elisia Coastes. They were the guests of Ruth Garcia.

Clarabelle Matthews will spend this week-end with her parents in St. Petersburg.

Helen Gray, Florida State College graduate of '33, will be married in Jacksonville this week-end. Among the members of the Pi Beta Phi sorority who are leaving today to attend the wedding are Mary Virginia Warren, Francis Lurvey, Charlotte Stevens, and Ethel Pair Pillans.

Sara Graham left yesterday morning for a visit with her parents in Lakeland over the week-end.

Sara Mae Davis and Martha Davis were pledged by the Omega chapter of Sigma Kappa last night at 8 o'clock.

Marjorie Glen, Anna Glen, and Elizabeth Sponenbarger will spend the week-end in Bradenton visiting with friends and relatives.

Louise Mackay is leaving today to spend the week-end in Pensacola.

Jean Harris is visiting with friends in Quincy where she will attend a cotillion dance this week-end.

Among the girls who will spend the week-end visiting in Jacksonville are Clara Kramer, Lillian Shapiro, Ruth Dickson, Edith Dickson, Mrs. Frances Wall, Althea Smith, Elizabeth Stout, Virginia Holt.

Sara Bandy will spend the week-end in Albany, Georgia.

DEAN DORMAN TO BE HONORED AT TEA THIS AFTERNOON IN GILCHRIST HALL

The director of residence halls and the social directors of Gilchrist hall will be hostesses at a tea in honor of the dean of students, Miss Olivia N. Dorman, this afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock in Gilchrist parlors.

This tea is an annual affair given each year in honor of the dean of students. Mrs. Virginia Sloan, Mrs. Melanie Turner, Mrs. Carrie Scandrett, and Miss Dorman will be in the receiving line.

The guest list for the affair includes members of the faculty and students living in Gilchrist hall.

The parlors will be informally decorated with spring flowers consisting of sweet peas, calendulas, and calla lilies. During the afternoon as the guests call refreshments of coffee and sandwiches will be served.

ALPHA GAMMA DELTA WILL ENTERTAIN PATRONS AT RECEPTION SUNDAY NIGHT

The members and pledges of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority will entertain Sunday night at 8:30 with a reception in honor of the patrons and patronesses of the sorority. The honored guests on this occasion will be Mrs. Wade Covington, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Eyman, and Dr. and Mrs. C. F. Heinlein.

The house decorations for the reception will be bouquets of spring flowers arranged in places of advantage throughout the living rooms. The entertainment for the evening will feature a program of skits presented by the pledges.

Among the pledges and members of the sorority who will serve as hostesses at the reception are Betsey Anderson, Hallie Bailey, Victoria Curtis, Nadia Grainger, Betty Hintermister, Doris Isted, Sarah Butler Logan, Sara Nell Moore, Rosalie McDonald, Catherine McGarry, Mary Ward Peterson, Kathleen Reese, Marcia Scott, Amber Turner, Marion Turner, Marion Bailey, Amorette Bullard, Betty Mace, Westa Wilkins, Helena Wilson.

Frances Bishop, Dorothy Bryan, Madge Collier, Ruth Crews, Margaret Fee, Spurgeon Fulford, Mary Jane Gallemore, Phyllis Gewin, Grace Groff, Mary Elizabeth Halsted, Nellie Lamar, Julia O'Quinn, Nan O'Shaughnessy, Mary Nell Pinckard, Elise Scarbrough, Shirley Screven, Marianna Swank, Martha Wells, Margaret Roe, Virginia Boggs, Helen Godwin, and Pauline McLellan.

ANNUAL BANQUET FOR DAUGHTERS OF KIWANIANS WAS HELD TUESDAY NIGHT

The second annual Daughters' Banquet was given Tuesday night, February 19, by the Tallahassee Kiwanis club for those college girls whose fathers are members of Kiwanis International.

The invocation was given by Dr. Edward Conradi, and the welcome by Dr. Luther Rice Christie, pastor of the First Baptist church. Mr. Cary D. Landis, state attorney general, gave the address of the evening. Special music was furnished by the Florida A. & M. college quartett, and by the Kiwanis quartet. Mr. Jean V. Knapp, lieutenant governor of the western district acted as toastmaster for the occasion.

The college girls atending were Hazel F. Anderson, Leah Andrews, Phil Asher, Dorothy Elizabeth Benford, Eleanor Biggers, Wilma Mrissol, Eleanor Brothers, Evelyn Brunson, Martha Carlton, Marjorie Carter, Martha Lou Chilson, Margie Creel, Isabel Dillard, Louise Doyle, Anne Duval, Ethelle Mae Edwards, Edith Hays Effinger, Katharine Ely, Tommie Faircloth, Betty Fellows, Babette Fleming, Marie Foley, Mary Louise Forester, Eva May Fowler, Phyllis Gewin, Hazel Goza, Janet Griffitts, Grace Groff, Anna Cone Groover, Rosemary Hamley, Claudia Harper, Sara Hethcox, Martha Hosea, Sara Hosea, Billie Hotard, Mary Hutchinson, Doris Isted, Annita Jones, Gladys Keen, Genevieve Kelly, Harriett Knapp, Marjorie Knight, Mary Lee Lanahan, Dorothy Leach, Frances Lewis, Abbie Lyle, Alice Mabry, Betty Mack, Bessie Malounek, Betty Manning, Margaret Marchman, Mary Lynn Massie, Dassyanna Massey, Eileen Masters, Louise McCleary, Mary McCormack, Jessie Mead, Mary Hamilton Meginniss, Mary June Mitchell, Gertrude Miller, Anne Mizell, Mary Lou Moore, Mary Joyce Moorhead, Lula May Mooty, Martha Neeld, Eunice Nicholson, Catherine O'Bryan, Julia O'Quinn, Geneva Fisher Morris, Sara Palmer, Lilla Parramore, Eleanor Payne, Helen Peck, Mary Frances Pemberton, Mary Ward Peterson, Mary Pollock, Margaret Roe, Margaret Rogers, Marian Rogers, Mary Belle Rogers, Frances Sadler, Virginia Shultz, Rita Snyder, Leona Stimmell, Grace Alena Taylor, Valerie Stubbs, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Leone Thornton, Sarah Turner, Etta Virginia Turner, Sarah Tweed, Ola Vickers, Alice Wahl, Margaret Ware, Dorothy Watson, Lucille Williams, Helena Wilson.

Beta Phi Alpha Will Entertain Pledges "Backwardly"

A "Backward" party will be given by the members of Beta Phi Alpha for the pledges and friends of the sorority tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

The "Backward" motif will be featured throughout the evening, the invitations which have been issued to the guests being written backwards. The same theme will be carried out in decorations and entertainment. At the end of the evening hot dogs, rolls turned inside out, and coffee will be served.

The hostesses will be Genevieve Crowley, Margaret Nickel, Jean Willis, Carl Brigman, Virginia Duke, and Grace Rummell.

Thetas Will Have Tea For Local Alumnae

Tallahassee alumnae of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority will be guests at an informal tea at the sorority house Sunday afternoon, from 5 to 6 o'clock. At this time a local alumnae chapter of the sorority will be formed.

Floral decorations for the occasion will consist of spring flowers. During the afternoon refreshments of tea and cookies will be served.

Faculty Members Are Continuing Series Of Freshman Teas

The series of teas which have been given for the freshmen will be continued next week when informal teas will be given by Dr and Mrs. Harold F. Richards, Miss Edith West, and Miss Isabel McKinnell.

The parlor decorations for these get-togethers will feature the informal motif of the occasion and will consist mainly of spring garden flowers. The refreshments, which will be served by the hostesses assisting the faculty members, will also follow the informal theme.

Freshman students who have been invited to the tea to be given by Dr. and Mrs. Richards on Tuesday afternoon in Reynolds parlors from 5:30 to 6:30 are Dorothy Barclay, Wilma White, Barbara Stockwell, Jane Quinn, Dorothea Marsh, Margery Colee, Maxine Fugate, Margie Creel, Marjorie Knight, Margery Jones, and Mildred Johnson.

In Wednesday afternoon from 5:30 to 6:30 in Gilchrist parlors Miss Edith West will entertain informally for Mary Ann Moore, Geneva Nelson, Gladys Ware, Marcia Smith, Marguerite Sjostrom, Eileen Robinson, Sallie Ratliff, Phylis Gewin, Jack Allen Owens, Marion McKinney, and Helen Meinsken.

Miss Isabel McKinnell will be the hostess at a similar informal social event on Thursday afternoon from 5:30 to 6:30 in Jennie Murphree parlors. At this time Sara Nance, Kathryn Pratt, Edith Merrill Ramsaur, Louise Rogers, Katherine Todd, Phil Asher, Elsie Baird, Elizabeth Korst, Elizabeth Jinks, Addie Bledsoe, Mary Glen Coarsey, Bernice Crowley, Katherine Ely, Mary Alice Hudson, Mollie Holden, Onida Higdon, Ruia Heekin, Ines Frink, Grace Groff, and Marguerite Brown are being invited to call.

Music Hours and Rules For Dating Are Changed

The following regulations have been passed by the faculty committee on student affairs and the student senate and are now in effect:

Musical instruments and radios may be played on Saturday, Sunday, and holidays from 8:30 a. m. to second light flash. This change shall be a temporary arrangement, subject to change provided it proves unsatisfactory to a representative group of students.

Dates with Tallahassee men shall be under the same regulations as those with men from out of town.

Irish to Conduct Open Forum Wednesday Nite Regarding World Court

Miss Marian Irish, associate professor of political science, will give a speech and conduct an open forum Wednesday night, in the Augusta Conradi theater at 8:15 on the significance of entrance into the world court to the United States and to the world. The lecture is sponsored by Phi Alpha Theta, national history honorary society.

During her lecture Miss Irish will discuss the causes underlying the defeat of the move to enter the world court. She thinks the cause lies directly at the door of ignorance and believes that more knowledge on the subject would mean less prejudice. She will also discuss what she believes to be the important part Will Rogers and Father Coughlin played in defeating the measure.

Scrapbooks Show Students Here Are Loathe to Forego Memories

Every Collector Has One Study Sign, One "Call For Package" Slip

Some people collect tropical fish; others collect postage stamps, but a hobby that almost all Florida State students ride is collecting for scrapbooks. Students at Florida State College for Women are avid collectors. They do not own one scrapbook, but two or three, beginning with the senior-high-school scrapbook and continuing with one for every year they have spent in college. And their pages contain everything from wooden ice cream spoons to ivory elephant charms as souvenirs of memorable occasions in the past.

The high school scrapbooks brim over with party invitations, gift cards, photographs, faded flowers and corsages, dance programs, Christmas cards and Valentines. In a few, there are new pictures of friends, and news clippings of all the sports in which their school participated.

But freshman year scrapbooks tell a different story. Beginning with the Freshman Week booklet and the Freshman Forecast, the college scrapbooks run the gamut of campus experiences. "Call slips" and telegrams are the favorites, but artist series programs, demonstration programs and Thanksgiving dinner menus are also carefully treasured. Everyone has a "call for package" slip, a study sign and two or three pages devoted to grades. Everyone also keeps the train ticket envelopes which they used at Christmas vacations. Infirmary excuses, party invitations, greeting cards, and Flambeau excerpts are scattered throughout.

Some girls keep newspaper and magazine collections rather than personal souvenirs. One student has a collection of nothing but poetry; another keeps a book of current news events, ranging from the Akron disaster to the Dionne quintuplets; and still another devotes most of her pages to O. O. McIntyre editorials. Another student has devoted a particular space to summer vacations, and these pages abound in hotel stationery, post-cards, and various hotel and railway signs. There is also a hotel key, and several tags and blotters labeled "Gem Safety-Pins", "B. V. D. Swim Suits" and "Service with a Smile".

All the collectors have a prize possession. One girl has a piece of rope from "Old Ironsides"; another has the locks of hair of a few special friends; another keeps samples of material of her favorite dresses; and still another has a collection of Santa Clauses.

Everyone who has finished last year's scrapbook is beginning this year's.

Miss Virginia Moore Makes Trip to Ocala

Miss Virginia Moore, home demonstration agent, left Wednesday for Ocala to assist Miss Tilly Roesel, local agent there, with community home improvement work.

Monday, Miss Moore will go to Orlando to confer with Mr. T. C. Bickford, general manager of the "Florida On Parade" exposition which will open in Orlando early in the fall of 1936.

Miss Moore will leave Wednesday for Pensacola to assist the home demonstration agent there, Miss Ethel Atkinson, with arrangements concerning their community club house.

German Consul Visits

Dr. Wendler, German consul from New Orleans, and his wife visited Florida State College Wednesday. They were shown over the buildings and campus by President Edward Conradi and Miss Myrtle Delbee of the modern language department.

Dr. Wendler was born in southern Germany and lived for three years in London. He has been consul [illegible], Australia and India.

Resolved

TO LIVE BY THE TRUTH

$52.50

Perhaps you have been living for years by a watch whose time is always too fast —or too slow. Make a resolve NOW to get a Hamilton— and live by the truth. We have a selection of new Hamilton models for 1934— many at prices lower than ever. Let us show them to you.

MOON

"It's Easy to [illegible] the Moon Way"

BEAUTY SCANDAL
on the College Campus

HOW SHOCKING!—One out of five girls walked off campus with a complexion quite below average this afternoon. That girl will do well to follow her companions and use

Helena Rubinstein's
PASTEURIZED FACE CREAM

A single cream with a manifold beauty purpose! Besides cleansing, it purifies the skin. Besides protecting, it molds new beauty in texture and contour. A marvelous powder base, too. Whatever other beautifiers you use, Helena Rubinstein says Pasteurized Face Cream is essential to proper daily beauty care. You'll believe her when you see the wonderful results of this unique preparation! 1.00, 2.00. For dry skin, use PASTEURIZED FACE CREAM SPECIAL. 1.00, 2.50

Bennett's

Lois-Annelle Shop, Inc.
Albany, Georgia

ANNOUNCES

a special showing of Suits and Dresses for Spring and Summer.

THURSDAY,
February 28.
at the
FLORIDAN
HOTEL

STATE THEATRE

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Rudy Vallee
in
"SWEET MUSIC"

SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Clark Gable
in
"AFTER OFFICE HOURS"

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
"ALL THE KING'S HORSES"

THURSDAY
Paul Kelly and Walter Bryon
in
"THE PRESIDENT VANISHES"
—ALSO—
"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT"

RITZ THEATRE

SATURDAY
Tim McCoy
in
"BEYOND THE LAW"

SUNDAY AND MONDAY
"SWEET MUSIC"

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
"AFTER OFFICE HOURS"

Make Gay Week-End
of the
Midwinter Festival

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

Don't Miss Chance
To Hear
Visitors Next Week

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, March 1, 1935 NUMBER NINETEEN

Phi Beta Kappa Will Install Chapter Here Tuesday

Midwinter Royalty Revealed Saturday

King and Queen Are To Promenade Dining Room at Dinner

SKITS TONIGHT BEGIN PROGRAM

Freshman Carnival And Dance Will Conclude Gala Week-End

The identity of the King and Queen of the Midwinter Festival and their court, who were elected by secret ballot in convocation last week, will be revealed at dinner tomorrow night when they promenade the college dining hall as the opening feature of the annual festival and carnival.

After circling the room, they will be seated at a special table in the center of the dining hall. The court of sixteen will be composed of the king and queen, two senior and two junior maids and their escorts, one sophomore, and one freshman maid who will also be escorted by class members, and two pages.

Gowns of Court

The queen will be dressed in royal purple and will carry an arm bouquet of calla lilies. Her maids will wear gowns of white and carry bouquets of sweet peas in shades of red and purple. Girls who take the part of men in the court will wear tuxedos, according to Margaret Edwards, chairman of coronation.

Official crowning of the King and Queen will take place at the dance at the gymnasium, following the Freshman carnival. The festivities at the gymnasium will begin at 9:00 o'clock.

Music for dancing will be provided by the T. N. T. orchestra.

Complete Week-end Program

The complete program for the Midwinter Festival week-end includes the faculty-student dinner in the college dining hall tonight, which is the opening feature, the [illegible] skit night program in the auditorium at 8:15, the presentation of the King and Queen at dinner tomorrow night, and the coronation, Freshman Carnival, and dance at the gymnasium tomorrow night.

The Freshman Carnival will consist of six booths at which amusement and refreshments may be procured, according to Hilda Spradlin, general chairman. At one booth hot dogs, candy, drinks, and ice cream will be sold, while at another two mysterious women will tell what the future holds for you," Hilda said.

Still another will enable you to see what you look like in the F. S. C. W. art gallery, according to Miss Kirkland, chairman of amusements. The booths will be open before and during the dance.

To Be Crowned

Later at the dance the king and queen will mount their throne to reign supreme over the dance and carnival.

Entertainment at the dance will include the "parade of animals" and the awarding of the prize to the one judged "funniest" by popular applause. Any individual or organization may enter an animal for five cents.

Titles of the seven skits entered in the contest tonight indicate that the program will be a varied one.

Plumbing Melodrama

Tau Gamma Sigma, the new plumbing honorary, will present "She was Just a Plumber's Daughter," a melodrama which will "plumb and rinse the depths of human emotions as the actresses pipe up with their lines," according to the Exalted High Spout, Edith Patterson.

In the Kappa Delta skit, having a musical comedy theme, Carolyn Oliver and Helen Gates will dance an eccentric number, while the Chi Omegas, under the direction of Mary Jeanne McKay, will portray Chinese fantasy.

The director of a real symphony orchestra will be on the stage with the T. N. T.'s, said Hazel Bowman, chairman of the T. N. T. skit, entitled "A Black and White Symphony."

"Tempus Fugit" or "Death

(Continued on Page Three)

Prom Tickets Will Be Sold March 11

Tickets for the Junior-Senior prom will be on sale March 11-15, according to Margaret K. Anderson, president of the junior class.

The tickets will be sold at four tables in the administration building, two on the first floor and two on the second floor, from 1:15 to 1:30 p. m. and from 7:15 to 8:15 p. m. On Thursday, March 15, they will also be sold from 11:30 to 12:30 noon. The price is 50 cents for stag tickets and 75 cents for late tickets.

There will be absolutely no other time or place at which to buy tickets, said Margaret.

Students Hear Mission Chain

Educators From Other Lands Explain Their Work And Aims

Four of the "world ambassadors" brought to Florida by the Florida Chain of Missionary Assemblies were introduced to the students of Florida State in the auditorium Tuesday night. The assembly group is on a state-wide tour reaching sixteen cities, of which Tallahassee is the last for that year.

The purpose of the tour as outlined by Miss B. Louise Woodford, state chairman, is to introduce educators from other colleges and lands, thus helping to break down that area of world ignorance and prejudice described so clearly by Dr. Koo, earlier speaker of the missionary assembly.

Among the foremost of the pioneers has been Dr. Ida Scudder who for thirty years has been a missionary in India despite her youthful vow never to go to India because she felt that her family, which for generations has aided India, has done enough. Called there by the illness of her mother, the great need of the Indian people held her and inspired her to found one of the first medical colleges for women.

Miss Lucy Wang, one of two women college presidents in China, addressed the audience on the subject "Lives Transformed," in which she described the actual China, a quite different China from the chaotic country pictured in the news reports of the foreign press agents.

Outlining briefly China's struggle against the exploitations and ravages of western powers since the opening of China's trade to them, Miss Wang declared that "no longer is China the great giant which has gone to sleep. China is not sleeping today. She is a China awakened, moving—where to, remains to be seen."

There are two points of China's present goal, said Miss Wang, political independence with international equality before the world, and the creation of a new type of citizenship with freedom and the liberation of the people, and the watchword for this movement, like the liberty, equality, fraternity of the French revolution is in China, "nationalism, democracy, and livelihood."

Entertainment for the evening's program was provided by Miss Yoshko Saito, Japanese operatic star, who sang several selections in English and Japanese.

The conference continued Wednesday afternoon in Ruge hall where Miss Rachel Benfer dis-

(Continued on Page Three)

Social Committee Will Sponsor Informal Talk

The social committee is sponsoring this semester a number of informal talks by members of the faculty on subjects of courtesy, etiquette, and cultural interest.

The first of these talks will take place next Wednesday evening at 7:15 p. m. in the Broward club room. Miss Louise Richardson at this time will discuss the subject of "Business Manners and Why."

Elections Are Postponed For Another Week

Students Will Nominate Officers By Closed Ballot March 12

CANDIDATES MUST RECEIVE APPROVAL

Executives Are Chosen From the Incoming Senior Class

Nominations of officers for College Government Association, Flambeau, Flastacowo, and Distaff will take place at Convocation March 12 instead of the first Tuesday in March, the date designated for nominations of officers in the student handbook. According to Caroline De Montigne, president of C. G. A., the date has been changed because of the installation of Phi Beta Kappa, national academic honorary society, on March 4 and 5.

Nominations shall be made by the entire student body in convocation by closed ballot for president of College Government association, Chairman of Judiciary, vice-presidents of the association, the secretary and treasurer, and for editors of the Flambeau, Distaff, and Flastacowo. Nominees for the major offices of the Athletic association will also be selected.

Candidates Approved

Before the nominations are made public, the names of the candidates for nomination shall be taken by the Chairman of the Nominating Committee to the Dean of students to receive approval and to ascertain whether each candidate fulfills scholarship and other requirements. The following regulations govern the holding of all offices: (1) The student must be a bona-fide member of her class. (2) The student must make an average of "C" in the semester preceding. (3) The student must be subject

(Continued on Page Three)

Outdoor Display Adds Specimens

State Lends Collection Of Tre Snails

In continuation of the observance of Outdoor Florida week, the Library has added several displays to its exhibit of the past week. The Florida game and freshwater fish department has loaned varied examples of Florida wild life, including mounted specimens in life like poses of the roseate spoonbill, the purple grackle and the painted bunting which have been added to the bird collection and several rock specimens showing the composition of the famous "Blowing Rocks," near Jupiter, Florida.

A rare collection of tree snails gathered in the Everglades, the only known habitat of this mollusk, is on display. Also in the snail line are some giant snail shells, unusual because of their large size. Another feature is three alligator eggs, which resemble those of the common chicken. They may be distinguished upon close observation by their large size, light tan splotches, and elongated shape.

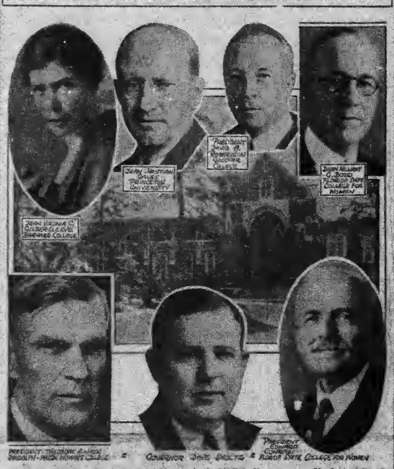
A practical feature of the display is an explanation of first aid methods for snake bites, and the major points of difference between venomous and non-venomous snakes. Illustrated explanations of the head, body, tail construction, and markings as a means of identification are given.

The topic of the [illegible] table offers the following [illegible] on the Outdoor life of Florida: The Book of the Tarpon, Julian Dimock; Trees of the South-eastern States, Coker and Totten; The Butterfly Book, William Jacob Holland; The Book of the Naturalist, W. H. Hudson; Along the Florida Reef, Charles F. Holder.

Honoring George Washington's birthday on February 22, the main glass show case of the Library has been devoted to a Revolutionary collection, comprising original

(Continued on Page Three)

TAKE PART IN FRATERNITY INSTALLATION



DEAN VIRGINIA C. GILDERSLEEVE BARNARD COLLEGE
DEAN CHRISTIAN GAUSS PRINCETON UNIVERSITY
PRESIDENT DAVID A. ROBERTSON GOUCHER COLLEGE
DEAN WILLIAM G. DODD FLORIDA STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN
PRESIDENT THEODORE H. JACK RANDOLPH-MACON WOMAN'S COLLEGE
GOVERNOR DAVE SHOLTZ
PRESIDENT EDWARD CONRADI FLORIDA STATE COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

Among prominent speakers who will take part in the Phi Beta Kappa program Monday and Tuesday are Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve of Barnard, Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton, President David A. Robertson of Goucher, President Theodore H. Jack of Randolph-Macon Woman's college, and Governor Dave Sholtz. The library, shown above, will be the scene of the installation. President Edward Conradi and Dean William G. Dodd of the faculty of this college were named honorary members.

Educators Are To Talk Here

Gauss, Robertson, Jack, Gildersleeve Appear On Program

Four nationally known educators will participate in the installation of Florida Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at Florida State College for Women here, Monday and Tuesday. They include Dr. Theodore H. Jack, president of Randolph-Macon Woman's college; Dr. David A. Robertson, president of Goucher college; Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard college, Columbia university; and Dr. Christian Gauss, dean of Princeton university.

Installation of the chapter will take place Tuesday morning, March 5, at 9 o'clock, in the browsing room of the college library with Dr. Jack as the installing officer. Dr. Jack will also be one of four speakers at the formal banquet that evening.

Dr. Gauss will speak at the opening session Monday night in the college auditorium at 8:15 o'clock. His subject will be "The College Student and his Country." President Robertson will address the Phi Beta Kappa group Tuesday morning in the college auditorium at 10:30 o'clock on "Universities in Memoirs." Dean Gildersleeve will appear on the afternoon program in the college auditorium at 3 o'clock, the subject of her address being "Education for Today." All students are expected to attend the three lectures held in the auditorium, while interested friends of the college are invited to attend.

Dr. Jack is well known among southern educators, having served as secretary of the Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of the Southern States from 1923-26, and president from 1926-27. From 1919-1933 he held the position of vice-president of Emory university and dean of the graduate school. He became president of Randolph-Macon Woman's College in 1933.

Dr. Robertson, who has held prominent positions in a number of leading educational associa-

(Continued on page three)

Minstrel Tryouts Will Be Saturday

Try-outs for junior minstrel are to be held Saturday, March 2, from two to four o'clock in the college auditorium. Sara Krentzman, general chairman, announces that it is urgent that all who are interested in taking part in the entertainment be present at this time. Not juniors alone, but all students are eligible to try-out for parts.

Art Exhibitions To Start Today

Students to Show Design, Composition Work

Beginning today, the art department will sponsor a series of exhibits in 307 Administration building every Friday afternoon until the spring holidays.

According to Miss Amy Briggs, assistant professor of art, the exhibit will consist of works from the different art classes, and it is hoped, she said, that it will sponsor an appreciation of art in those who are not enrolled in the courses as well as give the art students a chance to view the works of the other students and classes.

The program of the exhibits follows: March 1, painting; March 8, freshman design; March 15, composition; March 29, stage craft and lettering; April 5, advanced design; April 12, costume illustration.

Former Florida State Student Stars in Golf

Marion Miley of Lexington, Kentucky, former student at Florida State, went up to the semi-finals in the Florida girl tourney being held at Palm Beach last week. Marion has also filed entry with the tournament committee for the South Atlantic championship to be held at Ormond Beach.

She was a contestant in the 1934 classic and went to the semi-final round where she was defeated 1 up on the eighteenth green. Known as the Lexington star, she has been in the south for some time and is numbered among those counted as formidable competitors.

Honorary Bids Seven Alumnae

Professional Record And Cultural Interest Are Considered

Four alumnae of Florida State College for Women who were recently elected to membership of the Florida Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa will be initiated into the local chapter immediately following the installation program on March 5.

Election of alumnae was based on the undergraduate record of each candidate and on her interest in cultural and intellectual fields since her graduation. Alumnae who will be initiated here are: Miss Agnes Edwards, Miss Inga Olla Helseth, and Miss Effie Pettit. Three alumnae received bids who will not be able to come for initiation. They are: Miss Ruth Reynolds, Mrs. Irita Bradford Van Doren, and Miss Edna Reese Williams.

Miss Agnes Edwards, who graduated in 1916 is now dean of women at the Southwestern Institute in Lafayette, Louisiana, and during her senior year at this college she was president of the College Government association. She was active in war service and worked in rehabilitation schools after the World war, and from 1926 to 1929 was off campus director at this college. She received her master's degree from Columbia University.

Miss Felicia Williams (Mrs. L. W. Traxler) graduated in 1914 and then taught in the high schools of Florida. She entered the war service and later received her master's degree from George Washington University and was an instructor of English on this campus from 1922 to 1923. She is now on the extension division faculty of the University of Florida.

Miss Inga Olla Helseth, who is now principal of the Ft. Pierce high school graduated from here in 1914 and was head of the Practice Teaching Division on this campus from 1917 to 1929. She studied at Columbia University in summers, and had a year's leave

(Continued on page three)

Lecture Opens Two Days' Installation

Suggestions Asked For Three Editors

With elections only a few weeks off, it is incumbent upon each individual student to consider the possible candidates for every campus office.

Acting upon the assumption that few students are acquainted with the work of the heads of the three campus publications, the Flambeau is asking that if any person has in mind a particular girl to run for the editorship of either the Distaff, the Flastacowo, or the Flambeau, that she submit the name of that girl to the Flambeau. If said girl has the necessary qualifications for the office, her name will be published.

By such a process the student body may be made familiar with the possible qualified candidates before they are called upon to make nominations.

Names already submitted for editor of the Flambeau include Althea Smith, Gertrude Kuhn, Elaine Klepper, and Ruth Parsons. For business manager, Ethyle Mae Edwards, eligible to run again, Jo Douglas, and Mary Patterson.

Names submitted for the Distaff are as follows: editor, Sarah Krentzman; business manager, Marjorie Harris, and Julia Vanderipe.

Names submitted for the editor of the Flastacowo include Betty Myer, Antoinette Sullivan, and Edith Webb.

Florida Names Five For Prom

Student at University To Elect Queen From This Number

Martha Battey, representing Jennie Murphree hall, Phil Asher, Pi Beta Phi, Betty Ash, Reynolds hall, Sara Moor, Alpha Delta Pi, and Betty Wheeless, Delta Delta Delta, were chosen by the social committee of freshman class at the University of Florida this week as candidates for queen and attendants for the Freshman prom to be held in Gainesville, March 15. The queen will be elected from these five girls.

The photographs of these girls were selected from the twenty-five pictures submitted from Florida State College last week, representing one girl from each sorority, four from Jennie Murphree and three from Reynolds. The girls were chosen by the committee on the basis of their popularity personality and beauty.

No names were sent, the pictures being identified by numbers only. A list of the names and corresponding numbers was kept here in the office of the dean of students. The entire freshman class at Gainesville will vote upon the queen to be chosen from the five girls decided upon by a committee.

Other girls entered in the contest were Mercedes Garriga, Mickey Conn, Martha Bishop, Jennie Murphree; Mary Jane Gale and Myrtice Harvey, Reynolds; Spurgeon Pulford, Alpha Gamma Delta; Floris Singletfield, Alpha Omicron Pi; Dorothy Hoffman, Alpha Xi Delta; Carolyn Blount, Beta Phi Alpha; Muriel Liebmann, Delta Phi Epsilon; Rachel Sherman, Kappa Alpha Theta; Jane Gray Stevens, Letitia Bond, Phi Mu; Blanche White, Sigma Sigma Sigma; Virginia Chultz, Zeta Tau Alpha; and Helen Dixon, Sigma Kappa.

Honorary Pledges Five

Phi Beta Sigma, Spanish honorary fraternity, pledged five girls Wednesday afternoon at five-thirty in the Y. W. C. A. hut. They are: Anna Groover, Wilma Terbush, Winnifred Hansen, Opal Grey, and Virginia Cromartie.

On March 20, the pledges will present the program required for membership into the club. As yet the plans for this program have not been completed but will be announced at a later date.

Honorary, Alumnae, And Members-in-Course To Be Initiated

MANY NOTABLES TO BE PRESENT

Program Replete With Tea, Luncheon, And Formal Banquet

The two-day installation program of the Florida Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at Florida State College for Women will officially open Monday evening with an address on "The College Student and His Country" by Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton University.

At 9:00 o'clock Tuesday morning all Phi Beta Kappas will wear academic dress and assemble in the Browsing room of the library for the official installation ceremony, which will be in charge of Dr. Theodore Jack, the installing officer.

Members Initiated

Immediately following the services the newly-elected honorary members, alumnae members, and members-in-course, will be initiated. These include Dr. Edward Conradi and Dean William G. Dodd, honorary members; Barbara Garfunkel, Florence Jennings, Ida Engel, Frances Parks, and Rachel McKinnon, members-in-course; and Miss Agnes Edwards, Miss Ruth Reynolds, Mrs. Felicia Williams Traxler, Mrs. Irita Bradford Van Doren, Dr. Inga Olla Helseth, Miss Effie Pettit, and Miss Edna Williams, alumnae members.

At 10:30 there will be a lecture in the auditorium on "Universities in Memoirs" by Dr. David Robertson. Dr. Harold F. Richards, president of the local association of Phi Beta Kappa, will preside over this meeting, while the members of the newly installed chapter will sit on the platform.

Following the lecture there will be a luncheon at the Floridan hotel for all members of Phi Beta Kappa and official guests. Claude Pepper, Tallahassee, attorney and member of Phi Beta Kappa, will act as toastmaster for the occasion. Governor Dave Sholtz will be the principal speaker, and other distinguished guests present will be introduced and asked to make brief remarks if they wish.

Afternoon Meeting

An afternoon meeting at 3:00 o'clock in the college auditorium will feature a talk by Dean Virginia Gildersleeve whose subject will be "Education for Today." Presiding at this meeting will be Dr. Olivia Dorman, dean of students at Florida State college.

Other entertainment for the afternoon will be provided by Miss Margaret W. Dow at the organ. Among the selections which she will play are, Rejoice, Ye Pure in Heart, by Sowerby; Carillon, by Sowerby; Elfes, by Bonnet; Papillons Noirs by Jepson; and Finale from Grande Piece Symphonique by Franck.

All guests for the installation, faculty members, social directors, and representatives from other honorary societies on campus will be honored with a tea which will take place Tuesday afternoon at 5:00 o'clock in Jennie Murphree parlor.

Ends With Banquet

The concluding feature of the installation program is the banquet at 8:00 o'clock in the college dining room to which all guests and faculty members are specially invited. Speakers for the occasion are Dean Dodd for the College of Arts and Sciences, President Jack for Phi Beta Kappa, Claude Pepper for the Phi Beta Kappas of Florida, and President Tigert for the University of Florida. They will be presented by Miss Myrtle Dolbee who will serve as toastmistress for the affair.

Invitations for Phi Beta Kappa installation program have been sent to many distinguished people including President Roosevelt, James Richards, secretary of the

(Continued on Page Three)

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF
BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON ..... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED ROSS ...... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Athea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchanges, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyne Wahnish, Copy Editor Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster Margaret Lafferty Nedra McNamara, Sara Beth Davis Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker Virginia Rogers Eleanor Williams Sara Rutledge Marjorie Fain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman Anne Donnell

BUSINESS STAFF
ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS ... Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS ..... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON ..... Circulation Manager
Ass't. Adv. Manager, Mary Patterson; Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sara Beth Davis.

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1914, at the post office at Tallahassee .Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Phi Beta Kappa, Recognition for the Past, a Challenge for the Future

On Tuesday the Florida Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa will be installed at Floride State College for Women.

The event speaks for itself. Any expatiation at this time would appear wholly superfluous. It is sufficient to say that faculty, students, and alumnae experience a feeling, not unrelated to pride, as Florida State College for Women, with dignity and graciousness born out of the knowledge of distinction justly deserved, sets the final stage to receive Phi Beta Kappa.

Phi Beta Keppa comes to Florida State, a recognition for the past, a challenge for the future.

Florida State Holds Trumps In Educational Game

If there is one time woman will listen to man it is when he is talking about women. Therefore when Shelton Phelps, president of Winthrop college, writes on the education of women, and especially as applied to state colleges, in the "Peabody Alumni News," we are prone to listen to whet he has to say.

Mr. Phelps maintains, or rather says precedent forces him to maintain, that only the non-public agencies make experiments in education. Acting upon this conclusion he proceeds to disclose information he has obtained from such institutions of higher learning for women as Bryn Mawr, Goucher, Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Smith, Stephens, Vassar, and Wellesley, Whereupon he makes another conclusion, this time to the effect that experiences of the non-public colleges for women during the present century, as crusaders in the field of education reserved for women, show the following trends:

"The recognition of a sharp line of differentiation between the objectives, functions, and content of the first two years and last two years of college work; the development of specialization along two lines, major and functional; the return to directed election and modified prescription; a return to emphasis on comprehensive examinations; the recognition of two types of college achievement, Honors and Pass; a decentralized library service; the encouraging of a year of the four spent in college to be spent abroad or at another institution; cooperative housing; summer institutes where work may be done on pressing current problems; development of such things as "Playshop Laboratories," which together with the above mentioned trende all aim at one purpose—The more nearly complete development of each individual student."

Mr. Phelps final peroration is thet if these movements of the non-public women's colleges prove effienceions, it behooves the state college for women to align itself with them, adding that change should not be difficult in the college for women since these institutions, scarcely older than some of the innovations discussed, are less trammeled by the stringent forces of traditions than are colleges for men.

Since these trende of the non-public college all aim towards the more nearly complete development of each individual student, it becomes a sort of challenge to Florida State College for Women to examine itself to ascertain wherein it measures up to this program. It is well to be mindful of the fact that the sum of such a broad program may be more perfect than any individual part.

First, it will be necessary to somewhat repudiate Mr. Phelps' remark about most of the experiments in education being limited to non-public schools. Florida State is a public institution that is doing just that. It has a curriculum committee that is up and going, and one of its aims is to outline a system whereby a student may work off all required subjects the first two years, leaving the last two years for specialization. A new course called "An Introduction to Contemporary Civilization," to be offered here next year, cuts across departmental lines and sets the stage for functional specialization.

Florida State has a system of Honors work and comprehensive examinations. Cooperative housing is an old story on its campus as well as student produced plays and similar projects. The stacks in its library are open and current pressing problems are automatically part of class room work. It seems a fair conclusion to say that Florida State does not lag behind many of the new experiments in education found in the non-public college.

And does this dissertation sound rather cocky? It is merely a state institution of learning for women laying its cards on the table. Florida State is experimenting in the old game of a "new" education. Just because the past few years have dealt her some aces doesn't imply that the game is won. The important fact is that she is playing.

Youth Scores Another Hit

Organized youth chalked up another mark of victory on the scoreboard this week when the students of the state of New York, represented by a small group, led a defense attack against a bill in the New York legislature impairing "academic freedom" and "freedom of speech."

It is significant that the eighty-five students who were entrusted with the task of lobbying for the fifty thousand state members of the National Students' Federation, were girls, students of Vassar and Skidmore colleges. These girls through their spokesman, Miss Kathleen McInerny of Vassar, quietly and orderly stated the reasons why they thought that a compulsory oath of loyalty to the Constitution should not be required of every student entering an institution of higher learning in the state drawing any financial support from public funds. They also expressed the opinion that a bill of this kind would "defeat its own purpose and would bring on a clash we are desperately trying to avert."

Whether the bill in question will be vetoed is relatively unimportant. However, it must be evident to the lawmakers in the capitol at Albany by this time that the students in the state have organized and by virtue of that organization have gained the power to express forcefully their opinion, pro and con, on questions of the present day.

Thus while the older generations have been hickering and bickering the youth of America has quietly gone about its task of effecting an organization which will give it strength to assume a role in contemporary affairs. For youth has learned early that in cooperation and organization lie the very keys to success and worthwhile achievement.

Has the NRA Received Its Death Blow?

The New Deal received a fearful wallop this week when Federal Judge Neilds held that Section 7-A, the heart of the Recovery Act is unconstitutional as applied to a company not engaged in interstate commerce with its employees. If this clause, in which the government underwrote the right of labor to collective bargaining is not upheld by the Supreme Court, it will mean one thing and one thing only—the national government will continue its regulation of industry, but in the interests of Big Ownership alone.

Heretofore, nominally at least, the NRA has been an effort to stabilise capitalism by establishing a "partnership" between the government, the owners and the workers. If the right of the workers to organize is taken away it will be nothing but inevitable that the bosses will control the government and the government will oppress the workers. Government control of industry would then be not only inadequate but potentially dangerous. It would be only to easy for the 50,000 of our citizens that control fifty per cent of our wealth to use the government setup as the framework of a Fascist state, for their own ends and purposes. Whatever the outcome, it will be a history making decision when the Supreme Court lets us know what our constitution-making forefathers would say about Section 7-A.

Magazine Thumbings

By MELVYNE WAHNISH

Carol Farabee has functioned as guest columnist this week, and is responsible for the reviews.

THE SCREEN ENTERS POLITICS.
By Richard Sheridan Ames.
Harpers, March, 1935.

"The movies have tasted blood. It was, in this instance, the blood of Upton Sinclair. But it was political blood, tasting strongly of victory, and sweet indeed to that Goliath of the arts, hitherto so vulnerable to the slingshots of reformers and distractors, including that very Sinclair whose book about William Fox held no blandishments for Hollywood."

It is the contention of the author that the screen, afraid that Mr. Sinclair's threat to California meant ruin to the movie magnates, entered politics, surprising patrons of neighborhood movie houses who were suddenly treated to pictures of an indigent army climbing from box cars on Los Angeles sidings. These repulsive loking bums, says the author, appeared to have swarmed in from all corners of the United States, determined to enjoy the easy pickings of the promised Sinclair regime which was terrifying to citizens who already had a job and a roof over their heads. Some with good memories at once recognized excerpts from the Warner Brother's previous film fiction "Wild Boys of the Road." According to the author, the Sinclair cohorts exposed this fraud and the movies were forced to abandon the use of stock shots thereafter, but they still had plenty of cameras, and imagination.

The author depicts to the reader that the screen is able to flood the United States with deft propaganda of its own choosing so long as it contains nothing factious or of an immoral character, ridiculing personalities, and deriding an entire movement.

NATIONAL SECURITY AND BIRTH CONTROL.
By Margaret Sanger
Forum, March, 1935

Men and women often congratulate Margaret Sanger upon having won her long battle for birth control, but in this article the author explains that this assumption is far from the truth. "The Penal Code of the United States still classifies the science of contraception with filthy French photographs and its advocates as lewd, lascivious, and obscene criminals, threatening punishment by heavy fines and long sentences in federal penitentiaries," says the author.

The author states that the larger and more reputable wholesale druggists, financially well able to investigate the chemistry of contraception, who are conscious of the legal restrictions concerning the prevention of conception, remain nevertheless reluctant to enter a field which might involve them in legal difficulties.

According to the author, the profiteer, the bootlegger, and the abortionists are reaping their illgotten gains undisturbed by the existing statutes. The National Committee on Federal Legislation for Birth Control is urging the passage of two bills amending the federal statutes. "National planning for economic and social security can, in the long run, produce no real benefits unless such plans be based upon the cornerstone of family security through family planning."

HOW LONG WILL YOU LIVE?
By Raymond Pearl.
Forum, March, 1935.

Life insurance statistics reveal that out of each hundred persons born in the United States, over a third are alive at seventy-two. A decade later, about twelve of the original hundred are still living. Thereafter, the odds against further longevity rise more rapidly. Only one or two of a hundred starters in life's race ever pass the ninety-second year.

For a number of years the author has kept exhaustive records of persons who have lived to be ninety-five or older, and from an analysis of these records, some 2,000 carefully authenticated cases, it has been possible to derive a composite picture of the biological, physical, and temperamental equipment possessed by persons who might be called "practising Methuselahs."

That persons who spring from long-lived ancestors and thereby inherit a toughly constructed, infection-resisting, soundly functioning constitution are likely to live an unusual old age, is the contention of the author. And that medical science has done much, and will do more, to prevent what might be termed premature mortality, that is, death before fifty; but persons in the extreme-old age group will continue to live because heredity and temperament have given them a physical organization capable of resisting the noxious forces that cause death to their less-sturdily constructed fellow men.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By C. Williams

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKER

BOWING to pressure from organized labor, the United States senate, by a 42 to 41 vote, inserted the McCarren "prevailing wage amendment" into the administration's $4,880,000,000 work relief bill. The Mc Carran amendment is designed to keep wages of Federal work project jobs up to the wages paid by private industry in the various localities in which the work projects are located. President Roosevelt, of course, let it be known that he would not sign the bill carrying such an amendment.

Immediately after the amendment was attached to the bill, senate administration leaders got through a "motion to recommit" the bill to the Senate Appropriation Committee fro the purpose of getting the clause cut out. Adopting the President's plan of going to the people, senate leaders, friendly to the administration, indicated that the bill would not go back to the senate for a vote until the country is heard from. In answer to the announcement of Secretary of Interior Ickes (Public Works Administrator) to the effect that more than $5,500,0000,000 worth of public projects would have to be abandoned unless funds were immediately forthcoming, senate leaders intimated that the Appropriation Committee might propose to pass a $220,000,000 bill to sustain existing projects temporarily.

In view of the daily increasing hostility of the senate to the administration the final fate of the bill is absolutely unpredictable. It is possible that the Appropriation Committee may bring the bill back providing for an appropriation of one billion instead of five billions. Or the existing bill may be divided into two bills, one dealing with work relief and another with direct relief.

EARLY last week Hitler responded to the overtures of the French and English governments in regard to setting up a permanent peace on the European continent by means of the Anglo-French peace pact which provides for disarmament, an air pact, the assurance of Austrian independence, and the Eastern Locarno pact. In replying, Hitler indicated, in effect, that he would be glad to consider the question of a Western European air pact but that England and France would kindly refrain from mentioning the Eastern Locarno situation and the independence of the Austrian republic. But Friday Herr Hitler changed his mind and announced that he would be glad to "discuss" all the proposals of the pact.

Why? Russia. All last week the Russian bear growled ominously. Through the Soviet press, through the Russian ambassador to the Court of St. James, through official notes to the British and French governments, the Russian government proclaimed that "the air pact, the Eastern Locarno, and the question of the Austrian independence make up one indi-" Russian diplomats made up a list of peace loving European countries and left Germany off the list. Nor did the Russians stop there. They said that Germany, aided by Poland, was preparing to launch a campaign against the Soviet Union and had already agreed on the division of the spoils. Nor did they hush then. The newspapers announced that Germany, Poland, and Japan were leaguing against the Soviets.

France openly backed the Russians in their stand, and England in a less marked manner did likewise. So Herr Hitler will "discuss" all proposals, but to what end?

THE AMERICAN Minister to Switzerland, Hugh Wilson, is still trying to get the American proposal for manufacture and control in arms through the Disarmament Conference committee at Geneva. Opposition is forthcoming from the British, as the British feel that civil and military air craft should be under the same restrictions, as civil craft can be converted into fighting planes in time of war. The Russians oppose the plan on the ground that private manufacturers of munitions are less restricted than the state. Mr. Wilson, however, meets this objection with a phrase that is likely to become the by-word of those who favor control of munitions. He says that America aims at a "birth certificate" for each weapon.

Observers say that Britain and Russia really have no objection to the American proposal but are merely playing about waiting for Germany to take a stand on the subject.

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticisms. Letters should be signed marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the postoffice.

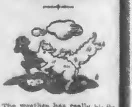
I should like to take this opportunity of congratulating the student body in its attendance and reception of the open forum discussion held last Wednesday under the auspices of the history honorary. The discussion, held by Miss Marion Irish of the political science department, centered about the World Court and the position of the United States in regard to that body. It seems to me that for the students to take such an active interest in a discussion of contemporary life and inter-national implication, would seem to disprove the current notion that the college student is singularly uninterested in things that take place beyond college gates.

The World Court issue is one of the most significant that has as yet come before that august assemblage that functions under the name of the United States Senate. The defeat of the issue was largely brought about through ignorance that was easily tempered by the oratory and journalism of prejudiced and bigoted persons. It is for the college student to rise above such state of ignorance with its subsequent perverted influence and to form an opinion for himself. It has often been said of the college student that his interest lies only upon the campus, but it seems to me that there is a definite trend on this campus as well as upon others, to discuss important national and international issues in student groups. In the International Relations groups, in some classrooms, and in other groups of college students this movement has taken forward steps, and the proposal of a new group under the auspices of the National Student Federation of America shows desire for even more of such discussion and participation.

The formation of an international attitude by college students shows that they are keeping abreast of the times and it is to be hoped that related subjects will be and will continue to be discussed in every classroom where they are at all relevant.

Signed. Edith Patterson.

Collegiate Come-Backs



The weather has really hit the nail on the head in providing us with appropriate "shivers for our Mid-winter Festival. Since March has come in like a lion, we printed the above picture of lambs gamboling on the ice in the hope that it will go out like one.

* * *

After discussing Man a few colyums ago, 'tis only fitting we reprint a eulogy of "Wimmin," for which we are indebted to The Log of the United States Naval Academy:

Wuman is the opasite of man. She is a man with long hair made over features diferant close and a tempre. Some of the ways you can tell a woman is by the kine of shoes they wares. They is reints of china like dishes and if the shoo fits get 2 sises smaler. And you can usully tell her by her skirts altho they is rapidly disappearing but most of the time you cant tell her anything. But wimmin is now doing everything a man does except chew and ware enuch close. They hadent enuch bad habets them selves but they had to go and borrow mens. They now smoke gambel cuss vote ware trowsers and other evels. Wumman is useful because they make good wives. But they have maney afflicktions. The worst is lateness. A date at six with any wumman menes 8 and sum 10:30. Others forget what day it was. They also get the gimmys. Gimmy this an that.

Men has tungs jointed at the back so the forard end flaps. The frog has tungs hitched at the front so the back end can hand out. Wimmen has theres pivetet in the middle so when the front gets tired they can use the back. A man once thought he had the onley perpetule mothen machene. 1 nite he got maried. The next day he junked his modle and got a job as a traviling salismen.

Wimmin is a necesarey evle which you can't get along with and cant get along without.

* * *

Two little coons on the bridge
a-sittin',
Two little bones back and forth a-flittin'
Hole in the bridge where a plank was missin',
Par-a-dise Lost.

* * *

We quote from the Cincinnati Bearcat: "The Florida Flambeau asks 'Are Southern Students Asleep?' Why limit it to southern students?" . . . Why? Because there isn't any doubt about the northern ones.

* * *

From the Bethany Collegian we learn that Montgomery, Ward and Co. are awarding cash scholarships to worthy college students. We wonder if one of the requirements for candidates is a working knowledge of the company's semi-annual picture-book. After all, mail order catalogs are said to be an education in themselves.

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

WHERE'S JOE COLLEGE?

In years past there has been a tendency on the part of the public to regard college as more of a playground for youth than an institution of learning. Much of this was caused by the wide ballyhoo given to the rah-rah college boy, better known as Joe College, and certain pranks such as the well-known fraternity "hell week."

The movies also may come in for a fair share of criticism along this line. They do not give us pictures of college which show the struggle made for learning by the majority of the students, but rather an exhibition of "hey-nonny-nonny" in order to produce a successful 'musical comedy" box-office attraction.

The lack of seriousness and attention to studies claimed for the college undergraduate is belied by recent "worry" surveys conducted in several leading schools throughout the country. These surveys or polls attempted to find what the college student of today is most concerned about. They list a number of subjects such as sex, education, the future, examinations, graduation, appearance, drinking, grades, proficiency in athletics, failure, etc.

Beside each of these subjects are three brackets with the headings: "Not at all worried," "Weakly worried," and "Intensely Worried." Through these surveys it was found that 70 per cent of the student population was intensely worried over the future and that more than half showed anguish over the thought of failure.

Such polls do reflect the true spirit of the college student of today. The large number of students who are working all or part of their way through college will substantiate this statement. The demand for more practical courses, courses which will give practical training for future work is also evidence of the sincerity of the student body of today. The increase in placement service bureaus, operated principally by students and which attempt to secure a position for the university graduate by listing his various qualifications, particularly his college record, also illustrate the fallacy of the "rah-rah college" theory. The fact that hazing and fraternity "hell-weeks" are dying out in strength is also indicative of a dislike for "horse play" on the part of the undergraduate.

Of course there are facts which belie the above statements, but are they truly paradoxical? Are the rumors of "wild parties" not nearly always exaggerated? On the other hand, does the college student "play" any more than the man or woman of the business world, particularly the "tired business man" who is known for his moments of weakness?

There are others who will point out outstanding exceptions, but with any theory there are always exceptions to the rule. Besides, are there any grounds for the belief that the college student plays more than the average individual? Life has its playboys and they are found everywhere, no matter where one may look.

Can we not then safely say that the attitude with which some persons regard college is not one free from unbiased opinion, but rather the result of prejudices gained from warped or otherwise distorted information passed on to them by certain well-known ballyhoo agencies, and that the college student of today is just as practical, if not more so, than the student of the past decades?—Kentucky Kernel.

REGARDING LEISURE TIME

Foreigners frequently criticise the American people for not "enjoying life." This term apparently implies an appreciation of one's leisure time and the ability to enjoy the "finer things of life."

Today money has come to be an important measure of social position and influence. Individuals in America have been primarily concerned with securing the material things and gaining the influential positions which they believe essential requirements for happiness.

The machine age further served to deprive people of the old idea of peaceful enjoyment. Long hours of monotonous work tended to make the people of this country even more material.

According to economists, the day is approaching when there will be more leisure time. Efficiency experts have revealed the fact that more and better work is done when men labor shorter hours. Moreover, as the machine of production become more and more efficient, less hours of work will be required of the individual according to many students of social and economic conditions.

The increase of leisure time which is foretold may become a problem to a great number of people. One quickly tires of superficial pleasures. If a man has been working for 12 hours a day the resulting fatigue would lead him to want the easiest type of relaxation. But with more free time and more unconsumed energy the superficial pleasure would become insufficient.

Gracious living is an art—one that requires experience and a developed ability.

Of all the types of playing, reading is probably the finest. In books there is an unlimited wealth of experiences, color, life, and information.

In preparing for the predicted leisure time, men and women should begin to learn to enjoy this form of relaxation, which is one of the greatest pleasures offered to man.

Books contribute new ideas and knowledge and thus stimulate the reader's mind. The man who reads need not fear solitude, for his mind becomes a storehouse of ideas which he can bring out at will; they can easily be made to suit his mood of the moment. When he is with others he will always have interesting or suitable topics for conversation.

For the man who reads, leisure is of inestimable value, whether he be by himself or in the company of his fellowmen. — The Reveille.

Six Recreation Institutes Held

Four-H Club Members To Get Instruction

Recreational institutes for older 4-H club boys and girls and local leaders in this field of service are being held in six centers in the state, through the cooperation of the Florida agricultural extension service and the National Recreational association, according to Miss Flavia Gleason, state home demonstration agent.

Mr. Jack Knapp who will conduct the courses this year, will give special instruction in amateur dramatics, featuring the presentation of one act plays. In addition he will carry forward the program in the development of folk games. Last year the course featured music appreciation, community singing, suitable games for use in the home and community groups and folk dances.

Representatives of the National Recreational association are loaned to the cooperative extension service of the United States department of agriculture to hold these institutes throughout the United States. They are held for a week's duration over a period of four successive years in the communities designated by the agriculture extension service. This is the sixth year that the institutes have been held in Florida. The second four year series was begun in additional centers by Mr. John Bradford. Communities where the institutes are being held this year are in Jefferson, Alachua, Palm Beach, Dade, Hillsborough, and Orange counties, with adjoining counties expected to participate. Other counties where these institutes have been held include Escambia, Walton, Okaloosa, Jackson, and the West Florida 4-H Camp.

Membership is limited to approximately sixty to a group with attendance usually one hundred per cent throughout the course. Selection of those to participate is left with the county and home demonstration agents, who are guided by qualities of leadership, special adaptability to this type of work, and interest shown by the 4-H club girls and boys themselves.

The girls and boys who have the advantage of these institutes are charged with the responsibility of community development in their various home towns. These boys and girls under the direction of the agents have formed Recreation councils which are functioning most effectively in carrying the work into the communities and providing recreational programs for various civic organizations throughout the year. Gratifying results are being realized through this feature of the 4-H club programs.

Students Hear Mission Chain

(Continued from Page One)

cussed the problems in the Kentucky mountains and in New Mexico where she has been a mission worker for several years.

Dr. Scudder also spoke again, discussing in more detail her work in founding the medical college and picturing the pathetic conditions prevailing in India today.

At the meeting Thursday morning, Mrs. Karnell, for years a worker among the immigrants in industrial and mining centers and on Ellis Island, outlined the problems presented by the immigrant. Among the important factors named by Mrs. Karnell as contributing to the present problems were rapidity with which the immigrants came to America during the years 1907 to 1914; the poor and criminal type that came due to the fact that laws at that time prohibited examination of immigrants until they reached America; the large families they are bringing up in America; and the ease with which they may be handled by politicians.

Segregating them into little Italy's and little Spain's only serves to intensify the problem, declared Mrs. Karnell, which must be faced intelligently and toward which effort must be directed for its solution.

Honorary Bids Seven Alumnae

(Continued from page one)

of absence during which time she secured her doctor's degree. Miss Helech, who is now head of the teacher training department at William and Mary College has written a book on education and has had a large part in making a new course of study for public schools of Virginia.

Miss Effie Pettis graduated in 1909 and then attended Clark University where she studied under the famous Stanley Hall and received her master's degree. She taught in the high schools of Florida for a number of years and then taught at this college as an instructor in English from 1915 to 1919 and is now connected with high school work in Florida.

Miss Ruth Reynolds who is now head of the English department in one of the high schools in New York City graduated in 1908 and taught in the high schools of Florida. She was an instructor in the Latin and mathematics departments of this college from 1911 to 1912 and received her master's degree from Columbia University.

Miss Irita Bradford (Mrs. Carl Van Doren) graduated in 1908 and attended Columbia University for graduate work in English. She was assistant literary editor of the New York Herald-Tribune and upon the sudden death of Stewart Sherman, editor of "Books," a weekly magazine of the Herald-Tribune, was chosen to take his place.

Miss Edna Reese Williams, who graduated in 1920 taught in the high schools of Florida, two years of which were spent as head of the English department of the Pensacola high school. She received her master's degree from Yale University and is now working on her doctor's degree.

In consideration of alumnae membership the committee observed the following regulations: No alumnae of Florida State College for Women has been elected to alumnae membership of Phi Beta Kappa who has not been graduated fifteen or more years from the college.

Midwinter Royalty Revealed Saturday

(Continued From Page One)

Takes a Holiday" is the title of the Spirogira skit, according to Janice Borton, chairman; while "F" club members will recite modernized "Mother Goose Rhymes," said Betty Bailey, who is in charge.

"School of Rims" is the Delta Phi Epsilon skit headed by Lillian Schipiro.

Sport Slants

Odds' and Evens' Finals Show Tie

Former Wins in Hockey, Latter Wins Soccer Tournament

The Odds lost to the Evens in soccer by a score of 2-0 in the games played last Friday afternoon, but won from the Evens by 2-1 in the hockey games. This makes the Odds the winners in two out of three hockey games but losers to the Evens by the same count in soccer.

The line-ups for the hockey teams are: Evens — Mackery, Pratt, Emmilhainz, Barrett, Panowski, Russell, Thill, Cooper, Johnson, and Holloway. Odds—Ferguson, Barton, Takach, Hurlin, Lewis, Weeks, Maxwel, Mitchell, Simpson, Seekins, Makemson, Hamilton, Ireland, and Taylor.

The soccer line-ups were, for the Odds: Royall, Hubbard, Devine, Lyle, Ireland, Deane, Slette, Bailey, Miller, and Weeks. For the Evens: West, Gehan, Brooks, Haise, Cook, Athon, Akin, Marsh, Tuten, Levy and Lewis.

Elections Are Postponed For Another Week

(Continued from Page One)

to college regulations. (4) The student must have removed all conditions and failures in subjects necessary for graduation. (5) The editor-in chief of the Flambeau must have had satisfactory journalistic experience.

The presidents of organizations, the house chairmen, and the editors-in-chief of the Flambeau, Flastacowo, and Distaff, shall be chosen from the incoming senior class. The vice-presidents of organizations shall be chosen from the in-coming junior class. Secretaries of organizations may be chosen from the in-coming sophomore or junior class, except in the College Government Association, where she shall be chosen from the incoming senior class. The treasurers of organizations, except the College Government Association shall be chosen from the in-coming sophomore or junior classes. The treasurer of the College Government Association shall be chosen from the in-coming senior class.

Outdoor Display Adds Speciments

(Continued from Page One)

miniatures on ivory by the celebrated American artist, Colonel John Trumbull, of the Declaration of Independence.

Of the miniatures on ivory in pressed Spanish leather mats, one depicts General Washington in the full regalia of his military uniform and Mrs. Washington in a low-cut evening dress of heliotrope color, richly trimmed with lace. Another shows George and Martha together in a more intimate pose and in less formal attire. The third of the miniatures bears the title, "The Greatest Generals During the Revolution," and portrays the busts of Washington, Steuben, Putnam, Greene, and Lafayette.

In addition to this rare collection of miniatures, a hatchet has been loaned by Mrs. Keith Walker, of the class of 1926, purported to be the one brought over by the Washington family from England and used during the war by one of their negro servants. An ancient fragment of manuscript also testifies that this hatchet is the one about which the story of George Washington chopping down the famous cherry tree was written.

On The Spot With Sports

The athletic association will award letters, emblems, numerals, and stars during intermission at the Freshman Carnival to be held in the gym tomorrow night, according to Betty Bailey. There will soon be girls in various costumes polishing shoes in the dining room arcade again. Yoicks! Tallyho.

For those who think that hockey is a sport known only in regions of snow and ice an exhibition game will be played at the gym tomorrow at 9:00. However, if this cold spell lasts much longer the setting may not be as effective as could be expected for a game of "sunny Florida" hockey.

It is expected that Camp Flastacowo will be more popular than ever now that a rifle range has been erected out there.

Baseball started in earnest this week with more girls than usual out to the initial practice. A lot of new equipment was in evidence, and everything points to a successful season. The Odds will practice on Mondays and Wednesday at 4:20 while the Evens have chosen Tuesday and Thursdays at the same time. Joint Odd-Even practices will be held at 3:30 on Fridays and at 9:30 on Saturdays.

Practices for the telegraphic swimming meet are going ahead. Marion Weeks announces an unofficial practice to be held in the pool Saturday, March 9.

The tennis courts are in constant use now that the faculty and student tennis tournaments are getting underway. Who will win those coveted crowns this year? There is a lot of talk on this point since the freshman class added several good players to the lists and Dr. Eleanor Valentine is said to offer a distinct threat to last year's faculty women's champion, Dr. Viola Graham. She'll bear watching anyhow.

The intra-mural basketball tournament has reached the semi-finals, with Jennie Murphree putting up a stiff fight for the championship. Gilchrist, her opponent this afternoon, is also a strong contender for honors.

It is said that Miss Mildred Stewart's folk-dancing class will journey soon to Monticello to perform.

Lecture Opens Two Days' Installation

(Continued From Page One)

Florida Education association; Henry H. Filer of Miami, president of the Florida Education association; Scott M. Lofton of Jacksonville, president of the American Bar association; M. Rogers from Jacksonville, president of the State Bar association; Mrs. Willard Wattles, Winter Park, state president of the American Association of University Women; Mrs. V. Sumner Covey, state president of Parent Teachers association; Mrs. T. V. Moore of Miami, state president of the federation of Women's clubs; Dr. W. S. Allen, president and Mary Estelle Lowry, dean of women at Stetson university.

Dr. Bowman F. Ashe, president and Mary B. Merritt, dean of women at Miami university; F. H. Spaulding, president of Tampa university; Dr. Lud Spivey, president and Marion Patterson, dean of women at Southern college; Dr Hamilton Holt, president and Helen Guernsey Sprague, dean of women at Rollins college; James Hodges, associated press correspondent; Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, former congresswoman from Florida; ex-governors Doyle E. Carlton, John W. Martin, and Cary E. Hardee; and Dr. and Mrs. B. H. Bode from Sarasota and formerly of Ohio university.

Those who were invited from the University of Florida are Dr John James Tigert, president; Dr Townes Randolph Leigh, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; Walter Jeffries Matherly, business administration; Wilmon Newell, agriculture; Dr. James William Norman, education; Benjamin Arthur Tolbert, dean of students; Harry Raymond Trusler, law; and Blake Ragsdale VanLeer, engineering.

Others on the tentative guest list are Phi Beta Kappa national officers, chapters, and state members; faculty of the Florida State College for Women; state officials including U. S. senators and representatives from Florida, state senators, state representatives, members of the board of control, public instruction, and cabinet.

Students who will be guests are the presidents of Mortar Board and other honoraries including Marion Brantly, Mortar Board; Marjorie Carter, Phi Beta Sigma; Louise Robertson, Alpha Chi Alpha; Virginia Earle, Eta Sigma Phi; Olivia Embrey, Beta Pi Theta; Betty Bradford, Chi Delta Phi; Mrs. Dora Skipper, Kappa Delta Pi, Ida Engel, Phi Alpha Theta; and Margaret Dodd, Omicron Nu.

Students Start Tennis Tournament This Week

The student tennis tournament began this week with twenty matches to be played in the beginning round of the freshman tournament and fourteen to be played in the advanced tournament.

The advanced or inter-class tournament will decide the class teams. At present there are sixteen freshmen, four sophomores, three juniors, and four seniors in the line-ups. Dorothy Lancaster is directing the tournament.

Library to Be Closed

The library will be closed Monday evening, March 4, and Tuesday at 10:30 and at 8:00 during the talks by Dr. David Robertson and Dr. Virginia Gildersleeve, according to Miss Louise Richardson, librarian.

Educators to Talk Here

(Continued from page one)

tions in the country, was elected to the presidency of Goucher College in 1920. From 1918-22 Dr. Robertson served as secretary of the Association of American Universities, and in the period from 1924-29 he was charged with investigating 300 American colleges for that Association. He served as assistant director of the Council on Education from 1934-36, being in charge of international relations from 1924-26. He will be remembered in Florida as having delivered the commencement address at Florida State College for Women in June, 1930 at the time of the Silver Jubilee celebration of the college.

Dean Gildersleeve has held the position of dean of Barnard College, Columbia University, since 1911. She is a former president of the International Federation of University Women, and has served on the membership committee on graduate instruction of the American Council on Education.

Dean Gauss is a lecturer, editor, and author of note. He has served on the lecture staffs of the University of Cincinnati, New York University, and Columbia University. Among his publications are "The German Emperor," "Why We Went to War," "Through College on Nothing a Year," and "Life in College." He has been dean of Princeton University since 1925.

Mrs. Roosevelt Speaks To Personnel Leaders

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt was one of the principal speakers at the recent meeting of personnel directors in Atlantic City at which Dr. Elizabeth Andrews was present.

Mrs. Roosevelt talked on the putting down of routes in community life. She advised the student that wherever she had work to do to make herself part of the community, to find out what is needed, what can be done, and to look for jobs other than just those in which she has specialized.

Only two more days to consult Miss Aileen Faye, personal representative of Mme. Helena Rubenstein, world famous authority and cosmetician. Miss Faye will give you personal advice on correct methods of beauty care. . . . Don't fail to consult with her.

Bennett's.

Have Your Party
in a Private Room
at
THE DUTCH
KITCHEN

When You Think
of
Cleaning, Dyeing and
Alterations
Think of the
Central Cleaners
"Your Patronage is Our Pleasure"

SUPERIOR
Dry Cleaners and Dyers
"SUPERIOR SERVICE SELLS CLEANING"
SILKS AND FANCIES OUR SPECIALTY
All Garments Insured Against
Fire and Theft
306½ S. Monroe St. Telephone 218

HIYA, TWIST!
THAT'S THE BOY FRIEND
WHAT AN UGLY MUG!
YEAH, HE EATS WITH HIS KNIFE—
AND HE DANCES LIKE A TEN-TON TRUCK—
BUT HE DRIVES A FORD V-8!

TALLAHASSEE MOTOR CO.
"SALES BECAUSE OF SERVICE"
Cor. Calhoun and Call Phone 141

THE FRENCH
SHOP
Presents a New Line
of
Dresses and Sports Shoes

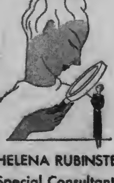
$2.95 and $3.95

New Way Laundry and Dry Cleaners
Tallahassee's Oldest and Largest
"Wear Clean Clothes"
Representative in Lower Bryan Hall
Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 183

Expert Beauty Analysis



See HELENA RUBINSTEIN'S
Special Consultant

The beauty authority's special consultant is here from New York! She brings scientific beauty advice for the new season from Helena Rubinstein. Learn what beauty preparations to use—how to use them! Learn how little they cost!

Consult her—and avoid dry, lined skin . . . wrinkles.

Consult her—and learn to make yourself more beautiful.

See Muscle Tightener (Georgine Lactee) famed for its quick scientific action on double chin and relaxed muscles. Excellent for puffiness under the eyes too. 1.50, 3.00.

Have a personality make-up worked out specially for you! No obligation—except to get here, please, before the end-of-the-week rush.

Bennett's

Just Arrived! Co-Ed
Advanced Fashions in bright and Light Print
Frocks . . $10.95

● These gaily colored prints are the thing of the moment, ideal for wear right now ● They are bound to brighten your spirits and your wardrobe, so gay and lively are the motifs ● Pure dye silk crepe and other prints that belong to much more expensive dresses.

GELBERG'S
"Style Plus Economy"

The Social Week

Installation Guest to Be Honored by Social Events

On the program for the installation of Florida Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at Florida State College for Women are three main social functions which include a luncheon at the Floridan hotel, a tea in Jennie Murphree hall, and the banquet in the college dining room.

At the banquet, an outstanding social event on the two-day installation program which is being given by the college Tuesday at 8 o'clock in the dining room, Miss Myrtle E. Dolbee will act as toastmistress. Speakers for this occasion are Dean William G. Dodd, President Theodore H. Jack, President John J. Tigert, and Claude Pepper.

Guests from throughout the state for the banquet will assemble in Reynolds parlor previous to the banquet where Miss Dolbee, chairman of the seating committee for luncheon and banquet, will be in charge.

Sitting at the head tables in the dining room will be Mr. and Mrs. Christian Gauss, Mr. and Mrs. David Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Jack, Miss Virginia Gildersleeve, Mr. Crawford, Mr. Oscar Voorhess, Dr. John J. Tigert, Miss Kathryn T. Abbey, Dr. Arthur Seymour, Miss Myrtle Dolbee, Miss Margaret W. Dow, Dr. William H. Rogers, Dr. Harold F. Richards, Miss Anna May Tracy, Miss Agnes Edwards, Miss Ruth Traxler, Miss Inga Gila Helseth, Miss Effie Pettit, Miss Edna Williams, Miss Barbara Garfunkel, Miss Ida Engel, Miss Florence Jennings, Miss Frances Parks, and Miss Machel McKinnon.

After the opening lecture on Monday evening in the auditorium all members of Phi Beta Kappa and official guests will meet at Gilchrist parlor where they will enjoy refreshments and a social hour.

At the luncheon, which will be Tuesday at 12:30 o'clock at the Floridan hotel, Claude Pepper, Tallahassee attorney and member of Phi Beta Kappa, will serve as toastmaster, while Governor Dave Sholtz will speak.

On Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock in Jennie Murphree hall all guests in the installation, faculty members, and representatives from other honorary societies on campus will be honored with a tea.

Included in the receiving line will be Dr. Edward Conradi and Miss Louise Conradi, Dr. William G. Dodd, Dr. Harold Richards, Miss Kathryn T. Abbey, Dr. and Mrs. Theodore Jack, Mr. and Mrs. David Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Christian Gauss, Miss Virginia Gildersleeve, Governor and Mrs. David Sholtz, and Dr. John J. Tigert.

Others who will help with the entertainment are Miss Olivia Dorman who will introduce the guests to the line, Miss Margaret Dow who will receive them at the door and Mrs. Harold Richards and Mrs. William G. Dodd who will pour tea.

The college social committee will assist with the serving, while Carolina DeMontigne, and Helenmary Pritsch in addition to all members of Phi Beta Kappa will assist on the floor.

Alumnae and friends of the college are receiving invitations from the college to be present at the installation and attending social activities.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
March 1 to March 9

Friday

3:30 p.m. Delta Phi Epsilon party given by pledges.
6:30 p.m. College faculty dinner.
8:00 p.m. Skit night—Mid-winter festival.

Saturday

9:00 a.m. Tryouts for Junior minstrel in auditorium.
3:00 p.m. Alpha Gamma Delta tea dance.
4:30 p.m. Reception at Sigma Kappa house for Miss Eunice Parker with Margaret K. Anderson and Mrs. Eaton Burr as hostesses.
6:30 p.m. Coronation.
8:30 p.m. Carnival in college gymnasium.

Sunday

11:00 a.m. Church services.
7:15 p.m. Y. W. C. A. vespers, Dr. Eyman, speaker.

Monday

8:00 p.m. Beta Pi Theta meeting.
8:15 p.m. Phi Bate Kappa open meeting. Address of welcome by Dr. Conradi. Lecture by Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton.

After lecture Phi Beta Kappa members and official guests adjourn to Gilchrist parlors.

Tuesday

8:00 a.m. Installation of Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa in Browsing room of library. Phi Beta Kappa members only.
10:30 a.m. Phi Beta Kappa open meeting with lecture by President David Robertson of Goucher college.
12:30 p.m. Luncheon for Phi Beta Kappa members and official guests at Floridan hotel.
3:00 p.m. Phi Beta Kappa open meeting with lecture by Dean Virginia Gildersleeve of Barnard College. Program of organ music.
5:00 p.m. Tea honoring the guests of Phi Beta Kappa in Jennie Murphree parlors.
8:00 p.m. Banquet in college dining hall for members of Phi Beta Kappa and guests of the college.

Wednesday

4:30 p.m. Music recital in college auditorium.
7:30 p.m. Talk in Browsing room by Miss Louise Richardson on "Business Manners and Why." Program sponsored by social committee.

Thursday

11:30 a.m. Day students meeting.
5:30 p.m. Orchestra rehearsal.
5:30 p.m. Tea in Reynolds parlors for freshmen with Miss Beulah Briley and Miss Mary Luella Richey as hostesses.

Friday

8:00 p.m. A. A. U. W. meeting.

Saturday

8:00 p.m. Phi Mu dance at sorority house.
8:15 p.m. "The Land of Enchantment," water pageant in the college swimming pool.

◆

The province president of the national Zeta Tau Alpha sorority, Mrs. Walter F. Ploore of Louisville, Kentucky, will be a guest of the local chapter this week-end.

Personal Mention

Among the Florida State College visitors in Jacksonville this week-end will be Ola Deare Vickers, Marglo Glenn, Anna Glenn, and Sara Wilkerson.

◆

Betsey Anderson, Viola Taylor, Betty Manning and Gwendolyn O'Berry are leaving today for New Orleans where they will attend Mardi Gras.

◆

Dorothy Ryan, student of Florida State College for Women, is going to Atlanta this week-end where she will be a guest of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity at Georgia Tech.

◆

Mary Virginia Ruff, Miriam Preston, and Seale Effinger, all of Shamrock, will be week-end guests at the Sigma Kappa house here.

◆

Flynn Moore, Minna Yockey, Henrietta Thames, and Bay Bacon will go to Jacksonville for this week-end where they will attend the Revellers' ball.

◆

Mary McMillan of Pensacola, graduate of Florida State College for Women, will be a visitor at the Theta Upsilon house this week-end.

◆

Mrs. Bessie Miller of Tampa, mother of Helen Miller, was the guest of the Kappa Delta sorority, Tuesday night.

◆

Among the visitors of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority last week-end were Mrs. C. W. Jones and Mrs. A. F. Goodman of Jacksonville, and Mrs. F. B. Leach of Tampa.

◆

Nellie Lamar will go to Fort Valley, Georgia, this week-end where she will visit her sister, Mrs. C. A. Vinson.

◆

Dr. Edward Conradi returned to Tallahassee Sunday after spending the week-end at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. Lunsford Boone. Returning with him were Miss Louise Conradi and his two small grandsons, Edward Conradi and Oval Boone, whi will spend several weeks here visiting Dr. Conradi.

◆

Miss Louise Richardson and Miss Hazel Stevenson spent the week-end in Jacksonville.

◆

Mrs. Selwyn Chalker, graduate of Florida State College for Women, was visiting faculty friends here Saturday.

◆

Mrs. Charles M. Fisher, of Miami, is spending the week end as a guest of her daughter, Mrs. Geneva Fisher Morris, at the Alpha Xi Delta house.

◆

Mary De Guenther and Virginia Weldon are among the students of Florida State College who will be visitors in Tampa this week-end.

◆

Anne Jeter will go to Atlanta, Ga., for the week-end where she will attend a formal dance of the Sigma Delta sorority of Washington seminary.

◆

Miss Alice Gregg, former student at the Florida State College for Women and a pledge of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, and mother, Mrs. Elbert Gregg, are the guests of Miss Rachel Gregg, superintendent of the demonstration school, at her home on West Jefferson street.

Members of Outgoing Freshman Cabinet To Have Picnic

Members of the Freshman cabinet who will soon go out of office will have their last outing as a body tomorrow morning in the form of a steak roast. A picnic spot in the vicinity of the haunted house has been chosen for the party by Helen Cate, chairman of the committee in charge.

The group will leave the campus at seven o'clock and return about nine o'clock. A smaller group will hike out earlier in the morning to build the fire and make preparations. Working on the committee with Helen are Mary Jeanne McKay, Frances Boots, and Clotilde O'Rourke.

MEMBERS OF ALPHA GAMMA DELTA WILL HAVE TEA DANCE TOMORROW AFTERNOON

Members and pledges of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority will be hostesses at a tea dance at their house on Park avenue, Saturday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock.

After the dancing the girls and their dates will go to the Dutch Kitchen for dinner after which they will attend the college dance in the gymnasium.

The hostesses for the dance are Hallie Bailey, Victoria Curtis, Nadia Grainger, Betty Hintermeister, Doris Isted, Sarah Butler Logan, Sara Nell Moore, Rosalie McDonald, Catherine McGarry, Mary Ward Peterson, Kathleen Reese, Mercia Scott, Amber Turner, Marion Turner, Marion Bailey, Amorette Bullard, Betty Mace, Westa Wilkins, Helena Wilson, Frances Bishop, Dorothy Bryan, Madge Collier, Ruth Crews Margaret Fee, Spurgeon Fulford, Mary Jane Gallemore, Phyllis Gewin, Grace Groff, Mary Elizabeth Halstead, Julia O'Quinn, Nan O'Shaughnessy, Mary Nell Pinckard, Elise Scarborough, Shirley Creven, Marianna Swank, Martha Wells, Margie Rae, Virginia Baggs, Helen Godwin, and Pauline McLellan.

The guest list will include the following: Alfred Rae, John Crowell, Glenn Wilson, Guy Sale, Willy Rouse, Frank Bennett, Rouse Vollaton, David Scott, Andy Anderson, Harry White, George McLaughon, John W. Clark, Eddie Asthmulth, Fulton Estridge, Dean Roberts, Skeet Liagleteon, Paul Pope, jr., Foster Milton, Henry Beuis, Tommy Sammons, Ben Partridge, John Causey, Thomas Skeff, Fred Burghard, and Charles Hopkins.

Chaperones for the afternoon will include Miss Anna Forbes Liddell, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph L. Eyman, Mr. and Mrs. Christian P. Heinlein, and Mrs. Rosabelle Gilliland.

RECEPTION HONORING EUNICE PARKER IS SATURDAY AT SIGMA KAPPA HOUSE

Margaret K. Anderson and Mrs. Eaton Burr will be hostesses at a reception given in honor of Miss Eunice Parker of Tallahassee at the Sigma Kappa sorority house on Saturday afternoon from 4:30 to 6 o'clock.

Miss Parker, who is a graduate of Florida State College for Women and a member of the Sigma Kappa sorority, will be married to Dr. J. L. Anderson of New York on March 9. Dr. Anderson is Margaret's brother.

The chapter house will be colorfully decorated for the occasion by varied kinds of flowers with tall baskets containing large yellow flowers on each side of the entrance door. Gladiolas will be arranged with taste in different parts of the main room.

Refreshments, which consist of coffee, cream cheese sandwiches, peanut butter and raisin sandwiches, heart-shaped sugar cookies, mints, and nuts, will be served at the tea table in the dining room, which will be decorated with a large bouquet of roses.

At the tea table will be Miss Leila Venable, Mrs. Robert Watson, and Miss Clarice Parker each of whom will pour at intervals during the afternoon.

Miss Louise Conradi will receive the guests at the door, while Margaret will introduce them to the receiving line. Standing in the line will be Eunice Parker, Mrs. O. C. Parker, Mrs. Eaton Burr and mother, Mrs. Collins, and Mrs. J. M. Anderson of Cross City.

On the guest list are over three hundred people, including members of the faculty and town people.

Entertainment for the afternoon will be provided by several musical numbers including selections on the piano and violin by Mrs. T. F. Jones and Florence Jones, a piano and cello combination by Virginia Long and Yvonne Tait, and other selections by Mildred Hurst on the xylophone with Helen Gray at the piano.

Assisting the hostesses will be Miss Kate Sullivan, Mrs. J. R. Hunter, Mrs. L. C. Lamb, Mrs. Ralph Proctor, Mrs. P. M. Sealey, Miss Marian Terrell, Mrs. Roy Campbell, Mrs. Hodgson, Miss Jeanne Compton, Miss Mattie Sue Collins, Miss Mary Lee Hicks, Miss Sue Pitchford, Miss Ina White, Miss Margaret Brinson, Mrs. M. H. DeGraff, Miss Adrienne Taylor, Mrs. B. A. Wilkerson, Mrs. V. I. Hancock, Miss Elizabeth Cobb, Mrs. W. L. Marshall, Mrs. Pauline Cozart, Mrs. H. E. Palmer, Mrs. Elgin Bayless, Miss Ella S. Opperman, Mrs. P. H. Midyette, Mrs. J. W. Sealey, Miss May Emily Parker, Miss Jean Nolan, Miss Ruth Eyman, Miss Mary Katherine Smith, Miss Nell Fain, Miss Dorothy Rickards, Miss Bertha Oven, and Miss Ruth Terrell.

Members and pledges of the Sigma Kappa sorority who will help serve include Janet Cook, Barbara Curry, Edith Hays Effinger, Helen Gray, Sara Hosea, Emilie Johnson, Evelyn Kennard, Elizabeth Sponnenberger, Leona Stummel, Martha Williams, Fenton Woodward, Margaret McLaughlin, June Bebinger, Sara Mae Davis, Lucille Ham, Kathleen Owens, Grace Wicks, Martha Hosea, Lois Forester, Patty Sams, Janice Farwell, Helen Dixon, Mary Irvine, Susan Blow, Mildred Hurst, Mary Hammond, Elizabeth Jinks, Beth Barnes, Jane Gage, Mary Hoffman, Marian Coombs, Marjorie Weems, Ruth Lind, Martha Lou Chilson, Martha Wright, Dorothy Atkinson, and Emma Bradford.

Dinner Hour to Be Set Up on Tuesday

Dinner in the college dining hall will be served at 5:45 p. m. on Tuesday, instead of at the usual hour of 6:30, according to Miss Anna May Tracy, dietitian. The change in the hour is made necessary by the Phi Beta Kappa banquet to be held later in the evening.

The hours for breakfast and lunch on Tuesday will be the same as on other class days.

Briley, Richey Honor Freshman Students Thursday at Tea

Miss Beulah Briley and Miss Mary Luella Richey entertained a number of their freshman students Thursday afternoon from 5:30 to 6:30 in Reynolds parlors with a tea.

The parlor decorations and the refreshments followed the informal motif which was emphasized throughout the occasion.

Among the freshmen invited were: Marie Ferguson, Deenie Bruns, Isabel Clarke, Marjorie Cox, Ada Larkins, Mary Isabel Hardin, Florence Fowler, Mary Elizabeth West, Rachel Sherman, Sara Tillman, Eileen Dayson, Edythe Dickson, Lila Estelle Elmore, Dagmar Fripp, Mildred Rogers, Ruth Lind, Letta Reck, Mercedes Garriger, Jean Tilden, Katherine Rogers, Mary Shackleford, and Elizabeth Leach.

To Dance in Monticello

Members of Miss Mildred Stewart's folk-dancing class will go to Monticello on March 8 to perform between acts of the plays which will be put on there for the benefit of the nursery school by Miss Kemper Moore of the speech department.

Only the best dancers will be taken on this trip, according to word received from the physical education department.

Phi Alpha Theta Has Initiation for Two

Phi Alpha Theta, history honorary, tapped Virginia Earle, senior in the school of Education, and Anna Marie Mitchell, sophomore in that school, Monday. The requirement for membership in Phi Alpha Theta is excellency in history. The two were initiated Wednesday afternoon.

Wednesday evening the members held a banquet in the dining-hall. Faculty members present were Dr. R. S. Cotterill, Dr. Annie Popper, Dr. Venila Shores, Miss Florence Tryon of the Demonstration school, and Mr. Arthur Williams.

Marriage of Graduate To Be Solemnized Saturday Night

Eunice Parker, graduate of the school of music at this college will be married to Dr. Loomis Anderson of Brooklyn, N. Y., Saturday night March 9, in the Methodist church.

Her wedding attendants are also alumnae of Florida State College for Women. The bridesmaids will be the Misses Louise Conradi, Jean Compton, Mary Lee Hicks and Miriam Terrell. The maids of honor will be the bride's sister, Miss Clarice Parker, and Miss Margaret K. Anderson, sister of the groom.

WEEK-END SPECIALS:
Palmolive Soap 5c
Palmolive Beads 5c
College Park Grocery

THE SWEET SHOP
701 W. Jefferson • Opposite Gilchrist
WEEK-END SPECIALS:
HOT CHOCOLATE WITH MARSHMALLOW 5c
ICE CREAM SODA 5c
Phone 1001 • We Deliver

You Can't Beat Our Values In SPRING DRESSES
$4.95
AND UP
The Very Latest Styles Just in from New York. . . . Racks full of the popular navy sheers, prints, white and pastels, many with short jackets to match.
THE LADIES' SHOP
"WHERE THE STYLES ARE SHOWN FIRST FOR LESS"
205 South Monroe Street

Turner's
YOUR STORE
JUST RECEIVED!
Complete New Line of Ladies'
NATIONAL PARK
SPORT WALKS
SMART STYLES for YOUNG MODERNS
The Greatest Line of Ladies' Sport Shoes in America
$2.95
AAAA to B—2½ to 9.
One of the Many Styles Shown

TAKE A TIP FROM US....
From friend to dear friend nothing more fittingly expresses sentiment than a good portrait—one that is really you. You will not be disappointed if it is made by
THE PIKE STUDIO

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Maurice Chevalier
in
"FOLLIES BERGERE"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Helen Hayes and Robt. Montgomery
in
"VANESSA"
Also—Star Night at Cocoanut Grove with a Host of Stars
TUESDAY
Leslie Howard
in
"THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL"
WEDNESDAY
Gene Austin, Olsen and Johnson
(Stage Attraction)
THURSDAY
Leo Carillo
in
"THE WINNING TICKET"
"Tonight's the Night!"
RITZ THEATRE
SATURDAY
Richard Dix
in
"WEST OF THE PECOS"
—Also Chapter No. 1—
"THE PERILS OF PAULINE
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
"FOLLIES BERGERE"
TUESDAY
"VANESSA"
WEDNESDAY
"THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL"

STATE THEATRE
Wednesday, March 6th
Matinee, 3:00 - Night, 8:30
Matinee: $1.10-83c-55c
Night: $1.65-$1.10-83c
Seats on Sale Now!
SENSATIONAL-IN PERSON: Combined ROAD SHOW TOUR OF THREE Outstanding STAGE, SCREEN & RADIO STARS
Ole Chic Gene
OLSEN & JOHNSON · AUSTIN
IN THE ROBERT KERR-JOSEPH GRIFFIN NEW YORK PRODUCTION
GOIN' PLACES
LYRICS BY OLSEN & JOHNSON-MUSIC BY GENE AUSTIN
21 SCENES A STAGE FULL OF STARS
The Entire Original Cast Absolutely Intact
FAMOUS "HOT CHA" BEAUTIES
CHARLIE STRONG'S ADMIRALS ORCHESTRA
AMERICA'S ONLY MUSICAL PLAYING MATINEE & NIGHT SHOWS DAILY

Bennett's
COLLEGE INN PHARMACY
75c BENNETT'S SPECIAL LUNCHEON 40c
25c MARSHMALLOW MINT SUNDAE 15c
25c HOT FUDGE SUNDAE 15c
15c CHOCOLATE SYRUP SUNDAE 10c
15c DOUBLE DIP ICE CREAM SODA 10c
20c CHICKEN SALAD SANDWICH 15c
RUSSELL McPHAIL ICE CREAM, pt. 25c

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

Values We Know You'll Appreciate
They Beat All Competition for Style Quality and Price!
New Spring
DRESSES
$5
Made to Sell for $7.95 to $9.95
This is positively the greatest value we have ever offered. Every garment is new—up-to-the-minute styles . . . prints, acetates and washable crepes and the fabrics are guaranteed. Colors galore and sizes for everyone. Come in and look them over, you'll want several.
SEE OUR WINDOWS!
PHOENIX HOSIERY
With Custom-fit Top! Guaranteed First Quality!
69c
Here is the greatest hosiery value in America. When you buy Phoenix you buy the best. Offered in all the new spring and summer shades.
LINDEN'S FASHION SHOPPE
"Smart Styles for Smart Women"

New Members of Cabinet and Commission
Tapped Thursday

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

Begin Today To Weigh Qualifications
For Nominees

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, March 8, 1935 NUMBER TWENTY

Organization To Introduce New Members

Freshman Commission an Cabinet Girls Will Be Recognized

TAPPING SYSTEM IS REORGANIZED

Invitations to Be Given In Advance to About Thirty Students

New members of Freshman cabinet and Freshman commission will be presented to the student body Thursday morning at a special convocation in the college auditorium. The public introduction and formal pledging which will be administered to each body by their respective organizations the Young Women's Christian association and the College Government association, will take the place of the usual tapping service in the sunken garden in front of Bryan hall.

Private installations will be held later, that for the cabinet taking place in the Y. W. C. A. hut Thursday afternoon, and that for commission the following week.

To Be Invited Beforehand

In the new system of tapping which has been adopted this year, prospective members for both cabinet and commission will be extended invitations in advance. Those accepting membership in the groups will be formerly presented in convocation. In this way, the organizations tapping seek to limit membership to those girls especially interested in their respective fields of work.

The joint ceremony Thursday will take the place of the two separate services which are usually held in successive weeks. It will mark the end of the year's term of service by the present cabinet and commission members.

The purpose of the Freshman cabinet is to serve as a connecting link between the freshman class and the Young Women's Christian association. The members assist the executive cabinet in its projects and receive inspirational training at weekly cabinet meetings. The vice-president of the Y. W. C. A. serves as the Freshman cabinet sponsor.

Purpose of Commission

The purpose of the commission is to bring the freshman class into closer touch with the association. The duties of the group are to assist the chairman of judiciary in checking off-campus books, to check the chapel roll, to deliver College Government association notices, and to turn closed signs on dining room doors. They also approve bulletin board notices, and aid the executive council of the association in other ways.

Each organization annually taps between twenty and thirty members of the freshman class.

Dr. Helseth Speaks On New Educational Trend With Local Kadelpians

Dr. Inga Olla Helseth, head of the teacher training department of William and Mary college in Williamsburg, Virginia, visited the campus this week to be installed as an alumna member of Phi Beta Kappa. She spoke to the local chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, national honorary education society of which she is a member, Monday afternoon. Her talk centered around new movements in education taking place during the past three or four years in Virginia.

Dr. Helseth said that the philosophy of the new movement has been "purposeful child activity." Four years ago teachers throughout the state were asked to list the interests of the children as they observed them, and give units they had worked out successfully along this line. From this material the new course of study was organized in a flexible mimeographed form, unique in that it dealt in terms of broad general topics into which teachers could fit material particularly suited to their classroom situation. The new course of study also aims to develop attitudes and skills rather than supply knowledge.

Among the working principles of the new course are the facts that education is based upon experience in life situations, that constant development must take

(Continued on Page Three)

New Course Still Soliciting Ideas

Students interested in or who have suggestions, embryonic or otherwise, for the new course, Introduction to Contemporary Civilization, to be offered here next year, are invited to meet again with faculty members in room 203 Administration building, Tuesday night at 7:30.

According to Professor Henry Becker, the two faculty-student discussions already held have been entirely practical and satisfactory.

Twelve Given Kadelpi Bids

Pledging Ceremony Will Be Thursday; Faculty To Be Initiated

Kappa Delta Pi, education honorary, extended bids to twelve students, three seniors and nine juniors yesterday at noon. Those who were tapped include Lois Hasel, Virginia Cromartie, Murae Reddick, Julia Norfleet, Nancy Wilkinson, Ruth Persons, Minna Dunn, Rebecca Keith, Carol Reeves, Anna Groover, Mary Claire Kimball, and Alice Porter.

Five faculty members who were given bids recently were pledged last Thursday. The group includes Miss Nita Kathryn Pyburn, instructor in education; Dr. David H. Briggs, assistant professor of education and supervisor of critic teaching in the demonstration school; Dr. Mark DeGraff, professor of education; Mr. Oval Stanley Harrison, critic teacher and instructor in education; and Dr. Marion Jewell Hay, assistant professor of education.

The twelve students will be pledged next Thursday afternoon, at which time the five faculty members will be initiated into the fraternity. The date of student initiation has not been announced.

Miss Maud Schwalmeyer assistant professor of education and critic teacher in the demonstration school, was given an honorary bid at the same time the faculty members received their bids and was pledged with them.

Requirements for Kappa Delta Pi are a general B average with a B plus average in education. It aims to recognise qualities of leadership and outstanding promise as a teacher.

Coronation Ends Midwinter Fete

Award Athletic Emblems At Dance Saturday

Formal presentation of the Midwinter King and Queen and their court followed by the announcement of athletic awards climaxed the dance and carnival program of the Midwinter Festival at the gymnasium Saturday night.

Identity of the King and Queen and their court, who were elected by secret ballot in convocation two weeks ago, was first revealed at dinner preceding the dance.

The queen, Martha Whitaker, wearing royal purple and carrying an arm bouquet of calla lilies and carnations, with the king, Frances Hurlin, in tuxedo, promenaded the dining room followed by the court.

The court was composed of Carolina DeMontigne and Jennie Rae Nall, senior maids, escorted by Charlotte Stevens and Louise Mackey; Minna Dunn and Caroline Oliver, junior maids, escorted by Margaret K. Anderson and Kitty Blood; Peggy McMichael, sophomore maid, escorted by Janice Borton; and Phil Asher, freshman maid, escorted by Jane Gray Stevens.

Pages were Bessie Ruth Falk and Jean Hamner, and Catherine Takach was the court jester.

At "skit nite" following the faculty dinner Friday, which began the week-end program, the Chi Omega skit received the five dollar award. The skit, a Chinese tranche de vie at a wayside shrine setting, was written and directed by Mary Jeanne McKay. The Spirogira skit, also written by Mary Jeanne McKay, received honorable mention.

At the dance Saturday night Betty Bailey and Frances Hurlin were presented emblems which constitute seven stars and are the highest honor conferred in ath-

(Continued on Page Three)

Chairman And Cast Selected For Minstrel

Musical Show Sponsored By Junior Class To Open April 27

KRENTZMAN AND JOHNSON DIRECT

Lines and Dances Follow Tale with "Local Girl Makes Good" Theme

The script and cast for the Junior Minstrels which will be presented Saturday night, April 27, has been selected by Sara Krentzman, general chairman, and Emily Johnson, director.

The theme of the show is to be the rise of an innocent country girl to fame in a musical show in New York. As part of the scenes are in the country and part are in the city, there are opportunities for much dancing and music to be correlated by the light comedy of the lines.

The committees working under the general chairman are: script, Mary Irene McKay; director, Emily Johnson; dances, Caroline Oliver; music, Alice Wehl; costumes, Minna Dunn, Margaret Murray; staging, Floy Lenert; properties, Betty Boggs; programs, Janie Lee Ryan; advertising, Evelyn Kennard, Margaret K. Anderson; finances, Andrey Farmer.

The cast who is to portray the cosmopolitan and rural characters includes: Squire Hiram Hebb, Claire Redfield; Charles McCoy, Betty Bailey; Tom Buchanan, Marie Lyons; Ebenezer Hebb, Jimmy Lewis; Ezekiel Hebb, Winifred Hanson; Zeb, Ruth Lind; Maria Hebb, Alice Wahl; Abbey Hebb, Lois Hazel; Rena Del Ray, Mary Jeanne McKay; troop members, Mary Lou Moore, Betty Chitty.

Dean Sees Three Trends in College

Guildersleeve Emphasizes Body, Mind, Character

Discussing "Education for Today" Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve of Barnard College, Columbia University, gave the last address of the Phi Beta Kappa installation program of Alpha chapter Tuesday afternoon in the auditorium. Dean Gildersleeve is a former president of the International Federation of University Women, has served on the membership committee on graduate instruction of the American Council on Education and has been dean of Barnard since 1911.

Agreeing with Dean Gauss, earlier speaker on the program, that we are living in difficult, perplexing times, Dean Gildersleeve likened our conception of the times in our gloomy moments to that of Matthew Arnold, "Wandering between two worlds, one dead, the other powerless to be born," while in our more optimistic moments, we are inclined, she said, to think of the situation as Walter Lippman expressed it, "We are a generation that has an appointment with destiny."

In the discussion of the kind of education best suited for the young citizen of today, Dean Gildersleeve believes we over-emphasize the difference between yesterday and today and over-emphasize even more the difference of the coming tomorrow.

Because of these considerations, the emphasis in the college today, said Dean Gildersleeve differs strikingly from the past in three ways: the tremendous emphasis on the social sciences; the emphasis on a need for learning recreation for leisure; and the emphasis on specialization.

So popular have the social sciences become today, she said, that they have displaced to a great extent the hitherto traditional languages, literature, and popular natural sciences. Speaking of the social sciences, Dean Gildersleeve outlined the two methods of teaching them, survey and sample, each favored by various institutions. At Columbia, the survey methods of learning a little about all subjects, economics, sociology, philosophy, history is taught in a course, contemporary civilization, similar to that being worked out at Florida State. "Barnard, however," she said,

(Continued on Page Three)

Home Ec Mannikins Hold Fashion Show

A fashion show, sponsored by the Home Economics club, will be held on Tuesday in the Augusta Conradi theater, according to Virginia Holt, vice-president of the club, who is in charge of the show. All who are interested are invited to attend.

Girls who are in the show are either home economics majors or minors and will include: Helen Miller, Clarice Sanchez, Katherine Sands, Lucille Jones, Pauline McLelland, Adielyn Fox, Geneva Fisher Morris; Gwendolyn Adair, Dorothea Stanley, Ruth Durrenberger, Betty Manning, Inez Seabrook, Dorothy Phillips, Florence Kerr, Edna Robson, Mary Perry Pollock, Claire Bridges, Martha Williams, Ethel Donaldson, Marjorie Maines, and Virginia Richards.

Dr. Game Dies After Illness

Published Text-Books In Fields of Classics And Literature

Dr. Josiah Bethea Game, professor of general literature and archaeology at the Florida State College for Women, died at the local sanitarium Monday afternoon at 5 o'clock after a ten-day illness. He had been teaching in the classical department of the college for twenty-one years.

Dr. Game was born in Mullins, South Carolina, on August 14, 1969. He received his B. A. degree at the University of South Carolina in 1895 with the highest possible honors. He was granted his M. S. degree at Erskine college in 1898, and his M. A. degree at Yale in 1906. He returned to Yale in 1909 to receive his Ph.D. Erskine college bestowed on him the honorary degree, Litt.D., in 1922.

Dr. Game was a member of the Classical Association of the Midwest and South, the Medieval Academy of America, Phi Beta Kappa, national scholastic honorary, Phi Kappa Phi, national general scholarship honorary, and Eta Sigma Phi, national classical honorary.

He was the author of several text books that are still used in high schools, including: Teaching High School Latin (now in ninth reprint) 1916, revised 1925; General Literature Myth, Epic and Drama, 1917; First Latin 1917 (with G. C. Clark); Second Latin 1926 (with G. C. Clark).

Prior to his coming to Florida State College for Women, Dr. Game was the dean of State Normal college at Florence, Alabama. He was also a professor of Greek and Latin at Wesleyan College, Macon, Georgia, and at State Normal college, Cape Girardeau, Missouri.

Dr. Game is survived by his widow, Mrs. Irene Game, a son, Dr. J. B. Game, jr., of Tallahassee, and two daughters, Mrs. Joseph C. Greenfield of Atlanta and Miss Mildred Game of Birmingham, Ala.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock in the Methodist church.

Students Present Third In Series of Recitals

The third in a series of student recitals in voice, violin, piano, and cello was given Wednesday afternoon in the college auditorium.

The program included Sonta in D major, Haydn and La fille aux cheveux de lain, Debussy, by Emma Lee Goodwin; Consolation No. 2, Liszt, by Mary Francis Pemberton; Warum and Grillen Schumann, by Martha Lee Wilkinson; Papillons, Schumann, by Edith Tuffaletti; Adagio from G minor Concerto, Bruch, Martha Reddick, violinist and Virginia Long, accompanist; Prelude and Fugue in D major, Bach, Choral Prelude, Bach, and Finale from First Symphony Vierne, Julia Munroe, organist.

Board Meets March 18

The Board of Control will have its next meeting March 18 in Tallahassee in the new Education building if the board's quarters are finished by that time. The quarters will occupy about two-thirds of the north half of the building and will consist of four small rooms and one large room.

Fifth Lecture Of Series Will Be Wednesday

"Revolt Against Dullness In American Life" Is Educator's Topic

HENRY NEUMANN TO BE SPEAKER

Material for Address Is Gathered from Own Observations

The Revolt Against Dullness in American Life" will be the subject of the lecture to be given by Dr. Henry Neumann on the lecture forum series Wednesday night in the auditorium.

Since 1911 Dr. Neumann has been leader of the Brooklyn Society for Ethical Culture and in 1912 was secretary of the American Commission at the second International Moral Education Congress at The Hague. At present he is vice-president of the Lincoln Settlement for Colored People, Brooklyn, trustee of Long Island University, and president of Gamma Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, New York.

From wide experience as educator in the fields of education and ethics in several institutions of higher learning including the universities of Wisconsin and California, the College of the City of N. Y. and Ohio State, and from personal observation, Dr. Neumann has gathered information for several books including "Education for Moral Growth," "Modern Youth and Marriage," "Moral Values in Secondary Education" and "Lives in the Making," his most recent book, published in 1932.

The principles advanced in "Lives in the Making," based on Dr. Neumann's experiences in ethical culture schools in New York City and on student reports were applied in numerous summer sessions at several universities and colleges throughout the country including Ohio State, the University of Utah, and the University of California where they were found both valuable and practical.

Dr. Neumann earned his B. A. degree from the City College of New York where he was awarded the Phi Beta Kappa key and his Ph.D. from New York University. He has made additional studies at Cornell and Columbia.

Head of Goucher Reveals Memoirs

Robertson Quotes From College Experiences

"Universities in Memoirs" was the subject of the address by Dr. David A. Robertson, president of Goucher College and member of the senate of Phi Beta Kappa, given Tuesday morning in the college auditorium before charter members, initiates, faculty, guests and students, immediately following the installation ceremony of the Alpha of Florida Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at Florida State College for Women.

Quoting from the memoirs of such scholars as Winston Churchill, Wendall Phillips, and Matthew Arnold, Dr. Robertson pointed out that the memories of college experience may range from "bright memories of young poetic pleasure to thoughts of Job-like afflictions."

Among the significant memories discussed by Dr. Robertson was the spirit of the place, which is nowhere more delicately appreciated, he said, than in a university, English or American. The college chapel, often the source of inspiration, even more often, the library, were frequently mentioned in the memoirs quoted.

But more powerful than either of these forces, said Dr. Robertson, were people. Thackeray, Henry Cabot Lodge, Walter Page, Woodrow Wilson, have all paid tribute to their fellow students as educational influences. "The careful selection of students becomes, then," declared Dr. Robertson, "of prime educational importance."

The value and significance of visiting lecturers as inspirational influences was also emphasized by Dr. Robertson who quoted Winston Churchill as saying that lecturers meant so much to him at Harrow that be would have all schools and

(Continued on Page Three)

AGAINST DULLNESS

Dr. Henry Neumann, of New York, will speak Wednesday evening in the college auditorium on the "Revolt Against Dullness in American Life." Dr. Neumann has worked extensively in the fields of education and ethics.

Phi Beta Now At Home Here

Abbey Elected President Of Alpha Chapter Of Florida

With the installation of Florida Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa here on March 4 and 5 of this week, Florida State College for Women received the last of potential formal recognitions and the oldest honor society made its first entrance into Florida.

Beginning with an address on "The College Student and His Country" by Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton University on Monday and ending with a formal banquet in the college dining room, the entire installation program was carried out as planned, according to Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, chairman of the committee on arrangements and newly-elected president of the Alpha chapter.

Other officers are Dr. Arthur Seymour, vice-president; Miss Myrtle Dolbee, secretary; Miss Margaret Whitney Dow, treasurer; and Dr. William H. Rogers, historian.

At the Phi Beta Kappa luncheon on Tuesday, which was held at the Floridan hotel, Judge William H. Ellis of the Florida supreme court gave the main address. Governor Sholtz, who was on the program but unable to attend due to illness, was represented by his secretary, W. R. Smith.

Over seventy guests attended the two-day installation program including Professor Ernest G. Atkin, University of Florida, Phi Beta Kappa; Mrs. Gracie Flournoy Ashmore, alumnae representative; Mrs. Edward L. Beeson, president alumnae association; Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin A. Bourne, Phi Beta Kappa, Clewiston; John W. Bull, Phi Beta Kappa, Tampa; Miss Sara Burwell, alumnae representative; Mrs. Henry N. Camp, Phi Beta Kappa, Ocala; Mrs. Archer S. Campbell, Phi Beta Kappa, Gainesville; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Cawthon, official, state of Florida; Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Collins, legislature, state of Florida.

Dr. William H. Crawford, national officer, Phi Beta Kappa; Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Diamond, official, state of Florida; Harwood Dolbeare, University of Florida, Phi Beta Kappa; Miss Agnes Edwards, S. W. Louisiana Inst., alumna member-elect; Judge W. H. Ellis, supreme court; Professor Robert English, president of Phi Beta Kappa association of Miami; Mrs. C. M. Fisher, alumnae representative; Mrs. R. T. Gallemore, alumnae representative, Mrs. M. Garfunkel, Miami, Florida.

Dean and Mrs. Christian Gauss, national officer; Dean Virginia Gildersleeve, Barnard college; Dr. M. Alberta Hawes, delegate from Radcliffe; Dr. Inga Olla Helseth, William and Mary, alumna member-elect; Miss Isolde Henninger; Mrs. Joe Henry, alumnae representative, Senator and Mrs. W. C. Hodges, official, state of Florida; Madame J. J. Hodges, Goodwood, Tallahassee; Professor Robert D. Howard, Rollins college, Phi Beta Kappa; President and Mrs. Theodore H. Jack, Randolph-Macon; Miss Mary Spencer Jack, Phi Beta Kappa, Emory University; Miss Edna May Laney, delegate from Agnes Scott; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lee, official, state of Florida.

Mr. Martin H. Long, Phi Beta

(Continued on Page Three)

New Officers to Be Nominated Tuesday

Senior Class May Order Invitations

Commencement invitations may now be ordered from the college bookstore, according to Helen Wilson, president of the senior class.

Leather booklets are twenty-five cents; paper booklets are twelve cents; and the folder is five cents.

Miss Sallie Nicholson, manager of the bookstore, requests that orders be in by March 16.

Play Chairmen Are Appointed

Tickets to Be Placed On Sale With Those For Prom

Chairmen of the committees in charge of the senior play, sponsor by Mortar Board and to be given March 21 and 22, were appointed this week by Marion Brantley, president of Mortar Board.

Louise Robertson is in charge of tickets, which will be sold along with prom tickets so that juniors and seniors may buy tickets for their dates at that time. They will be on sale March 11-14 at four tables in the Administration building, two on the first floor and two on the second floor, from 1:10 to 1:30 p. m. and from 7:15 to 8:15 p. m. The price of tickets for both students and outsiders is thirty cents.

Of the two nights that the play, "Hay Fever" by Noel Coward, will be presented, only Thursday will be opened to the general public, Friday night being reserved for juniors and seniors and their dates.

Committee chairmen are Margaret Kader, stage crew; Georgia Ruth Work and Jane Hafer, rehearsals; Mary Mooty, lighting; Abbie Lyle, properties; Barbara Garfunkel and Elizabeth Stout, publicity; Helen Wilson, house committee.

Miss Kemper Moore is directing the play, and Miss Emma Keis and her art class are in charge of the staging effects.

Missionary Will Talk at Vespers

Rev. Alexander Linn To Illustrate Lecture

The vesper service Sunday evening will feature the Rev. Alexander Linn, who has for nine years served as a Sunday School missionary for Florida under the Presbyterian Board of National Missions.

In his talk he will tell of his work with the Seminole Indians in the southern part of the state. His lecture will be illustrated with pictures of the Everglades which he took himself. A lantern slide will be used for this purpose.

Mr. Linn has been attending the Eastern Convention of Sunday School Missionaries at Nashville, Tennessee, and will stop here on his return trip to south Florida.

Carolina DeMontigne will preside at the service; Jo Binion and Evalyn Patterson will render a vocal duet; and the freshman choir will lead the singing.

On March 17, Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell will give a vesper talk on the subject, "We Need a Bigger Concept of Life." These special programs are a part of the follow-up plan of Religious Emphasis Week.

Miley Triumphs Again

Marian Miley, Kentucky state golf champion, and former student of Florida State College for Women, defeated Jean Bauer of Providence, R. I. in the final round of the annual golf tournament held at Ormond Beach last Saturday, thus adding the championship of the South Atlantic states to her string of achievements.

According to the Ormond Beach paper, Marian played an even par for the eighteen holes, one of the best exhibitions for a woman player ever seen there.

Candidates Must Fulfill Scholarship and Other Qualifications

SUGGESTIONS MADE FOR PUBLICATIONS

Editors Mention Names Of Girls Qualified For Staffs

Nominations for officers of the major organizations on the campus will be made in convocation Tuesday by closed ballot of the entire student body. At this time, candidates for the president of the College Government association, chairman of judiciary, vice-presidents of the association, the secretary and the treasurer, and the editors of the Flambeau, Distaff, and Flastocowo will be selected.

Must Meet Requirements

Before the nominations are made public, the names of the candidates who have received more than twenty-five votes will be submitted to the dean of students for approval and to ascertain whether each candidate fulfills scholarship and other requirements.

The following regulations govern the holding of all offices: first, the student must be a bona-fide member of her class; second, the student must make a scholastic average of "C" the semester preceding; third, the student must be subject to college regulations; fourth, the student must have removed all conditions and failures in subjects necessary for graduation; and fifth, the editor-in-chief of the Flambeau must have had satisfactory journalistic experience.

In an effort to make the student body familiar with the possible qualified candidates for the three campus publications, suggestions have been submitted by editorial staffs of these publications. Names entered for editor of the Flambeau include Ruth Persons, Gertrude Kuhn, Elaine Kleppert, Ethyle Mae Edwards, Jo Douglas, Marjorie Harris and Mary Patterson are eligible for business manager of the Flambeau.

Names submitted for the Distaff are: editor, Althea Smith; business manager, Julia Vanderipe. For editor of the Flastacowo, Antoinette Sullivan, Margaret R. Anderson and Edith Webb have been suggested as eligible.

The presidents of organizations, the house chairmen, and the editors-in-chief of the Flambeau, Distaff and Flastocowo, shall be chosen from the incoming senior class, according to the constitution. The vice-presidents of organizations shall be chosen from the incoming junior class. Secretaries of organizations may be chosen from the in-coming sophomore or junior class, except in the College Government association, where she shall be chosen from the in-coming sophomore class.

Treasurers of organizations except in the College Government association, shall be chosen from the in-coming sophomore or junior classes. The treasurer of the College Government association shall be chosen from the in-coming senior class.

Eyman to Lead Vespers Program as Follow-Up On Religious Emphasis

As a part of the follow-up program of Religious Emphasis week, Dr. Ralph Lee Eyman will lead an open forum discussion at Vespers Sunday evening on the topic, "We Need a Bigger Concept of Christ." After a short talk, Dr. Eyman will open the meeting to student questions and comments.

Lucy Gee Linn will preside at the Vespers service and the freshman choir, directed by Mickey Conn, will lead the singing.

At Vespers the following Sunday, March 10, Reverend Alexander Lynn, who is now attending the Eastern Convention of Sunday School Missionaries at Nashville, Tennessee, will give an illustrated lecture on the Seminole Indians.

On March 17, Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell will give a Vespers talk on the subject, "We Need a Bigger Concept of Life."

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF
BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON .... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Athea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchanges, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyne Wahnish Copy Editor, Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedia McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Fain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF
ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS ... Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS .... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON .... Circulation Manager
Ass't. Adv. Manager, Mary Patterson; Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sara Beth Davis

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Faculty and students of Florida State College for women extend sincerest sympathy to the family of Dr. Josiah Bethea Game, professor of general literature and archaeology, who died here Monday. Dr. Game had been on the Florida State faculty for twenty-one years. The influence of his contact with students here as teacher and friend will continue to live, a constant "In Memoriam."

Why An NSFA Club?

Why set up a new organization on a campus which is already in some respects "over-organized," on which student leaders are already showing symptoms of having the "meeting blues," and freshmen are often taught to look upon extra-curricular activities as the "big top" instead of just a side-show? Would an NSFA club fill a major student need that no other organization is attempting to fill? What is there in the NSFA so significant and urgent that it has in only ten years come to claim a major place in American student life? What is the National Student Federation anyhow?

Three or four weeks ago the Literary Digest characterized the Federation as "the soundest, the most representative and the most conservative of intercollegiate organizations." The soundest it most certainly is; and the reason for that soundness is that it is the most representative. The NSFA is now looked upon as the official association of undergraduate students in this country. It is the one organization representing America in the International Student Confederation. Its membership is made up of college student bodies representing nearly a million young people. Its congressional delegates are elected and instructed by their local student bodies or legislative bodies as to how they shall vote on controversial issues. The purpose of the Federation is tersely stated in the preamble to the constitution. "We would achieve a spirit of co-operation among the students of the United States to give consideration to questions affecting students' interests; we would develop an intelligent student opinion on questions of national and international importance; we would foster understanding among the students of the world in the furtherance of an enduring peace. In this purpose the Federation acts free from any political or religious creed."

Every member of the student body at Florida State, is, of course, automatically a member of the NSFA by virtue of the membership of the student body, for the Federation is a union of students, not of student leaders. Whether this campus prefers to set up a club with all students as members and elect a chairman, or whether we prefer to have an officer appointed by the president of CGA to be responsible for open forums, student polls and other NSFA activities, is of course immaterial. The important and necessary thing is that the campus be organised to support the Federation in its purposes and to carry out a local program in line with those purposes.

In filling our own local needs NSFA would be valuable first of all in stimulating thought and expression on public affairs. There are a number of students qualified to assume leadership along that line; on international topics, for instance, the members of the International club would have an excellent opportunity to stimulate thought among those students who are interested but not technically informed. In open forums on campus problems the greatest service would be to integrate student life. Such meetings would bring various groups and various attitudes together; problems would be solved by trying to understand and unify our contradictory points of view, instead of as at present allowing antagonisms to arise and grow because we neglect to bring together material on both sides of a question for open and free discussion.

What will an NSFA club attempt to do for this college? In general to work for a more intelligent, well-balanced, purposeful and civilized campus community.

If Florida State decides to reject the idea of organising its own unit of the NSFA and continues to maintain the present provincial-mindedness of its student body, it will in two or three years find itself entirely out of step with the forward movement of other colleges in the country. So let us face this proposition fairly and squarely and give it the support it logically deserves.

Florida State Students Break the Shell Of Provincialism

Too often the results of an event are lost in the preponderant attention we give to its motivation.

For instance, this week Florida State College for Women had as its guests persons from many other states who spoke, formally and informally, to the students here. Their appearance was motivated by the installation of the Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. Consequently, many underscored the words Phi Beta Kappa and placed after them a meaningful period.

We should like to substitute a comma for the period and continue our line of thought from the instigation of the action to its denouement. Suppose, taxing your imagination, that Phi Beta Kappa had not come to Florida State College for Women, but its votaries had assembled here adventitiously. Florida State would still be richer by the accumulation of a store of composite cultures.

During the week Florida State students were afforded contacts with the faculty of northern colleges, and through these contacts tapped, to a certain degree, the attitude of the northern student. They heard Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton University, President David A. Robertson of Goucher college, and Dean Virginia Gildersleeve of Barnard college. The latter talked informally in Reynolds parlor Wednesday morning. She spoke of the antipodal political beliefs of women students at Barnard, in the city of New York, and somehow the cosmos expanded before the eyes of the student here whose usual design for living ends at College avenue.

The realisation of the vastness of the cosmos carries as its adjunct a certain feeling of inadequacy. But at the same time it conveys a sense of responsibility. Because the universe is vast, it is not to be inferred that it is an unpopulated vastness. It is a vastness integrated by human personalities, subject to change by the interaction of the same.

It is patent, then, that we should know more of the personalities about us, and not merely know them but understand them. And still more important is it to know that the antecedent of understanding a personality is a knowledge of the culture that nurtured it.

This week Florida State students savored the culture of other institutions of higher learning. In the savoring they have outgrown their swaddling clothes of provincialism. The next problem is what is to be the cut, the fashion of the new garb of inter-provincialism? What are the means of arriving at such an end?

We have only a few practical suggestions to make, realising, of course, that the non-provincial attitude has its paramount basis in a state of mind.

First, it seems advisable that some plan should be devised that will simultaneously decimate the quibbling of the tax payer and increase the number of out-of-state students at Florida State College for Women. Secondly, we feel that immeasurable benefit would accrue to Florida State College for Women from an exchange of scholarships with foreign students.

Florida State does bring out-of-state lecturers here; it does foster the study of foreign culture in its academic courses. Both of these statements are true. The need of Florida State College for Women students is a living proximity with these cultures.

As has already been noted, even if Phi Beta Kappa had not come to Florida State, but only its agents, we would still be richer by the challenge they injected into the campus here—to understand other ways of living that we may better create our own.

Magazine Thumbings

By MELVYNE WAHNISH

YOUTH MOVES TOWARD NEW STANDARDS
By Christian Gauss.
Scribners, February.

The "zipper age" together with the "kick hunting" generation have long since ceased to be, according to Gauss. He informs us that the hey-day of coonskin coats, cars, and the be-bannered collegiate rooms which flourished within the universities have died, being replaced on our American campuses by a social consciousness and a sense of social responsibility. He believes that the day is past when a collegian measured his status in society by the number of rum-runners and bootleggers whose services he had access to.

Since graduating this pleasure-seeking group has somewhat altered their ambitions. He finds that where before their sole desire was to accumulate a large enough "pile" for retirement from any sort of life of responsibility, the present popular desire is to serve humanity in some way.

Actual living in the college seems also to have taken on a new tone. Barriers erected by money have been torn down. Campus discussion reflects the leading contemporary thinking on the vital economic problems and sex and alcohol have long since lost their position of prominence in student discussions. Shocking grandmother is no longer considered necessarily a worthwhile occupation. In short, if Gauss' observations are accurate, the undergraduate of today is seriously trying to interpret and formulate satisfactory and acceptable social philosophies.

DISTORTING THE NEWS
By Eugene A. Kelly
The American Mercury, March

In this country tales of the censorship of the press which manage to leak out from Germany, Italy and some of the countries of South America are greeted with cries of unadulterated horror by our good people, since newspaper suppression outrages all democratic sensibilities. However, Eugene A. Kelly would have us believe that freedom to ferret out news and then have that news printed in the newspapers is a myth. He says that actually freedom of the press does not exist. The distinguishing feature, he points out, existing between the autocratic suppression abroad, and that practiced in this country is that here we employ subtility, and tact. The results, however, are rather identical, since in both instances the real news goes unprinted.

The life of a reporter on Capital Hill is, according to Kelly, "no more exciting than knitting." All exuberance and passion which a youthful reporter may feel for getting the plain facts, devoid of all official coloring and toning up, is doomed to disappointment. For, after all, even a reporter must eat, and pay checks, says Kelly, do not find their way to the over-zealous and conscientious reporter.

Mark Sullivan, styled by the author as "one of the better known trained seals," Ruby Black, and Pearson and Allen of the Washington-Merry-go-Round are all attacked by Kelly. He points out how Frank R. Kent writes the Washington dispatches for the Baltimore Sun and is rarely if ever seen in the capital city.

On the whole the condition of the fourth estate seems to leave quite a considerable bit to be desired, if we are to accept Kelly's statements. Even the spectacle of the young reporters with their "supine inoffensiveness" toward the press agents and officials, sources of Washington news, is a pitiful one.

I'D RATHER BE A SPINSTER
Anonymous
Forum, March

A woman, eager to escape the inevitable pity of friends incurred by her state of single blessedness, married a man twenty-five years her senior. She tells us that in spite of this healthy and normal relationship all is not so well. She assures us at numerous intervals that she is an intellectual woman and that the man of her choice is also a man of intellectual tastes hence there is present in their relationship all those elements of companionship and mutual interests which are usually considered essential for a successful marriage. Since she feels that leisure time is a necessary factor for her happiness she chose a man who would be able to provide for that leisure time. However, in spite of all this, this woman feels [illegible] main advantage of her title [illegible] is that through it she is able to criticise with impunity the institution of marriage and not have that criticism labeled "sour grapes." She feels that she would have been infinintely more happy with the sweet memories of hearts in Valentine boxes than she is now with the actual privilege of picking up soiled shirts for the laundry.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By Hoffman

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES
BY DAISY PARKER

SPECULATION and perhaps even alarm have been the results of the record drop of the British pound on Paris exchanges Saturday. In the morning of that day the pound fell to the lowest level that has been recorded in Paris, and on New York markets the pound reached the lowest point in two years. Late Saturday the British stabilization fund stepped into the foreign exchange markets to stop the decrease of the value of the pound.

There are several possible interpretations that may be given this sudden plunge of the pound. It might have just been a "foreign exchange flurry" caused by the recent collapse of the pepper, shellac, and tin pools in the British market and the recent attempts of foreign investors to pull "short balances" out of London, which necessitated selling pounds to buy other currencies. A more alarming interpretation of the drop of the pound in the foreign exchange is that it is a beginning of a definite campaign by the British government to reduce the value of the pound. It is well known that the British government would like to see the pound lower in terms of the dollar. Also the British have steadfastly since 1933 refused to consider stabilization of the pound; just last Thursday Chancellor Chamberlain, speaking in the House of Commons, made the assertion that the time was not yet ripe for stabilization of the pound.

If it is a fact that the British government is embarking on a program to devalue the pound the affects on other governments will not be inconsiderable. The gold countries of Europe—France, Holland, and Belgium would be faced with an immediate crisis which would necessarily call for drastic action. The results in the United States would probably be a deflation of the price of agricultural products and a general deflation in our whole price level.

AND WHILE we are perusing rather sad financial news let us look at an announcement from the Department of the Treasury. During the first eight months of this fiscal year the government has spent one dollar for every fifty cents taken in. In eight months a deficit of two billions has been established, and the gross public debt has increased to twenty-eight and a half billion dollars, or a debt burden of $226.39 for every man, woman, and child in the United States.

ONE wonders what the members of the Congress of Vienna would think if they could hear that in this 1935 a king has abdicated because his ministers insisted on his being conservative when he wanted to be liberal. Pradjadhipok, King of Siam, Brother of the Moon, Arbiter of the Ebb and Flow of the Tides, and Possessor of the Twenty-four Umbrellas, formally abdicated his throne March 3. The king demanded a reform in the government set-up in Siam, asking a revision of the methods of election to the National Assembly, and a revision of the participation of the army and navy officers in politics. The cabinet at Bangkok refused nearly all the king's demands, as they felt that the reforms that the king demanded would in the end take many of their own prerequisites of office. The Siamese crown has formally been offered to the eleven year old nephew of the abdicated monarch.

A NAVAL rebellion in Greece against the present government of Premier Tsaldaris is gaining in momentum. Former Premier Venizelos, "the grand old man of Greece," Saturday threw his strength on the side of the sailor rebels. The rebel fleet has taken possession of the island of Crete and seems to be intent on holding it in spite of the terrific onslaught from overhead, the Greek government using planes almost entirely to combat the rebels, as only seven destroyers and two submarines have remained loyal to the government. Perhaps the government is strong enough to put down a rebellion in the navy, but it is very unlikely that the government can cope with the rebellion if civilians join in; and it appears almost certain that the discontented civilians will join the naval rebels.

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT
University Editorials

STUDENT OPINION

Student opinion in American colleges today is the nucleus of the nation's constructive thinking of tomorrow. The thoughts and ambitions being formed by the present younger generation represent the ideals that will be upheld by the citizens of the future. Student opinion at Louisiana State university reflects the thoughts and ideals of the sons and daughters of the Old and New South, as well as the ideals and beliefs of students from 39 states and 14 foreign countries.

In every way the university seeks to assist students to attain widened conceptions and enlightened beliefs. The molding of opinion is encouraged by chapel services, by convocations held periodically, by lecture groups, and through discussions led by national speakers who are invited to the campus each year. Among the noted thinkers who spoke here last semester were Dr. Broadus Mitchell, James Yard, Norman Thomas, and Agnes Macphail.

Student opinion is a phrase commonly used today. In some instances it carries a real meaning and in others it means nothing, and is simply the use of convenient and well-sounding words.

Opinion among some students is real and is the result of serious thinking in lectures, seminars, and informal group discussions.

Students here are fortunate in having associations with students and professors from many states and foreign countries.

The university offers every opportunity for developing and encouraging a real student opinion. It is up to students, however, to take advantage of these opportunities, if the phrase "student opinion," is to mean anything—The Reveille.

OUR NATIONAL CHARACTER

Possibly the greatest criticism one can make of the American people is that they place as the primary aim in life the acquiring of material goods, the hoarding and accumulation of money. During the depression years we told ourselves that we were learning a great lesson about life, that there were more important values than material, and that in the future our emphasis would be placed on more fundamental principles. But even now as we are beginning to emerge from the financial depression we let ourselves drop back into the same old line of thought.

In giving relief we thought we had done enough when we handed out some of the bare necessities of life to the poor. They were given a little money and clothing, but no thought was given to rehabilitating them morally and socially. Now with the government handing out millions to states and cities we find these forms of government thinking of nothing but how they may receive the largest amount for themselves. Little cognizance is taken of the more important responsibilities that a state should assume.

In our universities and colleges the same spirit seems to exist. Each college thinks first not of training in character and mind, but in gathering in the largest amount of material possessions. Larger buildings, big enrollments and rich endowments or appropriations are considered all that matters. Even in the classroom we find instructors valuing a position on the amount of cold cash one can get out of it. Students are taught to enter a certain field of work "because the pay is good."

Many people have been shocked recently at the bold admittance on the part of the governor of Alabama that he is primarily interested in pulling out the biggest possible plum from the national treasury. Money is not an end in itself, but only a means to an end, and the use and value placed on it is an indication of the kind of character we have. And our national character is exceedingly low, judging by such a standard.

This attitude on the part of individuals and of public officials is to be greatly deplored. We need wise leadership in these times, and one place where such leadership would prove greatly effective is in our colleges. — Crimson-White.

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticisms. Letters should be signed, marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the postoffice.

STUDENTS WANT N. S. F. A.

It is something like three months since the student body and senate sent delegates to the N. S. F. A. convention with instructions to come back to this campus prepared to organize a local unit of N. S. F. A. Apparently nothing further has been done towards the organisation of a local unit.

Many of us felt that an N. S. F. A. unit here would arouse student interest in public affairs and campus problems and that in addition to this it would give student thought a medium of self-expression. Most of all we had hoped for some means of effectively training college students for leadership and citizenship.

Will the student body, senate, and the convention delegates stand by and let this matter take its place among the many other "forgotten issues" which this campus is so in the habit of sponsoring for a week or two and then allowing to die?

—Hazel Bowman.

Chaperones Are Still Among Us

Students at Florida State College, who suspect that chaperones went out with the gay nineties, are entertaining an erroneous idea, according to Ela Arosarena, student here, who lived in Habana, Cuba, for fourteen years.

"Why, a Cuban girl's reputation would be—flooey," Ela snapped her fingers emphatically, "if she were to appear on the street alone. A chaperone or a maid must accompany her always. You may see a girl driving alone, but that is very seldom."

"In other ways, however," Ela said, "the Cuban girl has copied the American girl. She even smokes now, just like the American. This is quite a step forward for her. In dancing, too, she has imitated the American. Especially does she like the fox-trot and the waltz. Despite new innovations, however, the native dances, such as el danzon and el son, are extremely popular."

Although the Cuban girl's place is believed to be in the home, she is now invading the business world, according to Ela. "Until now, a woman who worked was looked down upon," she said, "but today Cuban women are becoming more and more independent, entering such fields as teaching, bookkeeping, and stenography."

In Ela's opinion, the greatest way in which the Cuban girl differs from the American is in her distaste for sports. "They do like to ride horseback," she said, "but for tennis, golf, basketball it is thumbs down."

"Oh, dates!" Ela squealed. "A Cuban girl doesn't know what the word means. Why, when a boy takes a girl to the show, he must always take her mother, too."

Collegiate Come-Backs

Now that Phi Beta Kappa is actually installed and all the distinguished visitors have gone back home again, we may presume that members of same who have been sitting on top of the world for the past week may resume their normal positions. We, the student body, have put our best foot forward until it is positively calloused, and will be glad not to have to walk around on tiptoe in hushed silence in a children-may-be-seen-if-necessary-but-not-heard air. Those of you who feel that life will be rather pointless from now on since the Phi Beta Kappa excitement is over may cheer up. Tau Gamma Sigma, the plumbing honorary, will sprinkle soon.

• • • •

Oh no, we couldn't go to see "Green Pastures," one of the outstanding plays of the quarter-century, when it played right here in town, but just let a two-for-a-nickel stage show with half-baked actors and lousy music hit town and we get late permission to attend. And then they wonder why we don't run a temperature over the finer things of life. Bah.

• • • •

What with the prom almost under our very noses we predict a shifting of emphasis on this campus from I. Q. to S. A. Sex appeal, according to Dorothy Dix, is how to look hot and keep cool. But then they say, "College love is like a radish; it looks good, it tastes good. If it only wouldn't keep coming up again and again."

• • • •

The Johnsonian recently conducted a contest to determine the favorite actress, actor, toothpaste, famous woman, pet, magazine, piece of music, dessert, pastime, and dance orchestra on its campus. The following ballot to determine F. S. C. W. favorites is printed for your convenience. Please use it.

1. What is your favorite honorary? Are you a member or would you like to be?..........
2. Which dessert do you like the least?..........
3. What is your favorite shoe polish? ....
4. Who is your favorite janitor? nightwatchman? professor?..........
5. Which comic section do you prefer?........
6. What is your favorite way of parting your hair? On the left, or a little more to the right than to the left?......
7. Which is your favorite musical instrument, the dulcimer, zither or cassasara?
8. Do you prefer sensible questionnaires like this, or Literary Digest polls?. .
8. Do you prefer jokes with points, or do you read this colyum? ...

Please mail answers to the What-Have-You-Got • To • Lose Contest editor, care of Florida Flambeau.

• • • •

While we're still on the subject of love and women and with spring nearly here we might add a sequel to last week's eulogy on Wimmin.

A chemist (a man) has at last been able to analyze women, and here it is:

Symbol: WO. A member of the human family.

Occurrence: Can be found wherever man exists.

Physical properties: All colors and sizes. Always appears in disguised conditions—surface of face seldom unprotected by coating of paint or film of powder. Boils at nothing and may freeze at any moment. Melts when properly treated. Very bitter if not used correctly.

Chemical properties: Extremely active. Possess great affinity for gold, silver, platinum, and precious stones of all kinds. Violent reactions when left alone by man. Ability to absorb all sorts of expensive foods. Turns green when placed next to a better appearing specimen. Ages very rapidly. Fresh variety has great magnetic attraction. Highly explosive and likely to be dangerous in inexperienced hands.—The Daily Illini.

• • • •

The athletic stars got their rewards in the middle of the Midwinter festival dance. Why not give the brainy girls a break and read out the honor roll during the prom?

• • • •

(Exchange Ed's note: The hand-painted oolahput goes to Ruth Persons, who functioned as guest colyumnist this week.)

Andrews Finishes Four-Year Study of College Leadership

Personnel Director Gives Paper at Meeting of Association

From statistics compiled over a period of four years, Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews, director of personnel at Florida State College, has recently prepared a paper on "Factors Affecting Leadership Among College Women" which she presented before the conference of the American College Personnel Association held a week ago in Atlantic City.

With the criterion of leadership that of election to a college government office, Dr. Andrews studied the home, occupation and education of the parents, previous education of the students, health, intelligence, self-help, scholarship, extra-curricular activities, and personality in their relation to the two groups of 131 students each, leaders and non-leaders.

Relative to factors in the home, Dr. Andrews states, "Young people who have lost one or both parents, or who have step-parents would appear to have a better chance of becoming leaders than those not so situated. On the contrary, students brought up by grandparents are less likely to become leaders."

The education of the parents was also found by Dr. Andrews to be of significance as the leader group had the larger percentage of college-educated parents.

While stating that the birthplace of the student seemed not a factor in leadership, that of the parents is named as of significance. Of the parents of the leader group, the larger percentage were born in other states while of the non-leader group the majority of parents were born in Florida. In explanation of this, Dr Andrews writes, "Two possible interpretations may be given for this. One is that the pioneer settlers of the state are more aggressive as pioneers usually are. The other possible explanation is that the more sheltered life of the young woman in the southern home does not produce leaders as frequently as the more independent life of the young woman in other sections of the country."

As to previous education, Dr. Andrews' study led her to infer that the size of the high school exercises a considerable influence in the production of leaders, the greatest number graduating from the largest schools. Grades, however, signified little, for of the leader group, the average was 89 per cent while that of the non-leader group was 88 per cent. In college, however, a more marked difference in grades was found with the leader group maintaining the higher average.

Intelligence tests also proved positive for the leader group, giving it an average percentile of seventy-one while the control group of non-leaders averaged fifty-eight. The college average is forty-eight.

Twenty-four percent of the leaders were found to have secured state scholarships granted by examination, in comparison with seventeen percent of the non-leaders and eight percent of college students in general.

In the matter of self-help, Dr. Andrews writes, "It is sometimes felt that students who must help themselves by working have not the time to devote to activities. On the contrary, thirty-three percent of our leader group work at least part of their way through college, while twenty-six percent of the non-leader group and twenty percent of the college group do so."

In activities, sorority, honorary, and extra-curricular generally, the leadership group seems also to lead. Seventy-five percent of the leaders are members of sororities, compared with sixty-six percent of the non-leader group; forty-nine percent of the leaders are members of honorary organizations where but thirteen percent of the non-leaders are so affiliated, and student activities generally for leaders average 7.5 per cent while for the non-leader group it was but .59 per cent.

Basing the consideration of personality on appearance, initiative, reliability, social behavior and cooperation as judged by interviewers and social directors of halls, the statistics favor the leaders who have a composite score of 2.35 as compared with that of 1.94 for the non-leaders. In contrast with this report, however, is that of the professors: "Ratings by critic teachers," said Dr. Andrews, "do not show a significant difference between the groups. They give leaders a point rating of 2.36 and non-leaders 2.22. Major professors make the difference in favor of non-leaders —leaders, 2.09; non-leaders, 2.21, which closely corresponds with the employers' rating of leaders, 2.06 and non-leaders, 2.24. Perhaps when working under direction, the leader is at a disadvantege."

From the study of the above factors, Dr. Andrews outlines in her report the following description the leader is at a disadvan- leader is a young woman graduate from a large high school, with intelligence in the upper quartile, with college grade of "B", college-educated parents, average health, a member of a sorority, participating in high school and college activties, of pleasing personality and good character, possibly earning part of her way through college, coming from a home where the method of training has a dash more independence than the average college woman, and frequently qualifying for membership in honor societies."

Rifle Range Opened At Camp Flastacowo

A rifle range for the use of week-end campers has just been erected by the college at Camp Flastacowo, according to Miss Elizabeth Autrey, camp director.

The college has purchased two new Remington .22 calibre rifles for use on the range and these can be secured from Miss Autrey at the camp. Students are requested to buy their cartridges from the bookstore, or they may secure them at the camp.

It is hoped, said Miss Autrey, that many students will take advantage of this opportunity to learn riflery and to try their hand at sharpshooting.

Bertha Tempers Wind for Shorn Lamb In the Lab

Colored Maid Comes To Rescue in Chemistry Dilemmas

Ask Bertha—she'll know.

Bertha, the colored maid in the chemistry department, does more than her regular duties, which are keeping the storeroom, mimeographing, and keeping the laboratories clean. She serves as nurse, friend, guide, and a walking encyclopedia of the exact position of anything one might happen to want in the chemistry laboratory.

From eight o'clock in the morning until five in the afternoon Bertha is to be found somewhere on the top flour of the Science hall or up in the attic. When any minor accidents occur in the "lab" she applies the proper salve and bandages the wound with gauze and adhesive tape.

Bertha is an especially good friend of the bewildered freshmen in general chemistry laboratories who can never find the proper reagents on the reagent shelves. A situation similar to the following is almost an everyday occurrence:

"Bertha, I can't find the potassium dichromate anywhere."

"Which shelf did you look on?"

"That one," pointing to the nearest solid shelf.

"It's on the liquid shelf, miss."

"Oh, I see," she says, quickly running to get it, and hoping that the professor has not heard.

Bertha can often answer questions in notebooks, for she had one year of chemistry during the two terms when she attended Florida A. and M. college for negroes, located at Tallahassee.

For the past five years Bertha has been working in the chemistry department.

She was born here in Tallahassee, where she has lived ever since. Bertha admits that she is an only child but doesn't think that she has been spoiled very much. When asked what was her favorite pastime, she smiled and said "I like movin' pictures better'n anything else."

Dean Sees Three College Trends

(Continued From Page One)

"scorns such a method believing it gives the student the feeling he knows a great deal about a number of subjects when he has but a smattering, and consequently prefers the sample method whereby a small portion of the field is penetrated."

In Dean Gildersleeve's opinion, the student might derive just as much from one method as from the other, for the value depends enormously on the teacher. It is the teacher, she declared, who must convey the spark of insight and must get the student to think solidly and straight.

The student should at one time study the past, for thereby he gets a perspective enabling him to judge today more wisely. By seeing the slow development of human life, he can better judge new schemes offered today

Vastly important in the college today, said Dean Gildersleeve, is the attempt to make the student feel a sense of responsibility for the political life of the country, and in most colleges, she said, such interest is being stimulated, especially through student government.

"An outstanding difference between today and the era of just a little while ago, Dean Gildersleeve said, "lies in our consciousness that government is going more and more to influence all sides of our lives, and in the consequent realisation that our places as citizens of the state must be thought out."

The second difference in education recent and present, the emphasis on the study of recreation for future leisure is, according to Dean Gildersleeve, an excellent thing for it has brought a greater enjoyment in the fine arts which have thus come to have a new importance, bringing with them an understanding of the spiritual necessity of contact with beauty.

The realization of the great danger of too narrow specialization constitutes the third change in education today from yesterday. Obviously, said Dean Gildersleeve, the best education lies in getting the fundamentals, in keeping the mind elastic so that the student may adjust himself to any situation life may bring.

The fundamentals of education will always remain the same, those of giving the student finely tempered tools with which to live his after life, and those tools she named as body, mind, and character. While we have improved in tempering the body through hygienic studies and games, we have improved less, she said, in the technique of training the mind. This is due partly to the misunderstanding of the principle of education through the belief that the child should not be given anything hard. Yet, discipline of the mind, straining it in its utmost is important, for we must develop brains, she declared, that will think straight, that will recognize facts that will pierce all the bunk and prejudice people talk about. There was never a greater need for accurate thinking than now."

Least progress, she continued, has been in the technique of character development, for though the students, unaided do develop good characters, definite technique for such development could and should be improved. This development of body, mind and character will be the education suitable for today, tomorrow and day after tomorrow as it was for yesterday and the past, she declared.

"We need," she said, "an education for the problems of the moment. It is of great importance that we understand other countries, that we realise that though they are different, they are not inferior. We must realise that we are all tied up together in a tiny world, closely related.

"The liberal education," she defined, "ought to be a key, a compass, and a map. It ought to give the knowledge which Plato described as 'that knowledge which is not a stranger in things strange to it.' If we can succeed in giving the student that kind of knowledge, we shall have given him the best kind of education for today and for that tomorrow wrapped still in clouds."

Sport Slants

Contestants Will Hold Mock Meet

Trial Telegraphic Bout To Swimmers

Participating in a mock swimming meet Saturday at 10:30 will be those who are going to take part in the international telegraphic swimming meet. The meet tomorrow will be directed by Miss Marjorie Mayer and the regular officials will receive practice as well as the swimmers, as the time and distances will be checked.

Those who are taking part in the mock meet are: Claire Redfield, Marion Weeks, Betty Bailey, Louise Gehan, Victoria Crisp, Betty Berry, Martha Makemson, Marie Taylor, Janice Borton, Mildred Stevens, Erma Engel, Sarah Hethcox, Frances Lewis, Rose Panowski, Audrey Cooper, Betty Clark, Francis Thill, June Meserve, Carol Farabee, Kate Wiggins, and Shirley Stevens.

Lynn, Vermillion Tennis Winners

Lancaster Seeds Graham First in Tourney

In the two games that have been played off so far in the 1935 faculty women's tennis tournament, Miss Elisabeth Lynn defeated Miss Mary Settle and Miss Gertrude Vermillion defeated Miss Katherine Montgomery.

The results of the other two teams, Dr. Viola Graham vs. Miss Velma Ooten, and Dr. Eleanor Valentine vs. Miss Grace Fox, have not been obtained as yet.

According to Dorothy Lancaster who has been directing the tournament the teams have been well matched and it is hard to predict the winner, although Dr. Graham, 1934 champion, is seeded first place with Miss Vermillion running her a close second.

The tournament for the faculty men will begin within the next two weeks, but the line-ups have not been worked out as yet.

On The Spot With Sports

Play Night will be held as usual this Friday at the gym and it promises to be a very interesting one as it is in charge of the "F" goats. We are not printing the program so it will be a big surprise. Go and find out for yourself what it is all about.

Speaking of the goats reminds us that many an "F" member is getting a big kick out of having her old shoes made to look fairly decent on account of the efforts of some poor goat, but they like it. If you see any strange sight walking around campus look out, it's likely to be a goat acting kiddish.

Baseball and tennis practice are now in full sway. However, it is noted that only freshmen and sophomores are turning out for tennis practice. What's wrong with you juniors and seniors? Show your Odd and Even spirits and show up at the practices.

The schedules for both baseball and tennis practices are as follows: Odds: Monday and Wednesday at 4:30, Friday at 3:30, and Saturday at 9:30. Evens: Tuesday and Thursday at 4:30, Friday at 3.30, and Saturday at 3:30.

Dr. Heiseth Speaks on New Educational Trend

(Continued From Page One)

place with each individual, and that "purposeful child activity" should be self-directed, with guidance by the teacher.

An interesting trend that was brought out was that direct teaching is diminishing and rapidly disappearing. Whereas a child formerly was taught fractions for the sake of knowing fractions, today he learns them in order to be able to lend money and charge interest in his toy bank. Arithmetic in some grades is worked in solely in connection with other units and projects. The child learns things for which he sees a purpose in knowing.

Under the new system formal grades and report cards are disappearing. Letters to the parents are sent out at regular intervals, describing the progress of the child, his specified needs and problems. Instead of the same textbook for every child, in many classrooms each has a different one.

Dr. Heiseth said that the authorities do not consider administrative difficulties but proceed on the thesis that what is best for the child can be worked out in some way. The course of study is considered only a guide by means of which each teacher builds her own curriculum.

Head of Goucher Reveals Memoirs

(Continued From Page One)

colleges arrange frequent addresses and integrate them with the instructional program.

"Ralph Waldo Emerson was such a power," said Dr. Robertson, "in the life of James A. Garfield at Williamstown while young Charles Eliot at Harvard was less impressed by the "sage of Concord" and wrote that he 'evaporated after watching the escape of his gas for three quarters of an hour'."

"Most of all," Dr. Robertson concluded, "men are grateful for the college experience when it has been one that included the waking up of the mind, the moment of intimation and illumination of internal freedom as when Woodrow Wilson took on the management of his own education, as Edmund Burke did, and the young Bismarck. Each reached the point where he became conscious of a philosophy, as the motto of Phi Beta Kappa puts it, a philosophy which is a guide of life."

Phi Beta Now At Home Here

(Continued From Page One)

Kappa, Jacksonville; Dr. and Mrs. W. M. Marr, Phi Beta Kappa, Jacksonville; Mrs. Walter Matherly, Phi Beta Kappa, Gainesville; Mr. and Mrs. W. S. McLin, legislature, state of Florida; Arthur R. Mead, University of Florida, Phi Beta Kappa; Miss Effie Pettit, alumna member-elect; Robinson Pierce, Phi Beta Kappa, Gainesville; Mr. and Mrs. James S. Rickards, official, Florida Educational association; President David A. Robertson, national officer; Miss Mary Schernherst, alumnae representative; Dr. Harry Taylor, Stetson University, Phi Beta Kappa.

Judge and Mrs. Glenn Terrell, supreme court; President John J. Tigert, national officer and president of the University of Florida; Mrs. Felicia Williams Traxler, alumna member-elect; Professor Willard Wattles, Rollins college, Phi Beta Kappa; Dr. and Mrs. Oscar M. Voorhees.

Coronation Ends Midwinter Fete

(Continued From Page One)

ities here, by Carolina DeMontigne, president of the student body.

Thirty-six class numerals, seventeen F's, and thirteen stars were awarded at this time.

Those receiving numerals were Mabel Anderson, Beth Lancaster, Lois Hazel, Tessie Dvoskin, Mei Emmelhainz, Harriet Lawrence, Bertie Mackey, Ruth Persons, Vivian Testa, Wynn Tuten, Nancy Wilkinson, Mary Ward Peterson, Mary Miller, Marjorie Moore, Amber Turner, Mary Stewart Clark, Elise Barrett, Ella Virginia Brooks, Marie Russell, Janet Cook, Audrey Cooper, Irene Day, Louise Gehan, Mary Frances Hales, Margaret Holoway, Frances Lewis, Dorothea Marsh, Betty Ostlund, Kathryn Pratt, Eileen Robinson, Isabelle Sands, Hilda Spradlin, Felicia West, Viola Brooks, Sallie Bert Nusum, and Marjorie Raulerson.

Those receiving F's were Elise Barrett, Wilma Bristol, Viola Brooks, Audrey Cooper, Louise Gehan, Betty Hamilton, Frances Lewis, Dorothea Marsh, Mary Miller, Betty Ostlund, Kathryn Pratt, Mildred Seekins, Mary E. Simpson, Wynn Tuten, Felicia West, Nancy Wilkinson, and Sallie Bert Nusum.

Stars were received by Betty Akin, Carolyn Athon, Janice Borton, Beth Deane, Martha Makemson, Margaret Maxwell, Rose Panowski, Hazel Royall, Mildred Stevens, Catherine Takach, and Marian Weeks.

Bartlett and Robertson See Romantic Revival of Music

Field of Piano Crowded; Concert Player Must Be the Exception

BY NEDRA McNAMARA

There is a definite trend toward a romantic revival in music today, a swinging back and recovery from the hard and bitter period prevalent immediately following the war, according to Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, masters of the two-piano concert form, heard here Monday night by Florida State students.

Not only in America is this movement noticeable, but all over the world. Though it cannot be said that the music world is at present going through any great creative period, the artists agreed that the depression, causing as it has, suffering and misery, may have the effect of creating genius, though that indefinable quality is never predictable.

Though economic systems do not necessarily affect the creative trend, for a creator will compose despite circumstances, Mr. Robertson mentioned the fact that music in Germany is suffering because of Hitler's forced exodus of the Jew and his generally suppressive tendencies. No longer is Germany, as it once was, the best place for music students to study and imbibe the tradition of creative genius, an absorptive process so necessary for the enrichment of the sensitive powers.

"The music of Russia, however," said Mr. Robertson, "owes a great deal for its advancement to the government situation there. Whatever may be said otherwise concerning Russia, it at least, has fostered the promotion of the music interest."

In their travels over the world it has been of interest to these artists to observe the manner of reaction to music in the different countries. The Spanish react enthusiastically, vehemently show their appreciation, while the Hollanders, of quite opposite temperament, by their quiet applause, their glowing silences, more often reveal their equal enthusiasm.

Though they have no favorite composer, believing that the artist must work into the understanding and feeling of all composers' meaning through a somewhat evolutionary, even digestive process, both Miss Bartlett and Mr. Robertson consider Mozart a test for the appreciative powers of any audience. It pleased them, they said, to feel, as the artist always does sense, the favorably responsive reaction of this college audience to their first selection by Mosart.

Students Interested in Music

That students do have a deep appreciation of music, they firmly believe, as evidenced they said, by the vast numbers who attend concerts of all forms all over the nation.

The student, desirous of entering the piano concert field must be exceptionally good to succeed today, for never has there been such an age of piano playing, of first class pianists in the world. "Study abroad," said Mr. Robertson, "is helpful in building a foundation of deeper appreciation, though it is not absolutely necessary." Miss Bartlett suggested that a well-rounded education is advisable rather than an entire specialisation in music. "Every enrichment of mind and spirit, through reading, through study of the arts, is valuable," she declared.

Miss Bartlett, who designs her own gowns and selects the materials, has made quite a study of costuming for the concert stage, having found through observation and experience that the dress of the artist plays an important part in the attention of the audience.

"The ideal gown is simple and is unembellished by flowers or jewelry," described Miss Bartlett. "It has graceful, flowing lines and is of a plain, clear color. Color is of great importance, for lighting so affects it as to change certain colors entirely, rendering them quite different as seen from the first and the last rows. Blue is especially dangerous to wear on the stage for it tends under certain lights to become black. Red and gold, however, are excellent."

Living in London, Miss Bartlett and Mr. Robertson pursue the hobbies of swimming and especially of walking, in the athletic field, and of reading and enjoyment of the arts, sculpture and

(Continued on page four)

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

PROM DRESSES OF DISTINCTION
Priced at $10.75
AND UP
Over One Hundred to Choose From!
STEYERMAN'S STYLE SHOP
NEXT TO BENNETT'S

Bennett's
LUNCH AT BENNETT'S 40c
CHOICE OF MEATS:
Fried Chicken, Country Style
Tuna Fish Salad with Boiled Egg
VEGETABLES:
Cream Carrots - Fresh Turnips
Frozen Fruit Salad
Sweet Milk, Coffee, Hot Tea, Iced Tea
Hot Biscuits or Corn Muffins
25c Peach Melba Sundae with Cocoanut Ice Cream 15c
25c Marshmallow Mint Sundae 15c
30c Banana Royal 15c
25c Butterscotch Sundae 15c
20c Chicken Salad Sandwich 15c
20c Pimento Cheese and Olive 15c
Russell McPhail Ice Cream, pt. 25c

For That Good Job of SHOE REPAIRING
Go to SUTTON'S
Half-Way
Shoe Shop

During the Prom Week-End Be Smart in a Ladies' Shop Frock
Silk Dresses
In Navy, Prints, White and Pastels.
$3.95
AND UP
Beautiful
Evening Gowns
Lace, Chiffon or Net
$12.50
THE LADIES' SHOP
"Where Styles are Shown First for Less"
205 South Monroe St.

THE FRENCH SHOP
Presents a New Line
of
Dress and Sports Shoes

$2.95 and $3.95

Before You Buy Dresses for the Prom Be Sure to See the Lovely New Evening Gowns and Sports Dresses
at
MAE'S SHOP
South Monroe St.

New Way Laundry and Dry Cleaners
Tallahassee's Oldest and Largest
"Wear Clean Clothes"
Representative in Lower Bryan Hall
Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 183

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Shirley Temple and Lionel Barrymore
in
"THE LITTLE COLONEL"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Gary Cooper and Anna Sten
in
"THE WEDDING NIGHT"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Chester Morris
in
"SOCIETY DOCTOR"
THURSDAY
"SEQUOIA" with Jean Parker
"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT"
RITZ THEATRE
SATURDAY
Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson
Present
"BABOONA"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
"THE LITTLE COLONEL"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
"THE WEDDING NIGHT"

The Social Week

Social Sororities Entertain In Honor of New Initiates

Three of the eighteen sororities on campus held their initiation ceremonies last week-end and entertained their new initiates with colorful affairs.

The Alpha Delta Pi sorority gave a breakfast Sunday morning at the Dutch Kitchen after the initiation service Saturday night. Programs decorated with a messenger boy holding the recognition pin were given to each new initiate. Doris Risk was presented a gift for having the highest average of the initiates, who were: Josephine Trantham, Doris Risk, Sara Moor, Isabell Yon, Elizabeth Whiddon, Martha King, Charmian Lufburrow, and Elsie Baird. Flossie Henry will be initiated later, since she was out of town last week-end.

Pi Phi Festivities

Following their initiation Friday night the Pi Beta Phis had a breakfast at the Floridan hotel. The tables were decorated with jonquils, carnations and roses, and the colors of the fraternity, wine and silver blue. Bracelets with the seal of the fraternity were the gifts to the new initiates.

Phil Asher of Orlando was presented the scholarship cup, which is given annually to the freshman with the highest average. Speakers were Miss Elizabeth Griffing, faculty advisor; Miss Elizabeth Love, chaperon, who are also alumnae of Pi Beta Phi, and Betty Boggs, president of the chapter.

Those initiated were: Phil Asher, Lois Adkins, Betty Chitty, Betty Clark, Ruth Connor, Anne Durr, Eloise Frink, Sarah Graham, Ermine Lawrence, Virginia Laughner, Mildred Long, Ruth Mock, Dorothy Ozburn, Betty Parker, Mary Elizabeth Ramsey, Katherine Rogers, Kathleen Simpson, Katherine Todd, Jean Treadwell, Barbara Wells, Martha Lee Wilkerson, and Virginia White.

Z. T. A Art Studio

The Zeta Tau Alphas gave a breakfast at the Dutch Kitchen for the new initiates last Sunday morning. The theme was a Zeta Tau Alpha art studio, in which the new initiates represented student artists. Virginia Thornton, president of the chapter and toastmistress, was the master artist; Miss Sivyer, faculty advisor, was the art critic; Mrs. Moore, province president, was the substantial easel from which the pictures are painted, and Edith McCollum, alumna, was the palette. The programs were artist's palettes and the place cards were artists carrying palettes which were actually the recognition pins.

Bowls of white carnations were used as decorations and corsages of the carnations were presented to the following initiates: Elizabeth Simpson, Clara Langford, Frances Lingle, Jean Matheson, and Esther Hay. Alumnae present were: Mrs. Walter S. Moore, Miss Henrietta Sivyer, Mrs. Grace E. Gibson, Mrs. James Wadsworth, Mrs. W. K. Whitfield of Tallahassee, Miss Mary Carnell, Inverness and the Misses Edith McCollum, Alma Patterson, Mrs. J. A. Connor and Mrs. A. W. Palin of Jacksonville.

Among the sororities who will have initiations this week-end are Alpha Gamma Delta, and Delta Delta Delta. Other sororities will have theirs within the next few weeks.

Alpha Gamma Initiation

The Alpha Gamma Delta sorority will give a banquet Saturday night at the Dutch Kitchen following initiation. A rose theme will be used and toasts will be given by Marion Turner, Mercia Scott, Betsey Anderson, and Dana Jones. Those to be initiated are Pauline McLellan, Nellie Lamar, Mary Jane Gallamore, Frances Bishop, Mary Nell Pinkard, Dorothy Bryan, Martha Crocker, Helen Godwin, Nan O'Shaunessy and Spurgeon Fulford. Alumnae expected for the initiation are: Dana Jones, Nancy Lutz, Helen Cook, Ellen Dirr, Kathleen Reese, Inez Lee Bottari, Pat Crews, and Orline Hall.

The Delta Delta Delta sorority will have initiation this afternoon with a buffet supper tonight at the chapter house. Chicken a la king and individual cakes with pansy icing will be served. Pansies, the sorority flower, will make the bouquets for the new initiates, also. Mildred Smoak has charge of the supper, and Miss Katherine Montgomery will be the chaperon.

New initiates will be Dorothy Branch, Dorothy Nye, Jean Tilden, Billie Hotard, Charlotte Pelsang, Rosemary Payne, Jessilee Lumpkin, Nettie Taylor, Frances Hartley, Mary June Mickel, Betty Wheeless, Lucile Williams, and Ella O'Neill.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
March 8 to March 15

Friday

4:00 p.m. Kappa Alpha Theta reception for Mrs. Donald Sinclair of Toronto, Canada.
7:00 p.m. Delta Delta Delta buffet supper at house for new initiates.
8:00 p.m. Play nite at college gymnasium.

Saturday

7:00 p.m. Alpha Chi Omega banquet at Dutch Kitchen.
8:00 p.m. Alpha Gamma Delta banquet at Dutch Kitchen.
8:00 p.m. Phi Mu formal dance at the house.

Informal dancing in Gilchrist parlors during the afternoon and evening.

Sunday

11:00 a.m. Church services.
7:15 p.m. Y. W. C. A. vespers.

Monday

5:30 p.m. Orchestra rehearsal.
7:30 p.m. Glee Club rehearsal in auditorium.
9:00 p.m. Sorority meetings.

Tuesday

11:30 a.m. Convocation. Program on Honors work, Dr. Eyman and students.
4:30 p.m. Phi Alpha Theta tea in Broward club room.
5:30 p.m. Tea given by Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Bellamy and Dr. and Mrs. Coyle Moore.
7:00 p.m. Panhellenic scholarship banquet at the Floridan hotel.
7:30 p.m. Social studies meeting—faculty and upperclasmen.

Wednesday

7:15 a.m. Worship service.
4:30 p.m. Music recital in auditorium.
5:30 p.m. Tea given by Miss Nita Pyburn for freshman students.
8:15 p.m. "The Revolt against Dullness in American Life." Henry Neuman, forum lecturer in auditorium.

Thursday

7:15 p.m. "Trends of Modern Art" with Miss Briggs speaking, Broward club room under auspices of Social Committee.

Friday

5:00 p.m. Tea honoring seniors in Commerce department at Dutch Kitchen.
8:00 p.m. A. A. U. W. reception for seniors in Gilchrist parlors.

(Corrected Ad)

Turner's
YOUR STORE

JUST RECEIVED!

Complete New Line of Ladies'

NATIONAL PARK
SPORT WALKS
SMART STYLES for YOUNG MODERNS

The Greatest Line of Ladies' Sport Shoes in America

$3.95
AAAA to B—2½ to 9.

One of Many Styles Shown

When You Think of Cleaning, Dyeing and Alterations Think of the Central Cleaners

"Your Patronage Is Our Pleasure"

Personal Mention

Wilma Weeks of Brooksville, Bernice Adams of Jacksonville, and Evelyn Rudd Johnson of Hinson, alumnae of Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority were guests of the local chapter this week.

Johnny Hardie will visit her family in Trenton this week-end.

Gertrude Tomkies will spend the week-end in Gainesville.

Members of the Sigma Kappa sorority are staying in town this week-end to attend the wedding and reception of Miss Eunice Parker and Dr. J. L. Anderson Saturday.

Sarah Stuart of Tampa attended the Pi Beta Phi initiation service last week.

Jean Clark will spend this week-end in Tampa and Virginia Laughner in St. Petersburg.

Mrs. Felicia William Traxler of Gainesville, and Miss Effie Petit of Waldo, members of Phi Beta Kappa, and alumnae of Alpha Delta Pi sorority, arrived last Sunday for the installation of Phi Beta Kappa. While here they were the guests of the sorority house on Copeland street.

Mrs. Paul Fleming of Atlanta was a guest of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority this week. Her daughter, Ellen, returned home with her Thursday to spend a few days.

Mrs. A. N. Dillard, Clearwater, and Mrs. C. Sweet Smith, Cocoa, were guests at the Alpha Delta Pi house while visiting their daughters, Isabelle Dillard and Betty Sweet Smith. Miss Louise Lassere of Fernandina was also a guest of the sorority last week.

Mrs. R. F. Garcia with her mother Mrs. H. G. Coates arrived at the Beta Phi Alpha house Tuesday. Ruth Garcia returned to Daytona Beach with them to spend the week-end.

Grace Rummell and Julie Whiley will leave today for Cocoa, while Margie Creel is leaving for Eau Gallie for the week-end.

Mrs. M. Garfunkel and Mrs. Charles Fisher of Miami were guests of the Alpha Xi Delta sorority last week while attending the installation services of Phi Beta Kappa.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter Kuhn of Bartow accompanied by Mrs. E. A. Pierce were visitors on the campus last week-end.

Elizabeth Pierce, Elizabeth Whidden, and Dixie Gist are leaving this noon for Bartow where they will spend the week-end visiting with their parents.

Mrs. Roy Gallemore of Bartow and Mrs. Edward L. Beeson of Auburndale, alumnae of the college, were visitors on thec ampus Monday and Tuesday while attending the Phi Beta Kappa installation.

Audrey Smith is going to Madison this week-end to be an attendant in the wedding of her sister, Patty Smith, an alumnae member of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority.

Phi Alpha Theta Will Entertain Freshmen At Tea on Tuesday

Members of Phi Alpha Theta, national history honorary, will be hostesses at a tea Tuesday afternoon from four to six o'clock in Broward club room honoring the freshman students who made A or B in history the past semester.

The hostesses will be assisted by the faculty members of the honorary who are Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, Dr. Venila Shores, Dr. Anna Marie Popper, Dr. Arthur Williams, Dr. Robert Cotterill, and Miss Florence Tryon.

The guest list for the tea will include Miss Marian D. Irish, Mrs. Ruth Taylor, Mrs. Robert Cotterill, Mrs. Arthur Williams, and one hundred and forty-two freshmen.

Phi Mu Sorority Will Have Formal Dance Saturday Night

The members and pledges of the Phi Mu sorority will be hostesses at a formal dance Saturday night from eight to eleven-fifteen o'clock at the sorority house.

Decorations will be mixed garden flowers and palms and the rooms will be lighted with candles.

During the latter part of the evening refreshments will be served the guests.

Guests invited are: Charles Chapman, Nachs Stevens, O. D. Morris, Russell Kersey, Ed Skipper, Bill Patterson, Godfrey Smith, Pete Tully, F. G. Byrd, Owen Gramling, George Palmer, Dane Hollings, Tom Slaughter, Jack Williams, Carl Stringer, Henry Futch, Fud Flippes, Albert Gibson, Ben Hill, Clifton Foxworthy, Charlie Mason, Charles Everinzham, Kay Kimball, Bill Giza, A. K. Bullard, John Cromell, Donald Platt, Owen McAloon, Tom Hyman, Pierce Richardson, Angus Graee, Roy David Daniels, Eddie Kepplebert, and Ned Wayman.

Among the hostesses for the dance will be Virginia Amann, Hazel Goza, Frances Hurlin, Marion Mason, Frances Parks, Mary Perry Pollock, Carol Reeves, Mary Laura Tilley, Mary Frances Whisnant, Sara Wilkerson, Janet Griffiths, Lorraine Allred, Lucy Hane Houser, Carolyn Waterman, Elizabeth Malone, Gladys Ahern, Virginia Richards.

Irma Allen, Edna Barr, Letitia Bond, Georgette Brown, Rhodora Kimball, Abbie Lyle, Edith Lynch, Elizabeth Pierce, Jimmie Malone, Mary Massie, Frances Fair Millteer, Betty Meyer, Jeanette Robertson, Frances Sadler, Hazel Spencer, and Mabry Sumner.

Kappa Delta Honors Jack and Edwards

Miss Agnes Edwards, dean of women at the University of Mississippi, Dr. Theodore Jack, president of Randolph-Macon college, Mrs. Jack, and their daughter, Miss Mary Spencer Jack, were guests of honor at a tea given by members and pledges of the Kappa Delta sorority last Monday afternoon from five-thirty to six-thirty o'clock.

Bowls of spring flowers arranged in the rooms carried out the green and white color scheme. Mrs. Jack and Miss Edwards, alumnae of the sorority, were presented corsages of red roses.

In the receiving line were the honor guests, and Miss Edith West, faculty advisor; Martha Carlton, president of the local chapter; Mrs. Agnes Perkins, chaperon; Miss Helen McKean, alumna of the sorority; Julia Lamar; and Margaret Compton.

During the afternoon refreshments of sandwiches, cakes, mints, nuts and tea were served.

History Class Guest Of Dr. Cotterill

Dr. Robert Cotterill, professor of history, entertained informally last night for the members of his sophomore history class at his home on College avenue.

The informal motif of the party was carried out in the house decorations, entertainments, and in the refreshments served at the end of the evening.

Among the students who were invited to Dr. Cotterill's were Dorothy Benford, Jean Boyd, Nellie Clark, Virginia Crump, Leila Dickie, Rosalind Daum, Virginia Earle, Alice Fletcher, Spurgeon Fulford, Cornelia Garrick, Hazel Goza, Johnny Hardee, Eleanor Marchman, Sadie Mathews, Jane McCown, and Carmen Moran.

The College Girls are talking about the pretty dresses at the HUB STORE, and they are so reasonably priced, too!

SILK DRESSES
$2.95 to $6.95

Linen Suits and Swaggers
$2.95 to $3.95

LIPPMAN'S
HUB STORE
104 East Jefferson Street

Organization Snaps For Annual Slated

The schedule for campus organization pictures to be used in the annual will be as follows for next week, according to Hazel Goza, editor-in-chief:

V. V. Club, Monday 1:15, dining room entrance.

Residence hall directors, Tuesday 10:30.

Glee Club, Tuesday 1:15, Ad building.

Home Economics Club, Thursday 11:30, Ad building.

Classical Club, Thursday 1:15, Library.

Orchestra, Friday 1:15, Ad building.

T. N. T., Friday 1:30, Ad building.

Astronomy Club, Friday 2:00, Ad building.

All organizations are urged to take note of the place where they are scheduled to meet and to be there on time.

Bellamy, Moore, and Pyburn Entertain Freshmen at Tea

The teas which have been given for the freshman students by various members of the faculty will be continued next week.

On Tuesday afternoon, in Reynolds parlors at 5:30 o'clock, Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Bellamy and Dr. and Mrs. Coyle Moore will entertain informally with a tea. The decorations and refreshments on this occasion have been arranged to be in keeping with the informal motif of the occasion. Among the freshmen invited to call at this time are Montine Foster, Mattie Lou Love, Claire Wilson, Bessie Shelfer, Alice Revels, Freida Maxwell, Ernestine Alexander, Louelle Ball, Gwen Blake, Leila Dickey, Bernice Gowan, Essia Hogan, Edwinola Jordan, Gladys Keen, Mary Baird, Lorrine Yarborough, Josephine Trantham, Elizabeth Bary, Maxine Braverman, Virginia Davis, Therese Falk, Spurgeon Fulford, and Claudia Harper.

A similar event has been arranged for Wednesday afternoon at which time Miss Nita Pyburn will be hostess to a number of her students. Among the freshmen who have been invited to call in Jennie Murphree parlors at 5:30 o'clock are Jean Treadwell, Barbara Welles, Virginia Phillips, Dorothy Olmstead, Jean Maze, Edith Huddleston, Ava Grace Vickers, Jewel Reader, Marie Joffre, Mildred Hudman, Tommie Grace Faircloth, Betty Chitty, Jane Dowdell, Frances Baldwin, Ruth Agnes McClain, Florence Trushin, Edith Adkinson, Martha Allene Wright, and Barbara Womack.

Kappa Delta Pi Elects Five Faculty Members

At the request of Dean Nathanial Salley, Kappa Delta Pi, national education honorary, issued bids last Thursday to five faculty members for their outstanding service in the field of education, according to Mrs. Dora Skipper, president.

Those who received invitations are Dr. David Briggs, Dr. Marion Hay, Mr. Oval Stanley Harrison, Dr. Mark DeGraff, and Miss Nita K. Pyburn.

Sorority Entertains Province Officer

Zeta Tau Alpha chapter members and pledges were hostesses at an after dinner coffee on last Friday, in honor of Mrs. Walter S. Moore, province president.

The house was decorated with white carnations and yellow jonquils. The coffee table further carried out the color scheme with a silver bowl of jonquils and four tall yellow tapers.

Mrs. Grace E. Gibson, sorority chaperone poured.

Guests were the honoree, Mrs. Ruth Taylor, Mrs. T. S. Green, Mrs. W. R. Smith, Mrs. J. W. Reese, Mrs. A. E. Thornton, Mrs. R. S. Cotterill, patronesses; Dean Olivia M. Dorman, Miss Henrietta Sivyer, faculty advisor; Mrs. James Wadsworth and Mrs. W. K. Whitfield, local alumnae; Miss Mary Carnell, Inverness; Miss Edith McCollum, Miss Alma Patterson, Mrs. J. A. Connor, and Mrs. A. W. Palin, Jacksonville.

Hostesses were Virginia Thornton, Billie Faxon, Oneida McFatter, Jeanne Matheson, Evelyn Stump, Clara Lankford, Mary Frank Price, Dorothy Borden, Frances Lingle, Elizabeth Simpson, Elizabeth Green, Marjorie Stump, Jean Maze, Esther Hay, Virginia Shultz, Beth Finley, Clarice Stanfill, Virginia Brown, and Lois Long.

Students Art Work to Go To Charleston Exhibit

The art department has accepted the invitation of the Southeastern Art association to send six mounts by students of the Florida State College for Women to the association's exhibit to be held soon in the Francis Marion hotel at Charleston, South Carolina, according to Mrs. B. B. Williams, professor of art.

The mounts which will be sent to the exhibit have not been selected yet, however.

Faculty Tennis Games Directed by Lancaster

Dr. Viola Graham, champion in the 1934 faculty women's tennis tournament, is seeded first in the 1935 tournament which began this week under the direction of Dorothy Lancaster. Miss Elizabeth Lynn is seeded second with Dr. Eleanor Valentine third. Draws for the tournament have set the line-up as follows: Miss Katherine Montgomery versus Miss Gertrude Vermillian, Dr. Graham versus Miss Ooten, Dr. Valentine versus Miss Grace Fox, and Miss Mary Settle versus Miss Lynn.

The tournament for the faculty men will begin within the next two weeks, but the line-ups have not been worked out as yet.

Get That
SIZ-L HOT
Western Steak
for 40c at the Tallahassee
Cafe

THEY FIT · THEY FLATTER
They're fun to wear

The Cobbie Monk . . .

$6.50

• these rogue-ish
RED CROSS COBBIES

The Cobbie Monk—charming specimen of the youthful new Red Cross Cobbies. They fit your gay-est, going-est mood—they go happily and properly with your smartest tweeds—and they fit your "walking" feet as perfectly as your "sitting" feet. Come in—choose your Cobbies from our grand collection. Price still only $6.50.

White Calbuck Vamp and Quarter with brown calf tip and foxing—built-up brown leather heels.

Sizes 3 to 9—AAAA to B.

FIT ALL FOUR OF YOUR FEET

VOGUE SHOE PARLOR
Tallahassee
"RHYTHM IN SHOES"

Theta National Head To Be Honor Guest At Reception

The Kappa Alpha Theta's will be hostesses this afternoon at a reception, from four to six o'clock in honor of Mrs. Donald B. Sinclair of Toronto, Canada, who is grand vice-president of the sorority.

As the guests enter the house they will be met by a receiving line consisting of the honoree, Mrs. Sinclair, Betty Kimble, president of the local chapter, Dr. Jennie Tilt, faculty advisor, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Mrs. Lollie Wimberley, Miss Edna McIntosh, and Antoinette Sullivan.

Bouquets of spring flowers will decorate the front rooms, while a color motif of black and gold will be emphasized. Refreshments of punch, cake, sandwiches, and nuts will be served.

The guest list will include representatives of the other sororities on campus and the following: Dr. Edward Conradi and Miss Louise Conradi, Dr. Elizabeth G. Andrews, Dr. William G. Dodd, Mr. and Mrs. Cary Landis, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Holley, Miss Bessie Gregg, Dean Olivia N. Dorman, Dr. and Mrs. William H. Rogers, Mrs. Charlotte M. Beckham, Mr. Earl Vance, Miss Rowena Longmire, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Williams, Dr. and Mrs. Coyle E. Moore, Miss Elizabeth Thompson, Miss Mary Schornhurst, Miss Ruth Schornhurst.

Miss Sarah Meador, Miss Henrietta Sivyer, Miss Elizabeth Griffing, Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Diffenbaugh, Dr. Robert Cotterill, Miss Sallie Nicholson, Dr. Katherine Abbey, Miss Florence Tryon, Miss Emma Keis, Miss Amy Briggs, Mrs. Beatrice Williams, Miss Ida Rowan, Miss Mamie Andrews, Miss Myrtle Dolbee, Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Bellamy, Miss Esther Smith, Mrs. Dorothy Breen, Dr. Beulah B. Briley, Dr. Margie Burks, Miss Ruth Connor, Dr. Mark E. De Graff, Miss Ezda M. Deviney, Miss Margaret Dow, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Eyman, Miss Marian Irish, Mr. John G. Kellum, Miss Gladys Koch, Miss Lucy Lester.

Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, Miss Edith Lynn, Miss Marjorie Mayer, Miss Mary McKean, Mrs. Lou E. Miller, Miss Katherine Montgomery, Miss Kemper M. Moore, Dean Ella S. Opperman, Miss Mary L. Richey, Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel M. Salley, Dean Margaret Sandels, Dr. Venila L. Shores, Mrs. Virginia Sloan, Miss Esther Smith, Miss Margaret Taylor, Miss Leila Venable, Miss Margaret Brinson, Miss Flossie Curry, Miss Rose Denham, Miss Maude A. Flowers, Mrs. Lollie Wimberley, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Parker, Mrs. B. Robie, Miss Mary Esther Winslow, Mrs. Cecilia Strong, Miss Sara Herndon.

Miss Peggy Smith, Miss Mildred Henry, Miss Rachael Wylie, Mrs. M. Wylie, Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Mendenhall, Dr. and Mrs. Fred O. Conrad, Dr. Jennie Tilt, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Miss Edna Mae McIntosh, Miss Edith West, Mrs. Robert Ploens, Miss Sally Cornell, Mrs Bryan Page, Mrs. P. R. Crovat, Miss Elizabeth Love, Mrs. J. E. Gibson, Mrs. Rosabel Gilliland, Mrs. L. C. Gamage, Mrs. Josephine Levy, Mrs. Pauline Cosart, Mrs. O. P. Lanier, Mrs. Agnes Perkins, Mrs. Mary Bland, Mrs. Kate DeMilly, Miss Rose Schulhafer, Mrs. D. D. Marshall, Miss Rhea Scott, Mrs. Pasco Palmer, and Mrs. Louis Sikes.

Bartlett and Robertson See Revival of Music

(Continued from page three)

painting, in the cultural realm. "Mr. Robertson's reading complex," said Miss Bartlett, "is Jane Austen. He never goes anywhere without a copy of some book of hers." Miss Bartlett, herself, reads a great deal of biography.

The Laundry Does It Best!

Phones: Laundry 808
Dry Cleaning 666

The White Way Laundry & Cleaners
Scientific Sanitary Service
The Best by Test—Let Us Prove It

Marcy Lee

#214-A suave blouse of beautiful plaid broadcloth, and slim skirt of black linen, for dress-up occasions. Colors: black, brown, navy. Sizes 14, 16, 18.

$3.95

GELBERG'S
"Style Plus Economy"

Congratulations to New Members of Phi Kappa Phi Society

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

Congratulations to New Members of Commission and Cabinet

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, March 15, 1935 NUMBER TWENTY-ONE

New Commission, Cabinet Presented

System of Pledging Girls In Convocation Will Supplant Tapping

DeMONTIGNE AND NALL OFFICIATED

Twenty-four for YWCA, Thirty-two for CGA Have Been Chosen

Inaugurating a new system of tapping, the College Government association and the Young Women's Christian association presented the new freshman commission and freshman cabinet girls to the student body in a special convocation yesterday morning. Jennie Rae Nall, president of Y. W. C. A., conducted the pledging ceremony for cabinet while Carolina De Montigne, president of C. G. A., pledged the new commission.

The new ceremonies supplant the older tapping service which formerly took place in the sunken garden in front of Bryan hall. The plan, adopted for the first time last year, of extending invitations to prospective members before the tapping services was used again this year.

Initiation Held

The regular freshman cabinet initiation service was held in the Y. W. C. A. hut yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, at which time the recently elected officers were presented with hand-painted mottos and the regular Y. W. C. A. corsages of sweet peas on a triangular background. Members of the executive cabinet and retiring freshman cabinet were present.

Special tables were arranged in the dining hall for the old and new Y. W. C. A. officers last night. The outgoing freshman cabinet and the new cabinet will hold several joint meetings before the old cabinet retires from service. Lucy Linn will continue to act as sponsor of the group until the Y. W. C. A. vice president for next year is elected, who will automatically fill this position.

The formal installation of freshman commission took place at the Alpha Xi Delta house at 5:30 yesterday afternoon. Special tables were reserved for the old and new commissions in the college dining room last night. The new girls will wear white during the rest of the week and will hold several joint meetings with the old group.

New Commission

The freshmen who were tapped for commission are: Viola Brooks, athryn Pratt, Elizabeth Pierce, ary Nell Pinckard, Elizabeth stlund, Ermine Lawrence, Hilda pradlin, Frances Lewis, Mary Katherine Scott, Rose Sager, Phil isher, Mollie Holden, Eileen Robertson, Marjorie Raulerson, Betty hitty, Janet W. Cook, Marian onn, Mary Glenn Coarsey, Madge lenn, Cora Cheney, Polly Eveth, Elizabeth Korst, Jean Lykes, an O'Shaughnessy, Helen Dan- Frances Baldwin, Dorothea arsh, Louise Gehan, Iris Mach-

(Continued on page five)

Liddell is Head Of Association

erndon, Heinlein, Lynn, Young Also Officers

Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell was elected president of the Tallahassee branch of the American Association of University Women at a meeting of that organization, Friday night, March 8, at the Dutch Kitchen.

Other new officers were elected as follows: vice-president, Mrs. lia Heinlein; second vice-president, Miss Sadie Young; corresponding secretary, Miss Elizabeth Lynn; recording secretary, Miss Sarah Herndon; treasurer, Miss Lillian Cross; board members, Mrs. Kenneth Williams and Mrs. Arthur Seymour.

Other features of the meeting were a report from Dr. Beulah Briley's committee on a recent investigation of the changing legal and economic status of women, and a reading by Miss Elizabeth Thomson of the speech department.

Average List Is Published

Scholarship Students And Campus Leaders Are Highest in Rank

The special scholarship students and campus leaders rate as the groups on the campus having the highest scholastic average for the first semester according to figures recently compiled in the personnel office, which set the college average et 1.424, the non-fraternity average at 1.45, and the sorority average at 1.353.

Students holding senatorial scholarships heve been placed at the head of the list with a group average of 2.18. College Government Association officers are second with a 2.018 average. County Scholarship students, averaging as a group 1.959, obtained third place on the comparative diagrams.

According to classes, the graduate students are far superior to any other body on campus, holding a group average of 2:50. The seniors are next in line with 1.87, the juniors, 1.67; the sophomores, 1.44; and the freshmen, 1.13.

The sororities, including the actives and pledges, are ranked in order according to their averages the one having highest average first: Alpha Omicron Pi, Alpha Xi Delta, Theta Upsilon, Kappa Alpha Theta, Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Zeta Delta Delta Delta, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Alpha Gamma Delta, Kappa Delta, Phi Mu, Zeta Tau Alpha, Chi Omega, Delta Phi Epsilon, Sigma Kappa, Alpha Delta Pi, Pi Beta Phi and Beta Phi Alpha. The average of the sorority actives is 1.60; that of the pledges 1.14.

The dormitary average, slightly above the general college everage, is 1.43. Gilchrist ranks first; Broward, second; then Bryan, Reynolds, and Jennie Murphree in the order named.

The schools of Florida State College are rated in the following order according to decreasing rank of the grades made by their students: school of music; college of arts and sciences, school of education, end school of home economics.

The entire FERA group hold a 1.55 average, while the upper classmen who hold jobs under the FERA have a 1.80 average; and the freshmen and new students working under the FERA, 1.306.

Dining room scholarship girls maintained a 1.72 average.

S. I. A. S. G. Plans Convention Here

Delegates Will Assemble March 28-30

Plans are now under way for the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government which will meet here March 28 to March 30, inclusive, according to Carolina DeMontigne, president of College Government association.

During the convention all of the discussion groups and lectures will be open to the student body, house directors, and faculty. The tentative program has been drawn up, subject to change, and is as follows:

On Thursday, March 28, registration will take place from 8:00 to 12:00 with welcome address 11:00 to 12:00. This will consist of a greeting by Carolina DeMontigne, a welcomo by Dr. Conradi, and an address by Dr. Olivia N. Dorman. Luncheon will be at 12:40. At 2:00 there will be a meeting at Camp Flastacowo, with Dr. K. T. Abbey, professor of history, speaking on "The Student Government"—What it is and what it should be." A discussion will last from 3:00 to 4:00. This will consist of opinions on the problema of denominational schools led by Virginia de Graffenreid of Huntington college, and on dormitory and social problems led by Doris Davis of Sophie Newcomb. There will be a steak fry and swim at Camp Flastacowo on Lake Bradford from 5:00 until 7:30, and a lecture by Dean Shayler Matthews at 8:30.

On Friday, March 29, breakfast will be at 7:30. Discussion groups will take place from 9:00 to 10:00. These will consist of discussions on the technique of presidency

(Continued on page five)

College Arranges For Summer Session

For summer school 1935, Broward hall, Bryan hall, and Reynolds hall will be used as dormitories, and the balance of the space in the residence halls will be open only as needed. Bulletins containing information about reserving rooms for summer school havo just been issued from the office of the president, and have been posted on all campus bulletin boards.

Every student reserving space in the residence halls for the summer school must deposit in the college business office $3 as a guarantee that the space will be occupied. In case the room reserved is occupied by the student her account is credited with the amount of the fee. Students paying the $3 room reservation may have same refunded if they cancel their rooms before May 15. No deposits will be refunded after that time.

Students who ere in college now and rooming in Broward Bryan, or Reynolds halls may retain their present room for the 1935 summer school, if they make room reservations by April 1, 1935.

Retreat Held This Weekend

University Presbyterians And Local Council To Meet Here

Eighteen boys of the Presbyterian student session at the University of Florida will join the twenty members of the local Presbyterian student council here in a combined retreat beginning tonight and lasting through Sunday, according to Frances Fabrick, president of the local council.

Consideration of student problems will be the chief purpose of the retreat with all the talks and discussions to center around the main theme, "Acquainting Youth with Christ."

The opening meeting tonight will be of a social nature, with supper served at the first of the evening. The closing devotionals will be led by Rev. Edward Caldwell on the topic, "Why we are

(Continued on page four)

AAUW Convention To Be In Tampa

Dr. Andrews Will Speak On Employment

The Florida division of the American Association of University Women's annual convention will be held in Tampa, April 5-6. "Fellowships" will be the theme of the program.

A dinner at 7:30 on Friday evening, April 5, will open the conference at which time Dr. Evelyn Newman of Rollins college and state chairman of international relations will speak on "Internationalism and Fellowships." An address of welcome by Miss Hortense Mintz, president of the Tampa branch of A. A. U. W. and introductions of branch presidents and division board members will also appear on the evening program.

An address on the FERA by Dr. Elisabeth Gordon Andrews, director of Florida State College for Women and a panel discussion will be important events of the morning session at 10 o'clock Saturday. There will also be reports of branch chairmen and a business meeting.

Miss Jeannette Kelly, South Atlantic director of A. A. U. W. will be the main speaker on the program et the 1:00 o'clock luncheon which will bring the convention to a close.

Demonstration School Displays Paintings In Art Exhibit This Week

An exhibit sponsored by the Demonstration school, of one hundred and fifty reproductions in full color of famous paintings will be held in Room 307 Administration building, beginning Tuesday and lasting through Saturday. Admission will be ten and fifteen buying pictures for the Florida buying pictures for the Rlorida high school and Demonstration school.

In connection with the exhibit, a program of living pictures will be given, Wednesday, at the Demonstration school by a group of its students. Admission covers both exhibits.

Phi Kappa Phi Gives 27 Bids On Wednesday

Honorary Installed Here In 1924 By Heads Of Departments

FACULTY MEMBERS ARE ALSO ELIGIBLE

Invitations Are Extended To Eyman, Briley And Richardson

Twenty-four students and three faculty members received bids last Wednesday to Phi Kappa Phi, general scholastic honorary.

Phi Kappa Phi was organibed on this campus in 1924 by the heads of the departments and eight alumnae.

Personnel of Honorary

. Ever since its organization the membership in the association has come from members of the senior class who stand in the upper fifth of the class scholastically and have attained the standards of character and leadership equired. Faculty members are also invited for outstanding leadership along scholastic lines.

Faculty members receiving bids for membership are Dr. Beulah Briley, Dr. Ralph Eyman, and Miss Louise Richardson.

Students receiving bids were: Betty Barker, Marion Brantley, Anne Louise Burgess, Marjorie Carter, Carolina De Montigne, Margaret Dodd, Alma Ruth Durrenger, Virginia Earle, Olivia Embrey, Ida Engel, Barbara Garfunkel, Opal Gray, Florence Jannings, Rachel McKinnon, Anita Mitchell, Mary Mooty, Margaret Nickle, Frances Parks, Elinor Payne, La Luce Planck, Carol Reeves, Mildred Stevens, Bertha May Stulpner, and Betty Wheeler.

Art Exhibit Today To Feature Composition

This afternoon an art exhibit featuring student work in composition will be on display in 307 Administration building, the third in a series of exhibits which the art department is sponsoring for the purpose of encouraging interest in art here.

The pieces on display have been done by the class in composition. Picture-building and space arrangements are the main objectives in this course, and the work on display will include two and three dimensional compositions as well as those in black and white.

According to Miss Amy Briggs, instructor in art, the exhibit of freshman design last week attracted much attention.

New 1935 Catalogs Will Be Ready Soon

The 1935 editions of the catalogs for summer school and the next regular session are in the hands of the printer and will be ready for distribution within two or three weeks, according to S. R. Doyle, registrar.

There are few radical changes being made in the catalogs this year. A number of minor readjustments, however, have been made, and alterations have been made in requirements.

"Hay Fever" To Be Next Week

Hazel and DeMontigne In Cast of Senior Play By Noel Coward

The annual senior play, "Hayfever," a farce in three acts by Noel Coward, sponsored by Mortar Board, will be presented at the Augusta Conradi Little theater next Thursday and Friday nights at 8:15. The Thursday night performance will be open to the general public, Friday night being reserved for juniors and seniors and their dates.

The action of the farce centers around the Bliss family, temperamental artists, definitely Bohemian. Every member of tho family, unknown to others, asks a week-end guest to their country home but become so absorbed in their own interests that they forget about their guests. Pandemonium prevails throughout the play as the house guests react to the foibles and vagaries of the erratic family.

In the Bliss family, Lois Hazel takes the part of the modern mother and her husband is Prof. W. R. Cowles. They have a son and a daughter, Prof. O. B. Sellers and Carolina DeMontigne, while Frances Hurlin takes the part of Clara, their maid. The guests are Jackie Coryton, Nancy Bush; Richard Greatham, and C. W. Gregory; Sandy Tyrell, Dr. A. J. Ott; Myra Arundel and Esther Daffin.

Louise Robertson is in charge of tickets, which will be sold to juniors and seniors until next Thursday night and from then on the tickets will be open for sale to everyone. The price of the tickets for both students and outsiders is thirty cents. According to Louise anyone may obtain a free ticket by selling ten.

Committee chairmen are Margaret Kader, stage crew; Georgia Ruth Work, and Jane Hafer, rehearsals; Mary Mooty, lighting; Abbie Lyle, properties; Barbara Garfunkel and Elizabeth Stout, publicity; Helen Wilson, house committee.

Miss Kemper Moore is directing the play, and Miss Emma Keis and her art class are in charge of the staging effects.

Neumann Declares Colleges Should Train Students to Choose Wisely

Familiarity With Worthy Interests is Means Of Progressing

"Colleges should train students to choose more wisely; they should take students as they find them and lead them on to something better," said Dr. Henry Neumann, widely known American educator, in his address "Revolt Against Dullness in American Life" given Wednesday evening in the college auditorium as part of the lecture forum series.

"There is a great deal of dullness, a great deal of mental unemployment found in the classroom as well as outside," Dr. Neumann declared as he denounced this lethargy of the American people which permits them to be satisfied with the sensationalism spread over the majority of the front pages of American newspapers.

"Wo can't blame the newspapers entirely," said Dr. Neumann, though it cannot be denied they have a great responsibility. The excuse offered by editors that "people don't want a newspaper, they want a circus," is undeniably true, and one, in Dr. Neumann's opinion to be intensely deplored.

The harm in the sensational newspaper lies, Dr. Neumann asserted, in that people become accustomed to this type of vulgarity and read only literature of the same kind, mainly because it is easy. The new generation of colleges must avert this tendency by creating in the students an interest in worth while things. By soaking their minds in better things they will gradually acquire judgment as to what is really good, the speaker declared.

The failure of people to be interested in matters vital to national and international welfare is alarming, he continued, pointing out that while the Hauptmann trial spread over columns of front page space for weeks, issues of world wide importance pertaining to legislation on the world court and on child labor, received only scant ettention.

The American people do not need to accept passively such a situation. By withholding subscriptions, they can check it and turn the trend to better thinking, said Dr. Neumann. "The best kind of censorship," he declared, "is the democratic censorship imposed by the people themselves.

"People must realise that the mind grows by what it feeds on, and the more it grows, the easier it will become to be at home in all fields."

Popper is New Advisor

At a meeting this week Phi Alpha Theta, history honorary, elected Dr. Annie Popper as its new faculty advisor to fill the place of Dr. Venila Shores, retiring advisor.

At the same meeting Rosalind Parker was elected president of the local chapter while Rebecca Keith was elected secretary-treasurer. The out-going officers are Ida Engel, president, and Bertha Stulpner, secretary-treasurer.

Crime Expert To Talk Here Wednesday

Dr. Hubert Hurt Also To Discuss Subject Of Justice

INTERESTED IN YOUTH MOVEMENT

Open Forum in Augusta Conradi Theater To Follow Lecture

Dr. Hubert William Hurt, American educator, author, and research specialist, will speak on the regular lecture series in the college auditorium Wednesday evening on the topic "Making Crime Hazardous and Justice Efficient."

Dr. Hurt has made studies for national social work agencies in problems of delinquency and crime and recently prepared data and recommendations for Senator Copeland's senatorial inquiry into crime and its causes.

Youth Leader

Having served as president in two colleges in Illinois and having written some twenty-three books, including the major hand books of the Boy Scout Movement, Dr. Hurt is a well-known figure in education and youth movements in this country.

Dr. Hurt publishes the College Blue Book, which is the standard work of reference of the colleges, universities and professional schools of America. He has spent some time in Berlin investigating German education; much of his time in this country has been devoted to making college surveys and investigations.

In addition to his other interests Dr. Hurt was Director of Research for fourteen of the committees on child welfare for President Hoover's White House conference.

Studies Character

Recently, under a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, he spent three and one-half years, from 1928 to 1931, here and abroad investigating "Character" and ways in which it may be in-

(Continued on page four)

Club from Yale Sings Here Soon

Concert to Be Given In Auditorium March 26

The Yale university glee club, under the direction of Marshall M. Bartholomew, will give a concert on the artist series at the college auditorium Tuesday evening, March 26.

The glee club won first place in the intercollegiate glee club contest held in New York last spring and is now on a concert tour of the Southern States. Prior to this trip the club has given a joint concert with the Harvard university glee club the night before the Yale-Harvard football game in New Haven, its annual concert in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York, and an Old Timers concert in New Haven, besides various other concerts in Bridgeport, Conn., Albany, N. Y., and other cities. The club will present a concert in New Orleans following its appearance in Tallahassee.

Mr. Bartholomew, besides being conductor of the undergraduate music at Yale and of the University Glee club, is director of foreign affiliations of the Intercollegiate Glee Club Council of American and conductor of the Junior League glee club of New York. He is also an author and editor of note.

Out of a group of over four hundred candidates the club was selected and its personnel includes "both Phi Beta Kappa men and athletic demi-gods."

It will include realistic spirituals, rough sea chanties, hilarious old ballads, familiar carols, renditions from Grieg, and well known Yale songs.

ART EDUCATORS MEET

This month educators from nine states join forces when the Southeastern Arts association meets at Charleston, South Carolina to promote the interests of art education long neglected in public schools of the south.

Foremost in the group is Florida with a record membership to back up their association president, Miss Blanche Cavilon, art supervisor of the Tampa public schools.

Candidates For Last Vote Out Tomorrow

LECTURES HERE

"Making Crime Hazardous" is the subject of the address to be given by Dr. Hubert Hurt, as a part of the regular lecture forum series, here next Wednesday night.

List of Major College Government Nominees To Be Published

EDITORIAL SLATE TO BE ANNOUNCED

Students Elect Athletic And YWCA Officers On Thursday

A list of the two nominees receiving the greatest number of votes for the major elective College Government association offices in yetserday's primary together with a list of nominees for the publications offices will be posted in the morning, according to an announcement made last night by Caroline DeMontigne, president of the student body.

Those students whose names appeared on yesterday's ballot include candidates for the following offices, president of College Government association, chairman of judiciary, first and second vice-presidents, secretary, and treasurer of College Government association. The candidates nominated for president were Katherine Blood, Minna Dunn, Margaret Graham, Betty Meyer, and Mary Etta Thistlethwaite; for chairman of judiciary, Katherine Blood, Minna Dunn, Margaret Graham, Betty Meyer, and Mary Etta Thistlethwaite; for first vice-president, Janice Borton, Anna Glen, Martha Makemson, Sue Whitaker, and Mary Jeanne McKay; for second vice-president, Janice Borton, Beth Deane, Anna Glen, Martha Makemson, and Marjorie Noggle; for secretary, Ermine Lawrence, Dorothea Marsh, Ann Mizell, Betty Ostlund, and Marjorie Raulerson; and for treasurer, Katharine Blood, Minna Dunn, Margaret Graham, Janet Griffitts, Betty Meyer, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, and Edith Webb.

Present in Chapel

The two highest candidates for each of the above groups and the publications candidates will be presented to the student body during convocation on Tuesday and then voted on finally during the day. On Wednesday the results of Tuesday's election and the names of the remainder of the College Government association nominees, including the class representatives to judiciary and the house chairman, the Athletic association nominees, and the Y. W. C. A. nominees will be posted on the campus bulletin boards. These candidates will be presented to the student body during a special convocation on Thursday and then voted on finally during the afternoon and evening. Final results of this election will be published and posted Friday.

Installation in May

The new officers of the College Government association will be installed the first Monday in May.

The following regulations govern the holding of all offices: first, the student must be a bona-

(Continued on page five)

Briggs Speaks On Art Trends

Social Committee Offers Illustrated Lecture Thursday Night

"Trends in Modern Art" was the subject of a lecture given by Miss Amy Briggs, assistant professor of art, last night in the Broward Club room under the auspices of the Social Committee.

Miss Briggs traced three trends that have influenced modern art: the knowledge of the past, the diversified fields of art, and the relation of the art to the medium. The speaker gave as an example of the modern trends, the buildings of today which follow the line of steel, not attempting to free the shape from the material.

According to Miss Briggs, there are two predominant phases in modern art: the International trend which shows the three dimensional composition used by Cezanne, and the Americano trend which pictures the American sceno used by such artists as John Stuart Kerry and Thomas Benton.

A belopticon was used during the lecture to show French tapestry, Modern, African, Roman, and Yugoslavian sculpture, French and German architecture, and paintings from different periods, showing the influence that different types of art throughout the ages have had on modern art.

Students Speak On Honors Work

Thistlethwaite and Parks Evaluate Courses Here

In accordance with the annual custom, aspects of Honors work from the viewpoint of the honors student were presented in convocation Tuesday morning by Mary Etta Thistlehwaite, junior, and Frances Parks, senior.

It is Mary Etta's opinion, based on her first year of Honors work, that such a system is excellent for the student desiring to do work not so closely supervised as regular classwork. Besides developing the ability to direct one's self in budgeting time and activities, it develops, she said, the ability to study, to concentrate, and to think.

While it requires a great deal of time, the foregoing of all extra-curricular activities is not necessary; they must, however, be chosen wisely. As the charge that Honors work has a narrowing tendency due to its specialization in one field, she points out that it does not exclude study in other fields.

In concluding, Mary Etta declared that Honors work has given her the realization that she is studying not in a course, but in a field, and has made of her work "a great adventure and great fun."

To Frances Parks, Honors work has meant the enrichment of academic study, enabling the student to delve more deeply into her field. It stresses scholastic achievement rather than grades, she said. A broad intellectual influence is afforded, also, through closer contact with the professors

(Continued on page five)

Junior-Senior Prom Next Week

Sororities Are Planning Informal Affairs

The Junior-Senior prom will be held this year, March 23, in the college dining hall with dancing beginning at 8:30 p. m., according to the general chairman, Carolina De Montigne.

The Friday night preceding the prom, juniors, seniors, and their escorts will have the opportunity to obtain reserved seats at that night's performance of the senior play, "Hay Fever," by Noel Coward. Miss Kemper Moore is directing the play and Miss Emma Keis is in charge of staging effects.

Plans for dancing during the day will be the same as they were last year with informal dancing in the sorority houses on Saturday from 10:30 a. m. until second light flash and the invitation dances scheduled for the hours from 10:30-12:30; 2:00-4:00; 4:30-6:30. The dormitory girls are sponsoring their dance in the gymnasium from 4:30-6:30 in the afternoon. Juniors and seniors

(Continued on page five)

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF

BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON .... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS

Features: Athea Smith: Sports. Edith Patterson: Society. Gertrude Kuhn: Exchanges. Betty Ellen Smith: Literary Melvyne Wahnish. Copy Editor Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedie McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Fain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell

BUSINESS STAFF

ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS .. Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS .... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON ...... Circulation Manager
Ass't Adv. Manager, Mary Patterson, Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sara Beth Davis

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

March Winds Bring Elections At Florida State

Just as surely as June brings graduation and weddings, March brings wind and elections at Florida State College for Women. But there is no connection between the wind and elections.

In truth, elections at Florida State have little of the zephyr quality in them. The atmosphere is hushed, quiescent. Everyone knows for months ahead that elections are coming, but it isn't tactful to talk of them or to mention the names of likely candidates.

Whence this belief that nominations should be "surprise" for candidates? No one knows. It is merely a traditional attitude struck at Florida State.

We should like to strike at least a keynote of another attitude, too late perhaps for this year, but fitting for future elections.

The Flambeau, of the opinion that such finger-to-lip tendencies in a matter that vitally concerns the welfare of Florida State College for Women are the results of a perverted idea of laissez-faire politics, published last week a list of the names of girls qualified to run for the editorships of the three campus publications.

Why shouldn't a list of possible candidates for all campus offices be published before nominations are made from the student body? Such a procedure would afford students an opportunity to secure biographical data on each candidate and freedom to discuss their qualifications. The chances are that after such investigation, when students fill out their nomination ballot at convocation, their inserts will be their own and not their neighbor's.

Concerning a special section of the election program, namely that dealing with publications, we would suggest that a publications board, composed of the editors and business managers of each campus publication and the faculty committee of the same, should be invested with the right to nominate the heads of publications, to be voted upon by the student body later. Such an arrangement seems only fair since few of the students are familiar with the actual duties or qualifications of a publication head.

Concerning the immediate problem here this week, a few paternal words of advice are in order. First, we should like to remind the student body that it is, or should be, voting for principles, not personalities.

Secondly, we should like to remind students of the liberal trends student government, with the cooperation of faculty advisors, has taken this year. A picture of the past brings to mind a picture of the future, a picture of incoming college officers as individuals, progressive in their own policies, but prone to listen to experience and compromise. It would take only one misguided step on the part of any individual to knock the props out from under the structure of cooperation that students and faculty have builded together here this past year.

March is here, accompanied by winds and elections. If the winds carry the tale of a student body that thinks before it votes, then the weather man may predict fair weather for Florida State College for Women in 1935 and 1936.

Student Opinion, a Patriotic Duty

We hear a lot from students today about the failure of the older generation. No generation in human history, we are told, ever inherited a richer lot of mistakes than have come as a legacy to our generation. We are sure of course that we can solve our problems, economic and social—national and international, much more successfully than the older generation has.

But that isn't anything to brag about. We ought to do a better job than our parents did. We have their mistakes and the mistakes of all preceding generations as data to begin with. Historically and socially we are more mature than the preceding generation. We have a larger social experience. As individuals, we are younger and less experienced, but that, again, is to our advantage. It is generally observable that when faced with a great social problem, the youngsters will turn crusaders while the oldsters will become cynics. The younger we are the more the odds that we shall prefer principles to pay checks. Social idealism and the world-view seem somehow to fade in importance when the urgent thing is to buy milk for the babies.

There are further reasons why the voice of the college student should carry meaning into the arena of public problems. Our knowledge is more extensive than that of the average politician or of the more-than-average citizen. We are freer from social and economic superstitions than our parents. Our information is or should be factual, unbiased and up-to-date. Our professors are or should be qualified critics of the status quo, authoritative interpreters of the new concepts of social and economic organization.

But the thing that looms the largest in this connection is the prophetic significance of student opinion. What the undergraduate thinks today, society will think tomorrow, not only because students will become the nation's leaders but because the young are likely to be progressive and ahead of their time. In one way student opinion may be looked on as the barometer of society.

To say that American college students feel the weight of responsibility and are meeting it with courage and level-headedness would be a gross exaggeration. To say that we are slowly awakening from the apathy that our too-sheltered environment has conditioned in us, and are wondering about what we should say and do in the situation, is more accurate.

The greatest stir as far as front-page publicity is concerned, has been made by certain radical student organizations, the instruments of minor political parties. The chief among this group are the National Student League and the Student League for Industrial Democracy, whose main purpose seems to be to proselyte for their own particular economic creed. The action of these students has at times deceived the public into thinking that they are representative of student sentiment in general, not from intention but simply because the majority of students have little or nothing to say on public affairs.

Such a situation presents a problem and a challenge to the students of all our colleges. If we don't want to be misrepresented it is time we took steps to make ourselves truly and fairly represented. It is our unmistakable duty to speak our minds boldly and convincingly on all of the problems which confront the country today. We can do that only through a medium that has no other purpose than to act as the voice of the American undergraduate. We have that medium. We have it in the National Student Federation of America, the only truly representative organization of college students in the country. Through NSFA open forums student liberals, conservatives, radicals and reactionaries may express their views. Then, both on the local campus and in the national congress, the general opinion is secured by vote. This is a fundamentally sound and democratic principle, the only method that will guarantee both freedom of speech and an unclouded official opinion.

We have the machinery. Our greatest need is the realization that as American college students our expressed opinion is needed, is respected, and is a patriotic duty to our country.

Honors Work received its first public testimonials from students here in convocation Tuesday morning. Two students, one a junior, the other a senior, with nothing to gain or lose, stood upon the rostrum and admitted that their experience in the Honors course at Florida State had been a rich one. If a system, in its experimental stage, seemingly did so much for those upon whom it practiced, what will it do for those who come to it when it is beyond the experimental stage by two years?

Magazine Thumbings

By MELVYNE WAHNISH

Thanks go to Ruth Persons for functioning as guest columnist this week.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH CONGRESS

By Henry S. Pritchett.
Atlantic Monthly, March, 1935.

To the question, what's wrong with congress? the real answer, according to Henry S. Pritchett, is the people. In leading up to such a statement the author shows how parliamentary government originated when the idea of a one-man rule became unpopular, how the ideal of parliamentary government spread in the nineteenth century, and that with the twentieth century only a third over, the reins of government in many countries are being transferred from the parliamentary form back to the rule of autocrats. Mr. Pritchett thinks that on the whole our form of government has served remarkably well, but that men and women are beginning to be troubled by the growth of the mass lobby and the role it takes in the enactment of legislation. He contends that the decadence of our legislature may be explained by the breakdown of the two-party system, due to the absence of able politicians; the fast developing timidity of congress when facing group lobbying, the wavering of congress before pressure placed upon them from the veterans' lobby; and the apathy and neglect of political duties on the part of the people.

Since legislative independence cannot permanently survive the fight against organized groups such as the American Legion, according to the author, the American people might well consider some changes in the constitution. Mr. Pritchett is of the opinion that our forefathers, when they formed the constitution, could not foresee that the invasion of the independence of congress would come not from the executive head of the nation, but from organized groups bringing pressure upon congress for the purpose of obtaining their own desires. If the makers of the constitution had foreseen such an end they would probably have set the president's term as six years and the senators' term as twelve years with both ineligible for reelection, according to this article they would also have made the term for members of the house as three years with the alternate congressional election coming at the same time as the presidential election, the article states.

VICTORIANS HAD A WORD FOR IT

By Helen Van Pelt Wilson.
Scribner's, February, 1935.

Brains had their inning a decade ago, writes Helen Van Pelt Wilson, but femininity is the keynote of a woman's education today. With the advent of the "Mae West figure," long skirts, and respect for the biological function, women now unmarried regret the lack of husband and children no matter what rewards they may receive in music, letters, art, or medicine, according to Mrs. Wilson.

"As a mother of today this trend is illuminating," she writes, "a valuable guide to me in the education of my daughter. It plainly indicates that I must not only train her to be a good wife but see to it that she has a chance to become one. After all, she won't thank me for having her taught the Elizabethan dramatists or the circulatory system of an earthworm if I let her grow up unattractive to men."

Moreover, the author thinks that her daughter should know what kind of wife the majority of men are looking for. "Many men," she writes, like them intelligent but not intellectual. A rare few will endure them brainy. Not one will bear superiority to himself and 'high-hatting' is the death knell of allure."

IMMIGRATION AND UNEMPLOYMENT

By Bernhard Ostrolenk.
North American Review, March, 1935.

In spite of the popular opinion that immigration increases unemployment and lowers the standard of living Bernhard Ostrolenk contends that adequate preparation for better times includes abolition of our present unwarranted immigration restriction.

The fallacy underlying the type of reasoning which claims that the unemployment problem could be solved by doing away with the unemployed is that it is based upon the false assumption that the number of jobs is fixed, rather than the fact that they increase with industrial activity, according to this article.

In the 18tt report of the Immigration Commissioner it was concluded that immigration should be considered "primarily an economic problem," for which reason Ostrolenk confines his present discussion to European immigration.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By Hoffman

In Memoriam

Josiah Bethea Game

At its meeting yesterday the faculty senate adopted the following resolutions in memory of Dr. Josiah Bethea Game, whose death occurred Monday, March 3.

Again, during an academic year, death has invaded our ranks and removed one of our number. Amid the duties of a busy day we were arrested by the sad intelligence that Professor Game had answered the final summons that sooner or later must come to each one of us. In the evening hours of Monday, the fourth instant, he passed peacefully away, and on the following Wednesday afternoon after a funeral service at the Trinity Methodist church of Tallahassee, in which he had been an active lay-worker, his remains were laid to rest in Oakland Cemetery. The accomplished scholar, the able teacher, the warm-hearted friend, genuinely loved and respected by his students, after almost a half-century of distinguished service in educational work, has closed his career and passed into eternal rest.

Dr. Game was born at Mullins, South Carolina, August 14, 1869. He married Miss Agnes Irene Hughes of Orange County, North Carolina, 1892. After taking the B.A. degree with highest honors at the University of South Carolina in 1895, he entered the ministry of the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church, and served as Rector of the Cokesbury Conference School, S. C., for three years. From 1899-1902 he was Pastor of the First Methodist Church, Brunswick, Georgia. He then removed to Central College, Fayette, Missouri, but in 1905 deciding to enter the teaching profession, he enrolled in the Graduate School of Yale University, and in 1907 was given a university fellowship. Two years later he received his Ph.D. degree. Having thus thoroughly prepared himself for teaching, he was offered the position of Professor of Latin and Greek at the State Normal School, Cape Girardeau, Missouri, which position he retained until 1911 when he was elected Dean of the State Normal School, Florence, Alabama. In 1914 he accepted the professorship of Classics and General Literature at the Florida State College for Women, Tallahassee, in which institution he press our deep sense of personal spent twenty-one years of valuable service.

During his long career as a teacher of classical literature, he found time to make some valuable contributions to his subject. Among these are: Teaching High School Latin, now in ninth reprint; and General Literature: Myth, Epic, and Drama. Dr. Game was always active in every line that contributed to the development and advancement of public interest. His influence was recognized in Florida by his being appointed Chaplain of the Pat Houston Camp Sons of Veterans; President of the Florida National Farm Loan Association; Chairman of the State Library Board; Director and Secretary of the Florida Methodist Foundation. He was also, in 1922-23, President of the Mid-west and Southern Classical Association; member of Phi Beta Kappa chapter at the University of South Carolina, and a charter member of the recently established chapter of Phi Beta Kappa at the State College for Women. He was also a member of Eta Sigma Phi, national classical honorary; of Phi Kappa Phi, national general scholarship honorary; and of the American Association of University Professors. In 1922 he was honored with the degree of D.Litt. by Erskine College. In fraternal relations other than scholastic, he was a member of the Order of Masonry in which he had advanced to the 32nd degree. In college activities pertaining to general advancement, he always had an active part. Dr. Game's attainments were of such value as to merit the inclusion of his name in the list of distinguished persons in Who's Who in America.

The only enduring monument of any man is the one that man builds for himself, the impression he makes on those who know him. We may safely leave the fame of our departed friend to the thousands of hearts he has touched in his long and useful career.

In view of these considerations, be it

Resolved: That we hold in memory his faithful service as a professor in the State College for Women;

Resolved: That we honor his memory by making this brief record of his virtues and achievement:

Resolved: That we hereby ex-

(Continued on page five)

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKER

ALL winter we have been reading proposed plans and suggestions thrown out by such dignitaries of the administration as Mariner S. Eccles, governor of the Federal Reserve Board, about the advisability and need of one central United States Bank. The reception of the business world of these plans has not been overwhelmingly encouraging to the originators of these plans and hints.

With this in view, it may not be wrong to suppose that the plan for the reducing of the national debt announced Sunday by the Treasury Department contains the first step of a campaign to bring quietly about the centralization of our currency and banking system under the Federal Government. Such is, however, purely conjecture.

Whether or not conjecture, the plan as announced certainly does provide for the complete Federal control of currency issues. National banks since the days of the Civil War have been empowered to issue currency against Federal securities bearing the "circulation privilege." Banks purchase bonds from the government which are held in trust by the Treasury and issue money against these bonds up to ninety-five per cent of their face value. The Treasury pays two per cent interest on these securities.

Now the heart of the proposed debt plan is simply to retire $675,000,000 worth of these bonds (against which the banks issue notes up to ninety-five per cent of their face value) and to reimburse the national banks (which would have to call in all their notes issued on these securities) with Federal Reserve notes which need not be backed by more than forty per cent of their value by gold or gold certificates in like percentage. Which means that if $164,625,630 worth of gold certificates are held by the Federal Reserve Bank, $1,887,500,000 of currency can be issued against them. The inflationary tendency is easily seen. The bonds will be retired with funds obtained from the "paper profits" obtained when the dollar was devalued to fifty-nine cents.

Less technically, the plan takes away from the national banks the right of issuing currency, reduces the national debt by means of paper profits, and relieves the government of paying out each year a neat little sum in interest.

LAST Wednesday Oliver Wendell Holmes, Supreme Court Justice for thirty years, died at the age of ninety-four. It would be irrelevant to try to eulogize in words a man whose life and achievement defy adequate expression. Justice Holmes once said, "The word is only the skin of the thought." We have the thought.

ITALIAN troops are still being mobilized to go to Africa; yet the news that comes from Rome does seem less indicative of war than previous dispatches. Ethiopia and Italy have agreed in a temporary neutral zone between their boundaries along the Italian-Somaliland - Ethiopian frontier, until further discussions can be held between the two almost warring governments.

SATURDAY morning a dictatorship was declared in Havana, because of a "state of strike and seditious revolutionary propaganda." Constitutional law was suspended and conversation of more than two persons on the political situation is considered as a political rally and subject to arrest.

The Cuban upheaval has come about because of President Mendieta's refusal to call a presidential election last December as he had promised the ABC (student revolutionary party) to do when they allowed him to take over the government in December, 1933. Since February students have been on strike against the government. (The six high schools of the island and the University have been closed for some time by presidential order.)

Too many fallacious predictions have been made about similar situations in Cuba. So we await events.

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticism. Letters should be signed, marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the postoffice.

It is with great hope that we, the college students of today, view the attempts that have been made to modernize the curriculum of this and other colleges. It is time that colleges followed the suit of the secondary and elementary branches of learning in looking to their laurels. But hand in hand with curriculum revision should go a rejuvenation and regrowth of other phases.

We need a new spirit in college life today in keeping with our modern tendency to discard superficialities and face bed-rock, to quit "kidding" ourselves. In high school we were far more genuine and sincere, far more vigorous in our attitudes towards teachers and knowledge than the great majority of us are in college. Here we are guilty, disgustingly so, of that form of behaviour designated variously as dirty-nosing, A. K-ing, bootlicking, browning, dingling, and apple-polishing. With the vision of a stack of quality points as a Holy Grail before our eyes, with one hand we purr and pat our professors subtley on the back, while we cunningly snatch for an "A" with the other. Such kowtowing is not mentally healthy.

If we thought one of our high school teachers was boring, and behind-the-times, we did not hesitate to express our sentiments through countless outlets. A teaher was forced to make her classes interesting and challenging in order to hold the attention of her pupils and discipline her class. She had an ever-present barometer to measure her success as a teacher. Naturally some college professors stagnate with nothing but lovely things said to them, with no challenge but the head-noddings of a bunch of "yes-women."

We cannot avoid the fact that by running the gamut of the vicious circle, both professors and students are in a rut.

To do away with the great-big-wonderful-man-you attitude of students, we need to free them from the slavery of grades, and give only "Pass" or "Fail." Our present grading system we are inclined to believe has been permitted to exist as long as it has because it serves as a protection for the stuffed-shirt professor who is too mentally lazy to interest his class with new, up-to-date subject matter. Without grades students would be freer to demand courses that are interesting and stimulating.

Signed: Betty Ellen Smith.

Collegiate Come-Backs

This is No Monkey Business

With elections in the air and in the offing, the time has come to talk of politics. We would advocate the use of soap boxes to announce and denounce candidates, with the Life Buoy brand for the most offensive politickers, in a desperate attempt to clean up elections. The above cartoon is our idea of how the elections committee should make its report.

• • •

Speaking of politics calls for the following which appeared in the Tampa Tribune.

Tampa Tribune. "Said the man to the mule: 'Bill, you are a mule, the son of a jackass, and I am made in the image of God, yet here we work hitched up together, year in and year out, and I often wonder if you work for me or I work for you. Verily, I think it a partnership between a mule and a fool, for surely I work as hard as you plowing or cultivating. We cover the same distance but you do it on four legs and I on two. I therefore do twice as much work per leg as you do. Soon we will be preparing for a corn crop. When the crop is harvested I give one-third to the landlord for being so kind as to let me use this speck of God's universe, one-third goes to you and the balance is mine. You consume all of your portion, with the exception of the cobs, while I divide mine among seven children, six hens, two ducks and a banker. If we both need shoes you get 'em. Bill, you are getting the best of me, and I ask you is it fair for a mule, the son of a jackass, to swindle man, the lord of creation, out of his substance?

"'About the only time I am your better is on election day, for I can vote and you can't, and, after election, I realize that I was fully as great a jackass as your papa. Verily, I wonder if politics were made for men or jackasses or to make jackasses of men. And that isn't all, Bill; when you are dead that is the end of you, but the parson tells me that when I die I gotta go to hell forever."

• • •

And for the yearly crop of "forgotten women," the defeated candidates, we reprint:

RESUME
Razors pain you;
Rivers are damp;
Acids stain you;
And drugs cause cramps;
Guns aren't lawful;
Nooses give;
Gas smells awful;
You might as well live.

• • •

Drinking dictionary clipped from the Brown and White:

At New York U. you're intoxicated.

At Harvard you're inebriated.

At M. I. T. you "go on a binge and suspend your colloids."

At Texas and Arizona you "take a double dose of shellac" until you get a "good stew" and then you're "blottoed."

At Virginia, you "go and get swacked and pickle a corky."

. . . And at Florida State College for Women? You're "shipped."

• • •

The sign on a certain Gilchrist drinking fountain, "There will be a prayer meeting in Room — tonight. Subject: Marriage," reminds us of the classic Maiden's Prayer, "Oh Lord, I ask nothing for myself, but please give mama a nice son-inlaw."

• • •

Some honor students may be worried about their final comprehensive examinations, but at least one isn't. She says that she already knows more about her subject than anybody in the department except her major professor and she thinks she knows almost as much as he does. ("Know thyself," says Emerson.)

• • •

Here's one for the boy friend's next letter:

I wish I were a spider web
As fine as fine could be,
And spun some place around your house
Where you just couldn't see.
So when a handsome boy like you
Would pass me by in glee,
I'd stretch my lacey little self
And tangle you with me.
Stack

• • •

Mary, Mary, quite contrary
How does your garden grow?
With seeds, you dope!—Miami Daily News.

• • •

Exchange Ed's note: Carol Farabee gets the frescoed eurstn.ck this week for assisting in the Comebacks.

Florida High Presents Play

'Red-headed Stepchild' To Be Given Tonight By Senior Class

The senior class of Florida high school will present "Red Headed Stepchild," a three-act play by Charles George, tonight in the Augusta Conradi Little Theater at 8.15 o'clock. The production is under the direction of Mrs. Clarence O. Mayo of the F. S. C. W. speech department.

The play is based on the situation created when a wealthy father who lives in Chicago decides to bring his daughter, who has grown up on her uncle's ranch in Montana, to live with him in the fashionable home of his second wife and their son and daughter.

The part of Elizabeth Russell, the red-headed stepchild, is played by Ruth Eyman; Mrs. Russell, the stepmother, by Jean Noland; Mrs. Oliver Woodruff and Mrs Emory Scott, society friends of Mrs. Russell, Betty Allen and Belle Garrell; Briggs, the butler, by Lamar Hartsfield; Lucia Hartsfield, the step-sister, Mary Catherine Smith; Dudley Russell, the stepbrother, Bill Alfriend; Mr. Richard Russell, the father, Pierce Richardson; George Garrison, Lucia's admirer, Bill Rickards; Flora Farnum, Dudley's inamorata, Mary Emily Parker; and Ethel Ashey and Lucilla Ashey, society debs, Virginia Giddens and Kathleen Martin.

Entertainment between acts will be composed of a jazz medley by Edwin Yates; vocal numbers by the Buccaneer club; and a tap dance by Dorothy Hunter.

Members of the technical staff are Flagg Chittenden, George Apthorp, Dora Koons, Greene Sharpe Johnston, and Joe Demetree. College and high school students will be admitted for fifteen cents; adult admission will be twenty-five cents.

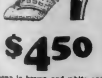
AAUW to Meet Friday Night at Dutch Kitchen

The Tallahassee branch of the American Association of University Women will meet Friday night, March 9, at 6:30 at the Dutch Kitchen, according to Dr. Jennie Tilt, publicity chairman.

The program will consist of a reading by Miss Elizabeth Thomson of the speech department, a short report from the committee made. Dr Beulah Briley on the recent study of the changing legal and economic status of women, a business session, and an election of officers for next year.

THIS MODERN MISS SHOE

comes in best quality white Nu-buck with brown and white striped heel, brown saddle with white trimming and perforated toe and saddle.



$4.50

Shown in brown and white and in all white . . . AAA to B.

GELBERG'S
"Style Plus Economy"

Turner's
YOUR STORE
Showing for Friday and Saturday
150
New! Smart!
DRESSES
Made to Sell for $7.50
$4.95

Student Finds Historic Lore On Field Trip

Marjorie Harris Looks For Birds: Sees Coat of Arms Instead

What started out to be primarily an ornithological study developed into an interest for historical antiquity for one student on the field trip which Miss Eada Mae Deviney's class took last week on the estate of Ex-governor John Martin.

After looking at carrier and fantail pigeons, ring-neck pheasants, and mallard ducks, which have been domesticated on the estate, Marjorie Harris wandered through the Martin living room where she saw what looked like a faded insignia in an old wooden frame. Examining it more closely, she discerned the head of William Tell surrounded by the coat of arms of twenty Swiss cantons painted on the dirty and frayed silk.

From the caretaker she learned that the picture had been given to him by an old Swiss woman whose Miami home he renovated several years ago. The picture along with others were in the woman's attic, and when he asked her what he was to do with them, she told him to take them away if he wanted them—that they had come from "the old country" and had been in her family for generations.

Not thinking much of them, the caretaker told Marjorie, he had given several of them to a man who hed expressed an interest in them.

Wishing to trace the twenty cantons back in history, Marjorie asked the caretaker if she might make a copy of the picture. At present she has an enlarged painting of the coat of arms of the twenty Swiss cantons in her room, planning to seek some enlightening information about them in history books in the near future.

West Describes Places Of Classical Interest In Illustrated Lecture

At the general meeting of the classical club last Thursday, Miss Edith West, of the classical department, spoke informally on the subject, "The Roman Forum in the Time of Horace."

Miss West briefly described the factors which went to make up this "smallest great spot on earth," the Roman forum, illustrating her talk with lantern slides. She discussed the plan of the forum during the age of Cicero and Caesar, tracing its development through the time of Horace.

Miss West designated points of interest as one advances through the forum along the Sacra Via, explaining the historical or mythological background and pointing out the present remains of such sites as the arch of Fabius, the Regia or home of the Pontifex Maximus, the Temple of Vesta, the Atrium of the Vestal Virgins, the Temple of Caesar situated near the Lacus Juturna, the old and new shops, the Basilica Sempronia, the Temple of Saturn, which later became the first treasury of Rome, the Tabularium or Record-house in which the archives of the state were kept, the Temple of Concord, the Basilica Opimia, the Cacer, located on the slope of the Capitoline, which came to be used as a prison, the Basilica Uarcia, the Curia Hastilia or meeting-house of the Senate, the Comitium, the Temple of Janus, and the Lacus Curtius.

Among the additions made in the time of Horace were the Temple to the deified Julius Caesar, dedicated by Augustus in 29 B. C., and the Arch of Augustus, erected in 19 B. C., across from the Temple to Julius Caesar, to commemorate the recovery of the Roman standards which had been lost in 53 B. C., at the Battle of Carrhae.

Speech By Gauss Begins Program

Indicates Responsibility Of Scholar Today

Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton university opened the program marking the installation on the campus of Florida State College for Women of Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, with an address on "The College Student and His Country" in which he stressed the importance of realization of social responsibility by the student and declared that "if democracy is to endure, if the people are not to continue to fall a prey to the demagagues and the political witch doctors, the scholar must lead.

"Scholarship today," he defined, "is not a matter of intellect only. That was the unforgivable blunder of our older time. No one today can discharge the full responsibility of the scholar unless he or she has also something akin to religious fervor, something within him that makes him realize that his own life is part of the common weal."

Contrasting the conception of his generation with the contemporary student's conception of the scholar, Dr. Gauss said "In those days the word academic, which had in Plato's time a high significance, had come to be synonymous with words like futile and harmless. Scholars were living in a garden of Eden and were for the world at large the personification of innocence. Even the business man of that day did not fear the scholar. The life of the scholar was an easy life that impinged little upon the concerns of our busy world, and it was a little remote, unfriended, and sometimes a bit melancholy and slow."

Nineteenth century intellectual endeavor was not, he continued, really so scientific, in spite of Darwin, as it was archaelogical for, he asserted, even Darwin's Origin of Species was primarily concerned with the sequence in time in which biological phenomena had occurred, an essentially historical attitude. "We of the nineteenth century," he declared, "were resurrectors of dead civilizations. History became full of an exceedingly interesting panorama of customs, costumes, and institutions. We pushed back history into the prehistoric.

"Scholars were often told by their teacher that they must draw no personal conclusions, pass no judgments; that they must accept the facts with a Buddhistic submissiveness. His, not to reason why: it was his sole responsibility to integrally reconstitute the past, and the scholars of the nineteenth century, with infinite patience, reshaped for us the interesting panorama, rich in local color, of all past times."

There was then no clarion call to action, said Dr. Gauss. "Ours, we believed, was a sure, set world. Other nations might stumble in the dark but to Americans, life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness had been guaranteed forever." So much preoccupation with what was dead had itself had a deadening effect; it weakened and broke down the scholar's sense of responsibility to the social order of his own time. The scholar, too, accepted the doctrine of laissez-faire in morals.

"The scholar," Dr. Gauss quoted a former teacher, "must be intellectually honest," a statement which will always be true, he said. But in his university days the advice concerning the scholar also included that there was only one thing that the great scholar should aim to do; he should add to the sum of truth. "That this may be a valuable service, none will deny" said Dr. Gauss, "but something has happened in the brief, but crowded years between. The scholar is no longer regarded as harmless. Brains, ideas, are dangerous. We live in other times and with other manners. The very things which the scholar held most precious, his freedom of speech, his freedom of inquiry are threatened even in this land of the free. Whether we like the New Deal or not, so far as the scholar is concerned, he has been projected into a new dispensation."

Much of the responsibility for the loss of scholarly modesty characterising the earlier scholar, and the beginning of all our woe, said Dr. Gauss, lies in large part on the scientists who told us that if we only left the field to them, allowed them to push out the frontiers of knowledge, they would quickly bring us into the promised land. But, he said, we must not blame it all upon the chemists, physicists, and technologists, for in this heydey of scientific discoveries, things became strangely and unaccountably unstable and in the dismal years of the war and the depression, old civilizations and kingdoms collapsed.

The discoveries of the historians and the political scientists which the nineteenth century had regarded as merely interesting additions to the sum of truth became, he said, suddenly alive. So it was, for instance, with the theories of Karl Marx. Ideas in politics, economics, sociology, ceased to be decorative play things; they became menacing forces. Governing forces, that for centuries had been in the saddle, might be suddenly dispossessed and deprived of all that they and their fathers had earned, not by great armies, he declared, but only through the force of an idea.

It became evident that at certain times the work of the scholar might act as a catalytic agent to political and social orders, which previously had only undergone the very slow and imperceptible processes of change. This is what the ruling powers today in Germany, Italy and Russia have already learned, Dr. Gauss pointed out, adding that Hitler, Mussolini, and Stalin are paying scholars a far higher compliment than the innocent nineteenth century professors ever dreamed of paying themselves.

In these lands, said Dr. Gauss, inquiry and scholarship are no longer free. The scholar, the new rulers of Europe tell us, is dangerous, is a threat to social stability, and must be forced to bow to the regime in power. Truth and knowledge are not, as had been innocently believed, a sum, added to by the slow accretion of new truths. Knowledge is power, truth a dynamic force.

"Yet," said Dr. Gauss, "it is not new forces, new discoveries that we need, so much as it is a larger life of the spirit. There is in this world no such thing as an isolated truth, an isolable bit of knowledge, and there is no truth worth dwelling upon which in some way does not minister to the richer life, toward man's sense of mastery of fate and circumstances.

"Civilizations die when their ideals wear out, when the spirits of men weaken." In spite of our immense scientific progress and our technological achievement, as we look over the past, from one point of view, it seems that on the spiritual side we have been going downhill. "The country's youth or age, its vigor or its decrepitude depend only upon the spirit of those who inhabit it. What we need in America is not only a New Deal or a new era, but a new spirit."

To fill all the world's gaping dinner pails is no longer a sufficiently stimulating adventure for the spirit of America. Subsistence is no longer a problem for we have learned how to produce. The problem, according to Dr. Gauss, is the life of the spirit. The youth of the nation, he declared, can revivify the spirit of the country.

Dr. Gauss closed his address with congratulations to Florida State College for Women upon its entrance into Phi Beta Kappa, "whose only purpose," he said, "has ever been to promote scholarship and truth." His closing words expressed the theme of his speech, "The scholar of today must desire the good life and strive to bring it more and more within the reach of his own country and his own time."

Unique Special Fools Uncle Sam

One would like to ask the P. O., "Is it really fun to be fooled?" Probably not, when a bunch of Alpha Xi's, entranced by Uncle Sam's error, are planning to break into world news by sending the story to Ripley's Believe It Or Not department.

B-r-r! Eh? Who said anything about cold wind? That's the door bell at the Alpha Xi Delta house that was buzzing away at 7:30 Tuesday morning and waking all the inmates.

The special delivery boy, the one who was ringing the bell, came bearing a very special delivery letter to Jessie Mead. That is, it did look extra-special. It had stamps plastered all over it; one-half cent stamps; six of them. Now, it is a well-known fact that six halves make three wholes, but the post office was fooled by the impressive amount of postage spread around on the letter and sent it out pronto special delivery.

Graduate is Appointed To Education Position

Miss Gertrude A. Heering, who obtained her master's degree in psychology from Florida State College for Women, has been appointed educational director for the region in the central part of Florida. Miss Heering stopped over in Tallahassee recently, on her way to Tulane university where she is now studying.

Terror Reigns As Storm Hits

What appeared to be a mild hurricane hit the campus Tuesday morning during convocation hour and inspired screams and cries that put the late Lon Chaney's horrors to shame.

The crash of paneling to the stage-floor together with the loss of the lights and a car moving off down the street, apparently without driver, was too much for the college girls' composure and bedlam broke loose. Later investigation proved however that the only real damage done was the loss of many small branches from the pines, the loss of tar paper from the roof of the demonstration school, and the downfall of a hugo tree in front of the nurse's cottage. The car, it was discovered, was propelled adequately by its owner and the panelling was undamaged.

Tells College Trends

Dean Olivia N. Dorman spoke Tuesday before the Jacksonville Women's club on the changing trends of college life here and in other institutions. Her talk was entitled, "Your State College and its New Deal."

Helen Wilson, who holds the scholarship given by the club, spoke of her outstanding college experiences, as did Christina Griffin, who will receive the scholarship next year.

Thrift Articles to Be At Melbourne Exhibit When State Club Meets

At the annual state meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs to be held March 19-22 at Melbourne, Florida, the Home Demonstration department will put on an exhibit of thrift articles representing the work of the Home Industries women and the 4-H Club girls throughout the state.

This display, according to Mrs. Anna Mae Sikes, extension nutritionist and general director of the exhibit, will include home made furniture, canned goods, and woven work. The furniture will demonstrate the use of barrels for wood and caning work using corn shucks and native cat-tails. Gourds utilized as table vases, bowls, and wall vases will be shown. Hooked and woven rugs utilizing old cast-off materials dyed attractively will demonstrate a use for odd scraps and rags. Hearth brooms made of ordinary broom corn, articles of leather and pewter, block printed wall hangings, hand made looms, cocoa-nut fiber articles, curtains, clothing, and feed bags made of old flour sacks will illustrate the use of the natural materials all about the home, particularly areas, which may be utilized easily and pleasurably in the making of these many useful or ornamental articles.

This exhibit will also include a display of canned products, which will explain and show the results of various types of canning, such as the preserving or crystalisation of fruits, meats, and vegetables.

An opaque glass, through which a person can look to the outside, but not inside, has been put on the market.

New Way Laundry and Dry Cleaners
Tallahassee's Oldest and Largest
"Wear Clean Clothes"
Representative in Lower Bryan Hall
Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 183

....remember how I brought you two together

I'm your best friend
I am your Lucky Strike

I give you the mildest, best-tasting smoke—because I am made of center leaves only. The top leaves are unripe, bitter, biting. The bottom leaves are coarse, sandy, harsh. The center leaves are the choice leaves. They are mildest, mellowest, yet richest in fine tobacco flavor. And I offer you the fragrant, expensive center leaves exclusively. I do not irritate your throat. That's why I dare to say, "I'm your best friend."

LUCKIES USE ONLY THE CENTER LEAVES . . CENTER LEAVES GIVE YOU THE MILDEST SMOKE

Copyright 1935, The American Tobacco Company.

They Taste Better

Dean Speaks At Informal Forum

Need for Understanding Viewpoints of Other Nations is Great

On the morning before returning to Barnard College, Dean Gildersleeve spoke before an informal gathering in Reynolds, discussing the great need today of international understanding, the need for the truly liberal, cultural education, and told of her work with the International Federation of American Women.

The federation which now includes forty member organizations of university women from all parts of the world evolved from the realization of this need for understanding and the desire to help attain it. Conferences are held in various nations, the one last year in Budapest where, said Dean Gildersleeve, it was most interesting to try to get the view points of the representatives of different countries.

She told of the German representative, head of the federation of German university women, a gentle, kind, noble type of woman and a Nazi, who to a question put to her by a British representative concerning the bloody purge of June thirtieth, made the following reply: " We have been having a revolution in Germany. In revolutions terrible things happen. They are regrettable."

Germany, said Dean Gildersleeve, is very grateful to Hitler for that purge. They feel that his action was right in that by killing a few, traitors they believe, he saved the nation from another revolution. The fact that the execution had no trial doesn't seem to bother them in the least, Dean Gildersleeve explained, and the way the English and Americans have taken the whole matter has come as a complete surprise to the German people. They can't see our point of view.

The English, our own cousins, we understand no better, Dean Gildersleeve asserted as she spoke of their mysticism and their emotions of which they rarely speak. The king to them is a symbolization of the nation and when he was ill, Dean Gilderaleeve told of the great gulf of understanding between herself and two English friends visiting her at the time whom his illness touched so deeply. While Dean Gildersleeve thought it a deplorable situation, to her friends it was as though the spirit of the country lay dying.

In Belgium, however, she continued, the regard for the king is more like our own concept ol the president. King Albert's death was sincerely mourned but there was none of the religious fervor as in the English conception.

"We must get the points of view of other nations, " Dean Gildersleeve declared. "It is important that we understand how they think and feel. We imagine that peoples of other countries have the same emotions, desires and needs that we have, and only behave eccentrically. That is not the case," she explained. "They are different. Their circumstances their needs, their very emotions are different."

When we can't even understand our English cousins, how much more difficult it is, she pointed out, to understand the Japanese whom we should be trying to understand.

Peace, she explained, is so difficult a matter. Even discussions concerning it quickly become belligerent. The future will include in her opinion, a League of Nations with an International Police Force to carry out its mandates. The price for such an organ, however, would necessarily be some part of each nation's sovereignty, and that makes matters difficult.

The two great jobs in the colleges in relation to these and all affairs, according to Dean Gildersleeve, are first to get information about the problems, and second, to train students to discuss them with good temper and open minds.

Wilburn is on Program For Southeastern Arts Meeting in Charleston

Miss Emily P. Wilburn, of the Industrial arts department, has been invited to appear on the program of the Southeastern Arts association meeting to be held in Charleston, S. C., March 20 to 22.

In conjunction with this meeting there will be an exhibit which the fine arts department will send six mounts by students of Florida State College. There will also be an exhibit from the industrial arts department showing the development of the teaching of certain units of work.

Miss Bernice Deetz, instructor in industrial arts here, is in charge of all exhibits from the state of Florida.

Duke University
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE
DURHAM, N. C.

Four terms of eleven weeks are given each year These may be taken consecutively (graduation in three years) or three terms may be taken each year (graduation in four years) The entrance requirements are intelligence character and at least two years of college work, including the subjects specified for Grade A Medical Schools Catalogues and application forms may be obtained from the Dean

Have Your Party
in a Private Room
at
THE DUTCH
KITCHEN

SPECIAL PRICES
on all merchandise for this week. Be sure to see our Tea Dresses, Evening Gowns and Sports Frocks.

MAE'S SHOP
South Monroe Street

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

SUPERIOR
Dry Cleaners and Dyers
"SUPERIOR SERVICE SELLS CLEANING"
SILKS AND FANCIES OUR SPECIALTY
All Garments Insured Against
Fire and Theft
308½ S. Monroe St. - Telephone 216

THE SWEET SHOP
Opposite Gilchrist
WEEK-END SPECIAL:
Home Made Cakes and Pies
PHONE 1091 WE DELIVER

College Women Stand In Line For Everything

Some Say It Is An Art And Learn To Do It Gracefully

It is common knowledge that college life begins with matriculation and ends with graduation, but the college student of today does not find this the case. Before students may matriculate they must be oriented into the art of standing in line.

Even to get their diplomas they have to go through the procedure and even after they have their much coveted "sheep skins" in the firm grasp of their hands and their mortar board tassels have been flipped to the side that tells the world they have successfully completed their four years of higher education, they still have to stand in line in order to leave the scene of their graduation exercises.

As "Femina Perfecta" is the aim of this college so should "Perfecta Standing in Line" become an ideal of this institution, for students should learn the art of waiting as well as they should strive to become perfect women. The art of standing in line gracefully is not generally mastered by freshmen during their first week of college as can be evidenced by the foot-sore and back-weary girls who bemoan the fact that they spend half their time standing in line.

Many girls have found very successful methods in adapting their bodies to this tedious part of college life. Among the more common methods is the one in which the left foot is thrown out to the side with the knee unbent and very little weight on the ball of the foot. The right leg remains stiff, the right hip thrown out, the right shoulder thirty degrees higher than the left shoulder and the head inclined toward the right. The position of the hands and mouth are optional. Many other methods have been adopted but none so successful as the above example, if ona may judge by the number of girls who acquire these positions.

Every day and in every way we are having to stand in line more and more. We patiently wait to enter college, we anxiously stand in line for our mail, we assume our favorite angles to wait to eat, dazedly wait for our turn to brush our teeth early in the morning, we moan in line to get a bed in the infirmary, and form lines for other activities that are too numerous to mention. As our motto seems prone to become "better and longer standing in line periods."

Retreat Held This Week-end

(Continued from page one)

here and what we hope to accomplish."

The meeting tomorrow morning will begin with a song service and three five-minute talks by students on "What Does It Mean to Be a Christian Student?" Dr. U. S. Gordon, pastor of the Gainesville Presbyterian church who will accompany the boys, will conduct a discussion on "Personal Work and the Part It Plays in Our Student Work." Following this Dean Barry of the university will lead an open forum on general world problems.

In the afternoon the various phases of the two Presbyterian organizations for student work and problems common to both groups will be considered with Betty Ellen Smith in charge of discussion. An open forum on problems of personal religion will be held under the guidance of the Rev. L. D. Moore, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Thomasville, Georgia, concluding the afternoon's program.

Tomorrow night the visiting students will be guests of local council at a "Hobo Banquet." Rev. Moore will be the speaker of the evening.

Sunday church service will be conducted by Rev. Gordon of the University church, and Sunday school will be held in the annex.

At 6:30 Sunday evening open house and supper at the Presbyterian annex will be held for the members of the league to meet the university students. A communication consecration service in the church will bring to a close the retreat. All Sunday services will be open to students and friends.

Committees are: arrangements, Betty Hampton, Virginia Taylor, and Jean Crag; entertainment, Marjorie Fain, Georgia Ruth Work, and Janics Borton; food, Betty Ellen Smith, Rebecca Keith, Katharine Kyie, and Dorothy Godwin, music, Margaret Nickel and Nell Mayes..

Decorations are in charge of Louise Burgess, Lillie McGuire, and Mary Wylie Klueppelberg; publicity, Betty Ellen Smith; program, Virginia Cromartie, Barbara and Jane Hubbard; and registration, Jean Crago.

Those from Gainesville who will attend are: John Sweeney, Sam Bailey, Donald and Boh Stobbs, Cameron Thompson, Harold Gillis, Burt Bassett, Donald Wright, Ralph Harmon, Curry Merchant, Moseley Henry, Roge rMcKay, Dean Barry, Charles Turney, Bill Blount, Jack Nelson, K. D. Colson, Burt Lee, Mrs. Fred Borland and Dr. U. S. Gordon.

Week-End Specials
Fresh Strawberry Sundae .. 10c
Ginger Ale and Ice Cream .. 5c
Chocolate Pie 5c
Pecan Pie with Whipped Cream 10c
Three Torches
Phone 837 • We Deliver

Mrs. Smith to Study Native Wild Fern Life With Botany Students

Mrs. J. M. P. Smith, authority on native ferns in the United States, was a visitor at the college this past week-end. While here she accompanied Dr. Herman Kurz and his advanced botany students on field trips to wild-plant habitats around Tallahassee for observation.

Mrs. Smith is at present making a study of native ferns of Florida as part of her plan to study every species in the United States in its native habitat. She was agreeably surprised, according to Dr. Kurz, to find six species in the Tallahassee and Apalachicola River Bluffs vicinity which were entirely new to her, in addition to the six or eight other species which students on the trip were able to point out. She is now in south Florida carrying on her studies.

Others in the field trip besides Mrs Smith, Dr. Kurz and his students, included the Rev. Edward Caldwell, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and Edwin Komarek, mammologist and investigator of wild life for the Sherwood plantation.

Club Argues

At the meeting of the International club held last Tuesday night reports were made on munitions and munition makers in England and continental Europe before, during and after the World war.

Following the reports which featured the influence of these munitions there was a general discussion led hy Edith Patterson. The program for this meeting was in charge of Lorraine Hudson.

Crime Expert to Talk Here Wednesday

(Continued from page one)

fluenced. A new and significant volume written by him on this subject was published a short time ago.

Dr. Hurt graduated with honors from Iowa Wesleyan College, did graduate work at the Universities of Chicago, Berlin, and Columbia, and received from the latter institution the degree of Doctor of Philosophy in education and psychology.

Having had his legal residence in Florida for a decade, Dr. Hurt has now moved to this state, and proposes to spend his time in writing, research, and public work.

Following the lecture in the auditorium Wednesday evening, an open forum will be held in the Augusta Conradi theater.

On the following Wednesday evening, March 38, Dean Shailer Mathews will speak in the auditorium on the subject, "The Rising Generation and its Moral Tasks."

We have just the shoes you want to go with your prom dresses . . . .
EVENING SANDALS AND SPORTS SHOES

AAA to C.
THE FRENCH
SHOP

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

NEITHER HELL NOR A CRADLE

"Get enthusiasm from Youth; get wisdom from age."

That advice is perfect, but our youth must give a little something to society besides enthusiasm.

As business has grown, middlemen have been required to intermediate between manufacturer and consumer. Middlemen have required assistants and these assistants have also needed assistants. As a result, a great class of non-creators—assistants—has developed.

There are few individuals, but there are many little cogs that have no knowledge of the great machine of which they have been a part, were a part until the machine went awry a few years ago. Their ideas were dwarfed to a sphere no larger than the spots made by their pushing pens or than the drops of sweat on their brows.

Imagination has become a rare thing. In the last five years those people with no ideas—no creative minds—have given up hope because no place is open for them to step into and flop down in comfortably.

In St. Paul, Minn., recently, 350 delegates from eleven states and Canada met in a "youth congress." They drew up a declaration whose preamble reads:

"This congress, representative of young farmers, young students and working class youths of the midwest, meets at a time when we, the younger generation, face the fact that there is no place for us in present society."

This congress may not represent any startling majority of the youth of the country However, it does show the trend of opinion from various walks of life in eleven states—midwest states which may be called representatives of the nation.

This can mean nothing else than that a formidable percentage of the coming generation are open to most dangerous suggestions from forces of disorganization and disorder.

Right, there is no soft place for us in present society. We must cut out our own niches. We can't walk in and sit down in chairs that coform entirely to our bodies.

Mental lethargy is so simply acquired. Youth must have and give an idea now and then; must give a skill, if it hasn't a talent. It must remember that no man can perish if he has something of value that is in demand.

Something for nothing equals nothing in the long run.—The Creightonian.

TIME

What do college students do with their time? In answer to this question Prof. Russell Cooper, of Cornell College, gives the following answers:

Senior men spend 55 hours of each week sleeping.

Women of Cornell College devote four hours per week more than the men to personal appearance.

Senior men are the most studious of the students, and they spend nine and one-half hours per week at the dining table.

Freshmen write home on the average of two and one-half hours a week.

Junior women consume nine hours and 30 minutes each week for "entertainment." — Crimson-White.

Only Vocal Selections Given at Music Recital

The regular Wednesday afternoon music recital which is given by members of the music department included only vocal selections this week.

On the program was Dreamin' Time, Strickland, by Rosalie McDonald; A Little Mit o' Honey, Bond, and Wake Up!, Phillips, by Ola Deare Vickers, Lingering, Lonely Rose, Sibella, by Nell Ward Mayes; O Rest in the Lord (Elijah), Mendelssohn, by Evalyn Patterson; Seive Amiche, Ombrose Piante, Caldara, and Cansonetta, Jeanne Boyd, by Edna Moon; Thine Eyes so blue and tender, Lassen, and Daffodils, Scott, by Lois Bowen; The Fields O'Bally Clare, Turner-Malley, and Young April, Gulesian, by Charlotte Veith; Voi Dolci Aurette al Cor, Handel, and When I was Seventeen, Kramer, by Marion Carson; Deh plu a me non v'as condete, Bononcini, and The Nightingales of Lincoln's Inn, Gilver, by Clairnell O'Steen; Robin, Robing Sing Me a Song, Spross, and Villanella, Sibella, by Josephine Binion; O Lovely Night, Ronald, and Life, Curran, by Margaret Melzer.

Accompanists for the recital were Margaret Nickle, Virginia Long, and Martha Wilkerson.

Beadel Talks to Class In Visual Education On Life in French Chateau

Mrs. Genevieve Beadel, who lived the greater part of her school life in France, recently talked to the class in visual education on the French chateaux.

Mrs. Beadel told the students of her own personal experiences of visiting in the chateaux in France The visitor described in particular the thirteenth century chateau in which her sister is now living and where she has often stayed during her visits abroad. Mrs. Beadel showed the class a group of picture cards during her talk to illustrate certain points.

Among the visitors in the class were Mrs. J. C. Miller and Mrs. Clarence Mayo, who asked Mrs. Beadel questions in French about France in order to hear her accent, which is precisely that of a native.

Mr. T. J Diamond, secretary of the state Board of Control, gave two dozen post cards to the class for their clipping library which Miss Schwalmeyer started a number of years ago. The cards illustrate the geography and history of Key West and will be used by student teachers in classes studying Florida.

Kalistenik
The ONLY SHOES MADE WITH NO SEAMS INSIDE or OUTSIDE the QUARTERS
NO BACK SEAMS...INSIDE or OUT to RIP or TEAR...to WEAR out stockings...to RUB tender heels
Look for this Trade Mark on women's and children's shoes
Kalistenik
No Seams INSIDE
No Seams OUTSIDE

ALL STYLES $6.50
AAAA to C—3 to 10.
VOGUE SHOE PARLOR
Tallahassee
"RHYTHM IN SHOES"

Demonstration Agents Are Again Recognized

Home Demonstration work in Florida has again received outstanding recognition. In the recent Home Beautification Contest sponsored by the Progressive Farmer and Southern Ruralist Magazines in cooperation with home demonstration agents in the Georgia-Florida-Alabama section of the United States, the first and third prizes in the contest were awarded to Mrs. E. C McVoy of Alachua county and Mrs. D. B. Grubb of Gadsden county respectively.

These women have been working for several years under the direction of county home demonstration agents, Mrs. Grace Warren in Alachua county, and Miss Elsie Laffitte in Gadsden county They have made definite plans and followed them through in a splendid way for the improvement of their homes for a long time Their homes are real demonstrations of long-time planning and carrying out of these plans, and serve as excellent object lessons to those who have had the opportunity to watch these plans develop from the beginning.

This is the second time that Alachua county has scored high in a similar contest conducted in the southern states.

The aim of the Home Beautification Contest is to stimulate greater interest in and love for the Farm Home by making it more beautiful.

Chi Delta Phi Honors

Miss Maude Schwalmeyer, primary teacher at the demonstration school, was presented with a pin by Chi Delta Phi, national literary honorary association, yesterday afternoon in recognition of the publication of her volume on kindergarten work and of her service as teacher for fifty years She was the first teacher in the demonstration school.

Mussolini's Policy Of Colonial Expansion To Be Discussed at Forum

"Mussolini's Policy of Colon Expansion" will be the topic discussion at the open forum be held at 7:30 Monday night Ruge Hall by the Internation Relations committee of the A. A. U. W.

This committee in cooperat with the Intersectional Rela committee of the Tallahas Business and Professional Women's club is studying the problem around the immediate Ita events including Italy's trou with Abyssinia, reasons why a the forces and factors involved the present Italian situation.

Appearing on the program w be Mrs. Harold Richards speak on "The Rise of the Policy of Colonial Expansion;" Miss Mar Irish on "What Italy Wa from the World War and W She Received;" Dr. Annie Mar Popper on "Colonial Expans Since the War;" and Dr. Ela Nims on "The Issues betwe Italy and Abyssinia." Dr. Kat ryn T. Abbey will conduct meeting to which all interest are invited to attend.

R. J. Shepherd Lectures For Psychology Cla

Professor R. J. Shepherd, w received training in psychol before the beginning of the entific movement of psycho in the '80's, recently lectured fore Dr. Paul Finner's class abnormal psychology. During talk he outlined topics taugh the early course of psychology showed how several of these ics had developed throughout later years.

While appreciative of what been discovered in later yea Professor Shepherd, who is ret from active work in Eas schools, retains his enthusiasm what he learned and was ta a half century ago in the fie psychology.

America's Greatest Values
NEW!
Cotton
Dresses
$1.95 - $5.95
Sizes 12 to 44
These new cotton frocks are truly the Talk of the Town. Every new fabric is represented including fashions from "Georgianna," Bonnie Bright," "Virginia Gay," "Darny Frocks" and many others. All are guaranteed fast colors in dashing styles that look like money.
Imported
LINEN SUITS
All Styles, Including Swaggers
Sizes: 12 to 20.
$2.95 - $3.95

New Shipment of Silky
Seersuckers $3.95
A Knockout New Fabric.
Guaranteed to Wash.
CHIFFON HOSIERY
Irregulars of a Nationally Advertised Line, Selling at $1.00. 47c
If you have purchased any of our irregular stockings you know how good they really are. Irregularity applies to the lengths only. All new spring shades. Sizes 8½ to 10½.
"We are Never Knowingly Undersold"
LINDEN'S FASHION SHOPPE
"Smart Styles for Smart Women"

Forum Held on World Court

Nature of Tribunal And America's Attitude Are Discussed

"Due to ignorance and emotionalism the United States is still one of the five states, Costa Rica, Egypt, Arabia, and Iceland being the other four, to remain aloof from the world court of international justice, according to Miss Marian Irish, professor of political science who spoke recently at an open forum meeting in the Augusta Conradi Theater.

"Through the influence of Father Coughlin, Will Rogers, and the Hearst newspapers the public was drastically mislead to understand that the world court would necessitate membership in the League of Nations also, and to confuse ideas of dictatorship and fascism with the move and as a result approximately forty thousand telegrams deluged the senate with the demand "Save America from War." she continued.

Miss Irish went on to describe the nature of the world court stating it was made up of fifteen judges elected irrespective of nationality, and chosen for their integrity, morality and competence This court deals with legal matters rather than political and not one of its thirty four judgements has ever been questioned. The court does not have the power to enforce its decisions but can rely only on the integrity of the nations interested. Decisions of this court are not handed down without the permission of both parties interested.

Miss Irish then discussed the relation of the League of Nations to the court, stating that the court owes its existence to the League of Nations and membership in the latter body carries with it membership in the court but the court itself is open to every country regardless of its membership in the League. The court has the power to refuse to comply with a request of the League of Nations if such a course seems advisable to it.

"The world court is not a dead issue in the United States," she stated. "A few hours after the senate rejected the statute the Peace Foundation composed of some of the most illustrious citizens of the country, resolved on an education of the American people."

Miss Irish's lecture was followed by an open forum meeting.

The speaker was introduced by Ida Engle, president of the Phi Alpha Theta, history honorary, which sponsored the meeting.

Andrews Will Give Report at Seminar

The regular monthly meeting of the psychology seminar will be held 8:00 p. m. Tuesday, March 19th at the Dutch Kitchen under the direction of Mrs. Christine Scarborough, graduate assistant in the Psychology department.

At this meeting, Dr. Elizabeth Andrews will report on the meeting of the Personnel Directors which was held in Atlanta recently. Faculty members of the department and students in the advanced classes of psychology are invited to attend this meeting.

Fashion Show Displays Dresses to Accentuate Personality of Girls

The fashion show, sponsored by the Home Economics club and made possible by the cooperation of local merchants, was held Tuesday night in the Augusta Conradi theater with Virginia Holt, vice-president of the club, presenting the models.

As the models crossed the stage, the chairman of the show laid stress on the fact that the selection of the costumes was made to suit the personality of the wearer. She also designated the different physical, mental, and color types and illustrated how they might modify each other and how carefully clothes must be chosen in order to accentuate, instead of obscure, desirable traits.

Members of the home economics classes who participated in the showing were: Clarice Sanchez, Ethel Donaldson, Betty Manning, Ruth Durrenberger, Helen Miller, Adielyn Fox, Inez Seabrook, Geneva Fisher Morris, Dorothy Phillips, Edna Robeson, Martha Williams, Mary Perry Pollock, Marjorie Manes, Gwendolyn Adair, Lucille Jones, Florence Karr, Pauline McClellan, Clara Bridges, Virginia Richards, Katherine Sands, and Dorothea Stanley.

New Commission Cabinet Presented

(Continued from page one)

en, Evelyn Fisher, Dorothy Barclay, and Sallie Burt Newsome.

The retiring members of freshman commission are Virginia Amann, Maxine Ward, Viola Taylor, Lois Lewis, Mary Jetton, Martha Makemson, Edith Blanford, Eleanor Riggers, Dorothy Borden, Beth Deane, Anna Donnell, Katherine Blood, Peggy Gilfillian, Anna Glen, Yvonne Tait, Marie Taylor, Lilian Simmons, Ruth Marvin, Ann Norris, Mary Ann Hills Winona Ireland, Janice Borton, Myrvin Everett, Patricia Foster, Virginia Rogers, Evelyn Patterson, Marjorie Moore, Mary Miller, Edith Hays Effinger Ellen Miriam Frye, Marjorie Noggle, and Martha Hall.

New Cabinet

Freshman cabinet members are chosen by the executive cabinet of the Y. W. C. A. Members of the new cabinet are Jane Rise, Sara Nance, Alicia Meacham, Louise Doyle, Beverly Brown, Elizabeth Jinks, Katherine Todd, Dot Bryan, Blanche Lamar, Ruth Lind, Virginia Turner, Mary Louise Bryan, Margery Jones, Lois Long, Catherine Ely, Dagmar Pripp, Sarah Graham, Martha Lester, Lillie McGuire, Isabel Sands, Virginia White, Louise Lingo, Mary Ellen Tharpe, and Mary Jane Gallemore.

Members of the retiring cabinet are Ann Norris, chairman; Ann Sams, Helen Cats, Charlotte Veith, Julia Vanderipe, Betsey Anderson, Ellen Anderson, Betty Peck, Alma Lester, Anna Glen, Marie Wesley, Marie Spurlock, Ruth Sadler, Chauncey Coleman, Jane Hubbard, Barbara Hubbard, Mary Jeanne McKay, Sue Whitaker, Virginia Murry, Muriel Baker, Frances Morrow, Frances Lingle, Frances Boots, Clotilde O'Rourke, Marian Carson, Mary Elizabeth Simpson and Arline Gray Lockhart.

Candidates For Last Vote Out Tomorrow

(Continued From Page One)

fide member of her class; second, the student must make a scholastic average of "C" the semester preceding; third, the student must be subject to college regulations; fourth, the student must have removed all conditions and failures in subjects necessary for graduation; and fifth, the editor-in-chief of the Flambeau must have had satisfactory journalistic experience.

The presidents of organizations, the house chairmen, and the editors-in-chief of the Flambeau, Distaff and Flastacowo, shall be chosen from the incoming senior class, according to the constitution. The vice-presidents of organizations shall be chosen from the incoming junior class. Secretaries of organizations may be chosen from the incoming sophomore or junior class, except in the College Government association, where she shall be chosen from the incoming sophomore class.

Treasurers of organizations except in the College Government association, shall be chosen from the incoming sophomore or junior classes.

Sport Slants

Teachers and Students Of Physical Education Attend Swimming Meet

Four members of the physical education faculty and eight students in the methods class for swimming left yesterday morning to attend a conference fo. swimming instructors, which is being held at the University of Alabama in Tuscaloosa, March 13 to 15.

This conference, which is the first of its kind and is being sponsored by the woman's division of the National Amateur Athletic Federation, is held for the purpose of determining objectives for the rating of swimming instructors.

Those who will attend from here are Miss Elizabeth Autrey, Miss Marjorie Mayer, Miss Mildred Stewart, and Miss Grace Fox, all instructors in physical education. Juanita Buchanan, Mildred Johnson, Mildred Lovell, Rose Panowski, Mary Ward Peterson, Victoria Crisp, Eleanor Flint, and Claire Redfield are accompanying them.

On The Spot With Sports

Games and dancing will be featured at the regular play nite tonight at the gymnasium from 8:00 to 10:30. Although the T. N. T. orchestra will not be there, a pianist will play for those who wish to dance.

Come and bring your dates.

The incoming and outgoing presidents of the Athletic association on our campus will attend a meeting of the Southeastern division of the Athletic Federation of College Women, which will take place at North Carolina state college in Greensboro on March 21-23.

Officiating at the final game of the basketball tournament Thursday morning will constitute the practical examination of the National Women's Basketball official rating for some students. Other practical examinations will be given on Tuesday and Thursday nights with picked teams playing.

Supervising these examinations will be the basketball rating committee whose members include Miss Elizabeth Autrey, chairman, Miss Mary Settle, Miss Marjorie Mayer, and Miss Mildred Stewart.

Odd-Even tennis practice is now in progress with Dorothy Lancaster in charge of the evens and Beth Lancaster the odds. Odds who are out for the team include Marie Taylor, Mary Clark, Janice Borton, Winona Ireland, Martha Baker, Lucille Ferguson, Charlotte Cameron, and Frances Hurlin.

Evens who have been out to practice so far are Virginia Brooks, M. Huxford, Eileen Robinson, E. Yacobin, Marjorie Sue Knight, Marie Joffre, Jean Mase, Audrey Cooper, C. O'Brien, Felicia West, Mary Love, and Evelyn Fisher.

The international telegraphic swimming meet, for which the mock swimming meet last Saturday was preparation, will take place in the college gymnasium, March 30 at 10:30 o'clock.

Participating in the meet will be Claire Redfield, Marion Weeks, Betty Bailey, Louise Gehan, Betty Berry, Martha Makemson, Marie Taylor, Janice Borton, Mildred Stevens, Erma Engel, Frances Lewis, Audrey Cooper, Betty Clark, Frances Thill, June Meserve, Carol Farabee, Kate Wiggins, and Shirley Stevens.

In the faculty women's tennis tournament the next match will be between Miss Gertrude Vermillion and Dr. Viola Graham On the first round Miss Vermillion defeated Miss Katherine Montgomery and Dr. Graham, Miss Velma Ooten.

The match between Dr. Eleanor Valentine and Miss Grace Fox has not yet been finished, but the winner will play Miss Elizabeth Lynn who defeated Miss Mary Settle.

Students Speak On Honors Work

(Continued from page one)

than the regular system permits.

Besides broadening the academic outlook, Honors work, according to Frances, provides an enrichment in the tools and skills with which to handle life situations, for it necessitates self-direction and self-correction. The honors student must think and work alone and must learn by activity rather than by memorization.

Briefly, Honors work, according to Frances, is beneficial in that it enriches the scholastic experience and the personality of the student.

To be eligible for Honors work, a sophomore must have made a B (2.0) average for the last semester of her freshman year and the first semester of her sophomore year.

Application cards should be secured from the register's office and filed with the registrar when made out. This must be done before April 1. Decision as to the major field is necessary before filing. The registrar will notify the applicant if she is eligible to make a final application.

In making a general application the student should first consult the head of the department in which she is a major. The major professor should then be selected and under his guidance the program for the first year of work should be decided upon. One or more members of the Honors committee should be consulted for general advice and information.

The process of Honors work is a continuous one. One becomes a candidate for honors after final acceptance by the committee, and remains a candidate unless dropped because of failure to maintain the standards set up for honors students, until the final comprehensive examination is passed, when one becomes an Honor student entitled to an Honor Degree.

Qualified students are free to advance as fast and as far and as deeply into their chosen field as their ability and their inspiration permit.

Further information on Honors work may be obtained from the college catalogue, members of the faculty, and from members of the faculty committee on Honors work which includes Dr. Ralph Eyman, chairman, Dr. Beulah Briley, Dr. Herman Kurz, Dr. Jennie Tilt, Dr. Elizabeth G. Andrews and Dr. Harold Richards.

Junior-Senior Prom Next Week

(Continued from page one)

have also been granted special permission to ride unchaperoned until 8.30 on this week-end.

Arrangements for the affair have been in charge of the following committees selected from the junior and senior classes: orchestra, Helen Wilson; printing, Elizabeth Stout; dormitory girl's tea dance, Barbara Bell; decorations, Margaret K. Anderson; tickets and seating, Mary Catherine Drennan; specialties, Anita Jones; refreshments, Helen Harkness. The floor committee includes: Walter R. Cowles, chairman, Dr. Harold P. Richards, Owen P. Sellers, Dr. Paul F. Finner, and Kenneth R. Williams.

S. I. A. S. G. Plans Convention Here

(Continued From Page One)

led by Lida Read Voight of Sweet Briar, and one on extra curricular activities led by Helenmary Fritsch of Florida State College for Women. At the 10:30 meeting Dr. Evelyn Newman of Rollins college, will speak on "Women and Democracy." Luncheon will be at 12:40. A meeting will take place at 2:30, with Miss Theresa Amos of the University of Pittsburgh, speaking on "The college girl and her art of living." Discussions will be held at 4:00 on such subjects as Campus interest in public affairs. The speaker will be Dr. Philip Davidson, professor of history at Agnes Scott. There will be a banquet 7:30, followed by play-nite at the Gym at 9:00.

On Saturday, March 30, breakfast will be at 8:00. A discussion group: Campus honor, led by Alberta Palmer of Agnes Scott, will take place at 9:00. The plenary session will be at 10:30 with luncheon at 12:40, and a trip to Wakulla Spring in the afternoon for those who stay over. The University of Florida vs. Rutgers College debate will take place at 8:15 that night.

All of the discussions and lectures with the exception of Dr. Matthew's lecture, will be held in the Augusta Conradi theater. Dr. Matthews' address will be held in the auditorium.

Petition for NSFA Club Referred Last Week To Faculty Sub-Committee

The petition presented to the faculty committee on student affairs for permission to organize an NSFA club on this campus was referred last week to a sub-committee composed of Dr. Jennie Tilt and Miss Rowena Longmire. Setting forth in detail the reasons and plans for NSFA organization on this campus, the petition was documented with a history of the National Student Federation, a constitution, and the resolution passed at the tenth annual congress.

The president-elect of the Federation, Thomas Neblett, will be at Florida State the last week of this month, when he will speak at a session of the SIASG convention and will confer with the local NSFA organization on its program for the coming year. It is hoped that organization will have been completed and NSFA officers elected by that time, according to Katherine Blood and Louise Robertson.

In Memoriam

(Continued from page two)

loss; and that we express our sympathy to the members of his family:

Resolved: That copies of these resolutions be sent to his family; that copies be spread on the minutes of the Faculty Senate and of the General Faculty; and that others be submitted to the state and local papers.

SIGNED: FACULTY COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS
Alban Stewart
Anna Forbes Liddell
Rowena Longmire
N. M. Salley
Arthur Williams,

The following resolutions on the death of Dr. Game were drawn up this week by the local chapter of Phi Beta Kappa:

WHEREAS, Josiah Bethea Game for twenty-one years has been Professor of Classics and General Literature at the Florida State College for Women, and has given liberally of his time, energy, and scholarly interest to the building up of that institution, and

WHEREAS, Dr. Game has been for many years an active member of the Phi Beta Kappa Association of Tallahassee, and has contributed to the consummation of the purpose of the Association, namely, the granting of a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa to Florida State College for Women by charter of the United Chapters of the Fraternity, and

WHEREAS, the Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa in Florida has recently been installed at the Florida State College for Women, of which chapter Dr. Game was a charter member;

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that the members of the Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa in Florida hereby express their grief and sympathy at the passing of their fellow-member, whose absence from their midst will always be felt as a distinct loss.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that a copy of these resolutions be conveyed to the family of our departed member, that a copy be spread on the minutes of the Alpha Chapter, and a copy be delivered to the press.

Signed:
Kathryn T. Abbey, President
Arthur R. Seymour, Vice-president.
Myrtle E. Dolbee, Secretary
Margaret Dow, Treasurer
William H. Rogers, Historian.

Briggs Attended Group Meeting of Committee

Representing Florida State College for Women, Dr. David Briggs, professor of education, attended the meeting of the state committee on cooperative testing and guidance of high school pupils that was held in Gainesville February 11-12.

The committee was recently provided for by the conference of representatives from the state department of education and the institutions of higher learning which include Stetson university, Southern college, University of Florida, and Florida State College for Women. The program inaugurated by the committee will furnish educational guidance to all high school pupils and will improve the educational facilities of the state through knowledge of the teaching needs of the schools.

Carol Reeves Receives Distaff Award for Best Prose in Current Issue

Carol Reeves was awarded five dollars in convocation Tuesday for her short story, "Cases," which appears in the current issue of the Distaff.

"Keeping the Red Out of the Little Red School House," a satire on the various local agencies that try to "purify" schools, written by Edna Hoffman and "Prevailing Winds," a reply to criticisms of institutions of higher learning, submitted by Anita Mitchell, received honorable mention.

Judges were Earl Vance, associate professor of English and journalism, W. H. Rogers, professor of English, and Guy Diffenbaugh, professor of English.

The Distaff, a student literary magazine published every quarter, offers five dollars to the author of the best prose appearing in each issue.

A. A. U. W. Awards Ten Fellowships

Grants Made in Various Academic Fields

The American Association of University Women has recently awarded ten fellowships for 1935-1936 to women for advanced study in various fields—health education, medicine, physics, political science, economics and archaeology. The awards were made on the basis of scholarship, ability to do research and evidences of leadership in the field which the applicant had chosen.

In 1927 the A. A. U. W. set as its goal the building up of a Million Dollar Fellowship Fund, the income from which would support about twenty-five annual fellowships, each carrying a stipend of $1500. For purposes of organization the Association is divided into units, each unit agreeing to raise funds — approximately $40,000—for the endowment of one fellowship. A unit may be a section of the country, a single state or a branch of the national association. The formation of such a unit is entirely voluntary and is dependent upon the members of the A. A. U. W. in that section, state or branch. There are now nine units and others are being formed as rapidly as business conditions permit.

The Tallahassee Branch has not pledged itself to any definite sum but contributes annually to the national fund such amounts as its treasury will permit. It is hoped that in the near future it may be the nucleus of a unit, or that it may join another unit and so have a more personal interest in this movement which will contribute so much to women in the field of research.

Chicago is said to be nearer the center of the earth than New Orleans.

Easter Time . . . Spring—

New life in nature—new clothes—what better time for that new portrait.

PIKE'S STUDIO

May we attempt to serve you--offering apparel that you will require for the Prom and the affairs incident thereto.

The Vogue

BENNETT'S BEAUTY SALON
Phone 900
"THE SMART WOMAN'S CHOICE"
La-Glora Croquignole or Eugene Croquignole
$5.00
VIOLETTE PERMANENT $3.00
PERMANENT END CURLS .... 25c and up

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
DICK POWELL
in
"GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
WILL ROGERS
in
"LIFE BEGINS AT 40"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Chas. Laughton - Chas. Ruggles - Zasu Pitts
in
"RUGGLES OF RED GAP"
THURSDAY
Edw. G. Robinson
in
"THE WHOLE TOWN'S TALKING"
—ALSO—
"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT"

RITZ THEATRE
SATURDAY
TIM McCOY
in
"SQUARE SHOOTER"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
"GOLD DIGGERS OF 1935"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
"LIFE BEGINS AT 40"

For the college lassie who wants style and charm in her Spring wardrobe.

Peter Pan Dresses
at $14.95
—AND—
Wellesley Dresses
at $12.95
In Prints, Florals and Geometric Designs.

P. W. Wilson Company
"Since 1837"

The Social Week

Sororities Continue With Initiation Celebrations

Four of the eighteen sororities on campus held their initiation services last week-end, and five others have announced the plans for their initiations this week-end.

The Chi Omega sorority entertained its new initiates at a breakfast Sunday morning, March 10, following the initiation services on March 8th and 9th. Each of the new members was given a corsage of white carnations tied with cardinal and straw, the sorority colors. Red camellias and stocks were used to carry out the color motif in table decorations. At this time, the annual chapter award of a silver loving cup to the best all-around pledge was made to Frances Etheridge Lewis. The new initiates were: Bay Bacon, Margaret Blount, Jean Blount, Mary Baird, Sarah Carter, Jane Crolle, Jean Lykes, Hilda Spradlin, Sarah Nance, Annette Twinby, Daisyanna Massey, Catherine O'Bryan, Althea Wenore, Genie Whiteside, Frances Lewis, Edith Huddleston, Edith Merrill Rosamur, Dorothy Watson, Frances Passamore, Eileen Masters, Pauline Spencer and Louise Forrester.

Alumnae members who attended were Miss Rowena Longmire, Miss Will Ovan, Mrs. Kent Johnson, Mrs. Harry Richards, Mrs. George Carey, Miss Ellen Hobbs, Miss Rosalie Baya, Miss Scottie Rankin, Miss Mildred Root, Miss Catherine Carter, Mrs Tom Hisgen, Mrs. Massey, Miss Marie Doughty, Miss Roberta Carter, Miss Hasel Lee Baird, Miss Hattie Ashmore, Miss Beth Mathis and Miss Mary Virginia Murphy.

Following their initiation Saturday night, the members of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority gave a breakfast at the Floridan hotel in honor of their new initiates. The motif was carried out in the sorority colors, black and gold, and the active members presented their pledge daughters with recognition pins or plaques with the sorority seal. The new initiates were: Barbara Sandquist, Betty Middleton, Nedra McNamara, Annie Laurie Rentz, Mamie Jane Clark, Sarah Clark, Anne Chichester, Helen Donn, Dagmar Fripp, Kitty Crainey, Margaret Schmidli, Patricia Hamilton, Virginia Lide, Jean Harris, Iris Machen, Marjorie Horton, and Rachal Sherman.

The Delta Phi Epsilon gave a banquet at the Dutch Kitchen following initiation services Saturday night. Little canoes were used as favors with paddles as the place cards, and the Indian motif was further carried out in the menu. The new initiates were: Miriam Stein, Janice Brill and Edna Feinberg.

The Alpha Omicron Pi's also gave a banquet Saturday night in honor of its new members at the Floridan hotel. At this time Ruth Daniel was awarded a seal ring by the chapter as the best all-around pledge. She was to share the honor, however, with Nina Hughes. The other initiates were: Betty Barry, Alline Freedman, and Madeline McCall.

Sigma Sigma Sigma has announced thet its initiation will be Saturday night which will be followed by a breakfast at Three Torches Sunday morning. Corsages of violets will be presented to the new initiates who will be: Mary Marshall, and Mary Newbold. Among the town alumnae who will be guests at the occasion are: Miss Rowena Merriweather, Miss Florence Tryon, Mrs. Joe Campbell, Mrs. Miller Walston, Mrs. Walter Phillips.

Kappa Delta sorority will have a banquet at the Dutch Kitchen this Saturday night. The motif will be carried out in the sorority colors of green and white in the flowers, place cards and favors. Entertainment will be provided by some of the active members. The initiates will be: Hazel Anderson, Helen Ballenger, Ann Bayley, Betty Ferrill, Madge Glenn, Annette Harris, Mildred Hudman, Blanche Lamar, Martha Lester, Mary Litschgi, Geraldine Miles, Ann Mizell, Virginia Northcutt, Virginia Phillips, Jane Rice, Inez Seabrook, Jane Grey Stevens, Genevieve Summers, Frances Thomas, Barbara Taylor, Jo Taylor, Sara Tillman, Kathryn Wilhelm, Carol Farabee, Dorothy Phillips, Jean Hamner. Alumnae who will be present are: Miss Helen McKean, Mrs. Ben Maginnis, and Mrs. Warren Anderson.

Theta Upsilon sorority has announced that its initiation ceremony will be held Friday night, and that a breakfast will be given Sunday morning at the Three Torches for the new initiates who will be: Barbara Green, Elizabeth Leach.

Beta Phi Alpha has announced that it will have a breakfast at Three Torches Sunday morning in honor of its new members who will be: Ruth Garcia, Robbye Lee Estes, Doris Seals. Among the alumnae members who will be present are: Miss Myra McLean, Miss Eula Hops and Mrs. T. L. Moulton of Pensacola, Miss Viola Martin of Atlanta and Miss Vera Green, of Mount Pleasant.

Following a seven o'clock initiation service tonight, Alpha Xi Delta will honor its new initiates at nine with a formal banquet to be held at the Floridan hotel. Decorations will include the sorority rose and a double blue and gold motif. Miss Anna Mae Sharp is toastmistress for the occasion.

Guests of the chapter at the banquet will also include the sorority patrons and patronesses, and Mrs. Mary Bland, chaperon. Those attending will include: Mr and Mrs H. D. Mendenhall, Mr and Mrs. E. G. Rivers, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin White, Mr and Mrs Earl Vance, Miss Anna Mae Sharp, Mrs. Mary Bland, Mildred Boss, Clotilde O'Rourke, Mary McGunagle, Charlotte Kinzie, Marion Weeks, Mildred Lovell, Lula Walker, Elizabeth Stout, Barbara Garfunkel, Helenmary Fritsch, Juanita Pace, Ruth Rainbolt, Carlotta Cubillas, Elizabeth Filer, Betty Bailey, Jean Crago, Jessie Mead, Althea Smith, Monica Wiley, Geneva Fisher Morris, and Amy Brenner.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
March 15 to March 23

Friday

5:00 p.m.—Informal tea at Dutch Kitchen for seniors in commerce department with Dr. Briley and Miss Young as hostesses

8:00 p.m.—Play nite in college gymnasium

8:00 p.m.—A. A. U. W. party in Gilchrist parlors honoring members of the senior class

Saturday

Informal dancing during afternoon and evening in Jennie Murphree parlors.

Sunday

11:00 p.m.—Church services

4:00 p.m.—Delta Delta Delta tea honoring patronesses and friends of the sorority

7:15 p.m.—Y. W. C. A. vespers in Augusta Conradi little theater

Monday

5:30 p.m.—Tea by Miss Mildred Henry in Gilchrist for freshman students

7:15 p.m.—Glee club rehearsal

7:30 p.m.—A. A. U. W. International Relations Forum at Ruge Hall

9:00 p.m.—Sorority meetings

Tuesday

11:30 p.m.—Convocation
Final elections to be held during the afternoon and evening

5.30 p.m.—Tea for freshman students in Reynolds hall with Dr. Margie Burks as hostess

Wednesday

5:30 p.m.—Tea for freshman students in Jennie Murphree hall with Miss Lucy Lester as hostess

7:15 p.m.—Glee club rehearsal

8:15 p.m.—Lecture series to present Robert Arthur Elwood. Subject, "The Pursuit of Happiness"

Thursday

7:15 p.m.—Orchestra Rehearsal

Friday

8:15 p.m.—Senior class will present Noel Cowards "Hay Fever"

Saturday

Morning and afternoon tea dances in sorority houses and dormitory parlors for juniors and seniors and dates.

8:30 p.m.—Junior-Senior prom in college dining room

Bennett's

Bennett's Special Rich Ice Cream, pt. 15c

Lunch at Bennetts 40c

CHOICE OF:

Chicken Pan Pie
Breaded Veal Cutlets with Tomato Sauce

VEGETABLES:

Fresh Turnips
Marshmallow Yams
Pineapple Salad
Ice Cream
Corn Muffins or Hot Biscuits
Drink Included

20c CHICKEN SALAD SANDWICH 15c
20c PIMENTO CHEESE AND OLIVE 15c
15c DOUBLE DIP ICE CREAM SODA 10c
15c CHOCOLATE SYRUP SUNDAE 10c
25c MAPLE PECAN SUNDAE 10c
25c MARSHMALLOW MINT SUNDAE 15c
25c BUTTERSCOTCH SUNDAE 15c
30c CHOCOLATE MARSHMALLOW WHIP SUNDAE 15c

Personal Mention

Among the girls attending the freshman-sophomore dances in Gainesville this week-end are Marie Spurlock, Annabelle Linger, Fat Foster, Betty Wheeler, Mary June Michel, Sarah Ball Palmer, Sarah Moore, Leone Thornton, Margaret Pinkoson, Katherine Smith, Evelyn Haynie, Tad Goodwin, Helen Kibler, and Clotilde O'Rourke.

◆

Polly Flint, Juanita Buchanan and Mildred Johnson left for Tuscaloosa, Thursday, to attend a national swimming conference at the University of Alabama. They will return Sunday.

◆

Miss Elisabeth Timberlake, Kappa Alpha Theta sorority chaperon, went to Jacksonville, Monday, on a trip with friends.

◆

Dean Olivia N. Dorman, Miss Ezda Deviney, and Miss Edith West were honored at an after dinner coffee at the Phi Mu house, Monday night.

◆

Mrs. Earl Park of Sylvester, Georgia, is visiting her sister, Mrs. T. R. Cravat at the Delta Zeta house. Mrs. Park will stay until Sunday.

◆

Mamie Hinely Brinson is leaving for Nassau this week-end to visit friends.

◆

Among the girls spending this week-end at home are Betty Boggs, Jacksonville; Celia Gary, Winter Haven; Irene Collins, Leesburg; Mary Catherine Drennan, Palatka; Molly Holden, Winter Park; Mary Key, Green Cove Springs; Nancy Wilkinson, Palatka; Adelaide Duval, Ocala; Elinor Payne, Panama City; Lucile Williams, Tavares; Louise Rogers, Orlando; Mary Brantley, Jacksonville; and Clairnello O'Steen, High Springs.

◆

Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews entertained Dr. Henry Neumann, Dr. Edward Conradi, Miss Louise Conradi, Miss Lillian Grothaus, and Dr. and Mrs. P .F. Finner at dinner, Wednesday night.

◆

Betty Hamilton and Mary Lee Hopkins are in Jacksonville this week-end visiting friends.

◆

Margaret Murphrey, graduate of '31, who recently married Lieutenant (j. g.) Eugene May, naval officer at San Diego, visited here last week. Lieutenant and Mrs. May are now spending their honeymoon in the south.

◆

The Delta Phi Epsilon sorority will hold a service for members in honor of Founder's day on Sunday morning. A waffle breakfast at the sorority house will follow.

◆

Mary Pollard is leaving for Perry Friday morning to spend the week-end with friends.

◆

Miss Maude Flowers, secretary to Miss Olivia Dorman, dean of students, has been confined to her home for the past few days because of illness.

Young and Briley To Be Hostesses This Afternoon at Tea

Miss Sadie Young and Dr. Beulah Briley will be hostesses at an informal tea for the seniors in the commerce department this afternoon at 5 o'clock in the parlors at the Dutch Kitchen.

The decorations for this tea, an annual affair in the commerce department, will consist of spring flowers featuring the daffodil. During the afternoon punch, ice cream, and cake will be served to the guests.

The guest list on this occasion will include Elizabeth Allan, Julia Baker, Mary Ellen Bailey, Mary Catherine Carter, Irene Collins, Evelyn Comick, Margarette Early, Dorothy Edwards, Myrle Fillingim, Wava Godwin, Betty Hintermister, Jean Hamner, Mildred Mumm, Margaret McLaughlin, Jennie Rae Nall, Elizabeth Seay, Lillian Shapiro, Josephine Skeels, Mildred Smoak, Mary Laura Tilley, Olive Towles, and Jessie Lee Wilder.

A. A. U. W. TO HONOR SENIORS TONIGHT AT RECEPTION IN GILCHRIST PARLORS

The local chapter of the American Association of University Women will give its annual reception honoring the members of senior class tonight from 8 to 10 o'clock in Gilchrist parlors The junior group of the association is in charge of the party under the direction of Miss Mildred Finnegan, chairman.

The parlors will be decorated with dogwood, plum blossoms and other spring flowers. Refreshments will be carried out in a color motif of pink and white, and will consist of punch, cakes iced in pink, mints and nuts.

A program of music will be given by the student trio: Yvonne Tait, Martha Reddick and Margaret Nickle, and Miss Sadie Young, president of the local chapter, will give a short talk on the activities of A. A. U. W.

Those in the receiving line will be Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Miss Sadie Young, Helen Wilson, president of the senior class, and Dean Olivia N. Dorman.

HENRY, BURKS AND LESTER WILL BE HOSTESSES TO FRESHMEN AT PARTIES

Miss Mildred Henry, Dr. Margie Burks, and Miss Lucy Lester will be hostesses at a series of informal teas next week in honor of a number of their freshman students.

An informal motif will be emphasized in these parties. This theme will be carried out in the floral decorations to consist principally of spring garden flowers and in the refreshments which will be served during the afternoon by the assistant hostesses.

The tea given by Miss Henry will take place on Monday afternoon at 5:30 in the Gilchrist parlors. At this time Lillian Jean Collier, Irene Day, Vivian Williams, Anne Rae Thrasher, Margaret Pierson, Betty Jo Ferrill, Marjorie Horton, Martha Blount, Susan Blow, Martha Lester, Virginia Northcutt, Sallie Nuzum, Sara Frances Carter, Falda Swindle, Muriel Watson, Sara Clark, Jane Carlle, Adelaide Slaughter, Sarah Helen Hendry, Celia Gary, Sara Martin, Marjorie Oliver, and Elizabeth Pierce have been invited to call.

Dr. Burks will be hostess at a similar event in Reynolds parlors on Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Among the freshman students who are on the guest list for this occasion are Ruth Knight, Margaret Schmidli, Phoebe Messer, Charmain Lufburrow, Clara Birdsall, Katherine Wilhelm, Mary Kinser, Margie Creel, Nina Kirkland, Mabry Sumner, Letitia Bond, Marjorie Ann Butler, Eloise Frink, Laurabel Hopkins, Marjorie Stump, Kathleen Norris, Mavis McMillan, Helen Walde, Margaret Melvin, Nan O'Shaughnessy, Rosemary Payne, and Lois Long.

On Wednesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the parlors of Jennie Murphree Miss Lester will be at home to Mildred Booth, Louise Gehan, Dixie Gist, Eleanor Hutchinson, Jeanie Whiteside, Mary Evans Voss, Elizabeth Jinks, Evelyn Brunson, Mildred Lee, Dorothy Bellamy, Dorothy Williams, Virginia White, Marian Swank, Margaret McCall, Louise Lingo, Frances Lewis, Lucy Tomberlin, Evelyn Glazier, Kasimir Mumby, and Genevieve Wilkins.

Tri Deltas to Honor Patronesses With An Informal Tea

The members and pledges of Delta Delta Delta sorority will be hostesses at an informal tea honoring their patronesses and friends Sunday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock.

The house will be decorated with pansies, daffodils, snapdragons and other cut flowers. Refreshments will consist of cream cheese and olive sandwiches, tuna fish salad sandwiches, cinnamon toast and tea.

Mrs. B. K. Scott, sorority house mother, will preside at the tea table.

Among the guests who have been invited to attend are: Mrs. Franklin Williams, Mrs. Marshel N. Carn, Mrs. Frank Winthrop, Mrs. J. Hamilton Dowling, Judge and Mrs. Cary B. Landis, Mr. and Mrs. Coyle Moore, Mrs. J. S. Rickards, Mrs. S. M. Phillips, Mrs. A. Appleyard, Mrs. Alford, Mrs. Jean Thompson.

Among the members and pledges who will assist as hostesses will be Adelaide Duval, Ellen Moore, Elinor Smoak, Katharine Barrs, Anne Cutright, Frances Phillips, Yulee Way, Nancy Wilkinson, Janet Charles, Frances Lowry, Mary Mathis, Betty McKinnon, Mary Miller, Joyce Reed, Nancy Felt, Ruth Sadler, Virginia Turner, Margaret Ware, Betty Peck, Dorothy Osincup.

Becky Lou Hopkins, Virginia Kee, Juanita Holland, Jessie Lee Lumpkin, Catherine Murphy, Rosemary Payne, Elva Ames McCahill, Charlotte Pelsang, Dorothy Branch, Dorothy Olmestead, Lucille Williams, Ella O'Neill, Nell St. John, Laurabelle Hopkins, Betty Wheeless, Mary June Michel, Jean Massey, Billie Hotard, Dorothy Nye, Jean Tilden, Betty Ward, Dorothy Dixon, Frances Hartley, Mary Emily Sadler, Nettie Taylor, Louise Rogers, Adella Appleyard, and Martha Hall.

Newman Club to Have Irish Party on Next Sunday Evening

Among social activities of denominational organizations this week-end will be an Irish party Sunday night at which the Newman club will entertain other groups in the Catholic church.

The program for the party, which will be held after the evening services in the Catholic rectory, will include an Irish recitation by Jane Quinn, an Irish jig by Mary Helen and Frances Forth, a medley of Irish songs by a quartette, and a talk on Ireland by the Rev. William J. Carroll, who was born and educated there. Grace Mary Webster is in charge of the program.

The rectory will be decorated in green and white streamers and shamrocks, which are the national emblem of Ireland. Vivian Testa is in charge of refreshments, which will also carry out the Irish scheme.

Meetings of Episcopal students during the next five weeks will be chiefly in observance of the Lenten season. Every weekday morning at 6:10 a ten-minute service of the morning watch will be held in Ruge hall. Sunday afternoon in Ruge hall, Dr. Marion Hay will lead a discussion on "Orientals in America." Each Sunday during Lent Dr. Hay will continue discussion of this topic.

Every Sunday morning a waffle breakfast will be served Episcopal students and their friends. Frances Ellis is in charge of arrangements.

The Jewish women's group, whose program activities have recently been reorganized along more cultural than social lines, will meet in Bryan sun parlor at 5:30 this afternoon to discuss "Modern Art." Pearl Berman is in charge of the program.

Baptist students will meet with local Baptist women for their monthly Young Women's Association circle meetings next Thursday night.

◆

An important branch of education in Japan is the artistic arrangement of flowers. This subject is taught in elementary schools and even has its place in college courses.

PHI ALPHA THETA HAS TEA HONORING FRESHMAN HISTORY STUDENTS TUESDAY

Phi Alpha Theta, history honorary fraternity, gave its annual tea Tuesday in Broward club room in honor of Founders' Day for those students taking freshman history who made an average of B or above last semester.

The chapter presented Miss Venila Lovina Shores, retiring faculty advisor, and Miss Annie Popper, new advisor, with corsages of roses.

Members of the faculty and other guests besides students who were present were Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Williams, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Cotterill, Miss Florence Tryon, Miss Annie Popper, Miss Venila Lovina Shores, Miss Kathryn T. Abbey, Miss Marian Irish, and Mrs. Ruth Taylor.

Students who were guests of Phi Alpha Theta were Barbara Crosland, Carolina De Montigne, Mary Dodd, Olivia Embrey, Cornelia Garrick, Eleanor Green, Florence Jennings, Clara Langford, Marie Lingo, Janilee Rhyne, Mrs. Elberta Hinson, Helen Cate, Sarah Carter, Louise Bryan, Frances Baldwin, Marion Brantley, Judith Lee Bell, Mayme Russell, Claire Wilson, Jane Gray Stevens, Hazel Anderson, Grace-Caroline Adams, Evelyn L'Abbe, Rose Evans, Eileen Robertson, Hazel Manuel, Margaret Duncan, Annette Harris, Jane Quinn, Lucille Shannon, Marianna Swank.

Eloise Andrews, Dorothy Boyd, Beverly Brown, Lucille Dale, Helen Eisman, Lois Long, Jean Lykes, Mary Ann Moore, Elizabeth Pierce, Virginia Pinney, Mary Porter, Marguerita Sjostrom, Jean Tilden, Sara Tyler, Dorothy Watson, Virginia White, Katherine Wilhelm, Frances Lewis, Fortuna Lopez, Charmaine Lufburrow, Dorothea Marsh, Ethel Mintzer, Virginia Northcutt, Virginia Phillips, La Luce Planck, Kathryn Pratt, Amy Harris, Nellie Lamar, Martha Lester, Iris Machen, Ruth Prather, Mary Margaret Pfeiffer, Rose Safer, Hazel Sams, Elizabeth West, Gladys Ware, Mary Loo Williams, Ella Virginia Brooks, Cora Cheney, Sarah Clark, Emma McCullough, Reba Miller, Anne Potes, Ava Vickers, Marian Knight, Julie Whaley, Carol Jones, Joy Bailey, Erma Hanscom, Martha King, Dorothy Barclay, Frances Bishop.

Jean Blount, Margaret Blount, Charlotte Carlton, Audrey Cooper, Inez Frink, Mary Coarsey, Sarah Martin, Virginia Clayton, Esther Goodwin, Louise D. Johnson, Katherine Ely, Louise Gehan, Betty Graham, Sarah Graham, Kathleen Harris, Myrtice Harvey, Belle Henshaw, Elizabeth Jinks, Edwinola Jordan, Lynelle Kennington, Genevieve Kenly, Mrs. Anna Higdon, Mildred Hudmon, Lurline Goodman, Ethel Grassfield, Rita Gilleylen, Phylis Gewin, Meda Fuhrer, Elise Barrett, Josephine Davis, Marjorie Weems, Edith Arbuthnot, Letitia Bond, Frances Hartley, Helen Walde, Mary Michel, Edith Pamsour, Ginelle Perry, Darween Morrell, Barbara Womack, Margaret Schmidli, Rachel Rothstein, Sallie Ratliff, Juanita McElhamion, Mary Pinckard, Avaline Lancaster, Jessilee Lumpkin, Laurita Pearson, Frances Passmore, Jane Cralle, Elizabeth Bary, Helen Everth, Louelle Ball, Ann Bagley, Evangeline Morford, Raymondie Ponce, Deenie Bruns, Ruth Loveless, Marguerite Thomas, Gene Whiteside, Lillian Burford.

Garden Week Observed By Displays of Books, Pictures in Library

Garden week is being appropriately observed this week by the display in the library.

The central show-case offers pictures of many famous and historical gardens all over the world. Among the best-known of America are views of President Washington's garden at Mt. Vernon, President Madison's at Montpelier, and the magnolia gardens of Charleston, South Carolina. Italian gardens of every century and state are shown, a Lombardy garden of neo-classic style, a Florentine garden of the fifteenth century, a Genoese garden of the sixteenth century, and the Vatican gardens adjoining the Villa Doria Pampili in Rome. France is represented too, most notably by the gardens of Louis the Fourteenth at Versailles, and the famous garden of Passy. England offers the Pope's garden and an ancient English garden in the couty of Cambridge. Mexico, Egypt, Germany, Greece, and Turkey are also represented, and very beautifully.

The reading table devoted to the topic of the week offers a variety of books and magazines on all phases of garden and landscape improvement. The following are recommended as especially helpful for the amateur gardener.

Flower Planting Guide For The South — Kilgore Seed Company; The Flower Garden—David Lamsden; The Rock Garden—Aust and Haodinson; Better Lawns and Gardens—H. B. Siems; Garden Polls — Ramsey and Lawrence; Flowering Trees and Shrubs—A. J. Mecself; Evergreens—F. F. Rockwell; Color Schemes For The Flower Garden—Gertrude Jekyll; Spring Flowering Bulbs—Clark L. Thayler; Adventures In Dish Gardening—Patten Beard.

Fashionable New York women are now rouging the tips of their ears.

They won't help you catch rivets —

they won't cause any ills or cure any ailments

— but they Satisfy

... when anything satisfies it's got to be right... no "ifs" or "buts" about it.

Chesterfields satisfy because, first of all, they're made of the right kinds of mild ripe tobaccos. These tobaccos are thoroughly aged and then blended and cross-blended.

It takes time and it takes money, but whatever it costs in time or money we do it in order to give you a cigarette that's milder, a cigarette that tastes better.

© 1935, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

Don't Overlook Any
Of Prom
Week-End Festivities

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

A Successful Year
To New Campus Officers

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, March 12 ~~15,~~ 1935 NUMBER TWENTY-TWO

Activity Fee Committee to Be Organized

Three Faculty and Five Students to Compose Budget Body

AUDIT CHAIRMAN TO BE SELECTED

Will Hear Claims From Different Campus Groups

The recommendations of the college council concerning the proration of the portion of the student activity fee that pertains to student organizations has been accepted by the faculty committee on student affairs and is now ready to be sent to the executive council of the college for approval.

The plan as now stated does not affect artist and lecture series or the social and recreation fund, but it does include class dues, the athletic association, the college government association, Flambeau, Flastacowo, and Distaff. The recommendations include provision for a budget committee to be selected by the senate of college government association which will hear claims by the various organizations.

On this committee will be three faculty members: the dean of students as an ex-officio member; a representative from the faculty committee on student affairs; a representative from the faculty-at-large, recommended by the executive council of the college government association, and approved by the college council. There will be five student members of which two will be taken from the junior class and three from the senior class, none of whom will have official positions in the organizations mentioned. From those selected the student senate will choose one to be chairman of this committee and one to be chairman of the auditing committee.

The activity fee committee, which is to take office immediately after spring elections, will have as its possible duties approving budgets, receiving the report of the auditing committee, surveying activities covered by the student activity fee, the reorganizing of the distribution of funds, and the prorating of the activity fee.

New Catalog Is Being Compiled

Schedule Rearrangement To Be Announced

Major changes in the schedules in the new catalog, which are occasioned by the death of Dr. J. B. Game, professor of classics, and general literature, are now being made.

The work of this department will be distributed among the teachers of other departments. The shift has already been made; the work has been taken into the schedules of other departments; and the plan for the coming year will be almost identical with the system as it has been worked out at present.

A part of the work has been taken over by Dean Dorman and Miss Edith West, while Dr. A. R. Seymour, of the modern language department, has taken four classes in general literature. In order to enable Dr. Seymour to do this, Miss Mildred Finnegan is now teaching Dr. Seymour's "Survey of French Literature." At the same time, Mrs. Wilma Mayo, who received her master's degree in French from Florida State College in 1932, and who has since taught courses in French at the college, is taking Miss Finnegan's French course 201-2.

Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, of the philosophy department, has also assumed some of the work, and is now teaching "The Bible of Literature," and "Great Books of the Past."

"Nature" Will Be Theme

At the regular Y. W. C. A. worship service, which will be held in the open air theater instead of the sun parlor in the future, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite will lead a discussion on "Natore" this Wednesday morning at 7:15.

Andrews to Conduct Vocational Meeting

Seniors graduating in May or August 1935 are requested to come to a vocational guidance meeting in the Augusta Conradi theater at 7:30 p. m., Monday by Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews, director of personnel. The meeting will be opened with some vocational information by Dr. Andrews, after which there will be a ten or fifteen minute open forum to afford students an opportunity to ask questions.

All seniors are urged to be present. "Those who are not interested are probably the very ones who should attend," said Dr. Andrews. "Come to this meeting if you desire any assistance in securing a position in any field or wish to have your confidential papers sent to anyone."

Two-year certificate students who expect to teach in 1935-1936 are also invited to attend.

New Council Is Established

Measure Aims to Avoid Duplicate Dates In Year's Calendar

The establishment of a president's council was the chief measure among recommendations recently presented to the college council by student senate, and passed by that body. The recommendations returned with a few amendments to the student senate and if passed will go into effect as soon as finally drafted.

The president's council will be composed of the presidents of all organizations listed in the handbook. Its activity shall consist of making out the calendar for the year, of deciding upon dates for all functions of all the organizations. This shall be for the purpose of avoiding duplication and for distributing functions evenly throughout the school year.

Another recommendation was that members of the off-campus committee should not act as house chairman in their respective houses. The reason for this is that in many instances girls capable for work on the committee are not interested in nor fitted for being house chairmen. Another reason is that the new plan will distribute activities more widely throughout the student body. The senate also recommended that the phrase stating that the off-campus committee shall rotate should be struck out.

The recommendation of the student senate that the first vice-president of C. G. A. act as speaker of the student senate was returned by the college council with the recommendation that action be deferred for a year.

These recommendations were accepted and passed upon favorably by the council, according to Dean Dorman. It will be necessary for the final detailed plans to be approved before they go into effect.

Planet Mars Is Richards' Topic

Astronomy Club Plans Thursday's Meet

At the meeting of the Astronomy club to be held next Thursday night, Dr. Harold F. Richards will give a talk on the planet Mars. Seven students will give reports on stars of the first magnitude. These reports include the following: Doris Isted on Sirius, Doris Bourgeois on Betelgeuse, Eva Alonzo on Arcturus, Nancy Felt on Riger, Rebecca Keith on Aldebaran, Laura Crow on Castor and Pollux, and Sarah Beth Davis on Regulus. Dorothy Fabrick is in charge of the meeting.

On Thursday, March 14, the astronomy club made a naked eye observation of the constellations in the eastern spring sky under the direction of Dr. Richards. Field glasses were used to see the stars Mizar and Alcor in the Big Dipper since these stars are too close toegther to be distinguished with the naked eye. A review was made of the stars which had been in the fall eastrn sky.

Last Tuesday afternoon the members of he telescope team viewed the spots in the sun.

"Hay Fever" Is To Be Offered Again Tonight

Eccentricities of Bliss Family Are Portrayed In the Comedy

HAZEL, COWLES ACT LEAD ROLES

Production Directed By Kemper Moore, Staged By Keis' Class

Tonight at 8:15 the annual senior play, "Hay Fever," a farce in three acts by Noel Coward, sponsored by Mortar Board, will be presented in the Augusta Conradi Little theater.

The play was presented last night to the general public, seats being reserved tonight mainly for juniors, seniors and their dates.

Pandemonium prevails throughout the action of the farce which centers around the Bliss family, temperamental artists, definitely Bohemian. Every member of the family, unknown to the others, invites a week-end guest to their country home but become so absorbed in their own interests that they forget about their four guests who react in various ways to the foibles and vagaries of the erratic family..

Dramatis Personae

In the Bliss family, Lois Hazel takes the part of the modern mother and her husband is Professor W. R. Cowles. They have a son and a daughter, Professor O. B. Sellers and Carolina DeMontigne, while Frances Hurlin takes the part of their maid, Clara. The guests are Nancy Bush, Jackie Coryston; C. W. Gregory, Richard Greatham; Dr. A. J. Ott, Sandy Tyrell; and Esther Daffin, Myra Arundel.

The production committee is: Marian Brantley, general chairman; Margaret Kader and Helen Hammond, stage crew; Georgia Embry, staging; Abbie Lyle and Jennie Rae Nall, properties; Barbara Garfunkel and Elizabeth Stout, publicity; Louise Robertson and Mildred Boss, programs; Louise Robertson, tickets; and Helen Wilson, house committee.

Miss Kemper Moore is directing the play and Miss Emma Keis and her art class are in charge of the staging effects.

Miss Flowers Directs Halls

To Hold Office Resigned By Mrs. Sloan Because Of Ill Health

Miss Maude Flowers, secretary to the dean of students, was appointed director of residence halls, the position formerly held by Mrs. Virginia T. Sloan, at a meeting of the Board of Control in Tallahassee, Monday. Mrs. Sloan has resigned her position because of ill health.

Miss Katherine Warren of Jacksonville, alumna of '33, will be the new secretary to the dean of students. Miss Warren was prominent in extra-curricular activities while a student here, having served as president of Mortar Board and holding other positions.

The Board also authorized the college to purchase 305 acres of land as an addition to the college farm. "This increase in the farm became necessary," President Conradi explained, "when some of the land formerly a part of the farm was used for the college recreation grounds." The territory to be bought lies southwest of Tallahassee.

The Board meeting was held in the Alumnae office of the college since the new headquarters in the education building are not completed.

Sunday evening the board had supper in the college dining room. Those present at that time and at the meeting were: Dr. John J. Tigert, president of the University of Florida; Dr. Clarence J. Settles, president of the school for the deaf and blind; Dr. Edward Conradi, and J. T. Diamond, secretary to the board, Tallahassee; George H. Baldin, chairman, Jacksonville; Alfred H. Wagg, West Palm Beach; Oliver Semms, Pensacola; H. C. Duncan, Tavares; and General A. H. Blanding, Bartow.

Junior-Senior Prom Week-end To Include Play and Dances

Honors Students Must Register Now

Students planning to take Honors work next year must register before April 1 in the registrar's office, according to Dr. Ralph Eyman, chairman of the honors committee.

To be eligible for Honors work a sophomore must have made a B (2.0) average for the last semester of her freshman year and the first semester of her sophomore year.

Before making application the student should first consult the head of her department and a member of the Honors committee for general advice and information. Application cards should be secured from the registrar's office and filed there when made out.

Last of Forum Talks Engaged

"The Rising Generation And Its Moral Task" To Be Subject

At the last lecture of the year's series, to be held Wednesday evening at 8:15 in the college auditorium, Dean Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago will speak on the subject "The Rising Generation and its Moral Tasks."

Dr. Mathews, who became professor of historical and comparative theology at the University of Chicago in 1904 and dean of the divinity school there in 1906, has held a number of responsible positions.

He has served as professor of history, Colby college; lecteurer on New Testament literature, Newton Theological institution; president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; chairman of the executive committee of the world conference on international peace through religion; and lecturer under the Harerford college library foundation.

In addition to his work in these capacities, Dr. Mathews is an author with some twenty-five publications to his credit. Among these are "The Gospel and the Modern Man," "The Church and the Changing Order," "Jesus on Social Institutions," and "Scientific Management in the Churches."

According to Dr. Elizabeth Andrews, at the conclusion of the lecture those persons who are interested may adjourn to the little theater for an open forum with Dr. Mathews as the leader.

Broward Lounge To Be Club Room

Any Organizations May Meet Socially Here

Broward club room, which has recently been redecorated and refurnished is now open for use by faculty members and students.

It will be available for meetings of the religious workers' council, for all social meetings of honorary societies and clubs, and for informal parties. It is not to be used for a date parlor or for business meetings of any organization. The room has a piano and seating space for about sixty-five people.

This club room has been provided in answer to the need for a place where faculty and students may meet informally for conferences, friendly contacts, and group meetings.

For use of the room each group must sign in the office of the dean of students in a book kept for this purpose, in order to avoid conflict.

Williams Speaks Here

At the regular meeting of the American Association of University professors which was held Monday night Dr. D. E. Williams of the state department of vocational education spoke on "The Vocational Work Being Done in the State Among Negroes."

Special Privileges For Riding and Dating Are Granted

The annual Junior-Senior prom and its attendant activities in honor of the upper classmen will begin tonight with the presentation of Noel Coward's play, "Hay Fever." At this performance of the play, directed by Miss Kemper Moore, a special section in the Augusta Conradi theater will be reserved for the juniors and seniors and their escorts.

Informal dancing will begin tomorrow morning at the sorority houses with sports dances at the Sigma Kappa, Theta Upsilon, Delta Delta Delta, Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Xi Delta, and Phi Mo houses.

The houses holding early afternoon dances are the Alpha Omicron Pi and Chi Omega houses.

The Kappa Alpha Theta sorority will have a mid-afternoon "pink tea" dance from 3:00-5:00 o'clock.

From 4:30-6:30 the University Clubmen will play in the gymnasium for the Junior-Senior dormitory girls' tea dance. During the same hour the Alpha Chi Omega, Alpha Delta Pi and Kappa Deltas will have their dances.

As a culmination of the day's activities, the University Clubmen will again play in the college dining hall for the prom which is to begin at 8:30 o'clock. Those who are to be in the receiving line include Dr. Edward Conradi, Miss Louise Conradi, Dean Olivia N. Dorman, Carolina DeMontigne, Helen Wilson, and Margaret K. Anderson.

As a special concession to the juniors and seniors, light flashes for those attending the prom will be at 12:15, 12:30, and 12:35 a. m.

There will be no intermission at the prom. Those having dates for the prom may sign on their date cards for the entire day and may also have the privilege of riding unchaperoned except during and after the prom other than going to and returning from the prom with escorts.

Islam is Topic Of Yonan's Talk

Native Persian Condemns Moslem Practices

In comparing Islam with Christianity on a Florida Chain of Missions program in Ruge hall Tuesday, Dr. Isaac Yonan, who has lived in Persia most of his life and who has studied the Islam religion for fifty years, condemned Islam as one of the greatest yet most intolerable of the religions today.

Dr. Yonan has made wide studies of religions and is considered an authority on the language of Christ. He comes from a family that has lived in Persia for 800 years, a country, he declared, whose entire population with the exception of one or two per cent is Islamic.

In tracing the history of Islam, one of the youngest yet most widespread of any of the religions today, one-seventh of the total population of the human race being Islamic, Dr. Yonan pointed out two contributions that Islam could make to world progress. Prohibition is one, he said, citing an instance in which the Mohammed declared that no man should touch even the blade of grass which grew from earth covering a drop of liquor in a well seventy feet deep.

A second contribution of Islam is its absolute intolerance of idols, according to Dr. Yonan. Before Mohammedism would be received, Mohammed had to abolish one hundred and fifty idols, and even though he did it in a crude way, he is to be commended, Dr. Yonan said, for no idols are found in Islamic countries today. The Islams accuse Christians of idolatry in their worship of the Trinity, and no amount of reasoning can make them understand the Christian's conception of it.

Dr. Yonan believes, however, that the defects of the religion probably outnumber its good points. One defect lies in its origin, not in the fact that not one iota of it is original but in the manner in which it forced itself on the people. In their extraordinary zeal to subjugate others to the great Allah, the Islams left a trail of blood behind them, Dr. Yonan said, but added that in their personal missionary spirit they may be considered superior to Christians. They have

(Continued on page three)

Yale Singers Give Concert Tuesday Night

Program Contains Carols, Spirituals, Ballads, College Songs

BARTHOLOMEW IS GROUP'S DIRECTOR

Forty-one Included In Chorus Traveling On Concert Tour

Forty-one male singers will make their appearance on the artist series program next Tuesday evening at eight-fifteen o'clock in the college auditorium when Director Marshall M. Bartholomew presents the Yale Glee Club in a program of ritualistic spirituals, rough sea chanties, old ballads, folk songs, and carols, and well-known Yale songs.

The club, which is now on a concert tour of the Southern states, has prior to this trip given a joint concert with the Harvard University Glee club the night before the Yale-Harvard game, the annual concert in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel in New York, and an Old Timers concert in New Haven besides various other concerts in Bridgeport Conn., Albany, N. Y., and other cities.

Program

The program to be presented Tuesday night will be: A Song for Old Yale, Thomas G. Shepard; three traditional sea chanties, A-Roving, Mobile Bay, and Shenandoah, arranged by Bartholomew; Appalachian Mountain Ballads, tenor solo by R. O. Williams; folk songs, Serenade in the Snow (Swiss), Franciscus Nagler, Ballynure Ballad (Irish), arranged by M. Bartholomew, Bonnie Lighter Boy (English), arranged by Arthur E. Hall, Songs of the South, collected and arranged by M. Bartholomew: Humble in My Soul (spiritual), Wind Blow Over My Shoulder (spiritual) by a double quartet, Little David, Play on Yo' Harp (spiritual) arranged by A. M. Lewis, Po' Ol' Lazarus (negro work song) arranged by John Work; Piano Duets by the Howard twins; bygone ballads, Our Boat Sets Lightly On the Wave, duet by B. D. Henning and G. D.

(Continued on page three)

Debate Teams To Meet Here

University of Florida To Oppose Rutgers On March 30

The debating teams of the University of Florida and Rutgers university, of New Brunswick, N. J., will meet in the Augusta Conradi theater, Saturday, March 30, at 8:15 p. m., the University of Florida taking the negative on the question: "Resolved that the nations should prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions."

This year the University is sending men out on five debating tours. To date Florida has won nine decisions, lost one, and has competed in eight non-decision debates. The eastern team during the first half of March won decisions over George Washington, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Princeton, Rutgers, and Lehigh. On this trip they also had non-decision debates with Duke, New York university, Columbia university, Muhlenberg college, and Johns Hopkins.

Recently three men went on a two-weeks' tour of Louisiana and Texas. They were scheduled to meet Louisiana State university, Southern Methodist, a series of debates with the University of Texas on a joint tour through middle Texas, Baylor University, Texas A. and M., Rice institute, and Loyola.

Four Florida debaters toured Florida winning decisions over Stetson university, and Washington university on tour in Florida. Non-decision debates have been held with Emory university, University College of London, and two with Rollins college.

The western tour includes Vanderbilt, Indiana university, Marquette, Delta Sigma Rho debating tournament at Madison, Wisconsin, University of Chicago,

(Continued on page three)

Blood and Graham Head Student Body

Off-Campus Meetings Are Scheduled Soon

A series of joint house meetings of chaperones and house chairmen of sororities have been planned by Mrs. Charlotte Beckham, director of off-campus housing. General discussions of work of the year and plans for next year will feature these meetings, the first of which is planned for next week.

Clubmen Will Play for Hop

Night Club Theme to Be Featured at Dance For Sophomores

With the engagement of the Clubmen, University of Florida dance orchestra, plans for the Sophomore hop which will be held April 6, in the gymnasium are near completion, according to Peggy McMichael, general chairman of the dance.

Entertainment plans will feature a night club theme, said Mary Jeanne MacKay, chairman of the entertainment committee.

The hop will be a part program, part tag dance with dances on the programs listed as a "no-break" and the encores reserved for "tagging."

Attendance at the dance is limited to sophomores who may buy either date or stag tickets for fifty-cents. In order that the floor may not be too crowded only 100 date tickets will be issued unless the stag ticket sale is slow enough to warrant extending the number who may be invited to the dance.

Pop dances will be held in sorority houses for sophomores and their guests all day Saturday of the dance. There will be pop dances at four sorority houses in the morning and at four others in the afternoon, to which all dormitory and sorority girls will be invited.

Committees for the dance arrangements are: invitations, Marjorie Moore; programs, Martha Makemson; entertainment, Mary Jeanne MacKay; and decorations, Frances Thomas, Jean Clark, Frances Morrow and Eileen Masters.

Summer Session Rumor Is False

Undivided Term Will Run Usual Period Of Eight Weeks

Contrary to the recent discussion on campus of a possible two-session summer school next summer, the summer school program will again run eight weeks as it has in past years.

Dean Nathaniel Salley, of the school of education, in summarizing the advantages of a summer school of one session, states them thus:

"In the first place, the amount of credit for work is well understood. An able student with an average of 1.7 can earn as much as twelve credits.

"Three summers will satisfy residence requirements for the bachelor's degree or for the two-year diploma if a student meets other requirements. Four summers will satisfy residence requirements for the master's degree.

"While working for college credit a student can satisfy legal requirements for extension of her certificate.

"The period of eight weeks is a half semester and fits into all curricula offered by the Florida State College for Women.

"A term of eight weeks is long enough to earn substantial credit and not too long to be spent in study during the summer months.

"There is a holiday of two weeks before the opening of summer school and a holiday of a month after summer school.

"The advantages of continuing our practice of having a summer school of eight weeks," he adds, "far outweigh any possible disadvantages."

Persons, Krentzman, and Webb to Edit Campus Publications

NAME LINN NEW Y. W. PRESIDENT

Panowski Will Direct Athletic Group Next Year

Katherine Blood will serve as president of the College government association and Margaret Graham as chairman of judiciary for the coming year as a result of Tuesday elections. Katherine defeated Minna Dunn by a vote of 632 to 174 and Margaret defeated Mary Etta by 468 to 330.

Martha Makemson and Janice Borton were elected first and second vice-presidents, respectively, of the College Government association while Marjorie Raulerson was elected secretary and Margaret K. Anderson, treasurer.

Persons to Edit Flambeau

Ruth Persons is the new editor of the Flambeau, Edith Webb, editor of the Flastacowo, and Sarah Krentzman, editor of the Distaff.

New business managers of publications are Mary Bruce Patterson, Flambeau; Anna Belle Linger, Flastacowo; and M. Katherine Gibson, Distaff.

Lucy Cee Linn was elected president of the Young Women's Christian association yesterday, defeating Gladys Oliver 308 to 136. Rose Panowski won the office of president of the Athletic association from Katherine Beyer by a vote of 418 to 153.

Representatives Chosen

Minna Dunn and Mary Etta Thistlethwaite were named senior representatives to judiciary, polling 432 and 350 votes respectively; Josephine Binion and Marjorie Moore junior representatives, polling 371 and 356 votes, and Dorothea Marsh, sophomore representative, polling 307 votes.

The six house chairmen elected were Betty Akin, 456 votes; Audrey Farmer, 408; Gladys Oliver, 384; Lillian Turlington, 362; Barbara Greene, 349; and Virginia Cromartie, 333.

Other officers of the Y. W. C. A. are: vice-president, Anne Norris; secretary, Sue Whitaker; and treasurer, Helen Cate.

Additional officers of the Athletic association are: vice-president, Beth Daane; secretary, Marjorie Horton; treasurer, Frances Lewis; and senior intramural manager, Dorothy Lancaster.

Five Are Tapped By Chi Delta Phi

Organization Recognizes Literary Ability

Chi Delta Phi, national literary honorary, tapped five girls Saturday and will initiate them either the first or second week of the second quarter. This is the last tapping of the honorary for this year. At the next meeting, to be held shortly after initiation, new officers will be elected.

Chi Delta Phi plans to sponsor lectures on writing in the near future, to be given either by Dean Dodd or Dr. Diffenbaugh. During this year the honorary has had as its aim the filling of the place of an advance composition course that is not offered by the college. Such a course is expected to be established next year and the honorary will work with it.

Chi Delta Phi consists mainly of upperclassmen, with a few undergraduate members who have been taken in for their outstanding work.

Those recently tapped are: Edna Hoffman, graduate student, and Edith Patterson, Mildred Boss, Agnes Reedy and Clotilde O'Rourke.

Old members are: Betty Bradford, Lucy Fulghum, Carol Reeves, Louise Robertson, Barbara Sandquist, Isabelle Perkins, Daisy Parker, Melvyne Wahnish Helenmary Fritsch, Lorraine Hudson, Ida Engel, and Lois Virginia Williams.

New Education Building Moves To Completion

Cost of Structure Will Approximate Sum of $60,000

Construction of the completely rebuilt education building, which has been under construction since last March is scheduled to be completed April first, according to Herbert D. Mendenhall, resident engineer.

The cost of this building when completed will be approximately $60,000, which has been obtained from three sources: $30,000 in labor and materials from FERA; $15,000 from the student activity fund: $10,800 from the general building fund of the board of control; and the remainder in labor by the college carpenter, plumber, electrician, and architect.

The new building, which has a basement and three floors, will have the same outward appearance as the former one. Its dimensions are 112 feet east and west by 75 feet north and south at each end and 54 feet in the central wing.

While all the enclosing walls of the new building will be of brick, the roof structure will be supported on steel, the flat part finished in tin and the sloping part in tile. The old structure was built entirely of brick with no consistent ties to hold it together either vertically or horizontally. Thus if one side moved more than the other it would crack. In the new building all the foundations carry down to a uniform stratum and are tied together so that any tendency to slip laterally or settle in any local part will be resisted and the whole structure will settle together.

Since the basement floor is right on the earth it will be finished in cement. The other floors will be finished in cement and overlaid with linoleum. With all walls and floors of conrete and the petitions of plaster on metal lathe, the new structure will be as nearly fireproof as possible. Twenty-four additional windowe in the main wings and thirty-two additional windows on the attic will make the ventilation of this building an improvement over the former one.

When the building is ready for ocupancy the rooms on the basement floor will be occupied by the industrial arts department, which is now located at the demonstration school.

The four corner rooms of the main floor will be used as class rooms, while the central portion will be divided into offices for the psychology and education departments. The space includes room for seven offices, three for the faculty of the psychology department and four for the education faculty.

The entire second floor will be ocupied by the psychology laboratories. which are now located on the fourth floor of the history building. Before they are moved over to the new quarters the equipment that is now in the laboratories will be supplemented with some new apparatus.

Final plans for the use of the third floor have not been announced.

Make Prom Week-end
Complete by Dining at the
DUTCH
KITCHEN

Three Torches
PROM SPECIALS:

Chocolate Pie	5c
Pecan Pie	10c
Deviled Ham Sandwich	10c
Chocolate Milk with Ice Cream	5c

— WE DELIVER —

Gay, Romantic Atmosphere Will Prevail on Campus for Week-End

Elaborate Preparations In The Making For Annual Prom

Prom week-end, the time of gaiety, fun, and romance for most juniors and seniors, of dejection and envy for unfortunate sophomores and freshmen, has again rolled around.

For weeks the lucky juniors and seniors, who have invited their best boy friends to the dance, have been scouring all of the dress shops in town and in neighboring cities looking for frocks to outshine those of the others. Those same upperclassmen have been faithfully dieting so that they can look as sylph-like as possible. Tomorrow night will see these girls with perfect coiffures, dyed eyelashes, purple fingernails, silver slippers and jeweled hairclasps going down the dining room arcade with their tuxedoed escorts.

There is no doubt that all the beautifying cream in town has been bought and every shade of lipstick from natural to vivid has been tried and not found wanting. Yes, prom week-end is truly here.

The first prom ever to be held here was that of 1928. This dance was suggested by Mrs. Charlotte M. Beckham, then dean of women, and consisted of an elaborate supper and ball. At that time the men were not expected to wear tuxedoes. However, the supper was discontinued and the tuxedos introduced, and thus it has remained.

At that prom in 1928, which was held on February 11, the programs were in the shape of hearts and provided for eight dances. Since then the number has been increased to ten dances and the date has been changed to late March.

The first patrons and patronesses were Governor and Mrs. John W. Martin, Dr. and Mrs. Edward Conradi, Professor and Mrs. Arthur Williams, Dean Charlotte M. Beckham, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Kellum, Dean and Mrs. N. M. Salley, Dean Ella Scoble Opperman, Dr. Jennie Tilt, Dr. and Mrs. Herman Kurz, Miss Rowena Longmire, Miss Olivia N. Dorman, and Mrs. Virginia T. Sloan.

The floor committee was composed of Dr. William H. Rogers, Dr. Harold F. Richards, Dr. Mark DeGraff, Dr. Roy A. Crouch, Dr. Herman Kurz, Professor A. Drummond Jones, and Professor Edwin O. Bargo.

All Work And No Play Makes Jill a Tired Girl If She Goes To College

Working Student Finds Complex Life Here Leaves Her Little Time For Intellectual or Social Pursuits of Any Sort

College life is not easy for the working student. From the surface view point of the bystander it is very much the same as that of other students, but to the girl herself, it is very different. So says Miss Smithers, real name concealed by request, a sorority girl working in one of our local tea rooms.

The major problem is that of time consumed at work, which might otherwise be spent in intellectual, religious, and social pursuits. Miss Smithers works a total of five hours a day, which does not seem a lengthy period in actual time, but which is double its worth when considered from the point of view of what might be acomplished along other lines during the same period. Her hours are from 7:30 to 8:30 in the morning, from 12:00 to 2:00 at noon, and from 8:00 to 8:00 in the evening. Every day, seven days a week, she must be at her post punctually a tthese times.

Even though she has no 8:30 class she must arise before anyone else, dress, and walk a good six blocks before 7:30, and is expected to be wide-awake and cheerful to the customers. All this time her more fortunate sorority sisters are still sleeping peacefully in bed. If she has an 8:30 class, she must rush through her own hard earned breakfast and walk six blocks back to the campus, to slide into her seat as the last bell is ringing. She is one person who has no extra moments before class to run over those difficult but most important irregular verbs.

At home Miss Smithers went regularly to early services at the timeEpiscopal church. Now she has to carry trays during that time.

College life is so complex and the individual's program so varied that it is seldom that a group can congregate for any length of time. However, there are three definite periods during the day when every student has the same objective in mind. Practically the whole student body is present in the dining room at breakfast, lunch, and dinner. But here again Miss Smithers loses out. While her sorority sisters are exchanging opinions and gossip over squash and string beans, she is contributing to the comfort of others. By her absence from meals, she also loses valuable contact wit hthe student body as a whole. Announcements are made which everyone promises but always forgets to repeat to her. The same situation is existent in regard to convocation. As she has to be at work at 12:00, it is impossible for her to attend this student gathering, and so she is unable to profit from the educational and religious talks, the dramatic and artistic programs, and the announcements. Thus she is often unaware of the major trends and activities on campus.

Due to the modern college girl's unbalanced and baseless social standards, the working girl suffers. Because the majority can be carefree and untrammeled by the bonds of work, they think themselves superior, not only economically, but socially and intellectually, to the girl who takes orders. Instead of admiring her for her grit and self-sacrifice in arrying out an ocupation which they would not have the backbone and mental strength to perform, they condemn her to a lower social level, and so make her task doubly difficult. Thus the sorority social butterfly often carelessly or intentionally overlooks the small courtesy of speaking to one of her fellow students, merely because she carries an order pad and pencil. This little incident, though apparently so trivial in the estimation of the former, looms large in the sensitive mind of the working girl.

Besides these major problems of the working student, there is an innumerable amount of inconvenlences which she must endure. Even her precious week-ends at home are involved. She is permitted the customary number, but frowned upon if she takes them. Also during any absence from work she must obtain a substitute who has had previous experience, and in the same tea room if possible. It may sound easy to get a girl to work for you for a couple of meals or a couple of days, but just try asking them. "Too busy." "previous engagement," "I'm not feeling very well," or "I don't want to." are the ready replies. The ntoo, the tea room waitress can never go to the show on a week night. She has to work until 8:00, and is usually asked to stay anywhere from fifteen minutes to an hour overtime, so that she cannot see a whole show and be in by 10:30.

The working girl is a social minded individual, and likes to go places and do things as much as any other girl, but can she? How many invitations to prearranged social functions, such as receptions, teas, dances, card parties, and dinner parties has she had to decline, "because I have to go to work at such and such a time." How many invitations to impromptu affairs, such as going for a ride, to the show, up town, to see so and so, or make some candy, has she had to turn down for the same reason? And when she does have the opportunity to join the social whirl, how she has to rush home from work, dress hurriedly, and have the enjoyment of her infrequent good times dimmed because her body is so fatigued that her mind cannot relax. How many times has she arrived too late, for example at an Artist Series, and had to sit on the back row or else stand up through the whole performance? How often she has come in the back door of her sorority house when they were giving a formal affair, and likely as not the door would be locked and she would have to pound on it until someone came and let her in; then the hurry to dress, and the forced politeness and gaiety to conceal her mental and physical fatigue.

This may not seem difficult to you, the work-free student, but if you think it sounds easy, try it some time and see if you have the stick-to-it-ness to carry it through.

Four Speak On Italian Policy

Local University Women Hold Open Forum

At the American Association of University Women open forum in Ruge hall, Monday night, Mrs. Harold Richards, Miss Marian Irish, Dr. A. M. Popper, and Dr. Elinor Nims spoke on Mussolini's policy of colonial expansion.

Mrs. Richards, in discussing the rise of Italian expansion prior to the World War, told of Italy's condition at that time when her people were poor and illiterate and her government weak. She described the dominating influence Germany, Austria and France have always had over Italy, and the resulting alliance of Italy with Austria and Germany, followed by her war with Turkey over Tripoli.

Miss Irish followed Mrs. Richards, discussing what Italy wanted out of the World War and what she got.

She wanted, according to Miss Irish, the unification of the Italian state and a share of the Mediterranean. Her part in the war was entirely materialistic. She was also after Trente and Triese and a part in the partition of Turkey, as well as compensation in Africa. Actually she got Trente and Triese and little else. She was given a small bit of influence in Africa, nothing she expected in Asia, a total of fifty thousand miles as compared to seven hundred and forty thousand miles Great Britain received.

Dr. Popper took up the discussion at this point on the conditions since the war. She stated that the Italians criticised the government for losing the peace after winning the war. The government was helpless with the situation of the unemployed, stagnation of trade, and total lack of governmental funds, and in this condition was easily overthrown by Mussolini and his fascists. From then on Italy turned to consideration of natural resources and expansion of boundaries. Dr. Popper devoted the remainder of her talk to the growth of Italy around Abyssinia and their subsequent treaty.

Dr. Nims closed the discussion with a general survey of the movement against Abyssinnia. She described the growth of the trouble between the two nations and their reference to the League of Nations which gave France virtually carte-blanche to go as far as she wants into Abyssinia from the East.

Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey conducted the forum.

The cassowary, an Australian bird, catches fish by sitting in the water and allowing them to swim into its plumage. It shakes the fish out on dry land and picks them up as they fall to the ground.

Society Editor's Ace Trumped To Prove Tribulations Pleasant

Student Vows She'll Show That Newspapers Get Some Things Right

By GERTRUDE KUHN

I must confess that almost ever since I have been able to read a newspaper and take any interest in current events, I have had an intense dislike for the society page of a paper. And in connection with this dislike I cultivated the belief that even the "devil" boy who cleans the type was more important than the person who had claim to the title of society editor.

Since this is a very practical age when everyone who dares to cherish a sentiment must have definite and concise proof to back up this weakness and make it justifiable to even the lowest microbe. I must also follow the examples of my contemporaries and endeavor to prove that the above-stated sentiment can really be justified.

It all began about the time that I had reached the mature age of twelve and mother had decided to give a party for me that was befitting such an ocasion. It was to be a party that would be remembered for many years by the younger set in the small town where I lived. Both my girl and boy friends were to be invited and we were going to spend the evening in the same sort of amusement as the guests did at the parties which the college girl across the street gave namely, having proms.

Well, the party came, was enjoyed, and then took its place among the other memorable events in social history. The next day I sat on our front porch eagerly awaiting the arrival of the evening paper, a small paper to be sure but, nevertheless, a newspaper. Finally the paper came. I snatched it up eagerly and turned to the society page. Yes, there was the acount of my party, but of all things. The lead of the story began with "Little Miss X entertained a group of her little young friends at the home of her parents on ...." I didn't read the rest of the story. Imagine calling me "little" and my friends "little young friends." Why, we had had proms and had danced just like the real old group, the college set, did. I was really very much insulted. Still smouldering from the remark, I asked mother who wrote the society news. She answered that the society editor did. That was the first time that I had ever heard of a society editor, but instantly I didn't like her. It didn't matter to me who held the position of society editor; I still didn't like her.

As the years passed I still held on to this dislike. I would read the society page of the paper to see who had gotten married and to keep up with other such important events, but I would turn from the paper with a "humph." Perhaps the one thing that kept this childish dislike alive so long, was the fact that at the time that I was growing up, the society editor of the home-town newspaper was a person who was seemed never able to get names spelled correctly or could never get dates or any other information in the right place. It really became a well-established saying in our town that any social write up which appeared in the paper just could not be correct. There was bound to be an error somewhere. When I heard people laughing about the society page, I swore to myself I would never have anything to do with a society editor.

Then in due course of time I came to college as do other young people seeking a liberal education. And before I knew it, I found myself taking journalism. How this happened I have no defintie recollection except that I had vowed that not under any circumstances would I become a school-teacher.

As I continued to become more deeply engrossed in my journalistic work, I found that I liked it more and more. I found that putting out a weekly paper was not a matter to be laughed at, and I began to admire those who had the responsibility of putting out a daily paper. My dislike of a society editor toned down a bit, but not to a great extent.

Then Fate decided to take a hand in the matter, At the annual banquet of the staff and reporters I was appointed society editor by the new editor-in-chief. When the announcement was made I had been busy at that moment looking at the different dresses. I heard my name read and after it the words "society editor." I didn't have much time to think about the situation that night with everyone pumping my hand and hugging me, or the next day either; but a few days later I sat down and began to think about it. Here I was with an office or position on my hands that I had sworn faithfully always to steer clear of. I liked the honor of being an editor, but I could still hear the remark which someone at home had made. "What's a society editor for anyway? They never get anything right." With a sigh of resignation, I gritted my teeth and set out determined to do my best toward proving this statement false.

As the issues of the paper came out, I began to realize more and more forcefully that the position of society editor was no idle one. It took a great deal of work to keep informed on the social activities of eighteen national Greek sororities on a campus of fifteen hundred women besides the countless other campus organizations. I found that even the professors and faculty members liked to have their names in the paper and so this meant added work. Sometimes the task seemed to be almost hopeless and I would get downhearted, especially when I would hear someone remark, "We really don't need a society page, but some of the girls like to see their names in the paper."

At first I am afraid that I was quite touchy on the subject, but soon I began to see the humor in the situation. Here people were saying the same things about my position that I myself had said about the society editor at home. Fate had evidently listened in when I had sworn never to have anything to do with a society editor and had bided her time. And when the psychological moment had appeared, she played a trump on my ace and the situations were reversed. I was now the society editor.

But I feel that I have created Fate out of the glory of her victory. I am not only glad that the situation was reversed, but I really enjoyed my work. It was fun to "stick up" for some of the society stories that I had written. Unconsciously, every time I had written a story I would think in my mind what proof I would have in case someone should challenge anything in that article. And when one of the editors would suggest leaving out a "soc" so that an insignificant story about chapel seats could go in the paper, my hair would fairly bristle and stand up. I stood guard until the last story was set up in type.

And now when I read the society page in any newspaper, I touch the page almost reverently. In my mind's eye I see the editor of that page going through all the trials and tribulations which beset the path of anyone who dares to wear the title of society editor. Perhaps someday I will have changed so completely, that I will build a home that will have a sign at the gate. And on the sign will be the words: "A Home and Resting Place for Former Society Editors."

Piano Students To Give Recital

Violin Class to Assist In Program Wednesday

A two-piano recital by the students of the piano normal department, under the direction of Miss Mary Reeder and her practice teachers, will be given in the music annex Wednesday evening, March 27, at 8:15: The students will be assisted by the students in class violin of Martha Reddick, by Mary Ann Waller on the harp, and Miss Mary Winslow who will play the closing number with Miss Reeder.

The program will be as follows: Violin Selection, Betty Ann Taylor: Rondo, Clementi-Timm, by Ruth Terrell and Harriet Kent, coached by Virginia Long; Violin Selection, Harry Middlebrooks; The Bumble Bee, Rea-Carter, by Sarah Isabel Hamlin and Francis Proctor, coached by Evelyn Chauncey: Gaily the Troubadour, Diller, by Hazel and Marilyn Davis; Turkey in the Straw, by Bobby Hofman and Harry Middlebrooks, coached by Edith Tofaletti; Butterflies Wink Their Primrose Wings, Goodrich-Carter, by Iris Watson and Betty Priestly, coached by Virginia Long; Minuet from Sonata in G, Beethoven-Prothingham, by Ruth Terrell and Anne Alfriend, coached by Edith Toffaletti; Two Slovenian Folk Songs, by Anne Waller and Harry Middlebrooks; Song of Love and Hope, Heller-Carter, by Evelyn Anne Doyis and Katherine Phillips, coached by Evelyn Chauncey; Alla Polacca, Arensky, by Jean McCord and Miss Reeder; Sonata in C, First Movement, Mozart-Grieg, by Vivienne Rainy and Ruth Terrell, coached by Julia Munroe; Golliwogg's Cake Walk, Debussy-Reques, by Miss Winslow and Miss Reeder.

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 2

ARTISTIC BEAUTY SHOPPE
MRS. C. J. McCANN, Prop. and Mgr.
210 S. Adams St. Phone 1061

Permanents

Tulip Oil	$10.00
Frederick	7.50
Eugene	5.00
End Curls	3.00

Introductory Prices....

Shampoo, Finger Wave	35c
Manicure	35c
Hot Oil Shampoo	1.00
Plain Facial	75c
Facial Pack	1.50
Eyebrow Arch	35c
Hair Cut	50c

HAIR DYE, of which we carry a complete line .... $3.00 AND UP

There is a comfortable lounging room on the mezzanine floor of the Artistic Beauty Shoppe, which the management of the Shoppe wishes the ladies of Tallahassee, and ladies from out of town, also girls and faculty of F. S. C. W., to feel at liberty to use, when they are down town shopping, or want to meet their friends.

EXPERIENCED OPERATORS!

Seniors to Get New Privile

Even the high schools are getting themselves senior priv leges, if the results of a meeti of the demonstration school fa ulty this week is a fair sampl

The privileges, which wil into effect immediately, are gran ed only to those seniors who eligible for graduation this spri Included among these is one p mitting seniors to use cert rooms at noon for their dancing being allowed there teacher chaperonage. Other cently obtained privileges a seniors having no grades than C— to leave school free periods or to leave the b ing during the ten-minute per provided they return before tardy bell; allow seniors the of the front lawn; provide senior conduction of the ass program on May 30; and e the right to chew quietly all confiscated chewing gum in Tryon's classes only.

As for eating in school, the ors may eat peanuts in Mr. W liams' classes with his permis but it is rumored that the qu fying clause in obtaining the mission is that the student his peanuts exactly in half the instructor.

Music Recital Series Continues With Piano, Violin, Organ Progr

The school of music contin its series of Wednesday aftern programs this week with a re of piano, violin, and organ nu bers. These programs occur eve Wednesday afternoon at 4:3 the college auditorium and given with the purpose of help the students gain stage ease giving the student body a cha to enjoy musical recreation.

The program was as follo Moment Musical, Schubert, Minute Waltz, Chopin, by Ma Tiller; In a Boat, Beckwa Edna Moon; Yellow Violet, M reja, by Mildred Hurst; Sonata D Major, Handel, by Anna B Larson, violinist; Spanish Gy Dance, Dent Mowery; Wa Schumann, Grillen, Schumann, Martha Wilkerson; Adagio fr Concerto in G minor, Bruch, Martha Rdeci dk,OVirginia S Martha Reddick, violinist, a Virginia Long, accompanist; Bois, Staub, by Anita Eve Eas The Harmonica Player, Guion, Louise Doyle; Concerto, D m Romanza, Allegro (cadenza Hummel) orchestral part on end piano, Mozart, by Virg Long; Finale from First Sy phony, Vierne, by Julia Mu organist.

The honey locust has a be yield than the best of sugar ca its beans are about 35 per ce sugar.

Carter's Sporting Goods Store
"IT PAYS TO PLAY"
Has Moved to Their New Location
119 South Adams Street

It's Time to "Spruce Up" for Spring!
See Our Marvelous Selections of DRESSES AND HATS

DRESSES $2.95 and up
HATS $1.95 and up

THE LADIES' SHOP
"Where the Styles are Shown First for Less"
205 South Monroe St.

The Laundry Does It Best!
☞ Phones: Laundry 808
Dry Cleaning 808
The White Way Laundry & Cleaners
Scientific Sanitary Service
The Best by Test—Let Us Prove It

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Robert Montgomery and Helen Hayes
in
"VANESSA"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Bing Crosby and Joan Bennett
in
"MISSISSIPPI"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Kay Francis
in
"LIVING ON VELVET"
THURSDAY
Ricardo Cortez
in
"SHADOW OF DOUBT"
—ALSO—
"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT"

RITZ THEATRE
FRIDAY
"TREASURE ISLAND"
SATURDAY
TOM TYLER in "SILVER BULLET"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Norma Shearer, Fredric March, Chas. Laughton
in
"BARRETTS OF WIMPOLE STREET"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
"MISSISSIPPI"

Hurt Lectures Here on Crime

Open Forum in Augusta Conradi Theatre Follows Talk

"Making Crime Hazardous and Justice Efficient" was the subject of the lecture given by Dr. Hubert Hurt, American educator, author, and research specialist, Wednesday night in the auditorium, as a unit in the regular lecture forum series.

Dr. Hurt motivated his talk by explaining why the crime question should be so important, stating that we spend 50 per cent more on crime than on wages for nine million employees of over 200 of our largest business institutions in the United States, and that statistics show crime costs a thousand dollars per household per year in this country.

"War is wholesale or directed crime," he said, in discussing the relation between crime and war to show how war reverses all the basic elements of civilization. "During times of war," the lecturer said, "we lower all our standards, and after the war our soldiers find it hard to take off the emergency standards with their uniforms and become well-ordered citizens again."

In discussing the relation of public opinion to crime, Dr. Hurt said, "Our interest in politics and legislation needs an emotional hypodermic, for public opinion is the most powerful of social dynamos, and we have in our hands the power to demand scientific legislation, particularly in regard to crime." He gave some statistics regarding the crime division of the department of justice at Washington, where they have 4,000,000 sets of fingerprints on file. Every day about 2800 more sets of fingerprints come in and 4500 criminals a year are detected right in that office merely through fingerprints, according to Dr. Hurt. This department is being built up at present. Another feature of the crime department is the crime laboratory, where they keep data on all kinds of bullets, hair, blood, etc. A system of uniform statistics was recently installed, and a training school for detectives and criminologists is a rather recent addition. He mentioned several new automatic crime detectors which through body magnetism announce as the criminal advances whether he is armed or not. Attorney-general Cummings says that the criminals of the United States are better armed than the army and navy together, according to the speaker.

Dr. Hurt conducted his lecture along the lines of seven questions about crime. Concerning the first question, "How prevalent is crime?" Dr. Hurt stated that it is difficult to know because the only statistics we have are on the crimes which have been detected. In 1932 6½ per cent of the total population in 72 cities of over 0,000 in population was made up of criminals, and one in every seven persons was involved in some sort of breaking the law.

In answering the question, "Is crime on the increase?" Dr. Hurt showed how since 1929 especially petty crimes have showed an alarming increase. In the last two years murder has increased [illegible] per cent, our average being 19 times greater than that of England and Wales. In New York city while the population doubled, crime tripled, and in the U. S. as a whole juvenile delinquency has been on the decrease since 1930. He stated that 19 is the peak age for crime and that there are six times as many boy delinquents as there are girl delinquents.

As to the kinds of crime which are most predominant, Dr. Hurt quoted statistics showing that 40 per cent of the arrests in the country are for drunkenness and [illegible]1 per cent for some motor vehicle violation, these two predominating above all, and murder ranking very low. Research in [illegible]1 large cities showed that there were 15 times as many crimes against property as against persons.

Regarding the causes of crime Dr. Hurt stated that motives are fundamentally individual and hence generalization is impossible. "The great cause of crime is that society has failed in its duty to furnish a purpose in life to so many people: it is the result of the inadequate functioning of the social process."

"The modern social theory of handling crime is to approach the criminal as the offender, rather than to approach only his offense," Dr. Hurt stated: "and we must handle him in a less machine-like way than in the past. A man who commits a crime has to go through about nine different compartments under our present system, each more impersonal than the next. We must realize that we have here a double problem to cope with: first, the criminal we have already raised, and second, some means of stopping crime with the first offense. Our first theory of dealing with criminals was that they are possessed of the devil; next we had the idea of social revenge; after that we held to the theory that the man was a criminal by nature; and now we deal with him as a psychopathic case, an ill-adjusted person, whose attitudes toward life and ideals must be changed."

Dr. Hurt in closing listed some classifications of crime, besides those of crime against persons and crime against property. Those he included were crimes caused by the machine age, occupational diseases, crimes in the forms of lobbies among business men and crimes against democracy. "The only way we can ever hope to deal with such a powerful situation is that the 'whole army' of us rise in protest and help in the war against such conditions."

Officer of C. C. C. Talks in Chapel

Tells How Government Is Working With Youth

Capt. A. C. Van Laun, officed of the civilian conservation corps, addressed the student body at convocation Tuesday, describing the work of the corps and appealing to the young women of this institution and of America to save the corps from failure.

He characterized the present movement of the civilian conservation corps as the last echo of the old Chinese saying that when China awakes she'll move the world, with the word youth substituted for Chinese. He pointed out that it was the youth of China, of Russia and of Italy that are bringing those countries to the foreground.

After traveling several years in foreign countries studying the youth movements, Capt. Van Laun said he came back to America only to discover that it's youth deserves every condemnation that has been heaped upon it. He immediately began an analysis of the trouble and found the answer in the story of the prodigal son.

Capt. Van Laun continued to say that the war had put so much money in American coffers that the youth had been conditioned to the "gimme, Dad" phrase without giving it a thought. As a result, when money no longer continued to flow there was misunderstanding and strife between parents and children and the present state of American youth was produced.

He adds, however, that in the past two years American youth is awakening and going back to the homes in the manner of the prodigal son to do the everyday chores of life. Many young people turned to Uncle Sam for the making over process and thus the civilian conservation corps took up its work of remaking the youth of America, dealing with more than a million a year.

Islam Is Topic Of Yonan's Talk

(Continued from page one)

no use for the Christians' foreign missions, publication houses, hospitals, and the like, for every Islam feels himself essentially a missionary.

Here the speaker pointed out another defect in that this attitude causes a complete lack of humanitarian spirit. He said that many Islamic countries have never heard of a child labor law, and new inventions or institutions of Western civilization are not tolerated. The reason is that the Koran is believed to be all-inclusive of human knowledge, a belief that is held by all Islams except a few Moslem intelligentsia.

Islam is defective theologically in that its conception of God is archaic, according to Dr. Yonan. There are ninety-nine names in the Koran for God, but not one such as the Christian "Our Father," which Islams think is blasphemous. God, in their minds, is a monarch, a terror, a monster. This is a completely mono-theistic conception copied from the Old Testament.

Dr. Yonan believes that perhaps Islam's greatest defect lies in the social order it creates. Even the intelligentsia of the Moslems will admit that its conceptions of woman's position in society means bankruptcy to any system. The education of women in Islam countries is comparatively unknown.

Debate Teams To Meet Here

(Continued from page one)

Loyola, Washington university, and St. Louis university.

In April three Florida debaters will compete in the annual conference of the Southern Association of Teachers of Speech in Spartanburg, S. C.

Three votes will be taken to decide the winner here Saturday night, one from the audience, one from Miss Sadie Young, and one from Dr. Raymond Bellamy.

Caroline DeMontigne will act as chairman. There will be no admission charge.

Why Can't We Be Ourselves?

All Our Modern Liberal Free-Thinking College Girls Seem to Be Cut Out After The Same Pattern After All

By ANNE DONNELL

It was Florida in March. Sunshine flooded the air and crept deep into my lungs. Life smiled joyously and worry had been drugged and still slept with yesterday.

Being merely one of the two thousand students, more or less, of this college, and as quarterlies were only a few days off, I wandered idly as a cloud over the drowsing campus. Laziness being the bread upon which I appease my mental and physical appetites I sat down on the first sunny bench I came to and the hot stone warmed me pleasantly. While sitting there my thoughts wandered and my eyes idly followed the girls passing on the sidewalks. So far away was my mind that I merely stared and saw nothing. The eye received the picture, but it never reached the brain. Aroused from my dreaming by the "hey" of a passing friend, I observed what was before me with unusual clarity.

A rapidly moving stream of girls, rushing from an 8:30 to a 9:30 class, overflowed the sidewalks and trickled across the grass and street in every direction. My eyes, startled into awareness by this hurrying humanity, discovered a unifying pattern amid the jostling atoms. Far be it from me to deny the theory of the liberal college student. On the contrary, I am in favor of her. Let her get new ideas and put them into practice, if only she will, but sh doesn't.

All this was running through my mind as I watched. The free thinking girls that I saw were all cut out acording to the same pattern. There were glittering finger nails, any tint from rosy pink to glaring cardinal, but all painted. The majority of cheeks and lips were a briliant red of varying shades, creating the artificial effect evidently so desired by the present generation. A few faces were unlainted by rouge and lipstick, earning for their possessors the reputation of not caring how they looked. Eyebrows were plucked in every conceivable shape and many shot off at queer angles never drawn by nature. Eye-lashes, unbelievebly long and silky, were dyed either darkest brown or black, even on the most golden of blondes. Every head of hair was coiffeured acording to the two latest competing fads, either in dignified braids wound in halo formation, or a mass of youthful curls, tumbling about the base of the neck. Those girls that differed with hair close-clipped in boyish manner, or lacked the stylish permanent were pointed out as tomboys and countryfied girls. The eyes, whose shape and color science has not been able to improve over nature's original creations, alone retained the individuality of the girl, and offered the only evidence by which the observer could judge her character and personality, as they are the sole features of her face which she has not altetred to meet the requirements of the pattern set forth for the modern girl.

And yet people speak of today's liberal minded youth! The true free-thinking girl is the one who is looked down upon by her contemporaries as queer, or dowdy, or extreme, because she dares to express her own taste and personality in her appearance, and does not attempt or desire to imitate the current fads of the majority.

This picture struck me so forcefully that I wondered that more had not noticed it. Perhaps they have, but lack the moral courage to act upon their convictions. But why should they? Has not every individual the right to follow her own tastes and ideas in so far as they harm neither herself nor others? Therefore why, say I, can't we be original and individual? Let us stop trying to be Katharine Hepburns and Ginger Rogers and be ourselves for awhile.

So did I muse as I sat on my sunny bench, realizing the shortcomings of my fellow students. Yet when I returned to my room I applied the customary coat of rouge and lipstick before going to my class. My mood of momentary insight and criticism was silenced by the habits of a comfortable and smug existence.

Union Marks End Of Joint Retreat

Local Presbyterians To Combine With "U"

A union between the local Presbyterian student council and the Presbyterian student session from the University of Florida was formed at the joint retreat which the two groups held here last week-end.

The president of the girls' student council and the moderator of the Gainesville student session will act as president and vice-president of the new organization, the two positions to alternate each year.

The main theme of the meetings during the retreat was "Acquainting Youth with Christ." At a special vesper service Saturday night, the Rev. Ansley Moore, Thomasville, Georgia gave an inspirational talk, "Choosing a Life Mission, a Life Mate and a Life Master."

Dean Barry, a university student, conducted an open-forum, Saturday, on general world problems. In a talk on personal religion Mr. Moore listed fifteen of the most pressing problems in the life of a college student today. Dr. Edward Caldwell led the closing meeting Sunday evening, a communion and candle-light consecration service.

K. D. Colson, moderator of the student session, presided at the student meetings, at one of which it was decided to have two meetings each year of the newly formed organization.

Other university boys who attended the retreat were Whitney Leland, Ralph Harmon, Curry Merchant, John Cheney, Sam Bailey, Bob Stobs, Bert Bassett, Donald Wright, Harold Gillis, Roger McCay, Don Stobs, Mosely Henry, Jimmy Loveless, Cameron Thompson, and Charles Turney.

Mrs. Fred Borland and Dr. U. S. Gordon, pastor of the Gainesville Presbyterian church, accompanied the boys.

Demonstration School Sponsors Art Exhibit

Reproductions of one hundred and fifty famous paintings are being shown in an art exhibit at the Florida high school this week. The exhibit, which is sent from school to school by the Practical Art company is displayed in the third floor of the demonstration school in the art department.

On Wednesday afternoon each class in the school presented a living representation of one of these famous paintings.

Yale Singers Give Concert Tuesday Night

(Continued from page one)

Vaill, The Yankee General, solo by Mr. Henning; songs of Yale from the Yale Song Book, Show Me the Scotchman, As Freshmen First We Came to Yale, Ach the Moon Climbs High, a yodel by S. Miller, Bright College Years.

The New York Herald Tribune said of the singers: "The Yale singers have a well-blended, resonant tone of large volume, while the salient feature of their singing was its spirit and precision. There was no sense of plurality in their clearcut simultaneous attacks and closes and admirably distinct enunciations.

The Newark News adds: "The applause after each of the Kentucky mountain songs sung by the Yale Glee club had the proportions of a torrential roar. They were astoundingly effective."

PERSONNEL OF CLUB

The personnel of the club is as follows:

Officers: George D. Vaill, 1935, president; Harvey W. Hemingway, 1935, manager; Stuart Miller, 1936, asst. manager; Thomas T. Chamberlain, 1935S, librarian; Howard D. Kellogg, jr., 1935, publicity manager; Marshall M. Bartholomew, 1907, director; Arthur E. Hall, 1924, mus., asst. director.

First tenors: Hayward R. Alker, 1936S; Thomas D. S. Bassett, 1935; Morton Corbert, 1937; Miles P. Jennings, 1935; Stuart Miller, 1936; Richard A. R. Pinkham, 1936; David B. Scoular, 1935; Roderick O. Williams, 1934.

Second tenors: Bailey W. Brown, 1936S; John W. Gott, 1936; Basil D. Henning, 1932; Howard D. Kellogg, jr., 1935; J. Merrill Knapp, 1936; George B. Morrill, jr., 1937; Robert O. Sprague, 1935; George D. Vaill, 1935; Richard H. Wadhams, 1935.

First basses: John M. Cates, jr., 1936; Harvey M. Hemingway, 1935; J. Norminton Howard, 1934; Alan G. Overton, 1936; Elmer W. Peck, 1936; Shepherd F. Smith, 1936; William T. Sperry, 1935S; Cope B. Walbridge, 1935.

Second basses: Karl H. Behr, jr., 1937; Thomas T. Chamberlain, 1936S; Robert G. Ernst, 1936; Holland M. Gary, 1933; John S. Griswold, 1937; Bruce Howe, 1935; Lucius Kingman, 1935; Dana G. Noble, 1936; James H. Parker, jr., 1936; Raymond E. Small, 1935.

Campus Regrets Sloan's Leaving

The resignation due to ill health of Mrs. Virginia T. Sloan as director of residence halls and her departure from the campus this week-end will be an irreparable loss not only to her personal friends but to the student body as a whole.

Mrs. Sloan has been working at the college for sixteen years as social director in Broward and as director of residence halls. Her interest in the college however, began even before that as her daughter, Mary Bailey Sloan attended and was graduated from here.

According to Miss Rose Denham, director of Jennie Murphree hall and friend of Mrs. Sloan, her influence in the college cannot be measured in words. Her Christian character, her pleasing personality, her humor, and her splendid mind together with her executive ability make her almost indispensable, Miss Rose continued.

She has gained the confidence and love of the college girls, as few in her position are able, through her sympathetic understanding, and she will always hold a high place in the memory of those who have had the privilege of knowing her.

Keith and Lumpkin Are Pledged to Eta Sigma Phi, Classics Honorary

Eta Sigma Phi, classical honorary, has pledged two new members, Rebecca Keith, junior in the School of Education, and Jessilee Lumpkin, junior in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Following the pledging the two pledges and members of the honorary had dinner in the dining-room.

The requirement for Eta Sigma Phi is a B average in every subject, and superior work in the classics department. The number of hours of Latin required varies with the class.

Initiation plans have not yet been disclosed.

New Camp Rules Put Into Effect

Are Designed to Do Away With Confusion

Changes in regulations concerning arrangements to go to Camp Flastacowo have been made and are now effective. These regulations were considered necessary by the administration because of the confusion resulting from the indefiniteness of the former regulations.

Students going to camp on Friday night must sign up in the office of the director of off-campus housing before 12:30 on Friday. Those going out for Saturday night must sign up before 12:30 on Saturday. In each case they must give the hour of leaving, names of party, name of faculty or student government chaperone, and must state in writing whether or not they will engage in water sports while there. If the group plans to engage in water sports the presence of the life guard, Miss Elisabeth Autrey, is required at the camp.

At these times when Miss Autrey is to be present at the camp no other faculty chaperone is needed, but a student government officer must be present on each party unless an additional chaperone is along.

Parties who do not expect to participate in water sports and who do not need Miss Autrey must take a faculty chaperone and must state the name of this chaperone on the slip signed in the office of the director of off-campus housing.

Any faculty group using Camp Flastacowo must secure a permit from the office of the director of off-campus housing during office hours. Annual permits may be secured from the business office of the college. Any faculty party wishing to use the canoes or boats must make arrangements with the camp life guard so that they may be present.

The men's faculty tennis tournament is now being planned and will probably begin next week. So far Dr. Paul Finner, Dr. William Rogers, Professor Owen Sellers, Dr. Hugh Waskom, and Dr. Raymond Bellamy have signed up to play, but the line-up has not yet been decided upon.

....from one end to the other

I'm your best friend

From one end to the other—never a bitter, undeveloped top leaf in me. Never a grimy, tough bottom leaf. I use only the fragrant, mellow, expensive center leaves...the leaves that give you the mildest, best-tasting smoke. I do not irritate your throat—that's why I'm your best friend, day in, day out.

I am your Lucky Strike

LUCKIES USE ONLY CENTER LEAVES
CENTER LEAVES GIVE YOU THE MILDEST SMOKE

They Taste Better

Copyright 1935, The American Tobacco Company.

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF
BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON .... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Athea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchange, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyne Wahnish; Copy Editor, Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedia McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Fain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anna Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF
ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS ... Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS .... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON .... Circulation Manager
Ass't. Adv. Manager, Mary Patterson; Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sara Beth Davis.

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Does Our Election System Need Its Face Lifted?

Every year on this campus the upheaval known as annual elections is preceded and accompanied by a critical examination of the election system itself. This can be noted as nothing but a healthy and hopeful symptom on the part of the student electorate. The campus is becoming sensitized to political theory and practice, is becoming conscious of the absence of soundness and adequacy in its own procedure. In other words, while we seem to have gotten into a rut as far as political practice is concerned, in our thinking we are awake. We are acquiring a clearer conception of what an election system should do and what it should not do—the things which must be accomplished and accounted for and the things which must be guarded against. We have not, however, arrived at a common and clear-cut idea of the sort of system which would take care of these things.

The most commonly heard complaint is that the plan at Florida State puts election on the basis of personality, not principles. It is not demanded of a candidate that she have any ideas, that she state her plans, her policy or her platform. In a system which puts a premium on ignorance, the hundreds of voters who are unacquainted with the candidates personally find it impossible to vote intelligently. They must either give credulity to rumors or judge merely on the kind of smile, clothes or sorority affiliation the candidate possesses. The system in effect at present virtually guarantees that real issues will not be brought into the political arena.

This same condition is responsible for the creation of a false and childish modesty in student leaders. The theory seems to be that leadership is not acquired but is thrust upon the individual. A student office is consequently thought of primarily as an honor, only secondarily as a job. In a finishing school where the virtue (or was it a vice?) of lady-like modesty was inculcated, a maidenly blush on the part of the one nominated for office was the correct thing. In those days women and children were seen and not heard. But today it is our considered belief that the student who hasn't enough nerve to stand up in a student body meeting and accept her nomination with a statement regarding her own plans for serving the student body, has no business holding a position on this campus.

Another well-aimed criticism, heard equally as often, is that under our present set-up political alignments and political bargaining flourish while the system prohibits any regulation of them. Under-cover political maneuvers are much more likely to be shady and irregular than above-board politics. A sound political system will recognize the facts and then deal with them in an honest way, for ignoring a thing never did remove it.

If our past and present election system is not doing what the campus expects of it it is time we examined it systematically and thoroughly from the bottom up and from the top down, and get an exchange of ideas on what would constitute a sound and sane procedure to be put in its place. Here, college government officials, is a real subject for an open forum.

Take the Masks Out of the Grade System

If the legislature is really desirous of cutting down expenses, it might try doing away with quarter exams at Florida State College for Women.

This remark is a brain-child of an omniscient sophomore. Nevertheless, more truth is told by puns than this world dreams of, and this one happens to be a fitting preface to the subject at hand, that of grades and examinations.

That there is undoubtedly something wrong with the grade system at Florida State is evident by a teacher's explanation to a senior the other day. She said, "In my opinion you are a B or an A student, but because I am obliged to abide by a testing system I can only give you what you made on your test, a C. Many of the students who make A on their tests, and consequently A on the course, do not really get as much out of the class as you do."

Under such a paradoxical set-up, intellectual life becomes a masquerade party where each of the dancers wears a graded mask. Only there is never any midnight signal when the dancers take off their masks and reveal their true identity.

The situation would be deplorable if it were not for the fact that some such signal can be given. For instance, Florida State College might emancipate itself from its grade, and presto, off would go the masks that distort the true face of wisdom.

But if Florida State abandoned its grade system what means would it have of discriminating between the poor, the average, and the better student? Well, it might look around at other colleges. There is Hopkins, for example. It has been operating successfully for three years now under a grading program that classifies its students on the basis of "failure, satisfactory work, and honors," supplanting inconvenient monthly tests with comprehensive examinations, the latter not necessarily based on lectures or text books.

Such a system, inaugurated at Florida State, would relieve the aforementioned instructor of the embarrassment of relegating a B student to a C group and, even more, of the embarrassment of having to play blindman's-bluff with her better judgment when she is forced to give what she knows to be a B student an A on the course because said student had seads of time to memorize points one, two, and three, the night before her test.

Besides simplifying grading for instructors, some such plan as this seems the only fair one for the student. It removes the reward and consequently the entire ideal of working for grades. It encourages the idea of working for what one actually gets out of a course. Put into effect here, it would assist in changing Florida State from an undergraduate institution where harassed students scull the knowledge of things about life to a graduate institution where serene individuals plow deep into the meaning of life itself.

Then what are we waiting for? It seems that there is an intellectual masquerade at Florida State. It seems that it should be ended. We appeal to the administration here to see that masks are doffed and the shining countenance of wisdom allowed to appear unadorned.

Professor, Move to the Head of The Line

Having become accustomed to the continual innovation of theories and plans in the educational world, we are prone to overlook interesting experiments.

Just such an experiment may be found under the title, "the university of exile." This university which was permanently organized only last month in New York, has for its faculty a group of distinguished scholars expelled from Germany after Reichsfuhrer Hitler came into power.

The school had its birth in the spring of 1933 and is dedicated to the purpose of continuing the post-graduate facilities for world students that many educators felt had been imperiled by the change in the German educational system.

The expelling of these learned men from their native land is indicative of the changed attitude which greets a scholar today. No longer is the professor some one to be smiled at. On the contrary the professor has become an influential figure in a nation's politics, a figure which now commands respect and due consideration. Some governments have welcomed their "brain-trusters" into the fold while others have had professors ejected from the country in the fear of what they might do. In either case the professor has moved up a couple of seats toward the head of the line.

Magazine Thumbings

By MELVYNE WAHNISH

Hazel Bowman was guest columnist this week and is responsible for the following reviews:

RUSSIA IN PERSPECTIVE.

By William H. Chamberlain.
Asia, April.

The Soviet government is taking a swing to the Right, according to this article by Mr. Chamberlain, who was a correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor in Russia during the years following the Revolution until 1933. He says that in looking back on Russia from the United States he can understand why people in this country do not understand the Soviet government.

Russia has just begun her industrial program. She need have no fear of over-production for a great while yet. In the United States we have reached the stage where distribution has become important, not production. Because of this our standards of living are high compared to those of the Russians, and we cannot rightfully make comparisons of the two countries.

Mr. Chamberlain drew several parallelisms between Russia and Germany (under the rule of Hitler). He does not neglect the differences. After seeing the close guard which is kept over the dictators of Russia and Grmany it was with some amazement that Mr. Chamberlain learned how easy it is to get personal conferences with officials in the United States.

ANTIOCH'S COOPERATIVE PLAN

By Constance G. Sontag.
Occupations, March.

The department of education at Antioch college set out to see whether the cooperative plan was helping students to adjust themselves to their jobs. The cooperative plan consists in allowing students to study half of their time in college and to work at different jobs the other half of their time.

Questionnaires were sent to 115 graduates and their employers. The answers to three vital questions resulted from these questionnaires.

First, "have the graduates in the department of education achieved satisfactory vocational adjustments?" The answer is, the majority of education graduates under the cooperative plan "have achieved a satisfactory vocational adjustment."

Second, "has their undergraduate cooperative work aided in these adjustments?" To this question 87 per cent made emphatic answer that it had helped.

Third, "how do the work experiences help pave the way for future adjustment?" To this question graduates answered that the cooperative plan helped them to decide on a vocation, gave them advanced rating as "experienced," made them feel at home in their profession upon first taking jobs, and helped to develop personal traits that in turn aided them in making vocational adjustments.

THE SOUND USE OF LAND AND WATER

J. Russell Smith.
Survey Graphic, February.

Mr. Smith has drawn most of his material for this article from an advance report of the National Resources Board to the President of the United States. He says that as a result of our policies of rugged individualism and of exploitation of our natural resources the country is being faced with another great problem, the conservation, restoration, and return of eroded, burned over, dried-up, and depleted areas to their natural state and a less wasteful method of distributing the wealth from our water power and our minerals among the people.

In the preliminary report of the Board to the President it was recommended that five million acres of farm land be returned to the public domain each year for the next 15 years. The Board also recommends a permanent public works administration to work as an "economic stabilizer."

Mr. Smith points out that the hateful "regimentation" of the citizenry of the United States (as all attempts to conserve our natural resources by law are called) is "an attempt to use intelligence and also to put the good of the many above the gratifications of private greed." To prove that he is not handing readers the usual "cure-the-depression" ballyhoo, Mr. Smith shows that the new public works recommendations and laws will not prevent or even cure depression. Their importance lies more in the future when the minerals, the water power, and the soils of this country will have become as valuable, economically, as gold.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By Hoffman

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKE

HOWEVER ludicrously Adolf Hitler may be set down in pages of history he will certainly be recorded in all fairness as just about the cleverest statesman known since Bismarck. On the eve of Sir John Simon's departure for Berlin to attempt to threaten Hitler into entering the Anglo-French peace pact, which aims at peace and armed equality for Europe, Herr Hitler in an eloquent burst of oratory rises to inform the world that Germany is again to take her place as a "respectable" nation. Respectable means to der fuehrer an army of 340,000 men plus an air and naval force which numbers around 40,000.

Of course, John Simon's trump card, so to speak, in cajoling the Nazi president to guarantee the provisions of the pact was to offer English and French consent to abrogate that part of the Treaty of Versailles which limits the German army to 100,000 men. And now Hitler has robbed Sir John of his trick. The German and the English conference, of course, will go on. Hitler has dignified that he is quite willing to discuss the matter; should England now let the conference fall through she would naturally be blamed with "endangering the peace of Europe." What may come of the conference is subject to conjecture. The greatest degree of diplomatic skill will be demanded of Sir John, for he goes into the conference with the "accomplished fact" of the enlarged German army staring him in the face.

All nations will enter, no doubt, a formal protest against the German move. But that there is any real cause for alarm is hardly to be believed. Germany has been re-arming in all sorts of ways in the past few years. A frank acknowledgement of more re-arming is in accordance with Wilson's Fourteen Points which seek to eliminate secret agreements and actions by countries.

George Lansbury, leader of the English Labor party, has perhaps touched the heart of the matter with his statement: "The only thing for our government and the French to do is to retrace their steps once again and go into conference with Germany determined to bring about a reduction in armaments. There is no hope whatsoever that another war would end in a different fashion. Only the pursuit of peace will bring peace."

UTILITY magnates last week must have smiled wryly when President Roosevelt called them "private socialists" in his denunciatory utility message to Congress. Said the President: "Except where it is absolutely necessary to the continued functioning of a geographically integrated system the utility holding company with its present powers must go . . . It is a device which does not belong to our American traditions of law and business . . It dates definitely from the same unfortunate period which marked the beginning of a host of other laxities in our corporate law . . . I am against private socialism of concentrated private power as thoroughly as I am against government socialism. The one is equally as dangerous as the other; and destruction of private socialism is utterly essential to avoid government socialism."

IF YOU stay alive until you are twenty-one, it will be the wonder of the world." Huey Long's father is reported to have said to him when Huey was recklessly bumping over Louisiana roads in his father's wagon many years ago. Be that as it may, last week the Kingfish offered a specific plan to carry out his "Every man a king" program.

This plan provides for (1) the levying of a graduated tax against property and the income from that property (this tax would make it impossible for any individual to own more than $4,000,000); (2) the giving to any family which possesses less than $5000 worth of property free of debt a share of the wealth (estimated by the Senator to be about 175 billions) that would be taken from the rich by the tax, (3) the using of the rest of this money (about 75 billions) for schools and colleges and to guarantee a month's vacation annually to every worker in the land.

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

THIRTY MINUTES FOR A MEAL, PLEASE

A majority of the students have expressed favorable comments on the installing of a radio in the dining room. The meal hour is greatly improved; and when the loud speakers are installed so that those at the extreme ends of the dining room can hear, the improvement will be still more pronounced.

The average student formerly remained in the dining room not more than ten or fifteen minutes for each meal. We realize that no one can properly eat her meals in such a short time. It is hoped that the radio will be a means of making the students remain in the dining room at least thirty minutes. Of course, we feel that the authorities should not take it upon themselves to get us out of the dining room in less than fifteen minutes after the meal begins. Why should one of the hostesses cut off the radio and tell the girls in so many words to get out? We realize that there should be a limit to our remaining in the dining room, but we say that we should be given at least thirty minutes after the blessing has been sung.

We, the student body of Winthrop College, wish to thank those who are responsible for the installing of the radio in the dining room, for in so doing, they have made the meal hour a more pleasant one. We now hope that we will be given the privilege to enjoy it.—Johnsonian

ACADEMIC FREEDOM

Several lively and fundamental questions were raised at the recent session of the Department of Superintendence of the National Education association in Atlantic City. Among the most important of these problems was just what is "academic freedom."

Academic freedom in America is limited and partial in most of our colleges and universities. The old idea that schools are supposed to indoctrinate the student with a set of ideas still exists throughout the United States.

Professor Jesse H. Newlon, of Teachers College, ably presented the argument for the case of indoctrination. He felt that "we cannot and will not remain neutral in the struggle of forces going on in this country."

Dr. John W. Studebaker, United States Commissioner of Education, replied to Newlon; he said that "I am against that kind of indoctrination that seeks to impose upon students by the process of

(Continued on page [illegible])

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticisms. Letters should be signed, marked "Flambeau" and mailed to the postoffice.

HONORS WORK

The favorite "gripe-theme" of the students here at Florida State seems to me to be "we never get a chance to do any individual research. We don't have time to do more than memorize from day to day the assignments we are expected to prepare."

Considering that common complaint it is strange that so few people take honors work. The primary purpose of the honors work as it has been presented is to give the real student a chance to dig in under the surface and find out all about the subject they are most interested in; and yet when it comes down to signing up to do that individual searching the number of "students" becomes surprisingly small.

Is it possible that of all the students listed on the approbation list with an average of "B" or higher there are only twenty-five or so that are really interested in getting anything for themselves? I was under the impression that the students listed on the paper entitled "Approbation" were the actual "students" of the college and again I was under the impression that "students" weren't satisfied with taking the opinion of one professor and swallowing it hook, line, and sinker without any question as to any other possible phases of the subject.

It strikes me as rather an insult to the intelligence and taste of the college that not more students are taking advantage of the opportunity of getting an individualized and intensive education. Is it the honors system that is a failure or the students of the college?

Signed: Martha Baker

A CHALLENGE

Baseball, the great American game, is still in its infancy as far as the majority of the F. S. C. W. girls are concerned. Not only do most of them think that it is far beyond their abilities physically, but many of them are discouraged because of the highly technical rules. The woman spectator still provides the baseball public with its stock jokes—from the woman who thought her escort was proposing to her when he said "that man on second is going to be our best man soon" to the woman who thought that their pitcher was such a wonderful player because he could always hit the bats of the opposing batters!

Fortunately our playgrounds, schools, and colleges are beginning to wake up to the fact that baseball is a game which girls can play and enjoy just as well as boys. Since baseball is being taught nowadays, rather than trusting to chance that a girl has brothers, it is coming into its own as a game for girls.

Let us consider some of the values of baseball as a game. It is a great game for many reasons. It combines the fundamental enjoyable movements of throwing, catching, hitting, and running. Dropping a fly in baseball is very embarrassing, but catching a fly gives one a thrill. And to hit the ball so far that the outfielders have to turn their backs and run for it, is a sensation which only baseball can call forth!

And the challenge of baseball to the brain! The average baseball spectator has little idea of the strategy that is going on in a professional baseball game, where, as a result of years of experience, every move is anticipated and planned for. The game as most girls play it, tends to be a "hit and run" affair, regardless of the situation, but that is because we have not realized that baseball is a battle of wits quite as much as of motor skill, and therein lies much of its fascination. Let us hope that with more baseball experience, and better teaching, the days of two base-runners standing on the same base will be of the past!

Which all brings to mind—why all the enthusiasm for volleyball and basketball and why so little for the sports coming in the other seasons in the year. These other sports are just as exciting, just as much fun, just as well-organized, and your chances for a place on the team are strong. And if you want to come out just for the fun of the game without the slightest idea in the back of your head that you will ever make even the class team, come on out. We want MASS PARTICIPATION!

Signed: Betty Bailey.

Collegiate Come-Backs

PROM POME

Listen, little prom date, and I'l explain
The reason, if you're curious,
 why you came;
It's true that you weren't the first she asked,
And you darn sure wouldn't have been the last!

You can't dance; you step on her toes;
You croon in her ear, you can't wear clothes;
You've got no style; you're a homely pan;
But she doesn't care, for, thank
 God! you're a man.

* * *

In the spring a young girl's fancy slightly turns to thoughts of the prom. From all the clothes we've seen and the ones we've le we figger it's going to be a big affair; that is, if the dates can be gotten. Our suggestion is that some enterprising student with an eye for business establish a date bureau. The answer to a maiden's prayer should be worth five dollars, two-fifty to go to the answer, with two bits thrown in if he can do the Carioca. Won't some one oblige? While we're on the subject of the prom, we think that we are speaking for all underclassmen in extending our sincerest thanks to Tau Gamma Sigma, plumbing honorary, for the generous sprinkling of their classrooms over our entire campus. This will enable all underclassmen to get a bird's eye-view of the prom as they hang out of the whitewashed windows.

* * *

We bestow the rubber nutmeg upon the graduate student who still believes everything that her professors tell her. She was much dismayed to discover that one of them had not even attended Notre Dame, much less been the football hero who led the team to victory while thousands cheered. Considering the student's degree of intelligence, we think that a man as convincing as that prof could sell caviar to F. S. C. W.'s dining-hall.

* * *

Our boy-friend sent us this
 You are a dear—
 I love each glance.
 I'd love you, too,
 If I had a chance.
 You are pretty,
  And adorable, too;
 You little darling,
 I'm glad I'm you!

—Log

Well, we're not conceited. every time we look in the mirror we wonder what the other wonders of the world are.

* * *

The season of sun-bathing has arrived, and with it the crowded attendance on the arcades of sun-tan-addicts. Since Le county went dry to protect US col lege girls from the big bad bacchanal brutes, why not continue the protective attitude by having a law passed prohibiting aviators from flying over the school? we have any menaces, they'll ly have to come from above they can't approach us any way.

* * *

How doth the hopeful fisherman
 His placid bait regard
He reels his line off by inch—
 His lies off by the yard

—Log

* * *

The Alabamian offers consolation to freshmen (defined as an atom which college breaks up into four parts) by advising that, even if you do run a temperature getting a college education, a degree in the hand is worth one hundred and ninety-nine in a thermometer . . . but we want proof. Miss— isn't the only state which duces cynics.

Dedicated to the P club:
 Little Miss Muffet
 Sat on the tuffet
 Eating her curds and whey
 Along came a spider
 And sat down beside her
 "Have some," said Miss Muffet.—Red and Black.

(Exch. Ed's note: Vir Early gets the enameled c for functioning as columnist.)

Registrar Characterizes Himself as Shock Absorber for "Florida State"

Simeon R. Doyle Always Has a Project on Foot, An Idea Up His Sleeve, and an Office Where Things Can Be Found

By MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY

No easy job is that of registrar at one of the five largest women's colleges in the United States, but Simeon R. Doyle of the Florida State College for Women likes it so well that for recreation he has some sort of related study going on most of the time. In fact, he says that if he didn't enjoy it he'd quit, as he would if he didn't feel he knew a good deal about it, having made a life-long study of the job.

Registrar Doyle calls his office the shock absorber in a college, and in addition to performing the usual functions of a registrar he believes it should be a clearing house of information for the entire campus. Although one of the busiest persons at the college, Mr. Doyle is never too busy to see anyone who calls. The door of his office is always open. There is no ante-room with a secretary who asks your business; students are encouraged to walk directly into the office where they may ask the registrar for any information they desire.

The office is indicative of the personality of Mr. Doyle. It's the sort of place that gives you an impres[illegible] "accuracy"—a place for ev[illegible] and everything in its pla[illegible]ere's no show about it; it's just a small room containing a huge desk, and around the walls are rows of bookcases and files that somehow let you know they are used. It's an office where work gets done.

Seated behind the desk, dressed in a dark business suit, relieved only by a maroon colored tie, is the registrar. Active and energetic, he walks to work every morning, and only the slightest sprinkling of gray is beginning to appear in his smooth-combed hair. His manner of speaking is as exact as his work. Tipping back in his chair and fingering a pocket knife, he told me of one of his more recent projects, an intensive study of the college registrars the country over, by way of explaining his own job. He picked up a neatly bound blue booklet—it is characteristic of Mr. Doyle that his findings should be tabulated in systematic form—and leafed through it to a section containing comments by college presidents on the office of the registrar. According to Dr. Samuel Capen of New York University the registrar is "a barometer of educational tendencies." He is "a maker, interpreter and preserver of vital statistics." Says President McVey of the University of Kentucky, "Today the registrar has become not only a recording officer but a statistician of the first degree, skilled in the meaning of grades and enrollment." President L. D. Coffman of the University of Minnesota has pronounced that "a registrar is more than a recording and rating officer. . . . He sits at the center of the university's administrative life."

In another part of the booklet were listed the thirty-six principal duties of the registrar, compiled from answers to a questionnaire Mr. Doyle sent out. Talking swiftly and precisely, he chose from the list the most important duties applying to his own position. First is the keeping of records, not alone of things pertaining directly to the registrar's office but to every phase of the college. Another important function taken over by the registrar when he came to this college in 1930 is the evaluation of credits. Prior to this time they had been kept by the dean of each school. In an effort to systematize the records and keep them accurate the registrar now has complete charge of getting high school and college transfer credits, evaluating them, and sending a report to the respective deans.

A change of policy for which Mr. Doyle is responsible is the preparation of a schedule and assignment of classes to classrooms, relieving each teacher of the responsibility of finding an empty room for her class. He has on file a drawing of each floor of each building. "I keep an accurate record of the use of every classroom on the campus at every hour during the day," Mr. Doyle said. Few registrars do this, according to the answers received to the questionnaire.

Another duty performed by the registrar of this college, but which is not general, is personally editing all of the college bulletins. There are four of these annually, one being published each quarter. Included are the general catalog, of which approximately 8000 copies are issued; the summer school catalog, approximating 5000 copies; and two general bulletins, approximating 2000 copies each. The last two vary from year to year and have included the president's biennial report, a research on certification of teachers in Florida, and bulletins on the work of the personnel and botany departments here.

Among the miscellaneous duties of the registrar is the preparation of statistical tables for the information of the president. Information is taken chiefly from records of credits sent in and from the registration cards.

Shutting the file, Mr. Doyle settled back in his chair and told me something of how the registrar's office is run. In a large adjoining room is an office force of four full time assistants. Last week they recorded grades for all the students. An average of six grades each for 1671 persons, there were close to 10,000 of them to be set down. In order to reduce mistakes to a minimum no student assistants are allowed to help in this work. The procedure followed is to put all the grades on the permanent record and from that make out the report card. An innovation of Mr. Doyle's saves a great deal of time here. A continuous form of report card prepared with carbon paper to make six copies is inserted in the typewriter as one sheet, over a sixth of a mile long. The individual report cards are detached on a perforated line and the carbon, of a cheap variety meant to be used only once, is discarded. Grades must be handed in to the office by the faculty before 5:00 p. m. Monday after the end of the quarter; reports are ready to be issued the following Thursday.

Vacations must be taken early in the summer by the registrar's employees, for of the entire year the busiest time is between the middle of July and the middle of October. Between these dates credits for new entrants are received and thousands of queries by prospective students and their parents must be answered.

Mr. Doyle is responsible for a number of innovations in his office. Since 1930 he has kept on file an individual folder for every girl in the school which contains all correspondence with her; a transcript of her credits; and notations in regard to her scholastic record, any disciplinary measures administered, and other things concerning her college career. Another innovation is a cross index file of every student who has attended the college, no matter what length of time. In making the record the registrar has gone back to 1905.

The most significant change which Mr. Doyle has observed since he has been at the college is the establishment of a constitution by the faculty and administrative officers outlining the duties of each. This constitution was adopted by the faculty April 11, 1931, and ratified by the State Board of Control one month later. It is now in operation and systematizes the administration of the college more than ever. The establishment of a definite system and governing policy has brought about a decided improvement in cooperation of the faculty, he affirmed, and since that time it has been the policy here to systematize everything so that people will know what is expected of them.

Mr. Doyle's job has not been without its less pleasant side. Describing its function as shock absorber, he said that the registrar's position was organized and has rapidly grown because of the need for some person on whom to unload blame when anything goes wrong. The registrar has been chosen to receive the kicks and bumps. He admits that he has a very few times lost patience. Nevertheless, he gets a lot of fun out of his work. Smilingly, he recounted an incident. A salesman of cleaning supplies had stopped at his office about noon one Tuesday as his was the only office open—he attends the Kiwanis meeting at 1:00 o'clock on Tuesdays so he does not go home to lunch. Entering the room the salesman addressed him. "Are you the president?"

"No," said Mr. Doyle.

"Are you the business manager?"

"No."

"Are you the dean?"

"No."

"Then what position do you hold"

"I'm the head janitor," said the registrar, chuckling inwardly.

"Just the person I wanted to see!" exclaimed the salesman. And he began to show his wares. For nearly an hour he tried to sell Mr. Doyle mops, brooms, and furniture polish until the registrar excused himself to go to the Kiwanis luncheon without ever revealing his identity.

Sport Slants

Alabama is Host At Swim Conclave

Florida Sends Faculty, Student Delegates

The University of Alabama was host last week to a swimming conference of the South. This convention was attended by several of the gym teachers and majors of Florida State College for Women.

Opening Thursday at Barnwell Hall on the Alabama University campus, the convention was presided over by Miss Frances A. Greenwood, instructor of swimming at the University. Greetings from other Alabama officials included one from Miss Agnes Ellen Harris, dean of women, and another from Dr. Ethel J. Saxman, head of the department of physical education. Miss Alfreda Mosscrop, head of the department of physical education of Alabama college in Montevallo gave a talk on the "Rating of Officials."

Friday morning at a pool-side meeting each stroke was presented and analysed by the instructors while the students demonstrated them in the water. Miss Greenwood, who has been studying the strokes in a general way from the standpoint of physics and kinesiology, held a discussion after the demonstration. In the afternoon visitors were taken on a tour of Tuscaloosa and the University campus which terminated with a tea at the house of Dr. Saxman.

At the meeting Friday night Miss Greenwood gave the summaries of the pool side discussions which included the best technique and methods used by each instructor. Plans were then made to have the 1936 conference again at the University of Alabama.

Those attending this meet from Florida State College for Women were: Misses Mayer, Autrey, Stewart, Fox, and Beatty; Juanita Buchanan, Mary Ward Peterson, Rose Panowski, Victoria Crisp, Eleanor Flint, Claire Redfield, Mildred Lovell, and Mildred Johnson.

States represented were Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, and Tennessee.

One the Spot With Sports

In the women's faculty tennis tournament last week Miss Grace Fox defeated Dr. Eleanor Valentine thus qualifying for the semi-finals which will be played off next week. The line-up for the semi-finals is as follows: Miss Grace Fox vs. Miss Edith Lynn.

◆

The semi-finals of the freshman tennis tournament have been reached and will be played off this week. Last week Marjorie Horton defeated Frances Lewis and will next play Eileen Robinson who defeated Marie Joffre. Other freshmen who have reached the semi-finals are Evelyn Glasier, who won from Audrey Cooper by a default, and Felicia West, who defeated Evelyn Fisher.

◆

The senior tennis tournament finals will be played off this week by Charlotte Cameron who won from Wilma Bristol by a default, and Lucille Ferguson who defeated Frances Hurlin.

◆

The Odds have not been making a very good showing as far as attendance is concerned at baseball practice. We hope to see a few more out from now on.

◆

With inter-class tennis games about three weeks off we have noticed that the juniors and seniors are doing the least practice. There are about three from these classes who have been showing up regularly while the freshman and sophomore classes there are anywhere from 13 to 20 out for all the practices. What is the matter, you upperclassmen, lack of enthusiasm?

◆

Wynn Tootin defeated Nettie Taylor last week and now claims the title of junior tennis champion.pion.

◆

The "F" club goats have been given a project to work on. They are to keep the "F" bulletin board supplied with posters on sportsmanship. The one this week has received a considerable amount of favorable comment. It is on the bulletin board next to the C. G. A. space and portrays good sportsmanship throughout the day.

◆

Th intramural basketball tournament which has been at a standstill lately will be resumed after the quarter, according to Marion Weeks.

◆

There will be no play nite this Friday.

◆

The long-awaited telegraphic swimming meet will take place next Friday night at the regular play nite. All of the officials and participants will be announced next week.

◆

Betty Bailey and Rose Panowski are attending a Physical Education association meeting in North Carolina. They will return Sunday.

Gator Baseball Team Plays Vols Saturday

The University of Florida baseball team, coached by Ben Clemons, will play the Nashville Volunteers of the Southern Association here tomorrow afternoon at the Centennial field.

The game is being staged as a "Booster Day" for two Nashville players who are former students of the university, and Coach Clemons, a Tallahassee boy.

Manager Frank Brazill of the Vols, who are in spring training here, announced yesterday that Hal Stafford and Bob Helvey, 15-year-old high school boy, would be his starting pitchers. Coach Clemons is expected to send "Herb" Penneck to the mound.

Contemporary Students

(Continued from page two)

propaganda the particular beliefs of the individual instructor."

We can see much basis for the argument of Mr. Newlon but we still believe that professors should give both sides of any question up for discussion in their particular class rooms. Education should be a search for the truth and it is only through the consideration of all factors entering a question that the truth may be found. Education cannot logically be regarded as a process of indoctrination unless one believes that final truth has been discovered and that learning must henceforth be concerned chiefly with the spread and preservation of the truth.

Knowledge has and will continue to grow and change. Therefore, students have the right to compare and question. That free inquiry is the real ideal of education.

Although the doctrine of free inquiry is slow in coming to Southern schools we believe that the new society which is springing up in the south will demand the right to follow that doctrine. Any move in this and other sections of the country will need to be accompanied by the critical spirit if it is to be made worthwhile.—Auburn Plainsman.

WHY COMPROMISE?

President Roosevelt seems to be "in a bad way" these days what with many of his used-to-be supporters deserting his principles daily, and the powerful public press becoming only lukewarm in its defense of administration policies.

Not all of Mr. Roosevelt's attackers are rock-ribbed Republicans, either. Several of our leading liberal editorialists are now taking the Democratic chieftain to task for several of his actions in the past few months. According to a number of this group, most of the criticism which has been directed at the president has had to do with his attempts to compromise any issue upon which he has been opposed.

For a while we thought that most of the criticism of Roosevelt was nurtured in the form of discontent at the slowness of promised recovery. Everybody seemed to be dissatisfied because prosperity had not returned in two years. Naturally, any normally intelligent person could see that no such phenomenon as absolute recovery in such a short while was likely. Therefore, we assumed a watchful and waiting attitude toward the whole furor and held that the president was "right."

We still have faith in the present administration to accomplish the desired results as long as it follows its original course. As Oswald Garrison Villard points out in a recent issue of The Nation. "he (the president) rose to his opportunity and to the needs of the hour in a way to surprise, delight, and astound many who had known him for years" during the first half of his rule. But The Nation also brings out the fact that at present Roosevelt goes first to the right and then to the left. "At one time he attacks a group, next he seeks to appease it. This is so obvious that everybody is dwelling upon it," continues Villard.

Roosevelt started out on an idealistic course in which he hewed straight to the line. Of course, in continuing this course the president would have been forced to accept defeat at several points along the way. But at that we had rather see him stick to the plan which won him so much support than to attempt to compromise issues at every bump on the road to recovery. —Auburn Plainsman.

TWENTIETH CENTURY CIVILIZATION

According to Mr. Webster civilization is an "act of civilizing, or a civilized state; an advanced condition of social culture." Yes, that is what we have in this great twentieth century: civilization. How terrible it must have been to have lived in barbarous times. But now one can live in peace and in "an advanced condition of social culture."

Think of the Bolivians and the Paraguayans! They are having a glorious time down there. And even in southern Europe civilization is just getting started. Italy and Ethiopia are settling their disputes just as civilized states should—at the point of the bayonet. In Greece two women are said to be jealous of each other, so thousands of men graciously shoot each other down for the benefit of these rich old girls.

Hoorah for twentieth century civilization! Germany is so civilized and cultured that she does away with her enemies in the kindest of possible manners—she just chops their heads off.

Scientists say we have been descending from the apes for twenty million years, and from all appearances that is true. In twenty more centuries just think how far we will have descended. —Crimson-White.

Critic Teacher at Florida High Gives Views on Study in Paris

Mrs. Andrew Miller Believes an Advantage Lies in The Opportunity to Attend Foreign Lectures

After graduating from Florida State College for Women at the age of nineteen, Mrs. Andrew Miller, who is now a critic teacher of French in Florida high school, spent a year in Paris in order to increase her knowledge of the French language. Mrs. Miller thinks that Paris is a wonderful place in which to further one's knowledge, either through study at the world-famous University of Paris, or by study of French customs and people through personal contacts.

"Paris, said Mrs. Miller in a recent interview, "is an ideal city for those who delight in historic settings, for the city is full of them. Awe-inspiring cathedrals, noted the world over for their style of architecture and antiquity, present a distinct advantage and thrill to those who view them. Parisian architecture of the present day is in keeping with the modern trend and is striking in its distinct difference from the buildings of a former day.

The well-known open air cafes of Paris are very much frequented by tourists and inhabitants of Paris who spend the time either in reading, studying, or watching the passersby. At first Mrs. Miller could not reconcile herself to the thought of spending so much time in a cafe, but as the length of her stay in Paris increased, she became one of the many cafe "fans."

The Parisian custom of eating, differing slightly from that of America, consists of four meals a day. Besides the regular three meals a day, a fourth repast takes place at four in the afternoon at which time refreshments consisting of pastry and tea are eaten. The French pastry shops are quite popular at this hour of the day, since they specialize in refreshments of this nature.

During her stay in Paris Mrs. Miller availed herself of the many interesting opportunities offered to hear lectures given for the most part by foreigners in the language of their countries. In this way broader contacts with languages of different countries were made. The fact which probably accounts for the giving of lectures by men of different lands was that the University of Paris consists of students from practically every country in the world. According to Mrs. Miller, classes which she attended had representatives from many nations. Classes were taught in French, a fact which necessitated each student to have some knowledge of that language.

One distinguishing bad feature of the city of Paris, as a whole, according to Mrs. Miller, is the atmosphere which is especially thick and heavy during the winter months. One can look directly at the sun because of thick clouds which usually cover it.

Musicians Hear Own Recordings

Members of the music department recently had a chance to hear themselves as others hear them.

C. V. Kettering, agent for a recording company was at the college recently and made records of Miss Etta Robertson, soprano, Martha Reddick, certificate student in violin, and Virginia Long, certificate student in piano.

The recordings were made to illustrate the value of reproducing exceptional student or faculty performances, of teaching by allowing students to hear themselves and for various other uses in the music department.

They Don't Cut Their Classes In Istamboul

Miss Amy Briggs Talks Turkey on Women's College There

College students in Turkey are more serious than those in America, according to Miss Amy Parris Briggs, assistant professor of art here, who has taught for three years in the American Women's college in Istamboul. "They're much too polite to cut a class," says Miss Briggs, and some of their schedules would make us turn over in our graves."

While we have only one roommate, students there live in a room with probably twenty other girls. The dormitories are made up of long rooms with rows of beds in them. However, Miss Briggs explains, the girls never go near their rooms except to dress and to sleep.

This college, which is supported by American trust funds of the Near East College association, has a total enrollment of about the five hundred, including Turks, Armenians, Greeks, Bulgarians, Americans, English, and Jews. It is located just within the city limits of the city once called Constantinople.

There is no religious life in a school in Turkey because of regulations by the government. However, Miss Briggs adds, there is a service on Sunday morning, which includes talks on good books or musical selections.

At the time when she taught there which was from 1929 to 1932, most of the faculty members were American, but there were a few English, French, Bulgarian, and Turkish teachers.

"It's a queer country," says Miss Briggs, "but it is maddening and once you've been there you want to get back, that is, if it weren't so hard to get packages through the customs house, and one always forgets something."

I AM WAITING TO SERVE THE COLLEGE GIRLS WITH MY New Terraplane College Bus
A. A. ALLEN

Enhance Your Loveliness at the Prom With Flowers from . . .
JEAN THOMPSON
FLORIST
ROSES
LILIES OF THE VALLEY
SWEET PEAS
GARDENIAS
VIOLETS
ORCHIDS
777 Miccosukee Rd. Phone 379

Bennett's
Bennett's Special Rich Ice Cream, pt. 15c
75c Bennett's Club Luncheon 40c
25c Chocolate Nut Sundae 15c
25c Marshmallow Mint Sundae 15c
15c French Limeade 10c
25c Frosted Limeade 10c
30c Fresh Fruit Banana Split 15c
20c Peanut Butter and Jelly Sandwich 15c

Melvin and Annie Ruth
Announce the Opening of
"THE POWDER PUFF"
Faculty and students are invited to inspect this new modernized beauty shop.
Permanent Waves are given by experienced operators using the new Thermostat Durat Machines.
108 S. Adams - Telephone 656

LATE GEORGIAN
the new Sterling by GORHAM
It is a pleasure for us to show you this new pattern in Gorham Sterling, rich with the best characteristics of two famous periods ...the Georgian days of Old England and the Colonial days of America.
Late Georgian is available in single pieces ... or complete service.
Six Teaspoons are $9.50
MOON

The PHOENIX HOSIERY TWINS PRESENT RACING COLORS
STYLE PACERS IN SPRING HOSIERY FASHIONS
SADDLE for greens and yellow
PADDOCK for reds and rusts
TURF for navy and bright blues
JOCKEY for browns and wine reds
79c
The odds are in favor of Phoenix with the Custom-Fit Top, Shadowless hosiery and the Tip-toe and Duo-heel reinforcements.
LINDEN'S
FASHION SHOPPE

Genuine "SEAMPRUFE" Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

Pure Silk
Tea Rose - White
—Shadow-proof!
—Seams will not rip!
—Beautiful lace!
$1.98
Sizes 32-44
GELBERG'S
"Style Plus Economy"

The Social Week

Annual Junior-Senior Prom Concludes Day of Informal Dancing at Sororities

Grand March is Scheduled To Begin Promptly At Eight-Thirty

The many social activities of the sororities and organizations of the campus this week-end will be climaxed tomorrow by the Junior-Senior prom in the college dining hall. The grand march played by the University Clubmen will begin at 8:30 and will be a signal for the beginning of the evening's festivities.

The color scheme of garnet and gold will be featured in the decorations which will take the form of a French sidewalk cafe. Small tables will be placed underneath the striped awning on the side of the dining room. A dark green background, furnished by a hedge and palms will emphasize the color in the decorations and the many colored evening dresses of the guests. Girls dressed in native French costumes will serve the guests seated at the tables with punch during the evening.

RECEIVING LINE

As the guests enter the dining room they will be introduced to a receiving line in which will be standing Dr. Edward Conradi, Miss Louise Conradi, Miss Olivia Dorman, Carolina DeMontigne and Margaret K. Anderson. After passing down the receiving line guests will be escorted to their places by the pages.

Among the juniors and seniors who will attend the prom and their guests will be: Winifred Hansen, Halvor Hansen; [illegible] Granger, Jimmy Ingle; Margaret Roe, John Crowell; Marion [illegible], Frank Pee; Mercia [illegible], Nick Joost; Adelyn Fox, [illegible] Webster; Sara B. Logan, Buck Setzer; Mary Ward Peterson, Billy Newkirk; Helen Hartness, Fred Newkirk; Louise Hill, Fred Burghard; Mary Ellen Bailey, Leslie J. Klotz; Sylvia Atren, Walter Alleshouse; Adelaide Lounds, L. C. Clements; Margaret Early, John Duncan; Margaret Wilkinson, Edward Mathis; Madeline Duncan, C. A. Smith; Laurita Pearson, Dick Sutton.

Kay Sands, Bill Everard; Mary Catherine Drennan, Guy Andrews; Juanita Buchanan, Fred Warnock; Mary Key, Allan Geiger; Ann Linger, Cleveland McKnight; Harriett Lawrence, Al Atkinson; Betty Wheeler, Rubert Goings; Linna Cheney, Fred Bossi; Carolina DeMontigne, Bill Sherrill; Margaret Murray, Buddy Nuzum; Irene Collins, Vance Duncan; Dorothy Leach, Oscar Landgren; Narcissa Leland, William Bassett; Martha Wolliston, William Cooper; Yvette Braux, John Sweeney; Marjorie Mueller, Paul Joiner; Betty Brooks, Dr. A. J. Ott; Ruth McAnulty, Albert Mosely.

OTHERS ATTENDING

Virginia Cromartie, Stuart Culpepper; Edith Toffaletti, Frank Duval; Betty Ellen Smith, John Wasmund; Ruth Persons, Clayborn Driggers; Mary Doris Baxter, Floyd Curry; Betty Hampton, Jerry Carter; Elaine Klepper, Sam Birnkrant; Melvyne Wahnish, Billy Levin; Mary Helen Forth, Irvin Harris.

Marie Wesley, Dr. McCollum; Alma Loudermilk, Laban Lively; Nell Mayes, Ernest Loudermilk; Mary Clare Kimbell, Gordon Pichard; Jane Moyer, A. L. Driggers, Clarissa Knight, James Knight; Edna Mae Driggers, George Moody; LaMerle Sutton, James Sutton; Marion Mason, Check Everingham; Carol Reeves, Gary McGraw; Mary Francis Whisnant, Charles Chapman; Lucy Houser, Gordon Lane; Betty Meyer, Jack Williams; Perry Pollock, Chas. Alford; Frances Hur[illegible]in, Hoot Gibson.

Mary Laura Tilly, Skippy Watson; Janet Griffitts, Bob Mickel; Dodo Goza, John Summers; Roberta Clifford, Jack Stanley; Anita Jones, Joe Pepper; Lucy Gee Linn, Howell Klueppelberg; Minna Dunn, Rayford Conway; Edith Webb, Jack McDaniel; Sara Krentzman, Clarence Parramore; Catherine Ash, Jewel Curry; Mary Francis Pemberton, Bob Conlon; Mrs. James Morris, James Morris; Jane McCown, George McCaughn; Happy Rankin, Chas. Durrance; Marjorie Carter, Irby J. Hickenlooper; Aline Freeman, Troy Blevins; Charlotte Cameron, Stanley Freeman; Dorothy Fineren, Jean Gourley; Mildred Williams, Earl Johnson; Virginia Weldon, George Dayton.

ADDITIONAL COUPLES

Alice Sloane, Martha [illegible]; Alice Porter, C. L. Dayton, [illegible] DeGuenther, Bob Brown; Mary Carson, Neal Faircloth; Agnes Goss, Bill Whitfield; Angela Griley, Harold Fox; Sara Graham Fred Gehan; Mary Filer, George Roller, Clarice Stanfill, Jimmy Holliday; Katherine Blood, Chas. Forman; Merle Pillingim, Larry Huggins; Helen Wilson, Woodrow Lynn.

Janie Lee Rhyne, Glenn Middlebrooks; Mary Mooty, Neel Smith; Valerie Stubbs, Roger McNamara; Betty Barker, E. V. Komarck; Edna Myrick, James Prevatt; Annis Bowen, Rufus Watts; Kathleen Owens, Bill Pinckard; Francis Moore, P. D. Goodyear; Jean Gilmer, Jim Taylor; Esther Daffin, Allan Cavanaugh; Marie Lyons, Sidney Walsh; Betty Mannings, Paul Whatley; Nette Sullivan, Francis Williams; Clairnelle O'Steen, Millard Longman; Betty Kimball, Gus McGriff; Virginia Holt, Manuel Entenza.

Sunny Edwards, Eddie Boardman; Petie Ballard, Ernest Edwards; Wilma TerBush, Bill Glass; Mary Waller McCormick, Johnny Jones; Mary Vach, Harry Wansker; Nedra McNamara, Graham Fairchild; Barbara Bandy, Emil Molkentine; Evelyn Chauncey, George Johns; Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Park T. Swindell; Bessie Ruth Falk, Cheaved Lewis; Beth Lancaster, Kent Boyle; Dorothy Lancaster, John Warren; Ethel Thomas, Phillip Browning; Evelyn Kennard, Everett Clay; Barbara Curry, Andrew Rippey; Sara Hosea, Charles Dance.

TO BE PRESENT

Elizabeth Sponenbarger, Hatten Rogers; Helen Gray, Buddy Cates; O. D. Vickers, Bob Banter; Leona Stimmel, Mortimer Bates; Fenton Woodward, Buddy Pratt; Emily Johnson, Jack Beckwith; Margaret Anderson, Dick Hunter; Mary D. Irvine, Steve Dechman; M. M. McLaughlin, Charles Robbins; Marjorie Fain, E. Neal Larry; Susan Palmer, Halvert Gregory; Sara Ball Palmer, Julian Proctor; Cecil Hicks, Tib Oven; Olive Towlee, Franklin Jefferson.

Anna Groover, Buddy Smith; Emily Hutt, Candler Ellis; Mary Brandon, Roscoe Fleetwood; Peggy Milton, Jeff Shelfer; Audrey Smith, Sidney Smith; Mamie Brinson, Tom Simmons; Mary Clare Moore, Arthur Jordan; Jo King, Burwell Howard; Margaret Flook, Porter Reynolds; Clara Langford, Ed Sharpe; Bessie Malounek, George Kelly; Mildred Smith, Ed Slaughter; Elsie Hamrick, Chas. Stoltz; Anita Mitchell, Glenn Moore; Julia Baker, D. W. Anderson; Ethel Fair Pillans, Andy Anderson; Evelyn Haynie, S. T. Dell.

Marjorie Helvenston, Marcus Scott; Helen Kibler, John Holcomb; Betty Boggs, Jay Cannon; Francis Lurvy, Bob Ayer; Mary Virginia Warren, Ivan Cornelius, Charlotte Stevens, Bob McGahay; Tad Goodwin, Shorty Roberts; Marjorie Glenn, Paul Vickers; Donna Gardner, Bill Brand; Lucile Jones, Bill Platt; Lillian Craig, J. C. Palmer; Barbara Crosland, Jack Johnson; Rosa Doub, Dr. Pat Flynn; Jean Boyd, George Winchester; Rebecca Clemons, Henry Dover.

June Dickson, Tyler Carpenter; Louise Sigman, Roger Barker; Margaret Thompson, Lanie Troxler; Louise Mackey, Jo Edwards; Francis Phillips, Dick Park; Anne Curtright, Billy Payne; Dot Osincup, Emmett Talley; Edith Perkins, Herbert Boltin; Joyce Read, Guy Seashole; Ellen Moore, Lanier Upshaw; Elinor Payne, Dell Wood; Addie Duval, Walker Wilson; Yulee Way, Billy Lazarus; Mildred Smoak, Billy Greene; Nettie Taylor, Burt Holman.

OTHER GUESTS

Janet Cook, Harold Cozart; Elizabeth Greene, John Greene; Hazel Royall, Charles Stevens; Katherine Fox, Bill Thomasson; Victoria Crisp, Read Whittle; Miriam Blaisdell, George Anderson; Melba Hutchinson, Crowell Sexton; Bernice Hutchinson, James Harbin; Margaret Edwards, Walter Shelley; Caroline Ervin, John King; Marcia Buchanan, Earl Harris; Barbara Sandquist, Albert Patterson; Betty Middleton, Jimmy Robinson; Sylvia Horner, Jimmy Peevis; Betty Beach, Glenn Wilson.

Virginia Cary, Chas. Springer; Caroline Athon, Furman Sawyer; Jessie Lee Wilder, Buster Farrington; Barbara Garfunkel, Jim Delaney; Elizabeth Filer, Bo Coulter; Elizabeth Filer, Bo Mitchell; Juanita Pace, Vernon Howard; Ruth Rainbolt, Sonny Jones; Elizabeth Stout, Pat Taylor; Elizabeth Stout, Pat Bond; Althea Smith, Ed Telfair; Edith Ayers, Robert Redding; Lucy Fulghum, Joe Hall; Elizabeth Murray, Chas. Elzey; Pat Given, John Stembler; Lurline Smith, George Thompson.

Caroline Oliver, J. J. Parrish, jr.; Helen Miller, Joe Mathis; Frances Gates, Speck Kinsey; Annie Lee Dunn, Grady Lester; Doris Bourjeois, Jose Guintena; Katherine Fuller, Carl Anthony; Beth Finley, Wallace Finley; Elizabeth Kirby Smith, Eugene Manner; Alice Wahl, Harold Wahl; Carol Farrabee, Jim Hodges; Eva Fowler, Dick Cuttchin; Doris Seals, A. P. McLain; Kathryn Barrs, Ralph Carter; Sara Camp, Chas. Hopkins; Ethel Mae Edwards, Harold Trammell.

Billie Faxon, Thorpe Fussell; Mary Frank Price, Emmett Barlow; Mildred Johnson, Sam Johnson, Katherine Inglis, Reynolds Lewis; Kitty Beyer, Ralph Inglis; Wilma Bristol, Jimmy Harrison; Rosalind Parker, Frank Carter; Katherine Yongue, Alexander DeVore; Margaret Nickle, Milliard Reid; Francis Devine, Bill McDowell; Marcia Lindsey, Billy Love; Thelma Smith, Claude Lee; Virginia Tucker, Art Greene; Barbara Greene, Jack Graham; Helen Evans, Howard Rybolt; Henrietta Thames, Jo Bloomfield; Doris Isted, Bill Setzer.

Mary Elizabeth Simpson, Alton Westley; Bernice Allen, Billy Westley; Ida Weintraub, Harry Weintraub; Olivia Embry, R. J. Bishop; Marjorie Harris, Chas. Patterson; Francis Passmore, Bill Carlisle; Zula Marchetta, Albert D'Arpa; Marion Brantley, George Smith; Mauvis Luasier, De Knight; Vivian Marshall, Gail Jernigan; Lois Hazel, Oliver Barker; Sara Mikell, Wm. Johnson; Martha Neeld, Rudolph Lewis; Doris Trawick, Jimmy Gwynn.

STAG LIST

Stags for the evening will include: Betty Hintermister, Sara Maxwell, Evelyn Comick, Mildred Stevens, Dorothy Shaw, Audrey Cayson, Edith Patterson, Muriel Nelson, Gertrude Kuhn, Elizabeth Allan, Doris Risk, Elizabeth Seay, Julia Monroe, McDonald Campbell, Louise Burgess, Jean Hamner, Nancy Felt, Jessilie Lumpkin, Jennie Rae Nall, Mary Dunn, Agnes Campbell, Adeline Tillman, Mary Bennett.

Jewel Kelly, Dorothy Godman, Mildred Lovell, Dorothy Edwards, Julia Lamar, Helen Ayala, Mary Patterson, Jo Douglas, Caroline Attanasio, Edith Flinn, Laura Crow, Evelyn Stumpe, Mary Belle Rodgers, Miriam Frye, Edith Phelps, Ruth Mock, Helen Dixon, Mary Leila Lumley, Eloise Brizard, Martha Whitaker.

Harriett Jeffries, Nina Hughes, Nancy Wilkinson, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Amorette Bullard, Helenmary Pritsch, Floy Lenert, Georgia Ruth Work, Mary Litschgi, Opal Gray, Nancy Bush, Helen Hammond, Alice Dean Mabry, Barbara Bell, Mabel Anderson, Christine Burgoyne, Jane Tombaugh, Lula Walker, Evelyn Meitin, Ethel Mintzer, Carlota Cubillas.

No Dinner Bell Will Ring Night of Prom

Because of the Junior-Senior Prom, no dinner will be served in the dining hall on Saturday, March 23, according to Miss Anna Mae Tracy, dietitian. Milk will be served on the arcade from 5:30 to 6 o'clock. Bring your own glasses. Food may be taken out of the dining hall Saturday at lunch.

University Clubmen Will Play at Tea Dance In College Gym

The sororities have made elaborate plans for a brilliant prom week-end. They will entertain extensively at the chapter houses and local tea rooms at numerous gay affairs for upperclassmen and their dates, including morning and afternoon tea dances, buffet luncheons and suppers, and breakfasts.

MORNING DANCES

Dancing in the morning and afternoon will in most cases take the form of sport dances, novel spring motifs being used throughout.

Members of the Sigma Kappa, Theta Upsilon, and Delta Delta Delta sororities will be hostesses at dancing from 10 to 12 o'clock Saturday morning. The Pi Beta Phis, Alpha Gamma Deltas, Alpha Xi Deltas, and Phi Mus will also entertain at morning dancing from 10:30 to 12:30.

Bright spring bouquets will be used in the Sigma Kappa and Theta Upsolin houses, and guests will be served punch and cookies. Tall vases of gladioli and snapdragons will be arranged in the parlors of the Delta Delta Delta house. The chapter colors, silver, gold, and blue, will be carried out in all details of the entertainment. Tomato juice and canapes will be served. Mildred Smoak is general chairman and has charge of all arrangements.

Bowls of red and buff roses will be used in the Alpha Gamma Delta chapter house during the week-end. During the tea dance punch and cookies will be served to their guests. The Phi Mus, Alpha Xi Deltas, and Pi Phis will include in their decorations vari-colored spring flowers. Tomato juice and crackers will be served at the Phi Mu house, and punch and sandwiches will be used as refreshments by the other two chapters. Mr. and Mrs. Earl Vance, patrons, Miss Anna Mae Sharp, Mrs. J. W. Bland, and Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Mendenhall will be among the guests of the Alpha Xi Deltas.

TEA DANCES IN AFTERNOON

The Alpha Omicron Pi chapter house will be open to guests from 2 o'clock to 4 o'clock for early afternoon dancing. From 2:30 to 4:30 the Chi Omegas will be at home to their campus guests for dancing; and from 3 to 5 o'clock Saturday the Kappa Alpha Thetas will entertain at a pink tea.

At the Kappa Alpha Theta house pink elephants and champagne glasses with miniature bubble balloons will be used as decorations. Over the fireplace will be hung a placard with the theme of the occasion, "Pink elephants on the ceiling—" and blue baboons and purple elephants will surround the placard. Blue-green snakes will be used as favors; and pink tea and pink elephant cookies will be served.

The Chi Omegas will use wild flowers in their rooms during their sport dance, and will serve punch and crackers. The Alpha Omicron Pis will also serve punch, and will use vases of spring flowers.

Chapters of Alpha Chi Omega and Alpha Delta Pi will follow the same idea of entertainment when they are hostesses at dancing from 4 to 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Miss Lucy Lester, Mrs. Arthur Williams, and Mrs. J. N. Sikes are included in the Alpha Delta Pi guest list.

The last tea dance of the day will be held at the Kappa Delta sorority house, where dogwood blossoms and plum blossoms will be used as decoration, and punch, consisting of ginger ale and lime sherbet, will be served for refreshments.

OTHER ENTERTAINMENTS

Exclusive parties for chapter members and their dates will include a number of breakfasts, luncheons, dinner parties, and buffet suppers.

On Sunday morning the Kappa Alpha Thetas will entertain their upperclassmen and their dates at a "Morning after the Night Before" breakfast at the Floridan hotel. Place cards and decorations will be in keeping with the theme. Wylma TerBush will toast the group.

The Phi Mus will have a breakfast at the chapter house for members and their dates.

Saturday at 12:30 o'clock the Delta Delta Deltas are having an informal luncheon at the Dutch Kitchen, and the Kappa Deltas are entertaining at their house.

Members of the Sigma Kappa, Theta Upsilon, and Alpha Chi Omega sororities are entertaining their juniors and seniors and their dates at buffet suppers, while the Alpha Gamma Deltas are having a chop suey supper Saturday evening at the house.

Dinner parties will be in full swing Saturday evening. The Alpha Omicron Pis are entertaining at the Floridan at 6:15, and the Chi Omegas and Alpha Delta Pis will go to the Dutch Kitchen for dinner.

Sunday morning the Pi Beta Phis will go out "to the second lake" for their annual chapter picnic.

The Theta Upsolin chapter will entertain informally at tea from 4:30 to 5:30 Sunday afternoon. On Sunday evening the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority will have a spaghetti supper for members and patrons.

COLLEGE CALENDAR

March 22 to March 30

Friday

8:15 p.m. Senior class will present Noel Coward's "Hay Fever" in college auditorium

Saturday

10:00 a.m. Dancing at Sigma Kappa, Theta Upsilon, and Delta Delta Delta houses
10:30 a.m. Dancing at Pi Beta Phi, Alpha Gamma Delta, Alpha Xi Delta, and Phi Mu houses
2:00 p.m. Dance at Alpha Omricon Pi house
2:30 p.m. Chi Omegas will be at home to guests for dancing
3:00 p.m. Pink tea at Kappa Alpha Theta house
4:00 p.m. Tea dances at Alpha Chi Omega and Alpha Delta Pi houses
4:30 p.m. Tea dance at Kappa Delta house
8:30 p.m. Junior-Senior Prom in the college dining room
6:15 p.m. Alpha Omicron Pi dinner party at the Floridan; Chi Omega and Alpha Delta Pi dinner parties at the Dutch Kitchen. Sigma Kappa, Theta Upsilon, Alpha Gamma Delta, and other sororities will entertain with informal buffet suppers at the houses.

Informal dancing in Reynolds parlors during afternoon and evening.

Sunday

11:00 a.m. Church services
7:15 p.m. Y. W. C. A. vespers

During the day many of the sororities will entertain members and dates with informal breakfasts, luncheons, dinners, and buffet suppers.

Monday

5:30 p.m. Orchestra rehearsal
6:30 p.m. Religious Workers Council
7:30 p.m Glee Club rehearsal
9.00 p.m. Sorority meetings

Tuesday

11:30 a.m. Convocation. "Modern Books," Miss Richardson, speaker.
4:30 p.m. Tea dance in Jennie Murphree parlors honoring the members of the Yale Glee Club
8:15 p.m. Artist series presents the Yale Glee Club in a concert in the college auditorium

Wednesday

5:00 p.m. Tea in Reynolds hall with Miss Marguerite Taylor as hostess to her freshman students
7:15 p.m. Worship service in open air theater
8:15 p.m. Two piano recital, Piano Normal classes in Music Annex

Thursday

Beginning of S. I. A. S. G. convention which will meet here March 28, 29, 30.

5:30 p.m. Tea in Gilchrist parlors given by Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Seymour
8:15 p.m. "The Rising Generation and Its Moral Tasks," Dean Shailer Mathews, Forum lecturer

Friday

7:30 p.m. Ornithology Lecture

Saturday

8:15 p.m. Debate between University of Florida and Rutgers in the Augusta Conradi little theater.

TEA DANCE WILL BE GIVEN TUESDAY IN HONOR OF YALE GLEE CLUB MEN

A number of entertainments are being planned for the members of the Yale Glee club during their stay in Tallahassee next Tuesday, one of which is a tea dance in Jennie Murphree parlor at 4:30 Tuesday afternoon. In the receiving line for this function will be Dr. Edward Conradi, Miss Louise Conradi, Mr. Walter Cowles, Miss Etta Robertson, and Miss Olivia Dorman.

The decorations for thtis occasion will be informal and will consist mainly of garden flowers, sweet peas, stocks, calla lillies, and calendulas. Miss Robertson will preside at the punch bowl.

The singers will also be guests in the dining room at dinner that evening. At this time alumni of Yale including Governor David Sholtz accompanied by Mrs. Sholtz, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cowles, and Guy Winthrop will also sit at the head table. Following the dinner the group will adjourn to the auditorium for the Glee club concert.

Acording to Martha Whitaker, chairman of the social committee, all juniors and seniors in the college orchestra and glee club who wish to have dates with the glee club men for either the dance or the dinner should sign on the social committee bulletin board.

TAYLOR AND SEYMOUR WILL ENTERTAIN INFORMALLY FOR FRESHMEN NEXT WEEK

Miss Marguerite Taylor and Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Seymour will entertain informally next week for a number of their freshman students.

The informal motifs at these functions will be carried out in the refreshments and decorations which will consist principally of spring garden flowers.

On Wednesday afternoon in Reynolds parlors at 5 o'clock Miss Taylor will receive Edith Hurst, Bette Johnson, Eleanor Fulford, Mary Elizabeth West, Adelaida Slaughter, Helen Louise Basett, Carolyn Blount, Kitty Mae Craney, Dorothy Detrick, Helen Dixon, Madge Glenn, Garey Grassfield, Willa Mary Greer, Mary Hoffman, Loka Louise Johnson, Mary June Michel, Elie Louise O'Neill, Julia O'Quinn, Virginia Shine, Mary Edwina Parker, Marjorie Weems, Glennelle Perry.

Dr. and Mrs. Seymour will entertain at a similar function on Thursday afternoon in Gilchrist parlors at 5:30. At this time Ermine Lawrence, Kathryn Eloise Andrews, Evelyn Pearl Fisher, Sarah Wells, Cora Cheney, Edna Feinberg, Darween Marrell, Hazel Adams, Minna Jane Hackney, Dorothy Olmstead, Dorothy Nye, Allie Marks, Frances Sadler, Virginia White, and Marie Jane Joffra will call.

Dinner is Given For Adielyn Fox, New Honor Initiate

The national honorary home economics fraternity, Omicron Nu, initiated Adielyn Fox into its chapter at the Florida State College for Women on Tuesday night. The requirements for membership into the fraternity are based on scholarship and leadership.

A dinner was given in honor of the new initiate at the Dutch Kitchen preceding the initiation ceremony. Sweet peas were used for both the table decorations and the corsages.

Members of the undergraduate chapter include Margaret Dodd, president of the chapter; Pauline McLellan, Ruth Durrenberger, and Marie Lingo. Alumnae present were Dean Margaret Sandels, Dr. Jennie Tilt, Mrs. Ralph Eyman, Mrs. O. C. Collins, Miss Helen Davis, and Miss Edna Mae McIntosh.

Beta Phi Theta Taps Seven Girls Today In Dining Hall

Beta Pi Theta, national French honorary society, tapped seven girls today at noon in the college dining room. The girls honored are Ruth Feinberg, Lillian Turlington, Mary Carson, Wilma Ter Bush, Marjorie Carter, Ruth Dickson, and Leona Stimmel.

The requirements for membership in the honorary are an A average in French and a general B average. In a short time the pledges will be required to give a play in French, according to Olivia Embrey, president.

Council of Religious Workers to Hold Next Meeting Monday Night

With quarterly tests at hand, denominational groups have planned few meetings outside of their weekly services this week.

The Religious Workers council, composed of the local pastors, student councilors, Dr. Edward Conradi, Dean Olivia Dorman, Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, and Dr. Arthur Williams, will have dinner in the dining room Monday night preceding a short business meeting in Broward club room.

At the meeting a committee will be appointed to submit names for next year's officers at the April meeting. Miss Winnie Lee Davis, vice-president, will preside at the meeting.

Jewish women will continue discussion of their last week's topic "Modern Trends in Art" in Bryan sunparlor this afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Pearl Burman will conduct the discussion.

The Presbyterian Student league program for Sunday night will be an echo meeting of the retreat held recently at Camp Flastacowo, on Lake Bradford.

Personal Mention

Several members of the Chi Omega sorority will attend the spring festival of Chi Omega in Atlanta this week-end. The group includes Betty Hamilton, Elizabeth Kirby-Smith, Viola Taylor, Gwendolyn O'Berry, Esther Daffin, and Sarah Anthony.

* * *

Josephine King, at a recent meeting of the Kappa Deltas, was elected president of the Kappa Delta sorority and was chosen as their delegate to a Kappa Delta convention which will meet in Los Angeles, Calif., June 24.

* * *

The Delta Phi Epsilon sorority observed Founder's day last Sunday morning with a waffle breakfast at the chapter house at which all members were present. The chapter colors, purple and gold, were used in details of the decorations, and spring flowers were placed about the room.

* * *

Sara Hulsey, of Tampa, a graduate of 1934, will spend the week-end at the Kappa Delta house.

* * *

Students spending the week-end in Jacksonville include Mrs. Frances Wall, Frances Mock, Adelaide Jones, Edwina Hamilton, Ellen Fleming, and Marie Certain.

* * *

Mrs. James Craig, of Jacksonville, will spend Sunday with her daughter, Lydia Craig, at the Sigma Sigma Sigma chapter house.

* * *

Katherine Tomkies, graduate of '34, is spending the week-end at Florida State College as a guest of the Theta Upsilon sorority.

* * *

Mrs. J. B. Williams, of Lake Wales, is spending the week-end at the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority house with her daughter, Anerette Boyd.

* * *

Members of the Beta Phi Alpha sorority and their friends will have a hay ride out to the big ravine Saturday afternoon. They will go out at 2:30 and carry a picnic supper.

* * *

The retiring Freshman cabinet will entertain the new Freshman cabinet Friday afternoon and evening at Camp Flastacowo leaving the campus at 4:15 and returning at 9 o'clock. They will have a campfire supper on the shore of Lake Bradford.

* * *

Miss Marian D. Irish, associate professor of political science, accompanied by Edith Patterson, Ida Engel, Anne Marie Mitchell, students in international law, left Thursday morning for Rollins college to attend a model League of Nations meeting. The local delegation was nominated to represent Switzerland in this meeting.

Freshman Tries Signing Off For Using Library

Attaching Name to Lists Is One of Favorite Indoor Sports

"I'd like to sign off now," the freshman said solemnly.

"Sign off?" questioned the librarian.

"I've been studying here. I signed up and now if you'll just show me where to sign off," persisted the freshman.

"You don't do any signing up or off to study in the library."

"But I did—on a little card," said the freshman.

"That," smiled the librarian, "was merely to check out a book. It isn't necessary to 'sign off' as you call it."

The freshman was greatly relieved. At least there was one thing you didn't have to sign for.

Perhaps the mistakes made by freshmen in regard to rules about signing up for things on campus are absurdly funny to many people, though not particularly so to the ones concerned. Nearly every upper classman can remember similar experiences during her first year.

However the commonest error is not altogether a freshman trait. That is not signing up for unnecessary things but forgetting to sign for things required, such as date slips and going to town after dark.

Getting back to freshmen—its much nicer telling about freshmen—some of them get so mixed up. There was the one who wanted to sign up for her visiting mother to go to town. Another stated seriously, "—and you can't ride with anyone, anytime, except your parents."

Of course there were any number of bright young freshmen who hastened to correct her, but that just shows what misunderstandings can result from such a system.

It really gets to be a nuisance, some girls about campus insist, especially when it involves signing up for the use of bath tubs and irons, as is the case in some sorority houses.

Nevertheless the complexities of this signing-up-and-off business can be mastered as proved by a few upper-upperclassmen.

* * *

Elaine Klepper left yesterday morning for Orlando to visit with her parents. Elaine will return to Tallahassee this afternoon.

* * *

When seen through a telescope, stars appear smaller than when viewed with the naked eye. The telescope eliminates the diffused light which we see without the instrument.

FREE CANDY
FRIDAY, SATURDAY SUNDAY
Russell McPhail

The new Assorted Chocolates package contains an exceptional and appetizing variety of Fruits, Nuts, Butter Creams, Butter Brittle, Nougatines, Caramels, Nut Clusters, Marshmallows and Nut Chips, all covered with Russell McPhail's luscious Milk and Dark Vanilla Chocolate.
60c the Pound
12-oz. Pkg.
Regular
50c Value

OFFERS FREE
ONE REGULAR 50c BOX OF
Russell McPhail
New Home-Made Candies
Given with the purchase of each pound box of Russell McPhail new Assorted Chocolates at 60c the pound.
Regular $1.10 Value for Only
60c

The Homemade Package Consists of the Following Assortment.
Nut fritters made with toasted almonds, pecans, and real table butter, Pecan Marshmallow Puffs, Vanilla Pecan Divinity, Black Walnut Maple Divinity, Chocolate Nut Fudge, Molasses Cocoanut Rolls, Vanilla Cocoanut Balls, also Pecan Roll slices.
Mail Orders Accepted, add 10c lb. postage Regular Price

BENNETT'S CHAIN OF CUT PRICE DRUG STORES
Bennett's
TALLAHASSEE, FLA.

Florida Is Proud
To Welcome Delegates
To The Campus

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

Hear The Gators
Debate Rutgers Team
Tomorrow Night

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, March 29, 1935 NUMBER TWENTY-THREE

Two Colleges Stage Debate Here Saturday

Rutgers And Florida U. To Vie For Honors In Conradi Theatre

DE MONTIGNE IS TO BE CHAIRMAN

Audience To Contribute One Vote Toward Decision

"Resolved: That nations should prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions," is the subject of a debate between the teams of Rutgers university, of New Brunswick, N. J., and the University of Florida to be held in the Augusta Conradi theatre tomorrow night at 8:15.

Members of Team

On the negative side is the University of Florida which is sending three men, including Lonnie Wurm, Bob Barton and Tillman Pearson, accompanied by Bill Boring, manager, and Professor A. A. Hopkins, debating coach.

Lonnie Wurm of Jacksonville, a senior in the college of law, will be a representative from Florida in the Southern Association of Teachers of Speech tournament to be held in Spartanburg, S. C., in April. Mr. Wurm is a member of Tau Kappa Alpha, public speaking fraternity, and Phi Alpha Delta, law fraternity, and Phi Eta Sigma, social fraternity.

Bob Barton of St. Petersburg, is a junior in the college of arts and sciences. He is a member of the conference championship debating team and a member of the Alligator Staff. Mr. Barton is a member of Sigma Nu, social fraternity.

The third member of the University team is Tillman Pearson, Miami, who is a junior in the college of law and who made the Southern Varsity debating tour in 1933. Mr. Pearson is a member of the Chi Phi social fraternity.

Varsity Debate Manager

Bill Boring, who is the manager of the team, is from Lakeland and a junior in the college of law. He is the varsity debate manager and a member of the freshman debate team in 1931. Mr. Boring is a member of Phi Alpha Delta, legal fraternity, and Beta Theta Pi, social fraternity.

Three votes will be taken to decide the winner of the debate, one from the audience, one from Miss Sadie Young, and one from Dr. Raymond Bellamy.

Carolina DeMontigne will act as chairman of the affair, for which there will be no admission charge.

Flambeau Marks Twentieth Year

Addresses, Tour, Banquet Included In Program

Addresses by prominent Florida journalists, a "behind the scenes tour" of a student newspaper in the making, a series of six three-minute talks by student journalists, presentation of the prize to the winner of Alpha Chi Alpha article contests, the annual Flambeau banquet at the Floridan and the installation of the incoming staff are features of the twentieth anniversary celebration of the Florida Flambeau to be held the week of April 8-13.

The celebration is sponsored by the Flambeau staff and Alpha Chi Alpha, journalistic honorary. With the exception of the banquet all the program will be open to the public, and the events will be made of interest to students not actively connected with journalistic work.

Helen Hunt West, one of the most successful newspaperwomen in the state, will speak on "Women in Journalism," the evening of Monday, the 8th, in the Augusta Conradi theatre. Mrs. West was for a number of years society editor of the Times-Union, and has served as reporter and feature writer on various other Florida papers. She frequently addresses groups and organizations in Jacksonville, and is known as a fluent [illegible] speaker. Other jour- [illegible] have been invited to speak and the program is expected to be completed within the next few days.

Thompson to Read At WYCA Meeting

At the Y. W. C. A. monthly membership meeting which will be held Thursday morning at 11:30 in the Augusta Conradi theater, Miss Elizabeth Thompson, former advisor of the cabinet, will read a group of poems centering around the theme of beauty.

The morning devotional will be led by Lucy Fulghum, and special violin numbers, by Evelyn Patterson and Marjorie Tillis, will be featured on the program.

Mathews Talks On Moral Tasks

Speaker Points Out That Student Activities Build Up Authority

In an address entitled "The Rising Generation and Its Moral Tasks," Dean Shailer Mathews of the divinity school of Chicago universatility said last night that the present younger generation must set about solving those problems which are universal today as the result of a changing civilization.

Dean Mathews noted, as a result of his wide foreign and domestic travel, that the universities of the Eastern world, due to the interpenetration of Western ideals, are faced with the same moral problems as those which face the Western world. Just as the West is questioning and breaking down inherited authority so the institutions of the East are attempting and suceeding in doing this same thing

Dean Mathews pointed to student activities on the college campus as one of the first steps toward the building up of a new recognized authority. One of the great things which our present educational system is attempting, more and more, is the showing of his own potentialities to the individuals. He is being taught to recognize and to meet his moral tasks squarely. Not only has the relation of man to man become a moral problem but the application of natural factors to economic processes now presents itself for consideration.

The third problem which faces the world today, acording to Dean Mathews, and which youth must attack, is the question of morality of nations He says that morality has never been a motive power in national relations; force has served instead. The question as to whether nations are moral, rests on the question of whether they can use morality as a motive power.

"A great example of what arbitration can do toward fostering national morality is seen in the relationship existing between Canada and the United States," he pointed out. "There are no forts and no soldiers at any place along a boundary which extends for thousands of miles." As a further indication that the world of nations is becoming aware of its moral obligations is evidenced in peace conferences, peace petitions, and similar things.

"I hope that soon a generation of less prejudiced and less biased youth will attack this third moral problem sucessfully and that as a result a larger share of human welfare will find its place in the world," Dean Mathews said in conclusion.

Abbey Talks At SIASG Meeting

Student Governor is Topic On Thursday

"The Student Government—What It Is and What It Should Be," was the subject of a talk by Dr. Katherine T. Abbey, professor of history, before a group of S. I. A. S. G. delegates and Florida state college students in the Augusta Conradi theater yesterday afternoon.

Acording to the speaker there are three characteristics which are inherent in the average student government in American education. First, the student is never able to assume complete responsibility because the outside world continues to hold the administration to blame if anything serious occurs. Second, most of the people in a college community are young, which varies from the ordinary social group which runs the gamut from the cradle to the grave Due to this fact, said Dr Abbey, the types of human relationship are lessened and the ordinary set of check and balance

(Continued on page three)

College Glee Club to Give Concert Soon

Presents Spring Recital In Auditorium Here Wednesday Night

REDDICK RENDERS SOLO ON PROGRAM

Miss Winslow and Chorus Personnel Will Also Assist Singers

The Florida State College Glee club, under the direction of Miss Etta Robertson, will give its spring concert Wednesday, April 3, at 8:15 in the college auditorium.

The Glee club will be assisted in its concert by the college chorus, also trained under Miss Robertson. Martha Reddick, violinist, studying under Miss Anna Mae Sharpe, will assist with a group of violin numbers, accompanied by Miss Mary Esther Winslow at the piano.

Is Second Concert

The Glee club has appeared once before this year in a Christmas concert in the college auditorium.

The program to be presented will be as follows:

Ave Maria, Rossini; Song of the Shepherd Lehl, Rimsky-Korsakof; To Earth May Winds are Bringing, Schumann; Goin' Home (New World Symphony), Dvorak; In a Boat, Grieg.

Folk songs: Star Lullaby (Polish), arr. by Treharne; The Elfin Horn (Swedish), arr by Treharne; Lauterbach (German), arr. by Reutter). Solo by Margaret Melzel; trio, Josephine Binion, Margaret Melzer, Evalyn Patterson.

Romance by Wieniawski; Perpetual Motion by Bohm; Heire Kati by Hubay. Martha Reddick, Mary Esther Wislow at the piano.

The Last Song by James H. Rogers; Clouds by Charles (arr. by Deis); American Lullaby by Gladys Rich; Approach of Spring by Gade. (Two-piano accompaniment.)

Garnet and Gold by William G. Dodd.

Acompanists: Margaret Nickle, piano; Virginia Long, piano; Margaret Whitney Dow, organ.

Personnel of Club

The personnel of the Glee Club includes: First sopranos, Josephine Binion, Mickey Conn, Sara Hethcox, Margaret Melzer, Edna Moon, Virginia Richards, Mary Bell Rogers, Marie Spurlock, and Ola Deare Vickers.

Second sopranos: Nellie Bahrt, Lois Bowen, Marion Carson, Frances Gladden, Annette Harris, Betty Johnson, Annabelle Larson,

(Continued on page three)

Final Hop Plans Made By Sophs

No Tickets Will Be Sold After Tuesday

Contrary to the plans made at the sophomore class meeting last Tuesday, tickets for the Sophomore Hop are on sale for fifty cents as previously announced, according to Marie Spurlock, ticket chairman.

Sophomores may sign up for their dates and procure invitations at the same time they buy their tickets, the deadline for date tickets being set for Tuesday. Stag tickets are on sale for thirty-five cents.

The Clubmen, University of Florida dance orchestra, will play for the hop, which will be held in the gymnasium next Saturday night, beginning at 8:30 o'clock. Mary Jeanne McKay, chairman of the entertainment committee has announced that the entertainment will feature a night club theme. There will be ten "no-break" dances listed on the programs with encores reserved for "tagging." Tagging will also be allowed after intermission until the end of the dance at 11:45 o'clock.

Every sorority house and one upperclassman dormitory will hold open house for sophomores and their guests from 2 to 6 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Committees for the dance arrangements include: invitations, Marjorie Moore; programs, Martha Makemson; entertainment, Mary Jeanne MacKay; and decorations, Frances Thomas, Jean Clark, Frances Morrow and Eileen Masters.

CAMPUS WELCOMES CONVENTION

Dean Olivia N. Dorman and President Edward Conradi delivered addresses at the opening session yesterday.

Students Hear Talk on Books

Richardson Discusses Modern Literature At Convocation

"Trends in Modern Books" was the subject of a talk given by Miss Louise Richardson, librarian, at the student convocation this week. In her discussion, Miss Richardson pointed out the kinds of forms, titles and subject matter to be found in the books of the present day.

One of the newer trends along lines of the physical form of modern books is the adoption of reduced print. This small size print is advisable to conserve space, but the practice is still in its infancy. Miss Richardson said that what is called "film copy" is rapidly gaining ground. This is the process by which valuable parts of books are photographed on film and preserved. The United States government is finding this service valuable for purposes of research. The photostatic reproduction of books is being more and more widely used for economic reasons, since photostatic reproduction costs three cents a page while actual reprinting runs fifteen cents a page. Foreign countries and the United States often exchange photostatic copies of certain valuable books or manuscripts in their libraries. In the last two years at the library of Congress in Washington 1,000,000 feet of films of books and manuscripts have been taken in. The most novel physical form of modern books is the talking book, a phonograph recording of a book. This is for the benefit of people who have lost their sight or for some reason are unable to read. The average book of about 200 pages requires twelve records, according to Miss Richardson.

"One of the arts in the game of writing," Miss Richardson explained, "is writing titles, and the modern idea seems to be writing titles which will obscure the contents of the book." She gave as examples Millays' Wine From These Grapes, Tarkington's Mary's Neck, and Special Delivery.

Miss Richardson divided the subject matter of modern books into several classes. The first of these, the literature of nostalgia.

(Continued on page three)

Script, Songs For Minstrel By Students

Different Arrangement Of Dances Will be Offered in Show

The script and three of the songs to be used in the Junior Minstrel, which will be presented April 27, were written and composed by local talent. Mary Jeanne McKay is responsible for the script, while Lorraine Allred and Charlotte Cameron collaborated on the song, "Lost Love." From the University of Florida came "Girl from Tallahassee" and "Blue Haze," composed by Bill Bryan and Billy Van Brunt, respectively.

Acording to Sarah Krentzman, general chairman, the minstrel promises to be an unusual entertainment, featuring a play within a play with a somewhat different arrangement of the dances than has been used in the past.

Those taking part in the musical numbers are Alice Wahl, Mary Lou Moore, Ruth B. Davis, Martha King, Sara Tillman, Anne Bayly, Louise Rogers, Edna Yacobian, Louise Bryan, Betty Ferrell, La Nelle Thanes, Valerie Stubbs, Sarah Hethcox, Rosalyn Daum, Susan Blow.

The committees working under the general chairman are: script, Mary Jeanne McKay; director, Emily Johnson; dances, Caroline Oliver; music, Alice Wahl; costumes, Minna Dunn, Margaret Murray; staging, Floy Lenert; properties, Bert Clifford; programs, Jane Lee Rhyne; advertising, Mildred Emmelhainz; finances, Audrey Farmer.

Alicia Meacham Heads New Freshman Cabinet;

Alicia Meacham was elected to serve as chairman of the new freshman cabinet during the coming year, at a meeting held in the Y. W. C. A. hut last night.

Virginia White was elected to serve as secretary at the same time. Ann Norris, vice-president of Y. W. C. A., will be the cabinet sponsor during the next school year. A faculty advisor will be chosen at the next meeting.

Andrews Talks Of Jobs Open

Outlines Possibilities In Vocations Open To Graduates

In a talk last Monday evening to members of the senior class and those students who expect to receive two-year certificates in May, Dr. Elisabeth Gordon Andrews, director of personnel and the placement bureau, spoke on the possibilities of their being placed in positions for next year.

Dr. Andrews briefly reviewed the work that was accomplished by the placement bureau last year when ninety-two per cent of the graduates of Florida State college were placed in suitable positions. Although the majority of these positions were in the teaching field, approximately fifty graduates were placed in positions other than teaching.

Throughout her talk Dr. Andrews stressed the growing possibilities of work for college graduates in the various branches of government service, and in the larger department stores.

She spoke of the new government examinations, the Civil Service Examiners, which are open to all college graduates. "Seventy-five hundred young people took the examination last year," she said, "and of these 500 were placed in positions." This examination will be given again this year.

"Department stores also offer great opportunities to the college graduate," Dr. Andrews stated. Having talked recently with the head of th training school at Macy's department store in New York, she was able to give the group a number of points concerning the work.

According to Dr. Andrews, department stores need the best of the graduates to hold executive positions. They particularly look for young women who are poised and well-groomed. The executive from Macy's told Dr. Andrews that one of the chief faults they find in college women is that they do not dress appropriately.

In most department stores there is a training school in which the new workers must remain for six months or a year, learning and

(Continued on page three)

Allen Will Speak On American Birds

Dr. A. A. Allen, of Cornell university, will give an illustrated lecture on "American Birds in Vitaphone" Friday evening, March 29, at 8:15, in the college auditorium.

Dr. Allen will have with him pictures which will reproduce actions and songs of birds in their natural habitat. The lecturer has written two books on the subject of bird life, The Book of Bird Life and Laboratory Notebook of Ornithology, and was awarded the Outdoor Life Medal in 1934 for outstanding research on ruffled grouse. Dr. Allen is also the discoverer of the method of rearing ruffled grouse in captivity. He is the present editor of the Bird Lore department of School magazine and a member of the American Ornithologists Union.

A small admission to cover the expense of production will be charged.

Dances to Be Given Monday

Beginning, Advanced And Rhythmic Classes To Have Symposium

The beginning, rhythmic and advanced classes of creative dancing will hold a dance symposium Monday afternoon at five o'clock in the Physical Education building.

In the beginning classes the dances were created by different groups to the same piece of music by Schumann. The dances show how each group reacts to the same music with dances of different types.

Members of the beginning classes are: Gladys Abenson, Eleanor Biggers, Janice Borton, Mamie Brinson, Victoria Crisp, Frances Gates, Helen Hammond, Sarah Hethcox, Margaret Milton, Doris Risk, Kathleen Robinson, Sarah Rutledge, Helen Turnbull, Elizabeth Ayala, Jeannette Annin, Elizabeth Beech, Carl Brigman, Helen Cate, Rebecca Clemens, Ruth Connor, Lydia Craig, Rosalyn Daun, Mary Gannon, Elizaebth Hampton, Betty Hamilton, Harriet Jeffries, Virginia Kee, Elaine Klepper, Eloise Maller, Ruth Marvin, Martha Makemson, Dorothy McLean, Margaret Neff, Helen Nelson, Clotilde O'Rourke, Evelyn Patterson, Annie Rentz, Ruth Rosen, Lillian Simmons, Mary Elizabeth Simpson, Betty Sweet Smith, Mildred Smith, Jane Tharin, Bonnevieve Tomlinson, Edwina Wakefield, Margaret Ware, and Helena Wilson.

The rhythmic class consists of Elizabeth Allen, Leah Andrews, Hallie Bailey, Frances Baldwin, Dorothy Bellamy, Genevieve Crowley, Irene Haimowitz, Adelaide Ireland, Virginia Phillips,

(Continued on page three)

Marsh Receives Freshman Plaque

Twenty Other Names Go On New Honor Boards

Dorothea Marsh, of Panama City, was awarded the Mortar Board scholarship plaque in convocation last Thursday morning by Marian Brantley, president of Mortar Board. Dorothea had the highest average in the freshman class.

Extending its recognition of freshman scholarship, this year, Mortar Board has placed the names of the twenty freshmen maintaining the highest average in their class on honor boards, to be displayed in the office of each freshman dormitory.

Freshmen whose names appear on the honor board and who had averages ranging from 2.39 to 2.89 are: Kathryn Andrews, Phyllis Gewein, Evelyn Glazier, Mollie Holden, Edwinola Jordan, Genevieve Kenly, Elizabeth Knapp, Mary Virginia Lopez, Ethel Ogden, Mary Pfeiffer, Elizabeth Pierce, Annette Quinby, Rachel Rothstein, Rose Safer, Marguerite Sjostrom, Margaret Schmidli, Sjostrom, Margaret Schmedli, Violet Shanpline, Jane Tilden, and Constance Williams.

Student Government Officials Meet Here

Thirty Southern Colleges Are Represented At SIASG Conclave

MATHEWS SPEAKS THURSDAY NIGHT

Series Of Social Affairs Throughout Week-end Honor Delegates

Delegates and speakers from approximately thirty southern colleges are attending the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government convention here this week. The meeting opened Thursday morning with a welcome to the delegates by Dr. Edward Conradi and an address by Dr. Olivia Dorman.

Thursday afternoon Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, professor of history, spoke on "The Student Government—What it is and What it Should Be." Her talk was followed by discussion groups on "Problems of Denominational Schools," led by Virginia Groffeuried, Huntington, and "Dormitory and Social Problems" led by Doris Davis, of Sophie Newcomb.

The delegates were entertained late in the afternoon with a steak fry and swim at Camp Flastacowo on Lake Bradford and the day's program closed with a speech by Dean Shailer Mathews of Chicago university on "The Rising Generation and Its Moral Task."

Friday meetings include discussion groups in the morning on "Technique of Presidency" led by Lida Read Voight, of Sweet-Briar, and "Extra Curricular Activities" led by Helenmary Fritsch of Florida State College, followed by a speech on "Women and Democracy" by Dr. Evelyn Newman, of Rollins college.

Late this afternoon the delegates will be entertained with an informal tea by Dean Dorman and a formal banquet afterwards.

Tonight there will be a special program presented at playnite including a dance by Caroline Oliver, a piano duet by Mildred and Thelma Smith, and a song by Shirley Pemberton.

Tomorrow morning the discussion group will be led by Alberta Palmour, of Agnes Scott, on the subject, "Camput Honor," and in the afternoon a trip to Wakulla Spring has been planned for the delegates staying over.

Officers of the association are: Mary Virginia Barnes, Randolph-Macon, president; Carolina De Montigne, Florida State College, vice-president; Doris Davis, Sophie Newcomb, secretary; Alberta Palmour, Agnes Scott, treasurer.

Committee chairmen in charge of arrangements for the convention are: invitations, Frances Hurlin; secretaries, Miriam Frye; speakers' housing and entertainment, Minna Dunn; hostesses, Kathryn Blood; entertainment, Beth Daane; pictures, Peggy McMichael; banquet, Patricia Foster; programs, Annabelle Linger; information and registration, Georgia Ruth Work; food and housing, Helen Wilson; transportation, Jean Gillis; judiciary representative, Helenmary Fritsch; serenading, Edith Toffeletti; signs, Martha Makemson; maid service, Barbara Bell; publicity, Edith Patterson.

Delegates attending are: Thelma Evans, Fredericksburg College for Teachers; Lois Ruth Graham, Judson college; Jane Whittack and Ethelyn Tawner, Greenville Women's college; Margaret Singleton and Virginia Groffeuried, Huntington college; Dean Landen and Esther Spearman, Lander college; Hazel West, Olivia Moon, and Josephine Jones, Limestone college; Martha Gunning and Winnie Madison, Mississippi State; Catherine Mosely, Meredith college; Doris Davis and Cecil Kahn, Sophie Newcomb; Mary Virginia Barnes, Randolph-Macon; Claudia Ashorne, Josephine Hamlin, Lucy O'Dell, Sara Wilson, Etter Turner, and Helen Horn, Stetson; Elizabeth Pinkerton, Sweetbriar; Lila Norman, Shorter college; Doris Triche, Anna Keever, Henrietta Burns, Pearl Band, and Mrs. L. S. Frere, Southwestern Louisiana Institute; Gertrude Schwalbe, Salem college; Peggy Thornburgh and Mary Virginia Tuttle, University of Tennessee; Louise King Howe and Mary Stuart Mills, Winth-

(Continued on page three)

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF
BARBARA GARFUNKEL .... Editor
LOUISE ROBERTSON .... Associate Editor
MARY ELIZABETH COOLEY Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Athea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchanges, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyne Wahnish, Copy Editor, Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedra McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Fain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF
ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS ... Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS .... Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON .... Circulation Manager
Ass't. Adv. Manager, Mary Patterson; Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sara Beth Davis.

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Every Student a Delegate to S. I. A. S. G.

Students, who earlier in the year questioned the value of the penchant of the young collegian for conventions, may have occasion to reweigh their decision as they witness the tactics of the twentieth Southern Intercollegiate Student Government convention convening at Florida State College for Women this week.

It is hardly conceivable that representatives from forty southern colleges could assemble at Florida State for three three days without in some way broadening the provincial manner of thinking among students here. Discussion groups and lectures on problems of student government, extra curricular activities, women and democracy, the college girl and her art of living, campus interest and public affairs could not possibly be held without bringing to light contrasting ideas and opinions out of which to evolve a more perfect conception of college life.

But perhaps we are giving you the theory of conventions. If you would like to see to what extent the theory of conventions becomes the practice of the Southern Intercollegiate association of student government, you have only to attend its meetings here this week.

Is College Life a Museum of Ancient History?

What is college life?

College life is the period of time required to saturate a student with the traditions of his alma mater.

We confess that those are not the exact words of the authors of "A Study of Student Life" but a juggling of their statement that "From his first day as a freshman to the last ceremony of commencement, the college student is being fashioned by pressures which he understands but little, but which he knows to be vital."

Pressure, of course, is a synonym for tradition. The presence of either on a college campus can be traced to invention of that good old sign-of-the-three-balls industry of borrowing.

For instance, years ago at Vassar some one lost a night's sleep and the next morning the plan of choosing the most beautiful girls in the sophomore class to carry a daisy chain at commencement was inaugurated there. Since then the plan has been modified and borrowed by other institutions, including Floride State College for Women, and commercialized in advertisements for athlete's foot. However, Florida State is to be commended for her scrapping of the sophomore sister idea this year.

Further information found in the "Study of Student Life" indicates that much of the social control on college campuses is brought about through indoctrination, a case in hand, the honor system at Princeton. Even student and faculty relations are shaped by tradition, the student who desires outside contact with his professor being dubbed an apple-polisher. Likewise social discrimination operative in sororities and the regard for extra curricular activities all have their obvious beginnings in custom.

Somehow we have been laboring under the impression that the purpose of an education is to prepare one to adjust himself to new situations. It would seem, then, that if college life insists on being a four year's promenade through a museum of ancient history, we are in the wrong place, and we are inclined to believe that President Marion L. Burton of the University of Michigan was right when he said that traditions are "the tyrants of every campus".

Whether this survey of student life included Florida State College for Women or not, we do not know. However, if traditions have a stronghold on this campus, the ones upholding it are the students themselves.

Last week students here elected new campus officers for 1935-36. We do not say to the new incumbents, Break with the past. We say Draw from the past, the best that has been said and done in it. The seams of today's pattern often need reenforcement by yesterday's. However, "Because it has always been done at Florida State" is not a mandate that "it shall continue to be done at Florida State."

College life at Florida State College for Women should not be the time required to saturate a student with its traditions, but the time required to teach them to discriminate between theories that are born of a minute and fundamental truths that endure throughout the ages.

Florida No Longer Has Need For Untrained Teachers

Florida leads the south in good roads. It lags behind in schools. Its specifications to the contractor for the building of a road are exacting; its specifications to the educator for the task of molding the future of its citizenry are among the lowest in the country.

Florida must be contrasted with other southern states along the line of professional training for teachers. The state of Georgia exacts one year of college preparation for its lowest type of certificate. The minimum requiremant for teaching in Virginia is two years study at a normal school or teachers' college. And the state of North Carolina has now entirely discontinued the issuance of any certificate based on less than four years of college study.

What about Florida? A recent bulletin issued by the Florida State College for Women gives some illuminating facts based on statistics from the State Department of Public Instruction. Florida institutions of higher learning granted 7665 diploma certificates during the ten years preceding 1932. In that year there were 8888 teaching positions in the state. This made it possible to fill at least eighty-five per cent of the teaching positions in the state with college trained individuals. During this same period, however, there were 5109 valid certificates based on examination with no required academic preparation whatever. This gave a supply of 12,774 certificated teachers, affording a surplus of 3886. College graduates were placed in competition with poorly prepared teachers, many of whom had never finished high school. What happened? Exactly what happens in industry when there is a plentiful supply of cheap unskilled labor. All are brought down to the same level.

Forty per cent of the 12,774 qualified teachers were certificated on examination. Forty per cent of the teaching positions were given to that group. Sixty per cent of the qualified teachers were college trained. Sixty per cent of the positions were given to that group. Exactly seventy-six per cent of each group secured positions.

Figures further indicate that a total of 15,234 teachers will be available in 1940. Twelve thousand eight hundred of that number will hold diploma certificates, which will be several thousand more than there are positions. What will happen then can be clearly discerned. As college trained teachers increase, unemployed college trained teachers will increase. Those who get jobs will do so at salaries lower than professionals in any other field, simply because of the competition of "cheap" teachers.

The fate of the college graduate is only secondary in importance, however. A teacher is first of all a person hired to do a job and the job is what matters. High standards in teaching are important, not because of the rights of the teacher but because of the rights of the children.

It is time for the citizens and lawmakers of Florida to do some adding, subtracting and some good straight thinking. The facts simply do not warrant the absurdity of giving teacher training at the expense of the state and at the same time giving teaching positions to untrained persons at the expense of our children.

Magazine Thumbings

By MELVYNE WAHNISH

Thanks this week go to Eleanor Williams for functioning as guest columnist.

PREPARE FOR NEUTRALITY
By Charles Warren
The Yale Review, Spring, 1935

Many Americans believe that the United States can keep out of war if it insists on maintaining a strict neutrality, writes Charles Warren, but from our experience in the World war we know that it must be a neutrality that in reality goes beyond those duties set up by international law.

Besides complying rigidly with neutral duties imposed by international and domestic laws, neutrality that will keep a country out of war will mean extension of neutral duties, concessions, and even sacrifices of neutral rights, and more concretely, sacrifice of neutral commercial profits, Warren contends.

He advised wise preparation in peace in such ways as negotiating an agreement with Great Britain or any other posible belligerent nation that we would not challenge her alleged right to interfere with our commerce with other neutral countires if she would relinquish her alleged right to confiscate any article marked contraband on her list and agree to requisition any such article which she desired to retain by paying therefore the contract price, and in all cases paying all costs of detention of ship and cargo.

Warren concludes that the executive powers are adequate to deal with the situation but American popular sentiment must first be aroused and educated to give support to such executive action.

PRACTICE AND CULTURE
By Charles A. Beard
Journal of Adult Education, January, 1935

Although Charles A. Beard is considering the interests of adult education in this article, his advice concerning the question of concentration of "practical" or "cultural" subjects in the educational program is worth consideration in determining any curriculum.

According to Beard, the distinction between "practical" and "cultural" subjects can be made in words and in words only. An engineer's handbook is a work of pure utility yet the engineering mind finds delight in the study of the book, delight or pain always associated with esthetic appreciation, while on the other hand, he writes, we can discover very few, if any, of the great books commonly clased as "cultural" that have no bearing on practice, utility, or conduct deemed advantageous to individuals and society.

Instead of dividing into two armed camps on the question, Beard suggests that we take counsel and common ground, remembering that beauty and utility are not separated in life, despite the wide prevalence of meretricious adornment.

In conclusion he advises that young radicals all hot for concentration on economic questions and the class war first consider the mistake that Russian officials are realizing they made in their educational system before mapping out one of their own. He quotes one Russian as saying, "The training has been too narrow, and our problem is one of widening it to embrace knowledge and tradition not embraced in the Marx-Lenin scheme. If we are to live in a world of many nations, we must resort to this widening of our cultural base. How can we understand our world and live in it effectively without doing it?"

IS CAPITALISM TO BLAME
By Nathaniel Peffer
Harpers, April, 1935

A general truth that is reflected in our current polemics on the economic system, the educational system, the position of the family, religion and art is that we still practice a kind of intellectual animism, the cause of which lies in our capitalistic age, writes Peffer, but in the social dislocations produced by machine industrialism, science and mechanical invention applied to production.

Capitalism may pass, says Peffer, but more than an economic adjustment is involved in recapturing the sense of the wholeness of life, from which "unconsciously" a culture emerges. From the soil of culture must grow our social institutions, art forms, philosophies, and perhaps religions as well, writes Peffer, and since culture works to the satisfaction and fulfillment of a race only when it has sunk below the level of consciousness, time perhaps is our only recourse.

However, this does not mean that we must commit ourselves to fatalistic resignation or the negation of merely waiting, Peffer concludes, for there are economic and political problems to be solved, and we must remember that between the succeeding civilization and the one they are trying to lay lies an interim of travail.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By Hoffman

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKER

"CONVERSATIONS took place this morning and this afternoon on some points mentioned in the Anglo-Saxon communique of February 3. These conversations will be resumed tomorrow." Such was the official announcement of the dramatic meeting of Sir John Simon and Adolf Hitler Monday in Berlin—a meeting whose outcome may decide the fate of Europe. Of course none of the discussions or results of the conferences are being given out to the press. But such things always get out in some fashion.

So it is pretty definite that der fuehrer has assured England that Germany has no intention of attacking Soviet Russia but that Germany will not accept a Eastern Locarno Pact which would prohibit aggression on the part of western nations into the eastern European countries; so what? Der Fuehrer also refused, so say dispatches, to guarantee the independence of the Austrian Republic. Herr Hitler also promised that Germany would re-enter the League of Nations when all her difficulties with the nations in the League were straightened out to her satisfaction. Sir John must get a great deal of satisfaction from that promise. Herr Hitler positively says that the German people must be allowed to maintain a large army and navy, for the Nazi president of the German Republic assures the British envoys that the large German forces are all that keep communism out of Western Europe. Even if we had such faith in "talking" to keep peace in Europe, we would not dare to make at this date a prediction as to the ultimate results that will accrue to Europe and the world from this conference. But we don't hesitate to say that all rounds have so far gone to Herr Hitler.

FOR THE sixth time since the end of the World War the house of representatives has passed a bill for the immediate cash payment of the bonus. The bill just passed—the Patman Bill—has itself been passed three times in essentially the same form. And as all good bonus bills the Patman Bill is assured of presidential veto; the house can undoubtedly override such a veto; the senate, however, will probably sustain the veto.

The Patman Bonus bill differs from its recent predecessors in that it provides for the issuance of "greenbacks" to pay the soldiers. The house almost substituted at the last minute the Vinson Bonus Bill which would have allowed the treasury to provide its own means of raising the funds to pay off the veteran certificates.

Collegiate Come-Backs

"Yale! Yale!" The gang's all here!"

* * *

True Story

Said the Yale man to the FSCW girl: "How many keys do you have to your apartment?"

Said the FSCW girl to the Yale man: "It has a Yale lock, you Yalebird."

* * * *

A professor of economics at Yale university has declared, "Many of my students are like a certain coffee—98 per cent of the active ingredients have been removed from the bean." Granted, professor. But when it comes to piling on term papers, you seem to think we resemble yet another brand—good until we at last drop.

* * * *

"Almost any day now we expect the man at the filling station to lean in and pick our teeth."—Typo Graphic. . . Would you call that 'Service when you Smile"?

* * * *

POME

May I marry your daughter?
What is your profession?
Sir, I am an actor.
Then get out before the footlights.

* * * *

Our Own Little Dumb Crack Department

Overheard at the Junior-Senior prom:

Boy: Gee, wish I had a pair of scissors on a nice long string so I could reach up to the ceiling and cut down those balloons.

Girl: You mean you wish you wish you had a string with a nice long pair of scissors.

The Mississippian is responsible for the yarn about the bridegroom who, in a horribly nervous condition, appealed to the clergyman in a loud whisper, "Is it kisstomary to cuss the bride?" . . . Reminds us of the absent-minded professor who stood on a streetcar waiting for a corner.

* * * *

We are indebted to the Hornet for:

Seven Stages of a Girl's Life

1. Safety pins
2. Hair pins
3. Hat pins
4. Sorority pins
5. Fraternity pins
6. Rolling pins
7. Safety pins

* * * *

Two thousand portions of slightly-used chewing gum were recently removed from the library tables at the University of Florida, according to the Technique. My, my, what an opportunity for some brilliant young advertising man to deliver the goods. Can't you just see the half-page ads informing us, "Of the two thousand pieces of chewing gum removed from the University of Florida, 1876 were Neechbut brand." Or again, a roomful of studying students, all vigorously smacking away, with the caption, 'I'm your best friend. I'm your wad of gum."

* * * *

The latest collegiate craze, "I Feel Futile" poems, comes from Temple university. We reprint some of the futility.

I feel futile:
Like a book without a reader.
Like a taxi less a meter,
Like a quiz without a cheater,
I feel futile.

I feel futile:
Like a sale without commissions,
Like war without munitions,
Like Dionne with more additions.
I feel futile.

I feel futile:
Like a nudist wearing clothes,
Like a legless man with hose,
Like an arrow without bows,
I feel futile.

I feel futile:
Though I never smoke or drink,
And I have both pen and ink,
I cannot so help me think,
I feel futile.

Yale Glee Club Members Like Southern Girls For Chatter And For Lack of Affectation

Girl Break Dances—In Moderation—Appeal To Male Ego

By CLOTILDE O'ROURKE and GRACE MARY WEBSTER

Brekeke-kek-koax-koax!
Brekeke-kek-koax-koax!
Ooo-op-ooo-op!
Parabaloo Yale! Yale Yale!
Rah rah rah rah rah
Rah rah rah rah rah
Yale Glee club! Yale Glee club!
Yale Glee club!

This is Florida State's answer to the Yale Glee club concert of Tuesday night.

Even Yale Glee club men will hide behind curtains to meet interviewers. And so it was that Howard Kellogg, jr., publicity manager, Robert O. Sprague, Basil Henning, and Stuart Miller were waiting backstage immediately after the concert to answer any questions that Florida State girls might want to know "What do we think of southern girls?" "I like their line of chatter," said Stuart Miller. "And as a southerner, I think that no one can equal them," broke in Robert Sprague. "Let me speak for the press," said Howard Kellogg authoritatively. "You can get to know a southern girl better in five minutes than a northern girl in a whole hour. They are so natural and unaffected, so free and easy in comparison to northern girls, who have a thin veneer of sophistication through which one has to break before he can get to know them."

LIKE GIRL BREAK DANCES

"And these girl-break dances appeal to the male ego. They make you feel nifty—for a while," continued Kellogg. "They're wonderful!" exclaimed Sprague enthusiastically. "But they wouldn't be so good for a steady diet," added Miller; "I like to sit down sometimes."

In answer to the query as to who in the club were the athletes and Phi Beta Kappas, "Every man an athlete!" was the chorus, "but no Phi Beta Kappas that we know of." There are, however, several graduate students. The Howard twins who were graduated last June, recently broke their contract with the Surf club in Miami where they had been playing this season, in order to join the club on the southern tour. They played for 26 weeks over the Columbia Broadcasting System and for 13 weeks over the National Broadcasting network.

Marshall M. Bartholomew, who graduated in 1907, has been directing the glee club since 1921. Cole Porter, Yale graduate of 1913, wrote the musical comedy hit, "Anything Goes," from which the Howard twins played selections. He began composing songs as a student, and since then has written many, some of which Basil Henning sang as encores. Henning, who graduated in 1932, is doing graduate work in history.

ARE OWN FINANCIERS

"The Yale Glee club is a completely independent organization," said Miller. It is financed entirely by the boys. They travel in their own cars and pay their own officers. "We get no credit for our glee club work," finished Kellogg: "It is simply a hobby."

The entire club is composed of seventy-five members selected from a group of 400 by try-outs; thirty-six members of the club were chosen to go on this trip. The only members eligible were those who were not "on pro." The trip is being made during the two-week spring recess, which began March 23. Many of the boys brought their books along to study en route.

Commenting on Yale, the boys said that fraternities at Yale are gradually dying out, due to the adoption of the college unit plan whereby social life is becoming concentrated on the campus.

"READING PERIOD" AT YALE

An interesting feature of the Yale curriculum is the two-week "reading period" allowed each student every semester. During these two weeks the student does research work along some line in which he is interested, and at the end of the period he must have completed a 5000 word paper on his topic.

All four boys agreed unanimously that "Florida State College for Women is the best audience we've ever had." "It was a pleasure to sing to an audience which was so appreciative and which caught all the little subtleties so readily."

Delegates Tell "How It Is Done" At Their Alma Mater

Compulsory Meal, Church Attendance Not The Least of Worries

Compulsory meal and church attendance may sound like a fantastic story, but when you have to go to the dining room when you're not hungry and to church when you'd rather sleep, the idea becomes a living reality, according to Catherine Mallory of Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville, who is a delegate to the S. I. A. S. G. convention being held on this campus.

The one redeeming feature concerning this regulation, she said, is that for juniors breakfast is optional on week-ends and for seniors at all times. However, not even reaching the rank of junior or senior will enable one to miss church, Catherine added, but when a girl's family come for a visit that, too, is her privilege. "There isn't as much resentment on the part of the students as one would expect, said Catherine "since now they are not required to form lines and march up town as in former years."

Although smoking is not permitted and students are not allowed to have radios in their rooms Catherine believes that these and other conditions will soon be changed to a certain extent as their student government was organized only last year. Since that time uniforms have been discarded and dancing with men permitted.

SMOKING IN PUBLIC

At Sophie Newcomb college in New Orleans students may not only smoke in special rooms provided on the campus but they may also smoke in public at any time, said Doris Davis, out-going president of resident students and secretary of S. I. A. S. G. Here lights may be kept on until twelve o'clock with the periods from seven-thirty to ten and ten-thirty to twelve as quiet hours.

When asked what her impression of Florida state was Doris quickly replied that she just loved the swimming pool because it was so much larger and more impressive than theirs.

Mary Virginia Barnes, president of student government at Randolph-Macon and president of S. I. A. S. G., thinks that the meetings of the Southern intercollegiate association are the most effective means of solving the problems which confront executives in this field.

HAVE HONOR SYSTEM

On their campus, she said, there is an honor system which covers everything—academic and social affairs, one that is different from that of Florida state. Mary Virginia believes that the faculty-student relations, a serious problem at many schools, are all that could be desired at Randolph-Macon. There are two advisors with whom students may consult at any time and four faculty members who sit on judiciary along with five students. "The attitude of the student body toward the faculty," said the delegate, "is one of good will and cooperation."

At Randolph-Macon there are only three national scholastic honoraries, Phi Beta Kappa, Tau Kappa Alpha, debating society, and Pi Gamma Nu, social science. The president stated that she thought this was really enough for their school, whose students number about six hundred. Here they have no cut system, but seniors have unlimited light privileges and sophomores and juniors may keep their lights on until twelve o'clock.

NO CUT SYSTEM

Agnes Scott college at Atlanta, Georgia, also has no cut system, according to Alberta Palmour, delegate from there and treasurer of the association. This delegate also noted the lack of any politics on their campus. Here smoking is a major offense and dancing with men is not allowed. Ad Stevens, incoming president and delegate to the convention, thinks that students on their campus are too absorbed with campus activities, but she hopes that with the organization of an NSFA club on their campus this condition will be improved.

Four Attend Model League

Nations Cast Unanimous Vote For States To Join Group

Florida State College for Women, representing Switzerland, sent four delegates to the model League of Nations assembly held at Rollins College in Winter Park last week. The delegates were Miss Marian D. Irish, faculty sponsor, Edith Patterson, Ida Engel, and Anna Marie Mitchell, member of the International Relations club.

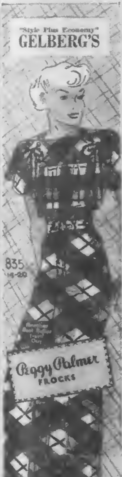
President Hamilton Holt of Rollins was unanimously elected chairman of the assembly while the vice-presidents were chosen from foreign students resident at the college. Other officers also were students of Rollins.

Whether or not the United States should be admitted was the issue before the League. Delegations from all League nations presented their views on the question during the general discussion. The American delegation, composed of Clark Eicheberger, secretary of the American League of Nation association, Dr. Evelyn Newman, secretary of the Florida branch of the Association and professor of English at Rollins, and Mrs. Harriet Laidlaw of New York, presented the case for the United States.

After a final discussion a vote was taken and the United States was unanimously elected to the League. Following the entrance of the United States and the formal closing of the assembly proper, Ida Engel, one of the Florida State delegates, issued a warning to the assembly saying that those who held the United States out of the World Court would again use their influence to keep her out of the League of Nations when the league question comes before the U. S. Senate as it is to do soon.

The Florida State delegation conferred with the secretary of the American League association and with Dr. Evelyn Newman, professor of English at Rollins and secretary of the Florida branch of the American League association. At this time Miss Irish was made associate secretary of the Florida branch.

"Style Plus Economy"
GELBERG'S



Highlander

A plaid as Scotch as Haig and Haig!

$2.98

Made of zephyr gingham in black, blue and red. Sizes 14 to 20. Guaranteed sunfast and [illegible]

DEFEND GATOR'S HONOR

Lonnie Wurm, Robert Barton, and Tillman Pearson of the University of Florida will take the negative in a debate versus Rutgers tomorrow night in the Augusta Conradi theatre. Bill Boring is their manager.

College Glee Club To Give Concert Soon

(Continued from page one)

Nell Ward Mayes, Clairnelle O'Steen, Ruth Osborn, Virginia Pinney, Jane Rice, Charlotte Veith, Maxine Ward, and Arline Gray Lockhart.

First altos: Audrey Cayson, Ruth Bradley Davis, Ruth Knight, Rosalie McDonald, Dorothy Moorehead, Margaret Nickle, Evelyn Stump, Edith Toffaletti, Jessie Lee Wilder, Lola Wood, and Mildred Williams.

Second altos: Margaret Endsley, Virginia Long, Evalyn Patterson, Helen Shepard, Betty Ellen Smith, Marjorie Tillis, Edna Yacobian, and Sarah Sealey.

Members of Chorus

Members of the chorus are: first sopranos, Mary Eagle, Mary Frances Hales, Mildred Seekins, Mary Katherine Scott, and Elizabeth Wartman.

Second sopranos: Annette Brewer, Evelyn Fisher, Esther Goodwin, Katherine Kyle, June Meserve, Elsie Parker, Frances Sadler, Patricia Foster, Martha Wilkerson, Betty Routh, and Dorothy Leach.

First altos: Nan O'Shaughnessy, Roberta Rogers, and Virginia Turner.

Second altos: Frances L. Ellis, Mary Lopez, Janet Cook, and Hazel Bowman.

Rosemary Hamly, Lillian Schulte, Helen Gray, Judy Whidden, Mary Brantley, Sara Ball Palmer, and Jo Davis are visiting in Gainesville this week-end.

SUPERIOR
Dry Cleaners and Dyers

"SUPERIOR SERVICE SELLS CLEANING"
SILKS AND FANCIES OUR SPECIALTY

All Garments Insured Against
Fire and Theft

308½ S. Monroe St. Telephone 216

Kali-sten-iks have disillusioned thousands of girls who previously had the mistaken idea that shoes could not be stylish and comfortable at the same time. Modern styling and beauty of detail have been achieved in Kali-sten-iks without sacrifice of the exclusive features of construction which make these shoes so comfortable, healthful, and serviceable. Seamless inside and outside, Kali-sten-iks are easy on hosiery as well as comforting to the feet . . . sensible, beautiful shoes.

Distinctive leathers and advanced styles in all sizes and widths . . . styled and made especially for girls.

New Kali-sten-iks
THE ONLY SHOES WITHOUT SEAMS INSIDE OR OUTSIDE THE QUARTER

ALL STYLES $6.50

VOGUE SHOE PARLOR
TALLAHASSEE
"EXCLUSIVE AGENTS"

Students To Try Record Smashing

National Intercollegiate Swim Is Saturday

The national intercollegiate telegraphic swimming meet of 1935 will be held tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock in the physical education building. Competition will be for six events: three different strokes, the backstroke, crawl and breaststroke, each in two lengths of 40 yards and a 100 yards.

Students of this college will try to break the southern records made last year in which Florida State was the winner in all three 100 yard strokes. Claire Redfield did the 100-yard backstroke in 1'39.8", Martha Makemson, the 100-yard crawl in 1'12-5", and Mildred Stevens, the 100-yard breaststroke in 1'48.6". The University of Alabama won two of the 40-yard strokes, doing the breaststroke in 29.8". Oklahoma A. & M. set the record of the 40-yard backstroke to 29.8".

Colleges of the southern district who have entered the meet this year are: Southern Methodist university, Winthrop college, University of Alabama, University of Georgia, Mississippi State College for Women, Woman's College of University of North Carolina, Oklahoma College for Women, University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma A. & M. college, and Florida State College for Women.

Results of telegraphic swimming meets held in the southern district, comprised of nearly all the southern states, must be wired to Miss Marjorie Mayer, college swimming instructor of Florida State, by April 1. Miss Mayer will wire these results to the University of Illinois April 2 and will receive from the university the winners' names by April 10.

Students who are expecting to participate in the meet are to notify Miss Mayer before 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Dances to Be Given Monday

(Continued from page one)

Anne Lee Rollins, and Jimmy Richberg.

Members of the advanced are: Caroline Oliver, Claire Redfield, Betty Bailey, Frances Hurlin, Elaine Klepper, Victoria Crisp, Wilma Bristol, Sarah Martin, Janice Borton, Hazel Royal, and Katherine Takach.

Virginia Tucker, Kathleen Gruppe and Martha Lee Wilkerson will be musicians.

Sport Slants

On The Spot With Sports

Rose Panowski and Betty Bailey, incoming and outgoing presidents of the Athletic association, will make reports Monday evening at the convention of the Athletic Federation of College Women, southeastern division, which they attended recently in Greensboro, North Carolina.

◆

The rumor that Camp Flastacowo burned up the other night is all wet.

◆

It seemed pretty nice when the rainy weather gave us an excuse to get out of gym classes, but now that the quarter is over, we're wondering what some of those un-made-up gym classes will do to our grades.

◆

To the girls entering the telegraphic meet tomorrow morning: "Swim fast, swim straight—let's win the National!"

◆

Tonight is play-nite at the gym. A special program is to be given for the S. I. A. S. G. delegates, and the T. N. T. orchestra will play from 8:30 to 10:30 o'clock.

◆

The first half of the intramural contests of the individual sports, archery, croquet and horseshoes, was played yesterday morning. The tournament rules varied from the usual way. Each contestant was given one point and each winning team two points, hence the organization sending out the greatest number had a better chance of winning.

The last half will be played Thursday at 11:30 o'clock.

Abbey Talks At SIASG Meeting

(Continued from page one)

between the experienced and inexperienced does not operate. Third, there is the danger of regarding student government as an instrument to keep the campus orderly instead of thinking of it as a process of growth and development.

In an attempt to describe what the student government can do the speaker outlined several possibilities, of which adjustment of individuals to college life was particularly stressed. The aim of a college, as she expressed it, should be to legitimately draw out and help develop the individual student.

Andrews Talks Of Jobs Open

(Continued from page one)

facing the problems of the regular clerks, meeting the customers, and becoming acquainted generally with the work.

Dr. Andrews repeatedly urged that the students cooperate with the placement bureau

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 387

See This Chic
SPORTS SHOE

With comfortable Walking Heel.

In blue and white, brown and white and all white kid. All sizes.

$5.00

THE FRENCH SHOP

Students Hear Talk on Books

(Continued from page one)

is the type of book in which the author is looking back to the past, seeing in it a romance. This type is illustrated in So Red The Rose, Stars Fell in Alabama and Mary Peters. A second popular form of subject matter for modern books is the lives of great men and women of both the past and present.

The lives of Mussolini, Marie Antoinette, Richard Harding Davis and Lloyd George, furnish material for this type of book today. Another class of subject matter which is popular today is the story of countries other than our own, exemplified by The Good Earth and House of Exile. The muckraking of the latter nineteenth and early twentieth century has been borrowed by modern authors, for books on munitions plots, the palaces of our economic system, politics and governmental corruption are forthcoming every day. Books on war, peace, economics, political science, history, sociology and depressions are other types which seem to be gaining ground at the present day, showing a move away from the psychopathic, sophisticated type or the maladjusted individual toward a more wholesome kind of book.

Student Government Officials Meet Here

(Continued from page one)

rope; Frances McCoun, and Mary Seabrook Smith, Weslyan; Frances Wells and Henrietta Manson, Virginia State Teachers' college; Margaret Trovaugh and Ruth Grover, Queens Chicora; Florence Shelley, Hollins college; Kathryn Williams, Coker college; Margaret Vaughn, Alabama college; Adelaide Stevens, Alberta Paumour, Frances James, and Anna Hamber, Agnes Scott; Ethel Adams, dean of Women and Sun Belle Bolton, faculty member of Georgia State College for Women; Elizabeth Baird, Jo Terrell, Frances Pryar, and Leonora Gamble, Brenau college; Rosa Hendrix, Converse college; Rose Dupree, Shorter college; Ellen Jerkins, East Carolina Teachers college; Justice Cutshall, and Hazel Smith, Farmville State Teachers college.

STATE THEATRE

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
James Dunn, Alice Faye, Bennie Rubin, Cliff Edwards
In
GEO. WHITE'S SCANDALS

SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Wallace Berry, Robt. Young, James Gleason, Maureen O'Sulivan
In
WEST POINT OF THE AIR

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
John Biel, Gloria Stuart
In LADDIE

THURSDAY ONLY
Barbara Stanwyck
In SECRET BRIDE

Also
TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT

RITZ THEATRE

SATURDAY
Geo. O'Brien
In DUDE RANGER

SUNDAY AND MONDAY
GEO. WHITE'S SCANDALS

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
WEST POINT OF THE AIR

Anything else Sir?
Nothing else
— they Satisfy!
Chesterfield
CIGARETTES
LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.

Cigarettes are made for your pleasure and for your enjoyment . . . nothing else.

And when a cigarette gives you the enjoyment that Chesterfields do there are no "ifs" "ands" or "buts" about it . . .

They Satisfy

The Social Week

Dorman Will Entertain At Tea For SIASG Delegates

This afternoon from 5 to 6 o'clock Miss Olivia M. Dorman, dean of students, will be hostess at a tea in Gilchrist parlors for the delegates who are guests of the college at the S. I. A. S. G. convention now in session.

As the guests enter the parlors they will be met by a receiving line in which will be standing Dean Dorman, Carolina DeMontigne, Katherine Blood, and Helenmary Fritsch.

The decorations for this occasion will feature an informal motif which will be carried out in spring cut flowers consisting of sweet peas, stocks, calla lilies, and fern. As the guests call they will be served with refreshments of cookies and coffee by the members of the social committee who will be assistant hostesses.

The list of delegates who will be honorees are Margaret Vaughn, Adelaide Stevens, Alberta Palmour, Frances James, Anna Humber, Dean Ethel Adams, Ellen Jenkens, Elizabeth Baird, Josephine Terrell, Frances Pyler, Leonora Gamble, Justine Custball, Hazel Smith, Thelma Evens, Mrs. L. S. Frere, Kathlyn Williams, Lois Ruth Graham, Miss Erin Bolton, Viola James, Catherine Mallory, Rosalie Sutton, Kate Henry, Mildred Turnbull.

Rosa Hendrix, Jane Whitlock, Ethelyn Fawner, Margaret Singleton, Virginia De Groffensied, Florence Shelby, Martha Gunning, Winnie Madison, Hazel West, Olivia Moon, Josephine Jones, Doris Davis, Cecil Kahn, Catherine Mosely, Claudia Osborne, Josephine Hamilin, Lucy O'Dell, Sara Wilson, Ester Turner, Helen Horn, Doris Tre be, Anna Keever, Henrietta Burns, Pearl Bond.

Mary Virginia Barnes, Lila Norman, Elizabeth Pinkerton, Louise King Howe, Mary Stuart Mills, Margaret Van Oat, Doris Van Deen, Thelma Evans, Frances Wells, Henrietta Manson, Jane Brown, Elizabeth Dandridge, Peggy Thornburgh, Mary Virginia Tutile, Gertrude Schwalbe, Frances McCown, Mary Seabrook Smith, Ruth Groover, Mary Delia Nickols.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
March 30 to April 6

Friday

5:00 p.m. Tea in Gilchrist parlors honoring SIASG convention delegates with Dean Dorman as hostess

7:15 p.m. Banquet in lower dining room for convention delegates

8:15 p.m. Play nite in college gymnasium with special program played for SIASG delegates

Sunday

11:00 a.m. Church services

7:15 p.m. Y. W. C. A. Vespers

Monday

5:30 p.m. Orchestra Rehearsal

7:30 p.m. Glee club rehearsal, in auditorium

8:00 p.m. Beta Pi Theta meeting

9:00 p.m. Sorority meetings

11:30 a.m. Convocation. Honors Work Program

5:30 p.m. Orchestra Rehearsal

5:30 p.m. Tea in Reynolds for freshman students with Miss Lou Miller as hostess

7:15 p.m. "Why We Like Drama" with Dr. W. G. Dodd as speaker in Broward club room

7:30 p.m. Glee club rehearsal, in auditorium

7:30 p.m. Home Economics club meeting

Wednesday

7:15 a.m. Worship service

5:30 p.m. Dr. and Mrs. Leland Lewis at home in Jennie Murphree to freshman students

8:15 p.m. Glee club concert

Thursday

11:30 a.m. Day Students Meeting

5:30 p.m. Tea in Bryan sun parlor with Miss Isabel McKinnell and Miss Anna Mae Sharp

7:30 p.m. Orchestra Rehearsal, in auditorium

Friday

7:30 p.m. Orchestra rehearsal

Saturday

8:00 p.m. Sophomore Hop. Physical Education building

Zetas Are Hostesses At Buffet Supper

Members of the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority entertained a number of guests Sunday evening with an informal buffet supper at the chapter house on College avenue.

Mrs. J. E. Gibson, sorority chaperon, presided at the table and the freshmen and sophomores served the juniors, seniors, and their dates.

Those present were: Billie Faxon, Oneida McFatter, Elizabeth Simson, Clarice Stanfill, Evelyn Stump, Clara Lankford, Mary Frank Price, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Dorothy Borden, Frances Lingle, Esther Hay, Virginia Thornton, Virginia Shultz, Jean Maze, Marjorie Stump, Betty Fellows, Louise Swatterer, Martha Evans, Christine Waldon, and Lois Long.

Thorpe Fussell, George Kelly, Ed Sharpe, Bo Mitchell, Bill Marshall, Davis Atkinson, Bud Love, Porter Reynolds, Park Swindell, Mort Smith, Frank Sherron, Francis Williams, Jimmie Holliday, and Jimmie Malone.

Personal Mention

Students visiting in Jacksonville this week-end include Margaret Anderson, Betty Manning, Edith Mary Kansall, Betty Hamilton, Elizabeth Stout, Elizabeth Kirby-Smith, Margaret Thompson, Marion Knight, Francis Thomas, Ava Scott, Elizabeth and Minna Yockey, Ruth Follin, Juanita Pace, Dorothy Watson, and Juanita Buchanan.

◆

Charlotte Rosenberg, of Plant City, who attened this college, is visiting at the Delta Phi Epsilon house.

◆

Mrs. Huxley Coulter of Lake City, state alumnae treasurer of the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority, was a visitor at the Zeta Tau Alpha house Tuesday. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Hugh Embry of Quincy.

◆

Kathryn Barrs and Dorothy Osincup have gone to Miami to attend the Florida State social conference.

◆

Margaret Edwards is spending a few days in Lakeland with her parents.

◆

Ola Vickers and Mary Catherine Drennan have gone to Palatka for the week-end.

◆

Tommy Grace Faircloth, Josephine Trantham, and Minnie Jane Hackney will spend the week-end in Lake City visiting Minnie Jane's parents.

◆

Mary Elizabeth Holstead will visit her parents and Helen Godwin will visit friends in Lake City this week-end.

Tri Deltas To Attend Annual "State Day"

A large representation of the Florida State college chapter of Delta Delta Delta will go to Tampa this weep-end to meet the Stetson chapter in an annual "State Day."

Saturday noon the delegates will be the guests of the Tampa alumnae club at a luncheon at the Tampa Yacht club. At the luncheon both chapters will present skits as part of the entertainment. The Florida state chapter will present "Madame Panhellenic."

Saturday night the delegates will be guests at a dance at the Palma Ceia Golf club.

Mrs. J. Rex Farrior, alumna of this chapter, will be the chairman of the convention. The first of these state meets took place in Orlando in 1932. Last year the meeting was held in Jacksonville.

Members from this chapter who will attend include: Anne Curtright, Yulee Way, Francis Phillips, Frances Lowry, Joyce Reed, Ellen Moore, Dorothy Branch, Elinor Payne, Katherine Barrs, Dorothy Osincup, Dorothy Olmstead, Mildred Smoak, and Charlotte Pelsang.

ZETA TAU ALPHAS WILL ENTERTAIN WITH AFTER DINNER COFFEE TONIGHT

An after dinner coffee at the Zeta Tau Alpha house tonight will honor five of the visiting S. I. A. S. G. convention delegates who are members of the Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

Jo Terrell, Frances Pryor, and Snookie Gambel are attending from Brenau and Etta Turner and Claudia Osborne are attending from Stetson.

Branches of dogwood and wild plum will be arranged in vases in the living rooms. Refreshments of coffee, sandwiches, and after-dinner mints will be served by the hostesses for the occasion, Virginia Thornton, president of the chapter; Dorothy Borden, president-elect; and Mrs. J. E. Gibson, sorority chaperon.

Other members and pledges of the sorority who will attend are: Oneida McFatter, Mary Frank Price, Evelyn Stump, Billy Faxon, Frances Lingle, Mary Elizabeth Simpson, Clara Lankford, Esther Hay, Clarice Stanfill, Jeanne Matheson, Beth Finlay, Jean Maze, Marjorie Stump, Virginia Shultz, Betty Fellows, and Elizabeth Green.

Invited guests include: Mrs. James Wadsworth, Mrs. W. K. Whitfield, Katherine Blood, Martha Evans, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Virginia Brown, Christine Waldon, Lucile Weeks, Lois Long, and Dorothea Marsh.

ALPHA GAMMA DELTAS TO ENTERTAIN WITH INFORMAL PARTY SUNDAY NIGHT

Members and pledges of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority will be hostesses at an informal party Sunday evening at the sorority house on Park avenue.

An informal motif will be emphasized in the house decorations which will consist principally of cut spring flowers. During the evening refreshments of sandwiches, cookies, and iced tea will be served the guests.

The entertainment on this occasion will feature skits presented by the pledges for the guests which will include the rushees of the sorority.

Among the members and pledges who will serve as hostesses at the party are Marian Turner, Helen Hartness, Pauline McLellan, Margaret Roe, Amorette Bullard, Sarah Butler Logan, Hallie Bailey, Adielyn Fox, Sara Maxwell, Rosalie McDonald, Doris Isted, Mary Ward Peterson, Nadia Grainger, Mercia Scott, Betsey Anderson, Helena Wilson, Westa Wilkins, Catherine McGarry, and Spurgeon Pulford.

Helen Godwin, Amber Turner, Bettye Mace, Mary Jane Gallemore Francis Bishop, Phyllis Gewin, Mary Nell Pinckard, Dorothy Bryan, Nan O'Shaughnessy, Nellie Lamar, Mary Elizabeth Halstead, Grace Groff, Marianna Swank, Madge Collier, Ruth Crews, Julia O'Quinn, Margaret Pee, Marian Bailey, Martha Crocker, and Lou Hill.

Play-Nite Planned For Delegates Here

One of the many entertainments for the delegates of the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government during their convention here will be the special play-nite at the Gym tonight from 8:30 to 10:30 o'clock.

Beth Daane, in charge of the program, has announced that the T. N. T. orchestra will play during the evening for dancing. Special numbers will be a tap dance by Caroline Oliver, piano duet by Mildred Smith and Thelma Smith, and a solo by Shirley Pemberton.

Alpha Xi Delta Will Entertain Rushees Near Gypsy Fire

Bright fires will gleam and castanets will clink in Romany tomorrow night as members and pledges of Alpha Xi Delta entertain their rushees at a gypsy party.

Gypsies in full regalia will answer the summons to a "tribal council" at 8 o'clock, as they meet around a campfire in the side yard near the sorority house. Entertainment will include fortune telling, gypsy music, and games appropriate to the occasion.

Refreshments of iced tomato juice and saltines will be served.

◆

Martha Goddard will visit her family in Quincy this week-end.

DEAN MATHEWS, ALUMNI OF CHICAGO UNIVERSITY ENTERTAINED YESTERDAY

Alumni and students of the University of Chicago were entertained at a reception last night honoring Dean Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago who spoke in the college auditorium earlier in the evening.

The receiving line was composed of Dean Mathews, Dr. Edward Conradi, Superintendent W. S. Cawthon, and Dr. Jennie Tilt.

Serving at the punch bowl were Miss Anna Mae Tracy, Dr. Anna Popper, and Mrs. Henry Becker. The alumnae room, where the reception was held was decorated in red and white, the colors of the University of Chicago. This color scheme was carried out in spring cut flowers attractively arranged by Miss Rowena Longmire who was in charge of the reception.

The latter part of the reception was given to a semi-formal meeting at which Dean Mathews talked of changes, personalities, and new movements of the university.

Other faculty members graduated from the University of Chicago present were Dr. Herman Kurz, Dr. Coyle Moore, Dr. Elinor Nims, Dr. Eada May Deviney, Dr. Hazel Stevenson, Miss Longmire, Miss Leila Venable, Miss Edith West, Miss Marguerite Taylor, Miss Ruth Schornhurst, Professor Henry Becker.

Members of the faculty who have studied there include Dr. Lanas Spurgeon Barber, Miss Louise Richardson, Miss Amy Briggs, Dean Margaret Sandels, Miss Olga Larson, Miss Sarah Herndon, Miss Mildred Henry, Miss Mary McKean, Miss Esther Smith, and Miss Leonora Smith. Miss Dorothy Dodd of Tallahassee was also present.

Kappa Alpha Thetas Honor Delegates

Members and pledges of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority were hostesses at an after-dinner coffee Wednesday night at the chapter house honoring five delegates from Vanderbilt to the S. I. A. S. G. convention who are members of the sorority.

The honorees on this occasion were Jane Brown, Mary Brown, Jane Boggess, Elizabeth Dandridge, and Frances Pruitt.

The sorority house was decorated informally with cut spring flowers. During the evening refreshments of sandwiches, mints and coffee were served.

Bennett's

Bennett's Special Rich Ice Cream, pt.	15c
Bennett's Club Luncheon	40c
Sis-L-Hot Steaks with potatoes every day	50c
15c Choc. Syrup Sundae	10c
15c Double Dip Ice Cream Soda	10c
25c Frozen Fudge Sundae	15c
20c Chicken Salad Sandwich	15c
20c Peanut Butter and Jelly Sandwich	15c
Russell McPhail Ice Cream, Pt.	25c

AT EASTERTIDE

There is no gift so personal as a Photograph of yourself.

Make your appointment early

PIKE'S STUDIO

SALE

ON LINEN AND SHANTUNG SUITS

Pure Linen—
Shantung in Solid White, Brown and White Combination

$1.98

Linen and Shantung
Swagger Suits

$3.95 Value

$2.98

LIPPMAN'S
HUB STORE
104 E. Jefferson St.

Simplicity 15¢ patterns
GELBERG'S

Try Our Special
CHOP SUEY
and
CHOW MEIN
DINNERS
Tallahassee Cafe

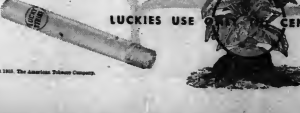
Try Our Delicious
OYSTER SUPPERS
40c
M. & N. CAFE

"Remember how I brought you two together"

I'm your best friend

I am your Lucky Strike

I am a friend indeed. A better friend than others, because I am made only of mild, fragrant, expensive center leaves. I don't permit a single sharp top leaf nor a single coarse bottom leaf to mar my good taste or my uniform mildness. I do not irritate your throat. I am a soothing companion, the best of friends.



LUCKIES USE ONLY THE CENTER LEAVES . . . CENTER LEAVES GIVE YOU THE MILDEST SMOKE

They Taste Better

Copyright 1935, The American Tobacco Company.

Campus Extends
Greetings To Visiting Sigma Kappas

The Florida Flambeau

Published bv the Students of Florida State College For Women

Attend Jamboree
Celebrating
Flambeau Anniversary

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, April 5, 1935 NUMBER TWENTY-FOUR

Orchestra To Give Concert This Weekend

Annual Spring Program Will Feature Members Of Music Faculty

COWLES COMPOSES SPECIAL NUMBERS

Students Will Assist In Rendering the Solo Accompaniment

The Florida State College orchestra is giving its annual spring concert Sunday afternoon in the college auditorium at five o'clock.

The program will include two compositions of the leader, Walter Ruel Cowles. The program will include a flute and harp duet by Wilma Bristol and Elizabeth Love, soprano solos with orchestral accompaniment by Miss Etta Robertson, and selections for three pianos and orchestra featuring Dean Ella Scoble Opperman, Mary Reed and Miss Mary Esther Winslow.

Concert Program

The program will be as follows: Concerto grosso in D major, Corelli, with solo violins, Martha Reddick and Betty Parker, and solo violincello, Yvonne Tait; Concerto for orchestra, flute and harp, Mozart, Wilma Bristol and Elisabeth Love; Songs with orchestral accompaniment, Twilight, At the Spring, and The Shepherd to his Love, Cowles, sung by Miss Robertson; Concerto in C major for three pianos and orchestra, Bach, by Dean Opperman, Mary Reeder, and Miss Mary Winslow; Prelude for organ and orchestra, Cowles; and Concerto in B flat, Handel, with Miss Margaret Whitney Dow at the organ.

Orchestra Personnel

First violins: Martha Reddick, concert master; Yvonne Breaux, Marjorie Tillis, Annabelle Larsen, Betty Miller; second violins: Betty Parker, principal; Gertrude Tombies, Marion Ferrell, Bertha Veith, Rosetta Whilden, Willie Mae Hall.

Violoncellos: Yvonne Tait, principal; Charlotte Veith, Owen Sellers; violas: Evalyn Patterson, Anna Mae Sharp; basses, Martha Wilkerson, Sarah Tyler.

Flutes: Wilma Bristol Jane Crago, Adeline Gehrkens, Marjorie Cox; Oboe; Audrey Farmer; clarinets: Betsy Anderson, Mary Eagle, Aurilla Driggers; French horn: Evelyn Hammond; trumpets: Mildred Huret, Betty Brooks, Helen Sellers; tympani: Louise Johnson; harp: Elizabeth Love.

Sophomores Plan Tropical Dance

Cocoanut Grove of Palms Surrounds Floor

All plans for the sophomore hop, to be held Saturday night from 8:30-11:45 in the college gymnasium have been completed, according to Peggy McMichel, general chairman of the affair.

During the afternoon from 3:00-6:00 o'clock, Gilchrist Hall and all of the sorority houses will hold open house for the sophomores and their guests. These dances will be as any other Saturday afternoon dancing except that the groups will be allowed to serve punch.

The Hop, at which the University of Florida Clubmen will play, is to be in the gymnasium where the lower floor will be transformed into a Cocoanut Grove. The night club scene is to be in imitation of the famed Cocoanut Grove where couples may dance under the sky, surrounded by palm trees. This effect will be carried out by lights, as stars, suspended from a dark ceiling and sky and clouds floating far above the audience. Flood lights, giving an appearance of moonlight, will be worked by Dr. Ralph Bellamy and Dr. Harold Richards.

Arrangements for the dance are in charge of the following committees: entertainment, and mistress of ceremonies, Mary Jeanne McKay; invitations, Marjorie Moore; programs, Martha Makemson; decorations, Frances Thomas, Jean Clark, Frances Morrow, and Eileen Masters; refreshments, Roberta Diamond; chairs, Sara Hethcox, Ma[illegible] Maxwell; pages to check lists, Alma Butler.

Personnel of NSFA Group is Complete

The personnel of the student committee to formulate plans for a local unit of the National Students' Federation of America of which this college is a member has been announced by Margaret Graham, chairman of the committee.

The first meeting of the committee was held Saturday with Thomas Neblett, president-elect of the national organization, in attendance. He outlined various methods of organizing such campus units of the NSFA.

Those on the committee proper are Margaret Graham, chairman, Minna Dunn, junior, Mary Jeanne McKay, sophomore, and Ermine Lawrence, freshman. The delegates to the Boston convention of NSFA, Louise Robertson and Katherine Blood, are assisting the committee.

Blood Elected Head of SIASG

Convention Here Adopts Resolutions After Discussions

At the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government convention held here March 28-30, Katherine Blood, of Florida State College for Women, was elected president. The other officers elected were Adelaide Stevens, of Agnes Scott, vice-president; Rosa Hendricks, of Converse, secretary; and Elizabeth Pinkerton, of Sweetbriar, treasurer.

Three resolutions were adopted by the association as a result of the discussion on social and dormitory problems held Thursday afternoon, March 28. These resolutions were: (1) that dormitory make-up and administration should be such as is best fitted to the advantage of those people occupying the dormitory, and that through regulations opportunity should be given to students for study and sleep; (2) that methods of punishment should have direct bearing upon the individual and case involved, and that such punishment should be given with a view to constructive work for and with the individual; (3) that social privileges should be possessed by student bodies as they seem fit to possess them.

The resolutions adopted as a result of the discussion of technique of presidency held Friday morning were: (1) that student government should foster a program of constructive action rather than a program in which the enforcement of rules and regulations is stressed; (2) that it is both advisable and beneficial that the officers of student government should have definite training in office before installation; (3) that the officers of student government should try to achieve mutual understanding between faculty and student body.

Seven resolutions were made as a result of the discussion on student activities Friday afternoon, under the leadership of Helenmary Fritsch. These were: (1) that extra-curricular activites are valuable to students as a supplement to academic life, as a means of social contact, and as a training school for coping with life situations, and as such should be fostered by every student body; (2) that most departmental clubs and honoraries possess little influence or interest for those outside of the department concerned, and that honorary societies are of most value when few in number and active in college life; (3) that literary and debating societies, international relations and political clubs may be valuable channels through which students may become informed and actively interested in national and international affairs; (4) that student government should be truly rep-

(Continued on page three)

Knight, Keith Elected As New Club Officers

The International Relations club unanimously elected Clarissa Knight and Rebecca Keith as president and secretary, respectively, for next year at its meeting Tuesday night.

The possibility of bringing a foreign student to this campus to study was the main topic of discussion of the evening. It was [illegible] by Edith Patterson [illegible] T. Abbey will [illegible] the next meeting of the [illegible] which will be an open meeting.

Sigma Kappa Regional Meet Begins Today

Fifty Active and Alumnae Delegates Arrive Here From Three States

EVENTS START THIS AFTERNOON

Discussions, Wakulla Trip And Formal Banquet Are on Program

Approximately fifty active and alumnae members of the Sigma Kappa sorority arrived in Tallahassee today to attend the regional Sigma Kappa convention being held at the sorority house of the Omega chapter on Park avenue this week-end. The delegates represent chapters from South Carolina, Alabama, Texas, and Florida.

Activities will begin this afternoon with a sight seeing tour of Tallahassee, followed by a tea at the chapter house, dinner in the college dining room, and a formal reception tonight when the Maine sea coast philanthropic exhibit will be displayed.

Discussion Tomorrow

Events scheduled for tomorrow include college and alumnae discussions, a picnic lunch at Wakulla Springs, an informal tea at the home of Mrs. Glen Terrell, a model initiation, and a formal banquet in the evening at the Floridan hotel.

Miss Marian Young, president of the Tallahassee alumnae chapter, is serving as general chairman of the conference, while Miss Evelyn Kennard of Omega chapter, Florida State, is chapter chairman.

Regional officers attending are the regional president, Mrs. Bernice Reaney Varner, of State Teacher's College, Harrisonburg.

(Continued on page three)

Flambeau Will Have Jamboree

"Behind the Scenes" Tour And Talks Will Be In Celebration

The coming week will mark the twentieth anniversary of the founding on this campus of the Florida Flambeau, and in celebration of the event a program has been scheduled, including addresses by prominent Florida journalists, "behind the scenes," tours of both a student and a city newspaper, a series of talks by student journalists, the presentation of the prize to the Alpha Chi Alpha contest winner, and the annual Flambeau banquet.

On Monday night at eight o'clock the anniversary program will open with informal talks by Edith Patterson on "Twenty Years Before the Mast-head;" Betty Smith, "The Ins and Outs of a Campus Reporter;" Marjorie Harris, "The Advertising Game;" Ethyle Mae Edwards, "Business Training on Student Publications;" Lucy Fulghum, "The Place of Journalism in a Liberal Education;" and Barbara Garfunkel, "The Flambeau and the Future."

The winner of the prize offered this year by Alpha Chi Alpha, journalistic honorary, for the best article on the subject "Should College Set Up Life Situations as a Means of Training for Citizenship" will be presented Monday night by David H. Briggs, chairman of the judging committee. Immediately following Earl Lynn Vance, associate professor of journalism, will speak on the "Place of the Student Newspaper in a College Community." The program will close at nine o'clock.

Tuesday morning in convocation the student body will hear Helen Hunt West, a state and national figure in journalistic and political activity, who will talk on "Women in Politics." Mrs. West, who is an alumna of Florida State, was active in journalism while on the campus, and since her graduation has become one of Florida's most able newspaperwomen. She has represented various Florida dailies during several sessions of the legislature and served for a number of years as society editor of the Jacksonville Times-Union. She

(Continued on Page Two)

Flambeau Marks Duodecade Of Colorful History In Its Twentieth Anniversary Fete

Growth and Achievement Of National Rank Are Realized

Next week will mark two decades of service by the Florida Flambeau as the student publication for Florida State College for Women. These twenty years have been characterized by continuous physical growth and by the attainment of national honors for outstanding achievements in the field of collegiate journalism.

During this time the Flambeau has developed from a small four-page paper with a limited personnel to a full sized six-page paper edited weekly by a staff of thirty students.

It was Dr. Edward Conradi who first suggested the idea of a campus newspaper to the students in 1915. His proposal was greeted with enthusiasm on the part of the student body and Mrs. Carson, former writer of college news for the Democrat, was elected the first editor of the Flambeau by a group of faculty members.

Toward the latter part of the year there appeared an eight-page jubilee edition of the paper. This edition was unique in that it was practically a one-woman edition for at the last minute Mrs. Carson was informed by her staff that no copy had come in. Between ten o'clock and dawn the editor pounded her typewriter in the Bryan candy kitchen taking time out only to drink hot coffee given to her by a faithful freshman.

In 1922 the Flambeau, edited by Martha Murphree, developed into a small eight-page publication. It contained contributions from the students at large and the advertisements were plentiful. In 1923 every member of the student body automatically became a subscriber of the Flambeau upon the payment of her student activity fee.

In February, 1924, under the new editor, Virginia Yewell, the first issue increased to twelve pages in honor of Dr. Conradi's birthday. During the latter part of the year, however, the paper was reduced to six pages, probably because of financial stress.

In 1928 a course of journalism was introduced into the college curriculum thus furnishing a means of giving students training in scientific newspaper writing and make-up. Under the supervision of Professor Earl L. Vance, the Flambeau has since developed into one of the outstanding college newspapers in the country.

The paper officially "grew up" in 1928 when its size was increased from that of a small college weekly to a four-page, regular newspaper.

The climax of the history of the Flambeau took place in 1930 when under the editorship of Thelma Sumner a twelve-page issue devoted to the silver jubilee anniversary of the college was published. This edition contained articles on campus events and administration, faculty, history, and development of the college, in addition to numerous special advertisements.

In 1930 the Flambeau was awarded first class honor rating by the National Scholastic Press association. In the following years of 1931, 1932, and 1933 it received the highest award of the association, that of All American rating.

During the lifetime of the paper it has developed into an instrument of campus expression and has served to create student interest in campus affairs. New departments have been created to cope with the changing attitudes and demands of the students and opportune features have been planned.

Junior Senior Party Plans Include Dinner On Night of April 27

Plans are in progress for a junior-senior party to be given in the dining room April 27, the night of junior minstrel, according to Margaret K. Anderson, general chairman, and Mercia Scott who is in charge of table decorations.

The party will take the place of the junior-senior party which the juniors have given for the seniors during the past three years, returning to the old tradition of a junior-senior banquet. After the dinner the juniors will take their senior sisters to the minstrel.

In the near future provision will be made for juniors and seniors to sign up on the bulletin board for the dinner.

Groups Will Sign To Use Club Room

Groups wishing to use Broward clubroom must sign up in the book for that purpose in the Dean of Students' office, according to Miss Olivia N. Dorman. This is necessary in order to avoid conflicts of meetings.

Broward club room has recently been redecorated and refurnished in order to give various organizations a suitable place in which to hold meetings. Students are ivited to hold program meetings there but are asked not to use the room as a date parlor.

Florida Wins Second Meet

Makemson High Scorer Among Telegraphic Swimmers Here

For the second consecutive year Florida State College is the winner of the southern district of the national intercollegiate telegraphic swimming meet, winning the 1935 meet with 35 points. The University of Georgia ranked second with 32 points, and Oklahoma A. & M. third with 20 points.

Martha Makemson was high scorer of the local meet with 14 points, Marion Weeks second with 7 points and Mildred Stevens third with 5½ points.

The local meet took place last Saturday morning in the college pool with time taken for first, second, and third places. Results of telegraphic swimming meets held in the southern district, comprised of nearly all the southern states were wired to Miss Marjorie Mayer, swimming instructor, who in turn wired the results to the University of Illinois from which she received the final results.

Results of Florida State College in the meet were: 40 yard crawl, first place won by Martha Makemson with time of 23 seconds; sixth place by Frances Lewis in 26.2 seconds, and ninth place by Louise Gehan in 26.4 second; 40 yard back crawl, second place by Martha Makemson in 29.1 seconds, and Marion Weeks third place in 29.9 seconds; 40 yard breast stroke, Marie Taylor and Mildred Stevens tied for third place with time of 35 seconds.

One hundred yard crawl, first place won by Martha Makemson with time of 1 minute and 10.4 seconds, and third place won by Frances Lewis with time of 1 minute and 26 seconds; 100 yard back crawl, second place won by Marion Weeks with time of 1 minute and 29.8 seconds; 100 yard breast stroke, third place by Mildred Stevens in 1 minute and 45.2 seconds and fourth place by Marie Taylor with the time of 1 minute and 46.6 seconds.

Colleges of the southern district who entered the 1935 meet are: Southern Methodist university, Winthrop college, University of Alabama, University of Georgia, Mississippi State College for Women, North Carolina College for Women, Oklahoma College for Women, University of Oklahoma, Oklahoma A. & M. College and Florida State College for Women.

Campbell Conducting Survey of Training And Jobs of Faculty

Each of the 100 faculty members of Florida State College, including demonstration school teachers, are at present making detailed reports to Dr. Doak S. Campbell, chairman of the joint committee of the General Education board and the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, concerning his training, past experience, and present work, as well as what he thinks about many specific things concerning college life.

This survey includes all of the universities of America. The study is being made as a part of a general effort to standardize the college curricula, with the purpose of determining how well prepared the teachers are to do their work.

After reports are assembled the findings will be arranged in tabular form and will be made available to anyone interested in college rating.

New Sorority Heads Chosen For Next Year

Sixteen Chapters Select Incoming Officers Last Week

NEW GROUPS SOON TO BE INSTALLED

Remaining Elections To Take Place During Coming Week

Sixteen of the eighteen Greek-letter sororities on the campus held elections of officers for the forthcoming year during the last week while other sorority elections will take place within the next month.

Alpha Chi Omega

Alpha Chi Omega officers for the new year are; president, Juanita Buchanan; vice-president, Patricia Foster; recording secretary, Anna Belle Linger; corresponding secretary, Betty Brooks; treasurer, Mary Key; assistant treasurer, Helen Cate; historian, Elizabeth Carter; house chairman, Yvette Breaux; social chairman, Marie Spurlock; and chaplain, Mary Catherine Drennan.

Alpha Delta Pi officers are: president, Audrey Smith; vice-president, Doris Risk; secretary, Anna Groover; treasurer, Josephine Trantham; corresponding secretary, Mary Wallace Brandon; chaplain, Peggy Milton; house chairman, Ellen Fleming; activity chairman, Mary Lou Moore, reporter, Charmain Laffarrow.

Officers of Alpha Xi Delta include: president, Althea Smith; vice-president, Carlota Cañellas; Elizabeth Filer; treasurer, Charlotte Kinzie; chaplain, Jean Crago; marshal, Marion Weeks, and journal correspondent, Clotilde O'Rourke.

Alpha Gamma Delta

Alpha Gamma Delta officers

(Continued on Page Two)

Third Distaff Appears Soon

Two New Contributors Join Present List In Magazine

The third issue of The Distaff, the last edition to be put out by the 1934-1935 staff, will appear at sometime during this coming week, according to Lucy Fulghum, editor.

Most of the articles, poems, and other pieces of prose in this issue have been written by former contributors to the magazine, only two new contributors being introduced.

An editorial, "If I were Dictator," recommends various changes the writer would make in the present school system if she were at the head.

"Education Comes To The Rescue" by Gertrude Kuhn, a new contributor, tells of the different ways that are employed by the reformatories in the handling of problem children.

In an article "If History Puts Her Hand To The Plow" Edna Hoffman says that the past should not be diregarded in the solving of those problems of the present, for there is a striking similarity between the two.

"Our Class Indifference" is the name of an article by Daisy Parker and was written by her as a summery of a set of questions which she presented to members of the student body.

An autobiographical sketch is being published anonymously, not because the author does not wish her name to be connected with the ideas expressed but because the sketch is personal.

The editor of the magazine, Lucy Fulghum, has contributed "The College Girl's Religion," a re-interpretation of the Lord's prayer according to the college girl's philosophy.

A long sonnet-sequence, "Encounter," by Mildred Williams will appear in this issue of The Listaff. These sonnets have some of the calmness characteristic of Edna St. Vincent Millay, according to the editor of the magazine.

The frontispiece of the third-quarter issue is a scratch board called "Jewelry" and was done by Ellen Moore. It is a piece of com-

(Continued on page five)

Speakers Selected For Commencement

Speakers for the commencement exercises have been selected, according to information from the president's office.

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered Sunday May 26 by Dr. Albert C. Holt, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Jacksonville. Dr. Doak A Campbell, professor of education and director of the division of surveys and field studies of George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville, Tenn., wil deliver the commencement address May 27 in the college auditorium.

Dr. Campbell visited the campus in January in connection with a survey ofcurriculum problems by the education committee of the South of the General Education board and the joint committee of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. The survey was undertaken to discover what has been done in the various schools toward revising the curriculum, and to establish eventually some plan whereby all schools may have the same general curriculum set up.

While here, Dr. Campbell addressed members of the faculty on matters related to the curriculum.

Convention to Meet In April

Florida State Students And Faculty to Take Part in Events

Six members of the Florida state college faculty and twelve students are attending the eighth annual convention of the Southern district of the American physical education association, which is being held April 3 to 6 at the Biltmore hotel in Atlanta, headquarters of the association.

All schools of the southern states which offer major courses in physical education have been asked to demonstrate the work of their departments at the convention. Pictures and notebooks showing the organization and administration of physical education in this college including the aims, objectives, and sample tests of each course are on exhibit.

Of the faculty members attending four took part on the various programs. Miss Dorothy White was a speaker at a meeting of the camping section Thursday morning and a discussion leader Friday morning. At the meeting of the public school section Thursday morning Miss Katherine Montgomery gave a demonstration of volley ball using sixth grade children there. Miss Montgomery was also a summarizer in the women's athletic section, while Miss Mary Settle was a timer.

At a dance symposium, which will be given during a meeting of the dance section at Agnes Scott college, Miss Mildred Stewart with members of the advanced natural dancing class will show the fundamentals of the dance including the preparations and completed skills. Other dance groups will represent the University of Georgia, Winthrop college, South Carolina, Sophie Newcomb, Louisiana, and Agnes Scott.

Other faculty members who are attending are Miss Marjorie Mayer, member of the National women's swimming committee, and Miss Elisabeth Autry, state chairman of the committee for national officials rating for women's basketball, Miss Fannie Shaw of the University at Gainesville is the councilwoman for this state, whose duties are that of hostess.

Students who attending are: dancers, Caroline Oliver, Claire Redfield, Betty Bailey, Frances Hurlin, Elaine Klepper, Victoria Crisp, Wilma Bristol, Sarah Martin, Janice Borton, Hazel Royal, and Katherine Takach; pianist, Virginia Tucker.

Author of Music Texts To Visit Daughter Here

Carl W. Gehrkens, national authority on musical subjects, and his wife visited the college this week, as guests of their daughter, Adeline Gehrkens, freshman here.

Mr. Gehrkens is a professor at Oberlin college, Oberlin, Ohio. He is the author of two musical study books, Essentials in Conducting, and Music Notation and Terminology and edited the proceedings book for the annual convention of the National Music Teacher's association, of which organization he was president last year.

Modern Art to Be Shown Here For Ten Days

Seven Modes of Painting Include Well-Known Artists' Works

BRIGGS LECTURES TWICE ON GROUP

Exhibit Was Selected By Agnes Rindge Of Vassar

Eight modes of modern painting will be represented at the art exhibit which begins Monday and will continue through Wednesday, April 17. Miss Amy Ferris Briggs, of the art department will lecture on the exhibit at 4:30 Monday and Thursday.

The exhibit which will be held in 307 Administration building, will be open to the public each day from 9:30 to 5:30 o'clock wth the exception of Saturday afternoon and Sunday.

Eight Modern Modals

The eight modes of modern twentieth century painting which will be shown include impressionism, free style, cubism, purism, expressionism, factualism, super-realism, and neo-romanticism. Each mode will be represented by paintings of artists who have adopted the particular style.

The folloging remarks on the various modes were taken from the catalogue of the exhibit which was prepared by Miss Agnes Rindge, of the art department of Vassar, who also selected the paintings that appear in the exhibit.

Impressionism is Defined

"Impressionism is a mode of rendering developed in the last quarter of the twentieth century under the impetus of scientific discoveries about the action of light that sought to give the painted canvas the vibrancy of light by dividing the tones of colour." Among the artists affecting this mode whose works will be shown are Childe Hassam, Claude Monet, Maurice Prendergast, and Pierre Renoir.

"Free style represents a large field of practise, rather than a mode, comprising perhaps the bulk of modern painters not subscribing to a definite program." Artists who represent this mode are Henri Matisse, Jean Metzinger, Henri Rousseau, and Gino Severini.

"Cubism contains many varieties of painting. It attacks the status of the 'object' or 'appearance' as the basis of a work of art, putting forward instead the idea of free pictorial invention." Georges Braque, Marcel Duchamp, Albert Gleizes, John Graham, Juan Gris, and Pablo Picasso, depict this mode in their work.

"Purism is a conclusion of the premises of cubism in the severe reduction of the role of painting to flat colour areas related by quantity alone without any representation and without any variation in handling by effects of brushwork or texture. Charchoune, Ferdinand Leger, Lissitsky, and

(Continued on page three)

Students Will Reserve Rooms

Ten-Dollar Fee Required Before April 27

Students wishing to make room reservations for the school term of 1935-1936 are asked to sign up for their reservation the week of April 23-27 inclusive, according to an announcement from the president's office. A deposit of ten dollars which is to be paid in the business office is required to have a room reservation held.

The rules which pertain to room reservation are as follows: all accounts must be paid up to date before a reservation can be made; no reservation will be held beyond June 1 unless all accounts for the second semester are paid; and in order for a student to be given her choice of roommates and rooms both she and her prospective roommate must make a deposit for the room before April 27.

According to Miss Jessie McNeill, secretary to the president, if a student pays her reservation fee but does not return to college next fall or decides she does [illegible] wish to retain her room, [illegible] amount will be held to her credit here.

Graduate Of Florida State Operates Largest Transient Library In U. S.

Prescribes Literature For Emotional Upsets And Moral Setbacks of the Unfortunate, Homeless and Discontented

Jewel Hogg, graduate from Florida State College in 1932, has assisted in founding a transient library in Atlanta, Georgia, which is now considered the largest of its kind in the country.

In an article in the Atlanta Journal Miss Hogg is described as a young lady who prescribes, hour after hour, literature for emotional upsets and moral setbacks in precisely the same way that a doctor would make a diagnosis and suggest a remedy.

Here among these thousands of transients, according to the Journal, she must deal not with ordinary people but with the unfortunate, the homeless, the discontented, the potential criminal, and the almost-suicide.

Her method of treatment, is to start people talking, listen to them in her own sympathetic way until she discovers the reasons for their being at the library, and to use this as a clue as to what course of reading to suggest to them.

For a man thoroughly disgusted with the world and everything in it, she often suggests P. G. Wodehouse or Octavus Roy Cohen, while for people who are worrying Sax Rohmer is a panacea with Jules Verne running him a close second. Mystery stories are in constant demand, the Journal quotes Miss Hogg as saying, and as the lure of the mystery story simply means a desire for vicarious adventure, she often substitutes travel books for the lighter type of reading.

Miss Hogg finds that many people are superficially interested in the economic system, because the depression has robbed them of so much. She gives them economics written in entertaining, easy comprehended style with Clarence Buddington Kelland's Gold, Dynasty, and Hard Money, ranking among the favorites.

"When they first come up here," said Miss Hogg, "they come to kill time. They want western stories, and all sorts of adventure. Many are ignorant of any other author except Zane Grey and Edgar Wallace. They all seem to have heard of those two writers. Sometimes they seem surprised that books by any other author even exist!"

When they ask for some of those canned confession magazines, or a gangster story which paints the criminal in the light of a hero, Miss Hogg continued, they won't find them here because they are not here and they never will be here. "I explain to them why they are not. I tell them that when they are perfectly willing to eat rotten meat and to drink impure water, then I will give them all the rotten literature that they want!"

Miss Hogg finds that the likes and dislikes of ordinary readers fall into certain well-defined classes. A sailor won't read a sea story; a war veteran isn't interested in the glory of national defense; and men don't like love stories.

Miss Hogg's success does not lie altogether in her wide acquaintance with books and the needs of her readers. The best reason for her achievement is summed up by the Journal in her own words:

"When a man comes in here," she said to the reporter, "he is not a 'transient.' He is not a 'case.' He is an individual. It is my job to see that he gets the help and encouragement and adjustment to which every human being is entitled."

Miss Hogg majored in modern languages here and took a course in library science at Emory university and the Carnegie Library school after graduation. She was married several months ago and is now Mrs. James Carvin.

Former Student Here Is Employed as Secretary

Miss Katherine Warren, new secretary to the dean of students was graduated from Florida State in 1933. She was active on this campus, having been president of her freshman class in 1927. Her sophomore year was spent at the college of the Sacred Heart in New York, after which she was out of school several years, returning to Florida State for her junior year when she became a member of Cotillion Club and president of Delta Delta Delta sorority.

President of mortar board in her senior year, Miss Warren was a representative of the organization at its national convention in New York. She was also vice-president of her sorority.

Flambeau Will Have Jamboree

(Continued from page one)

is national vice-president of the Woman's Party, and for much of the past year has worked in Washington toward the passage of legislation to give equal political rights to women. At present Mrs. West is covering the activities of the Florida legislature for the Associated dailies of Florida.

The Slambeau staff and their guests will attend the annual banquet of that organization on Tuesday night at six-thirty at the Floridan hotel. At this time the Flambeau staff for 1935-36 will be announced, and keye will be presented to the five reporters who have dont outstanding work during the past year.

On Wednesday night at eight-fifteen in the Augusta Conradi theatre Ben J. Grant, Jr., Associated Press official ot Jacksonville will speak on "The Newspaper Game." Mr. Grant is a graduate of the University of Florida who worked for several years on the staff of the Jacksonville Journal before his affiliation with the Associated Press.

Helen Hunt eWst will then speak on "Women in Journalism."

At nine-fifteen Mary Elizabeth Cooley, managing editor of the Flambeau will conduct a "Behind the Scenes" tour of the Flambeau office in the history building, where reporters and staff members will demonstrate their duties to all interested in learning how a student newspaper works.

A tour of the Democrat printing plant on Thursday morning at eleven-thirty will close the activities of the week, at which time the mechanical end of newspaper work will be demonstrated. Free transportation will be provided. Cars will wait at the college gates promptly at eleven-thirty to begin the tour.

All of the meetings durina the week with the exception of the banquet on Tuesday night are open to the public, and students interested in the journalistic field are especially invited to attend.

CHECKS!

All 5th Avenue has gone "checks!" Gibson Check! Malibu Check! Check in yourself with the fashion of 1935 by purchasing this ultra smart check suit with its complete dress.

$16.50

GELBERG'S
"Style Plus Economy"

The
Three Torches
Week-end Special
Chocolate Pie 05
Minced Ham Sandwich 10
Large Plain Chocolate milk .05
Phone 837 We Deliver

Classical Honorary To Present Speaker

Dr. George Meason Whicher, noted lecturer, poet, and scholar, under the auspices of Eta chapter of Eta Sigma Phi, classical honorary, will speak to the general public public on A. E. Hausman, scholar and author of Shropshire Lad, April 13 at 8:15 o'clock in the Augusta Conradi theater.

Dr. Whicher was for a quarter-century head of the classical department at Hunter College, New York City. He bears an honorary degree from the University of Padua, one of the oldest universities in Europe, and contributes to such magazines as Scribner's and Harper's. Among his volumes of poetry are: Sonnet Singing; Roman Pearls; On the Tibur Road; Vergiliane, and Roba D'Italia.

Lecturer Shows Movies of Birds

Sound Effects Reproduce Various Song Types

Illustrating his lecture by colored slides and motion pictures with sound effects, Dr. A. A. Allen of Cornell University pictured the actions and songs of birds in their natural habitat before the well-filled Augusta Conrad, theatre, Friday night.

Describing the song of the various bird families, Dr. Allen portrayed the song sparrow with its high song and showed also several birds, which while they have no true song, as we conceive it, produce the same results by means of varying sounds, such as the drumming of the woodpecker and the fast beating of the wings by the rought grouse.

The various stages of bird life were shown in detail from the building of the nest when the male selects a territory, which he guards from all invaders, to the migrating of the grown families.

As in human races, marital habits differ among the bird families, some being purely monogamist, as the goose, some monogamist with a slight tendency to be fickle, as the house wren, others like the chickadees which are decidedly fickle, and other families which are entirely polyamist as our campus English sparrow, and as the rought grouse.

As to domestic habits, Dr. Allen exploined that the females generally have entire care of the young as they so closely resemble in color the nests. In only exceptional cases as the rose breasted grosebeak, do the brilliant males help at all in the incubation of the eggs.

Contrary to general opinion, all birds do not have to be fed by the parents. Some young like the quail and winter chickens, are precocial and quite capable of caring for themselves in the matter of food almost as soon as they emerge from their shells. Owls, mocking birds, cardinals, and numerous others are, however, what is termed altricial, and helplessly dependent.

Migration, which has puzzled bird students for years, has been explained in the logical need of food and in the homing theory which suggests that the winter birds of the north remain through the cold months because their origin in European and any retreat "home" is cut off by water and ice, while the southern migrators evidently had their origin in the warmer regions of South America.

Among the songs reproduced were those of the yellow breasted chat, the yellow warbler, the pied bill grebe, the marsh wren, the red shouldered hawk's call, brown thrasher, and numerous others.

Dr. Allen, who has written several books on ornithology, is attempting by means of this combined motion and sound device to capture for permanent record living pictures of birds now becoming extinct. He is the discoverer of the method of rearing ruffled grouse in captivity and in 1924 was awarded the Outdoor Life Medal for his outstanding research concernina that bird.

* * *

Temperatures of 65 degrees below and 117 degrees above zero have been recorded in Montana.

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 207

The SURPRISE
STORE
"Tallahassee's Busiest Department Store"
City Bldg. Cor. Jefferson and Adams Sts.

Sport Slants

On the Spot With Sports

The faculty tennis tournament seems to be suffering from spring fever. On with the games.

* * *

Congratulations to those girls who made it possible for the college to win the Southern division of the National Telegraphic Swimming meet.

* * *

Tonight is play-nite especially for the faculty from 8 to 10 o'clock. Features of the program will be a tap dance by Viola Brooks, games, dancing with men, and the piano played by Beulah Dixon and Mickey Conn.

* * *

Results of the intramural contests of minor individual sports, archery, croquet, and horseshoes will be announced next week.

* * *

Class games in tennis will be played next Friday. As yet the teams have not been chosen but they will be worth seeing.

County-Wide Play Day Planned for Children

A county-wide play-day for school children will be held at the Florida State college gymnasium and athletic fields on Saturday, April 13, 1935. Miss Katherine Montgomery of the physical education department is in charge of the plans.

Children in all the schools of the county have been signed up for the athletic events while a flag program, debates, and a one-act play contest have been arranged by special groups from the different schools.

The program will occupy the major part of the day, an hour being set aside for the picnic-lunch at noon.

Tennis Champs Named

As a result of the singles tennic tournament Lucillo Ferguson is the senior champion; Wynn Tuten, junior champion, and Marie Taylor, sophomore champion. The freshmen championshp has not yet been played off. Margaret Horton and Felcia West will play in the finals for the championship.

New Sorority Heads Chosen for Next Year

(Continued from page one)

are: president, Nadia Granger; vice-president, Betsey Anderson; second vice-president, Marcia Scott; secretary, Westa Wilkins; treasurer, Amber Turner; editor, Katherine McGary; and chaplain, Mary Ward Peterson.

Officers of Zeta Tau Alpha are: president, Dorothy Borden; vice-president, Frances Lingle; secretary and house chairman, Clara Lankford; treasurer, Esther Hay; and historian and rush captain, Elisabeth Simpson. Frances Lingle was chosen to represent the chapter at the international convetion in Pasadena, California, June 28.

Officers of Alpha Omicron Pi are: president, Sara Graham; vice-president, Anita Hughes; recording secretary, Virginia Weldon; corresponding secretary, Mary Carson; treasurer, Agnes Goss; house chairman, Doris Goddard.

Delta Zeta officers include: president, Ruth Marvin; vice-president, Adelaide Ireland; secretary, Muriel Baker; and treasurer, Mary Glen Coarsey.

Kappa Delta

Kappa Delta officers are: president, Josephine King; vice-president, Francis Thomas; secretary, Adeline Tillman; treasurer, Betty Mack; assistant treasurer, Martha Lester; and editor, Julia Lamar.

Delta Phi Epsilon officers are: president, Ruth Feinberg; vice-president, Adeline Goldstein; treasurer, Ethel Mintzer; secretary, Gladys Abenson; corresponding secretary, Elaine Klepper; recording secretary, Miriam Stein; pledge mother, Janice Brill; and panhellenic representative, Edna Feinberg.

Theta Upsilon officers are: president, Barbara Green; and rush captain, Anne Donnell. Other officers will be elected next week.

Beta Phi Alpha officers are: president, Genevieve Crowley; vice-president, Jean Willis; secretary, Carol Brigman; treasurer, Virginia Duke.

Officers of Chi Omega are: president, Betty Manning, vice-president, Jean Gilmer; secretary, Frances Moore; treasurer, Henrietta Thames; freshman mother, Marjorie Moore; house manager, Virginia Clayton; chapter correspondent, Edith Merrill Ramsaur.

New officers of Kappa Alpha Theta are: president, Nette Sullivan, vice-president, Evelyn Ballard; recording secretary, Wylma Tarbush, treasurer, Virginia Hamilton, corresponding secretary, Banks Wood.

Sigma Kappa officers are: president, Margaret K. Anderson; vice-president, Barbara Curry; secretary, Anna Glenn; treasurer, Patty Sams; corresponding secretary, Graco Wickes.

Officers of Sigma Sigma Sigma are: president, Katherine Beyer; vice-president, Mary Marshal; treasurer, Lydia Craig; recording secretary, Mary Newbold; corresponding secretary, Sylvia Guito.

Phi Mu officers include: president, Mary Frances Whisnant; first vice-president, Janet Griffiths; second vice-president, Mary Perry Pollock; treasurer, Lucy Houser; secretary, Marion Mason.

Dr. Moore Returns From Social Work Conference Recently Held in Miami

Dr. Coyle E. Moore, associate professor of sociology, has recently returned from Miami where he attended the session of the state conference of social work. Meeting with the conference at this time were the following organizations: the American association of Social Workers, the Florida association for the Promotion of Social Legislation, the Florida Probation association, the State Board of Public Welfare, and the Florida Commission on Social Legislation. Dr. Moore is a member of the last two organizations.

While in Miami, Dr. Moore attended a joint meeting of the State Board of Public Welfare and the Florida Commission, social legislation to be submitted to the session of the legislature convening in Tallahassee next week, was discussed. The proposed legislation which the commission has been working on for some months was presented to the conference by the commission and last Monday the complete report of the commission was made to the governor by Mrs. Edna G. Fuller, chairman; Dr. Moore, vice chairman; and Conrad Van Hyning, commissioner of public welfare.

The proposed legislation of the commission provides for a state agency through which federal funds for the aged and dependent can be dispensed in the state of Florida. For the past few weeks members of the faculty and others on campus have been receiving material promulgated by the commission, explaining this act.

Sacrificing
All Our Linen Two-Piece and Swagger
SUITS

Pure Linen-Shantung and Brown and Blue Combination SUITS
$1.98

Linen and Shantung
Swagger Suits
$3.95 Value!
$2.98

Lippman's
HUB STORE
104 E. Jefferson

Phi Kappa Phi Tapps Ellen Moore Recently

Phi Kappa Phi, general scholarship honorary, recently tapped Laura Ellen Moore who, because of insufficient credit hours, did not receive this recognition at the regular tapping early this month. A recent transfer of nine credit hours of work from the University of Florida made her eligible.

Phi Kappa Phi selects its members from seniors who have a 2.2 average or above for the four years of college work and who rank in the upper tenth of the senior class.

Student Editors Publish Democrat

Journalism Classes Work On Sunday Paper

Journalism students gave the advertising and editorial staff of the Daily Democrat a holiday last Saturday when they wrote and edited the Sunday issue of that paper.

The edition was the sixth appearance of the Daily Democrat which has been in charge of the journalism students at Florida State College for Women. The entire paper including editorials, Associated Press news, sports, society, and local news was written and edited by the students under the direction of Professor Earl L. Vance, associate professor of journalism and English.

For two weeks previous to the Sunday issue the members of the journalism classes gathered the reports and recommendations which the different departments of the state will present to the legislature and wrote articles for this special issue of twenty pages.

The girls reported to the Democrat office Saturday morning at 8.30 and worked until late that night. The reporters were assigned ragular beats to cover such as the capitol, the city hall, the court house, and the jail.

Instead of one editor for the paper a group of editorial writers were selected. They were: Barbara Garfunkel, Louise Robertson and Edna Hoffman. They were assisted by the following staff: managing editor, Gertrude Kuhn; city editor, Melvyne Wahnish; telegraph editor, Mildred Boss; society editor, Elaine Klepper; sports editor, Mary Elizabeth Cooley; and advertising managers, Grace Mary Webster and Claire Williams.

The reporters who are all members of the first year journalism class were: Carol Farbee, Claire Williams, Margaret Claire Lafferty, Grace Mary Webster, Nedra McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell, and Arline Dockheart.

Richards Believes Students Display More Maturity Now

Quality of Editorials In Flambeau Shows Thought Trends

At least one professor on this campus does not believe that Florida State girls are the same today as they were a decade ago.

Dr. Harold F. Richards who, on coming here in 1925, was impressed with the "seeming lack of muturity" of the student body as a whole, today considers the students here equal in maturity, energy, and ability, to any similar group he knows in the North or South, and so far as judgment is concerned, the most capable he has ever known.

However, Dr. Richards believes that this change in opinion has been a gradual one, as the quality reflected in class academic work and especially that in student publications more and more evidenced individual thinking. In 1925 there was a certain provincialism about the school, according to Dr. Richards, and the spirit of leadership among the students apparently had not been developed.

"At the first meeting of the astronomy club ever held at three o'clock in the morning I recall how I could not understand why the girls, who seemed to think being up in the middle of the night and having coffee and sandwiches while studying the rings on Satnrn was the most exciting event in their college careers, kept coming up to me individually and asking me if I didn't think an account of the meeting would make a good story for the Flambeau. I told each of them I supposed it would. Finally one girl said, 'But you don't seem to understand. A faculty member has to assign us a story before we can write it up, and then they have to sign their names to it before we can hand it in to the editors'."

What impressed him most, Dr. Richards said, was the fact that the students seemed perfectly satisfied with this arrangement—they seemed content to let the faculty do the bulk of the thinking.

As to the present Flambeau, Dr. Richards believes that its editorials as well as its feature articles are sufficient evidence that students are attempting to lay more stress on vital issues than trivial news and, furthermore, that they show more familiarity with the significant public questions of the day than those of the average college paper.

As student government grew stronger, Dr. Richards' opinion of the relationship between faculty and students changed. While 10 years ago he thought this relationship was more the attitude of parents toward children today he thinks the faculty and students are showing a tendency to consider themselves as co-workers.

Correction

Last week's issue incorrectly stated that Mary Jeanne McKay is author of the Junior Minstrel's script. The Flambeau wishes to correct this as Mary Irene McKay is the author.

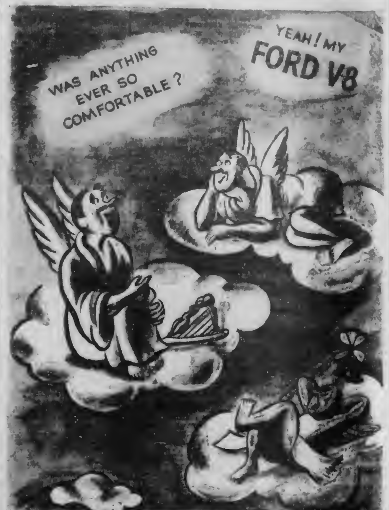
* * *

London would have to erect 588.797 new homes if every family were to be provided with a separate dwelling.

Bennett's Special Rich Ice Cream, pt. 15c

Bennett's Club Luncheon 40c
Sis-L-Hot Steaks, with potatoes 50c
Every Day!

15c Choc. Syrup Sundae 10c
15c Double Dip Ice Cream Soda 10c
25c Frozen Fudge Sundae 15c
20c Chicken Salad Sandwich 15c
20c Peanut Butter and Jelly Sandwich 15c
Russell McPhail Ice Cream, pt. 25c



WAS ANYTHING EVER SO COMFORTABLE?
YEAH! MY FORD V8

Andrews Will Speak at Meet

"Educational Program Of FERA" is Topic For Discussion

At the annual state meeting of the American Association of University Women, which is being held in Tampa April 5-6, Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews will speak on "The Educational Program of FERA."

In her talk Dr. Andrews will discuss student employment, adult education, nursery schools, CCC projects, and rural rehabilitation. Of these topics she will talk in detail on student employment and nursery work since she is in charge of that division of FERA work at Florida State College. Dr. Andrews has under her direction here 179 students doing outside work and a nursery school which takes care of children whose families are on relief.

Other discussions of the conference will center around fellowships, with Dr. Evelyn Newman, professor of English literature at Rollins college, speaking on "Internationalism and Fellowships." At the luncheon on Saturday Miss eannette Kelley, director of the South Atlantic section of A. A. U. W. will talk on "The National Program and Fellowships."

About 75 women from all parts of the state are expected to attend the annual meeting. Accompanying Dr. Andrews from Florida State College will be Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, Dr. Jennie Tilt, past state president of A. A. U. W and Mrs. C. P. Heinlein.

Sigma Kappa Regional Meet Begins Today

(Continued from page one)
"a district counselors, Mrs. Elena Copenhager, of Knoxville, Tenn., for Tallahassee district, and Mrs. Irma Rayburn Vaudoit, Houston, Texas; former district counselors, Miss Irene Pitorio and Miss Leila Hardell of Washington, D C.

Committee Chairmen

Committee chairmen are Sue Pitchford, finance and registration, assisted by Marjorie Glen; publicity, Mrs. Eaton Burr; social, Miss Leila Venable assisted by Sara Hosea; transportation, Mrs W C Lamb, jr.; Maine sea coast mission, Edith Hays Effinger, housing, Mildred Hurst; and correspondent, Miriam Terrell.

Sigma Kappa, one of the oldest sororities, the first established in New England, was founded in 1874 at Colby college, Waterville, Me. and has chapters in the leading colleges and universities of the United States and Canada. Omega chapter was founded at S C W in 1920.

The sorority supports a philanthropic work among under-privileged men, women and children of the Maine sea coast. This mission is a non-denominational organization whose objective is the social, educational and religious welfare of tha people distributed among the islands off tha coast of Maine and on the adjacent promonotories. It cooperates with any agency working for the good of the fishermen.

Blood is Elected Head of SIASG

(Continued from page one)
esentative of student opinion, (5) that a large majority of colleges represented have compulsory student activity fees, which are satisfactory to them; (6) that the Y. W. C. A.'s of colleges should devote themselves to a program concerned with social and religious life of the students as well as with social welfare work in neighborin gcommunities; (7) that there is a tendency on most campuses toward over-organization, overlapping of membership and participation, and participation, and consequent lack of interest, and that an effective point system may be helpful in preserving a balance of student participation in activities.

The resolutions adopted from the discussion on campus honor is Saturday morning were as follows: (1) that the honor system is the best means for maintaining the standards of honor on the campus; (2) that in honor cases penalties should be in accordance with the situations of the particular case; (3) that every college should carry out a definite program of honor education in order to acquaint the students with

The
College Bus
Will run irregularly the remainder of the school year.
Thank you for your past patronage.
A. A. ALLEN
Operator

TAKE ACTIVE PARTS AT CONVENTION

Carolina De Montigne, left, served as vice-president of the annual meeting of the Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Government which was held on this campus March 28-30. Helenmary Fritsch led a discussion group on student activities.

Delegates Will Attend Meeting

Eyman and Hinson To Be Program Speakers

At the semi-annual meeting of the Florida association of colleges, which will be held in DeLand on April 5 and 6, Florida State College for Women will have four representatives including S. R. Doyle, who is vice president of the association and on the program committee for this convention, Dean Nathaniel M. Salley, Dr. Ralph E. Eyman, and Dr. David H. Briggs. Mr. Hinson of tha state department will also be in the party from Tallahassee.

Dr. Eyman, whose nama appears on the program, will speak on the subject of "What the High Schools Can Do for the Colleges," tha scope and standard of their particular system by means of ordination, faculty talks, aod open forums.

Take Up Problems

In a discussion on "Dormitory and Social Problems," which was held in the Augusta Conradi theater last Thursday with Doris Davis of Sophie Newcomb as the leader, the topics of dormitory make-up, house orgaoizatioo, general house rules, stealing, drinking, smoking, dates, and danciog were considered.

and Mr Hinson considering the other side of the question, "What the Colleges Can Do for the High Schools."

With delegales from eleven Florida colleges the assembled group will try to work out a cooperative program between the high school curricula and the college curricula, and will discuss the general reorganization and liberalizing of the college curriculum. Dean Matherly, of the college of business administration of the University of Florida, will apeak on the phase of reorganization, telling what is being done about this at the University.

BEAUTY RECIPE FOR TIRED EYES
by helena rubinstein

First—You lay little pads of cotton saturated with Helena Rubinstein's Anti-Wrinkle Lotion (Extrait) over your lids. Feel how it soothes! Refreshes! See it smooth out lines! 1.25.

Then—you pat in a light film of Helena Rubinstein's new Herbal Eye Tissue Oil. Prevents and corrects crows'-feet, lines, crepiness. Gives the eyelids that young gleam so fashionable this Spring! 1.25.

Clearance
Spring
BOUCLE SUITS
3-Piece Styles.
$12.50 Values!
$6.95
3-Piece Styles.
$19.50 Values!
$12.95
Available in nearly all sizes and colors.
NO APPROVALS.
ALL SALES FINAL.
LINDEN'S FASHION SHOPPE
"Smart Styles for Smart Women"

Class to Begin Character Study

Students Are to Submit Names for Survey

A scientific study of the factors involved in character is being carried on by the class in character research in the department of psychology.

Each college student has been asked to submit the names of the five girls in the college, exclusive of present seniors, whom she considers as having the finest characters. A request has coma from the personnel office that the girls be selected not because of prominent official positions they bold on campus, but because of personal knowledge of fine traits in the make-up of the individuals.

All lists will be turned into the personnel office on or before April 8. Tha names of all girls who have been called before the College Government association for major offenses will automatically be dropped from the lists submitted.

Following preliminary investigations, studies will be made of the background of the 100 girls receiving the most votes in an effort to determine what factors have contributed to the building of their fine characters.
pleted this year,

Chaperons Meet Monday

There will be a meeting of the chaperons of all off-campus houses Monday at 10:00 a. m. in Mrs. Beckham's office to discuss plans for the Easter holidays.

Cabinet Chooses Heads Of Standing Committees For Coming School Year

Committees which will serve on the freshmen cabinet during the next term of office were appointed Wednesday afternoon by Lucy Gee Lynn, incoming president of Y. W. C. A., and Alicia Meacham, chairman of the freshman cabinet.

Mary Ellen Tharpe has been appointed to serve as chairman of the social committee. Working with her are Martha Lester, Elizabeth Jinks, Dagmar Fripp, and Kathryn Ely.

The vespers committee is composed of Dorothy Bryan, chairman, Lois Long and Janie Gallemore; friendship committee, Ruth Lind, chairman, Sara Graham, Lillie McGuire, and Beverly Brown; choir, Louise Bryan, chairman, Katherine Todd, Isabelle Sands, and Virginia Turner; worship service, Sara Nance, Margery Jones, and Virginia White, and poster committee, Louise Lingo, Jane Rice, and Blanche Lamar

Astronomy Club Hears Richards Talk on Mars

Dr. Harold F Richards spoke to the astronomy club on the topic of the planet Mars last night at 9:00 o'clock in the physics lecture room.

Next Thursday night, the club will make an observation of Mars under the direction of the telescope team composed of Betty Barker, chairman, Eva Alonso, Marjorie Harris, Jane Hubbard, Barbara Hubbard, Mildred Stevens, Virginia Cromartie, Dorothy Lancaster and Annie Leigh Rollins.

Student Fees To Be Distributed

Budget Committee Will Survey Activities

The executive council this week passed the recommendation to establish a budget committee for the proration of student activity fees, with a few changes and additions to the plan as first presented.

The committee will consist of four faculty members, instead of three as originally suggested, one from the faculty committee on student affairs to be appointed by its chairman one from the faculty-at-large to be appointed by the president, and the dean of students and business manager as ex-officio members. The addition of the latter was made by the executive council of the college.

Of the five student members, two juniors and three seniors to be chosen by student senate immediately after spring elections, one shall be the chairman of the committee and one the chairman of the auditing committee. The duties of the new committee will be to survey activities covered by the student activity fee and reorganize distribution of funds, to prorate the portions applying to class dues, athletic association, C. G. A., Distaff, Flambeau and Flastcowo, approve budgets and receive reports of the auditing committee. The budgets of the various organizations shall be submitted regularly in the spring

Modern Art to Be Shown Here for 10 Days

(Continued from page one)
Piet Mondariaan are the followers of purism whose works are on display.

"Expressionism is concerned with pictorial property, conveying the authors feelings." Paintings of Heinrich Campendonk, Otto Dix, Katherine S. Dreier, Karl Hofer, Wassily Kandinsky, Emil Nolde, Max Pechestein, George Rousult, and Max Weber will represent this mode.

"Factualism represents a desire for emphasis on existent qualities. The painter is envolved in the seeing and rendering of the object or scene." Hilaire Hiler, Charles Sheeler, and Arnold Wiltz paint in this style.

"Super-realism is the most literary of these modes and returns to an emphasis on the subject of the picture." Collections of Salvador Dali, Max Ernst, Paul Klee, Joan Miro, and Pierre Roy represent this type of art.

"Neo-romanticism approaches the tenets of the past showing an organized design." Eugene Berman, Christian Berard, Louis Eilshemius, Jean Lurcat, and Pavel Tchelitchew represent this type.

According to Miss Briggs, the exhibit, which is under the auspices of the college art association, is the outstanding exhibit of the year.

Camp Open for Easter

Mrs Beckham has announced that camp will be kept open during the Easter holidays. Students wishing to go should sign up as soon as possible as the houses are rapidly being filled.

Describes Honor Work in Chapel

Richards Claims Program Makes Life Exciting

Dr. Harold F. Richards, member of tha honors committee, urged students in convocation Tuesday, not to be modest in considering honors work. "Set your mark a little higher each tima, then grow to it," ha said.

Dr. Richards described the honors work program which was recently introduced into the curriculum here two years ago, as the culmination of the dream of several students who wanted mora freedom from the every-day routine of quizzes and tests to study more deeply into their own particular fields.

The honors work program allows optional attendance in one course and special conferences with the professor of the course in which tha honors student chooses to concentrate.

Honors work, involving independent study and the making of one's own decisions, makes for a more interesting and exciting life, Dr. Richards said.

Rutgers Wins Debate

Rutgers team from Rutgers university, New Brunswick, N. J., with the negative side of the argument won the debate, Resolved: That nations should prevent the international shipment of arms and munitions," from tha University of Florida team in the Augusta Conradi theater Saturday night.

There's something about a Chesterfield —

There's one thing I especially like about Chesterfields — entirely aside from the fact that it's a milder cigarette — and I've heard a number of people say the same thing ... While I'm smoking Chesterfield I never get little crumbs of tobacco in my mouth — the tobacco doesn't spill out and that adds a lot to my pleasure of smoking them ... I notice more and more of my friends smoke Chesterfields.

Chesterfields are Milder Chesterfields Taste Better

© 1935, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

The Florida Flambeau

Newspaper — National Scholastic Press Association — Member

EDITORIAL STAFF

RUTH PERSONS . . . . Editor
ALTHEA SMITH . . . . Associate Editor
GERTRUDE KUHN . . . . Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS . . . . News Editor

DEPARTMENTS

Features: Althea Smith; Sports, Edith Patterson; Society, Gertrude Kuhn; Exchanges, Betty Ellen Smith; Literary, Melvyne Wahnish, Copy Editor, Elaine Klepper

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster Margaret Lafferty, Nedie McNemara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams Sare Rutledge Marjorie Fain Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hezel Bowman Anna Donaell.

BUSINESS STAFF

ETHYLE MAE EDWARDS . . . Business Manager
JO DOUGLAS . . . . Advertising Manager
MARION CARSON . . . . Circulation Manager
Ass't. Adv. Manager, Mary Patterson; Ass't Circulation Mgr., Sara Beth Davis

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla. under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Flambeau Passes Twentieth Milestone

Next week marks the passing of two decades of Flambeau history. In recognition of this milestone, the staff of the paper, in conjunction with Alpha Chi Alpha, journalistic honorary, has planned a full four-day program for the benefit of all students interested in journalism, as well as one of interest to the entire student body.

At this time students will be given the opportunity to hear two of Florida's foremost journalists, Helen Hunt West, an alumna of this college, and Ben Grant, Jr., both of whom are widely-experienced in journalistic and political circles. Students will also be given a glimpse into the mechanics of the college newspaper, with first hand evidence available from members of the Flambeau's staff, who will conduct tours and speak on their individual jobs.

Not only are we happy to be celebrating what is, in our eyes, something of a memorable occasion, but we are proud to be able to offer to the student body a first hand acquaintance with journalism as it is seen by some of the most noted followers of the "game."

Have Fraternities Outlived Their Usefulness?

A firm belief in the worth of contributions made to their campus by groups formed around high ideals and with national unity and supervision is the reply college Greeks everywhere are making to anti-fraternity agitation showing itself in various parts of this country of late.

In an address given at the 1934 national convention of Delta Gamma, Anne Willson Bartels appealed to college Panhellenics everywhere to study their campuses and the changes taking place thereon, saying that in these days when there are almost as many unemployed sovereigns as there are unemployed bond salesmen, it is interesting to ponder how the few kings who have retained their crowns have managed it. That the British royal family has for generations been aware of the changes within their kingdom and the changing needs of their people, has studied those needs and the existing evils, and has acted to supply the one and correct the other before their subjects did it for them, is an example held up by Mrs. Bartels for fraternities to follow.

A warning to learn the changing needs and the existing evils of its own fraternity system and to act before its college authorities do is the "good," she continues, blown to colleges everywhere by the "ill wind" that swept women's fraternities off the campus at Swarthmore recently. There, in an attempt to correct "rushing" evils, the campus lost sight entirely of the contributions of fraternities. "In studying your relation to your campus," she urges, "place an equal emphasis upon your strong and weak points."

Suggestions concerning changing needs and desirable reforms come from various fraternity authorities all over the United States. Louise Grant Smith, Alpha Phi, instituted a "new deal" for fraternities when she began last year, in the St. Louis Post Dispatch the first fraternity column. Believing that the right publicity could do much to calm anti-fraternity demonstration based upon ignorance of existing conditions, Mrs. Smith has been writing newspaper articles regularly on national news, granting of new chapters, philanthropic work, changes in policies, convention results, and the like. The sensational type of publicity from which so many fraternities have suffered has had its last fling at them, it seems, for Mrs. Smith has decided that it was high time the world learned of real fraternity achievements. National offices have begun to cooperate in this new and helpful rather than harmful publicity campaign with the hope of inspiring local chapters through its columns to greater efforts at usefulness.

With the economic depression has come more careful family scrutinizing of college expenditures for the decreased number of students now attending colleges. Objections to elaborate entertainments paid from fraternity dues have been raised. The old idea of "keeping up with the Kappas" is gone—fraternities must begin to work together to make "frat" life simple and economical.

The more difficult it is to obtain a college education the most appreciative people are of it. Studying is a serious matter nowadays, and a fraternity must serve its members in providing the proper atmosphere for good work as well as good times.

A sense of responsibility toward the "rest of the world" on the part of an organized group can go far toward making fraternity-non-fraternity barriers less rigid, as a socially-integrated campus demands. And with greater social responsibility comes a realization of the need for political reform in the form of non-partisan support of the "best" rather than the "brother" candidate as a basic principal of fraternity training.

These and other suggestions were the thesis of Mrs. Bartel's plea, aimed at the fraternity world. Fraternities have been abolished on one campus, actively threatened on another, and there is always the possibility that they may be threatened anywhere, she maintains and further advises: "The time to act is now before such a question is raised. Though no one fraternity can reform a campus, the united action of a cooperative Panhellenic can, by studying and meeting these problems."

On the Florida State College campus an important first step has been taken by the local Panhellenic association toward abolishing some of the evils which obscure fraternity usefulness and worth, in the consideration of a measure providing for second-term rushing. May F. S. C.'s Greek-letter organizations advance with their fellows all over Greekdom toward a larger fulfillment of purpose.

Florida State Students Make Valuable Contacts

Students from about thirty Southern colleges visited our campus recently. The value of such contacts to us at Florida State would be hard to estimate. Any interchange of ideas usually sets up thinking processes which result in action.

Various forms of student government and student problems were brought up for discussion at the convention meetings. Compulsory meals and church attendance were mentioned. At one school represented the lights are cut off from the main switch at ten-thirty every night. Which gives the supreme egotist a chance to say, "ah, just look at the privileges Florida State students enjoy."

There is another side to this question. One college uses a system whereby lights may be kept on until twelve o'clock with the periods from seven-thirty to ten and ten-thirty to twelve as quiet hours. Such a plan seems more feasible than the one now in current use in our dormitories.

A system could be established here with the hours from seven-thirty to ten and ten-thirty to eleven-thirty (and the rest of the night) as quiet hours. Under this system students would enjoy a little more freedom and we believe the ultimate end for the stay-in-your-room-after-light-flash regulation would still be obtained.

Is Florida State going to profit by her convention? Here is only one of the many small opportunities to put into practice what she has learned.

Liberty! Self-government! Students' rights! And when we get them we lose interest. The senate meeting called yesterday to appoint the five student members on the new budget committee for proration of student activity fees wasn't held because not enough senate members showed up to have a quorum. Frailty, thy name is woman.

Magazine Thumbings

By MELVYNE WAHNISH

The season for farewells is upon us.

It is nine months now that I have functioned here impersonally, striving constantly, meanwhile, for that ever-elusive spirit of detachment which has always marked for me artistry at its best. Therefore, risking the possibilities of the editors' wrath for this entirely unconventional departure, I have decided to allow myself the exhilarating experience of waxing as personal, and as intimately concerned as ever I cared to. Next week shall mark the appearance of the freshly chosen magazine thumber. My work is done. Hence the opening.

"The season for farewells is upon us."

First, let me say that contrary to popular belief this column is not run as an aid to students in reporting magazine parallel. Rather, we thought of ourselves as somehow helping to guide the busy student in her periodical reading. Also we were quite willing to present in condensed form what seemed to our judgment the cream of magazine reading for the benefit of those busy students who could not take time to do the reading for themselves.

We were aware of the fact that there were scores of students on campus who had never had a formal, nor even an informal introduction into those realms of thought which are sponsored on the fertile and stimulating pages of the so-called quality magazines. We felt somehow that these people were missing a part of life which at least is desirable, while being at the same time vitally necessary to the happiness of many. Also we had the somewhat vague feeling that perhaps the reason for this neglect was not due to a positive lack of interest, but might in part be due to the fact that the persons in question had never had their curiosity sufficiently piqued to take a peep inside those brightly orange and green colored periodicals, which boast no picture on the front page. It should be remembered, however, that we merely chose to enlighten those who might be sincerely curious; we never promised to justify the existence of this column to anyone.

It has not been our purpose to use the lines of this column as a device to further any cause or any crusade. We have tried diligently to keep personal philosophy from seeping into, or between the lines. We have tried at all times never to give any indication when we were in ready agreement with the author, or when we were in hot disagreement. The purpose here has not been to mold public opinion on any topic. Stubbornly we have smothered all those burning refutations which inevitably came as a result of reviewing some article, the thought of which was not in exact accordance with our own whim. When saving humility overtook us in time our personal belief was not thrust down the throat of anyone who happened to turn to the editorial page.

Conversely, on those occasions when magazines were reviewed which carried out some idea which seemed to be just about perfect. We have restrained our enthusiasms, and not added, "Now girls this is just what we need. If such and such would happen everything would be all right. The temptation on many different occasions to do this has been great. I hope on those occasions it was sufficiently restrained.

I say I hope it was, frankly I don't know if I truly did succeed in making this impersonal. Also I should add that the foregoing was our aim. If we erred at times it was not consciously nor with intention to teach any lessons nor point any morals.

Last must come the inevitable confession. Some of you clever ones might even have guessed that underneath all this there must be lurking some sinster motives. And now I do admit, there is a motive which was behind the inauguration of this column.

It seems I'm given to falling asleep in the library. Dozing one day in the periodical room, I had a dream about college students. It was a dream in which Harpers and Forum were raised to that place of eminent consideration in the estimate of college students which is now enjoyed by Modern Screen Romance and Liberty. It was a dream of a day when Scribners and Atlantic Monthly were read widely and popularly as is Ladies' Home Companion today. I have been trying to do my bit toward hastening the dawning of that day.

To the newly chosen thumber I say, many, many long hours spent in examining quality magazines are before you.

To the readers, (if any—yes I've wondered about that many times too) I want to say in concluding that the title of this column is somewhat misleading. These articles which appeared here were more than merely thumbed, they were actually read!

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By Hoffman

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKER

"EUROPE'S calendar reads 1935 yet the whole continent breathes the air of 1912-14". Thus a New York Times correspondent describes the present situation in Europe.

Let us hope the description is unnecessarily gloomy, but we must face the facts. A surety is it that Adolf Hitler, in conference with Sir John Simon last week, told England's foreign minister that to insure the peace of Europe Germany must have (1) an economic union with Austria; (2) the areas of Czechoslovakia which are populated by German speaking peoples, (3) an air force equal to England's and an army strong enough to cope with the Russian army; and (4) a navy of about 400,000 tons. Furthermore Herr Hitler flatly refused to consider a Eastern Locarno Pact which would guarantee the integrity of the boundaries of the Eastern European countries.

In Russia, Stalin, a day or so after the Berlin conference, assured the British Captain Anthony Eden that Russia would stand with England and France to maintain peace in Europe. In France, Foreign Minister Laval was scurrying around to line up all Europe against Hitler in a system of treaties. In Italy Mussolini let it be known that England speaking on the question was Italy speaking and that an economic union between Austria and Germany must not be. Poland on Monday of this week was understood to have indicated to Eden that she would follow any course of action folowed by England.

At present the scale seems heavily balanced against Hitler. On April 11, at Stresa, Italy, England, France, and Italy will meet to decide what can be done as a result of these conversations with Hitler and Stalin. Two courses are possible. England, France, and Italy can proclaim a new Triple Entente against Germany; or England, France, and Italy can sincerely try to insure peace by meeting all Germany's justifiable demands concerning changes in the Versailles Treaty. This latter attempt can only succeed provided Germany tries to make her demands actually justifiable.

With it all, one is impressed by the confidence bestowed on one country—England. If peace is brought to Europe, England will bring it. May England fulfill her mission.

MEANWHILE in the United States, congress and the administration are trying to prevent a far different kind of disorder and chaos. The $4,880,000,000 Work Relief Bill was passed to try to put the country on its feet economically. A measure providing for the continuation of the NRA was introduced into the senate. The bill, framed by the administration, provided for the continuation of the NRA set-up after June 16 (date of expiration under the National Industrial Recovery Act) with some changes:

1. Codes will be limited to industries which actually have to do with interstate or foreign commerce.

2. Collective bargaining will be allowed and employees will further be empowered to take civil action against employers "to recover losses suffered by the violations."

3. Smaller industries will not be codified.

ALL BECAUSE dusky sixteen year old Lino Rivers tried to steal a ten cent penknife in a Harlem Kress store one afternoon last week New York had to witness a severe race riot.

When white floorwalkers caught the Puerto Rican Lino in the act of taking the knife and caused somewhat of a commotion in catching him, 500 negro customers in the store began upsetting counters and breaking wares. It

(Continued on page five)

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

ABOUT A SENSE OF HUMOR

There is a certain intangible quality—not possessed by everyone—which keeps many of life's little comedies from seeming to be real tragedies; it is closely linked with an understanding of human nature and a consideration for others. It makes life more enjoyable and the individual a more likeable person. One instructor has defined it as "the ability to laugh at oneself as well as at others". It is—a sense of humor.

A laugh dissipates many of the unnecessary worries and prejudices which cluster around every problem. When one is able to laugh at his difficulties, he obtains a clearer perspective of the situation and is ready to attack it in a more efficient manner.

The outstanding student—the talented person typed as "campus celebrity"—must possess a sense of humor in order to retain respect and affection from others, as well as admiration for his ability. If he takes himself so seriously that his attitude is one of preoccupied efficiency, he makes himself an open mark for laughter. He may be rather appealing in his evident sincerity of purpose, but if he can see nothing amusing in his own sense of importance, he will be pictured in the minds of his associates as a puffily strutting peacock.

The world seen from the eyes of one with a sense of humor is vastly different from the world of the too-serious person. More real enjoyment is open to those who see the funny side of life than to those who seek pleasure earnestly and seriously. It is a quality which smoothes over many places in life which would otherwise be "rough going." It aids in obtaining happiness from small things and tends to make the individual more contented with his lot.

There is a good feeling of security in having a sense of humor. It makes one entirely invulnerable to the laughs of others, to be the first to see the amusing side of the misfortunes which will occur in life.

Because, if we are lucky enough to have been born with a sense of humor, or have been wise enough to develop one, we are able to "see ourselves as others see us," and it is easier to "do unto others as if we were the others." So, aside from the personal enjoyment which a sense of humor brings us, it teaches us to consider others; on the whole, making us much finer persons than we'd we without it.—The Reveille.

◆

THINK!

With the military outbreaks in Cuba and Greece and the Italo-Ethiopian rift, Mars seems to be holding the spotlight in the international news of the day. And in this country, supposedly peace-minded, the war-spirit has by no means completely passed over.

For some unknown reason, despite common-sense thinking concerning the uselessness of war and recognition of the fact that without profits in conflict there could be no war, a wave of intense nationalism and military enthusiasm is sweeping over the entire world.

In this country it has led to the largest peace-time military outlay in the nation's history. The military expenditure budget now on its way through Congress totals approximately $1,399,773,371. The Literary Digest comments on the situation as follows.

"The sharp increase in national-defense expenditures under the New Deal is causing no end of speculation in Washington. Specific appropriations proposed for the army and Navy approach the billion-dollar mark.

"Supplemented by PWA funds, the national-defense expenditures are certain to go well into ten figures, and make the biggest peace-time military outlay for this country.

"The surprisingly large national-defense program was well on its way in the legislative machine before people began to ponder its size. All without the need of a comprehensive explanation by President Roosevelt.

"Opponents of such large military expenditures have begun to protest that by these legislative plans, if enacted, the United States during the next year, will be arming as no nation in the world's history ever armed before. They are seeking to arouse like-minded people to the striking national-defense budget which is quietly on its way through Congress."

But then the United States is in a sense merely following suit. Arthur Brisbane says, "In this world of trouble, something must explode somewhere . . . A while ago Lord Rothermere was telling the British that they must have at least 5,000 fighting planes. His advice, at first ridiculed, is now taken seriously and Britain will have the planes."

A large number of people apparently are getting tremendously "worked up" about this or that thing Japan is doing. And a great many of their statements are exceedingly foolish. We hear and read much chatter about the "yellow peril" and the possibilities of the Japanese suddenly pulling an Aladdin's Lamp trick and swarming all over California.

Some have even gone so far as to suggest that the fishing vessels in the San Francisco harbor may be submarines. It seems to us that it certainly will be an innovation when fishing vessels can suddenly be turned into submarines.

False suspicions and foolish statements, coupled with capitalistic interests of munitions manufacturers and other war profiteers, can and will lead an unsuspecting world into war unless we think and act sanely.—Kentucky Kernel.

◆

STRENGTH OF THE HEARTHSTONE

We like to feel a government has some farsighted and deep-rooted reason when it passes an act or endorses a bill.

For various reasons, the home has become a vanishing institution upon which the nation's solidity rests. The home is the mother of nationality and consequently of patriotism. But we are weaned away from the little nest more and more each day.

Perhaps the brains behind the present administration have this in mind when they are lending us our own money through such

(Continued on page five)

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticisms. Letters should be signed marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the postoffice.

◆

FRESHMAN NIGHT OUT

'Twas the sixth night of April
Around about eight,
When each haughty sophomore
Stepped out with her date.
In silks and in satins,
And in ruffles profuse.
They swept by us grandly,
Not a single curl loose.

They walked with small "mincings"
Which seemed rather prim,
To those who had seen them
In games at the gym.
So dainty, so fragile, so weak, and so frail,
With whiffs of sweet perfume
To ensnare a poor male.

As one who would worship
Some image afar,
We gazed through the door
Left conveniently ajar.
But one of the sophomores
Advanced from the rear,
Said in standardized fashion,
"No freshmen in here."

—Sally.

Collegiate Come-Backs

◆

We take our typewriter from behind our ear to dish out our last colyum. From the depths of one year's experience we fell qualified to flare forth with "Directions for Filling Up Waste Space in the Newspaper, or, Behavior of Chipmunks and Colyumnists in a Thunderstorm." For our successor:

Read the seventy-seven and a half exchange papers—the half is for the Florida Alligator and others which you will never receive although you keep sending Flambeaus—take statistics on how many of them print the same stale, weatherbeaten paragraph, swear you won't use it, throw it away and conclude to write your own. Five hours later on your knees before the wastebasket thank heaven you found it again and use it at the head of the colyum.

Cover the campus like a certain paint — no free advertising — unearth a bit of "dirt" guaranteed 100% true, print it and then sizzle behind a barred door in the resulting fireworks. When cross examined, lisp in your rich old Irish brogue, "No speaka da Enleesh."

Expect to write merrily along week after week with no comments, no fan (?) mail, no nothing, wondering if anybody besides the printer, the type licer-er and you ever read the thing, ask somebody to pinch-hit one week and learn that everybody on campus reads it, judging from the [illegible] able remarks about that particular week's issue.

After functioning a whole year as colyumnist—try to ch[illegible] the better course and count to [illegible] when you are referred to as the "joke editor."

Outside of this, you'll have a swell time. More power to yo

• • • •

A University of Kentucky zoology assistant wrote an a[illegible] nekes in which he stated th[illegible] "The fear of the snake shou[illegible] never keep anyone from [illegible] many happy hours camping [illegible] hiking in the woods. When [illegible] go always take the precaution [illegible] wearing knee-high boots wh[illegible] while not giving absolute pr[illegible] tion, will greatly lessen the dang[illegible] er. Leather puttees are better [illegible] and leggings reinforced with me[illegible] plates can be obtained" . . . Wh[illegible] not borrow Sir Galahad's sa[illegible] suit of armor and really be s[illegible] Safety first, you know.

• • • •

The Reveille of Huey Lo[illegible] L.S.U. states that the theme of [illegible] State Baptist Union retreat wi[illegible] be "More Than Conquerors." I[illegible] more than conquerors, why the retreat?

• • • •

I shot an arrow into the air
It fell to earth, I know not where.
I lost five darn arrows that way

• • • •

From an anonymous contributor comes this puny pun hash reputed to be a conversation between a certain botany professor on this campus and a public enemy named Leander who would take him for a ride.

Botany Prof: "Oleander! D[illegible] violet the criminal code and [illegible] cus now. Lotus go, my t[illegible] tremble before your wrath. I [illegible] the nerve of you. I don't wan[illegible] clutch a lily through the da[illegible] vents." . . . As far as we're c[illegible] cerned, the sooner he Kurz [illegible] short, the better.

• • • •

Dr Ralph R. Winn, instructor in philosophy, claims that [illegible] dents who sleep during lec[illegible] retain the greatest amount of [illegible] formation. Yes, and if all [illegible] students who sleep during cla[illegible] were to be placed end to end [illegible] one long line, they'd be mu[illegible] more comfortable.

• • • •

A "Who's Who" of the collegiate world to be published this mon[illegible] will include the most promin[illegible] students of the nation, the n[illegible] ber from each college or unive[illegible] sity not to exceed one per cen[illegible] of the enrollment. . . . We wonder [illegible] convention-trotting will count [illegible] or against said prominence. We will admit we hope it cou[illegible] against, for, as John Bunyan [illegible] frequently chirps, "Verily, they hath their reward." (A par[illegible] shot, C D Now may peace and

(Continued on page five)

leason Tells Four-H Plans

ate Short Course For Girls to Be Held Here in June

Members of the state home denstration staff met here this rning to complete plans for the nual short course for 4-H club s and local leaders which is be given on this campus June

Requisites for all girls attending e short course are listed as follows: (1) Each girl shall be 14 ars old or older and be willing assume her duty toward 4-H ub work for the next year. (2) ch girl must be in good physl condition. (3) Each girl must able to show a creditable deenstration of her own work in r home. (4) Each girl must ve exhibited her club work at o or more annual achievement ntests and have creditable records to supplement the exhibit except in counties having work for ly one year. (5) Each girl ust be a contest winner. (6) ach girl must have the attitude ward her club work that will ke her a worthy representative 4-H club work and her county.

Members of the state home deonstration staff are: Miss Fla- Gleason, State home demonation agent; Miss Ruby Mcavid, district home demonstran agent; Miss Lucy Belle Set- , district home demonstration ent of southeast Florida; Miss na Mae Sikes, district home monstration agent of east Flor- Miss Virginia Moore, home provement specialist; Miss Iaie S. Thrusby, food conservaon specialist; Mrs. Eva R. Cully, ting extension nutritionist; d Miss Rebecca Williams, inructor in handicrafts.

eyond The College Gates

(Continued from page four)

ok until evening to empty the ore.

Such an occurrence in itself uld have been bad enough. But wspapers and Harlem Reds elf-styled Young Liberators) ized on the event and quickly read the report that a negro ild had been mortally wounded the affair and that a negro man had been attacked by ite officers. Negro ldiers, beg aroused by papers and hand ls put out in an hour or two ter the seizing of the boy, gave emselves up to riot and blooded for the rest of the evening d night. White merchants' tores were in some cases almost molished, a white man was aten so badly that he died with seventy-two hours; taxis containing white people were stoned. two days the riot was put wn.

The underlying causes of the ot too must be put down if a milar display of racial hatred is ot soon to re-occur. The underng causes of the riot lay in the ct that 100,000 of Harlem's 250,-00 are on government relief and hat Harlem's rent and food prices re abnormally high because Tammany political maneuvering has ven over to unscrupulous whites e monopoly of such business in arlem.

hird Distaff To Appear Soon

(Continued from page one)

mercial art which is being used because of its exceptional character. Olivia Embrey, art editor, as done the sketch of Thornton Wilder which will appear in the book review section, "Marching Letters."

Art Works Of High School On Display

The Industrial Arts department displayed during the week of March 27-April 3, the 1934 international scholastic exhibition of high school art. For the first time the exhibitions were international in scope, including work from the school departments of Copenhagen, Denmark, Berlin and Munich, Germany and Vienna, Austria.

The American section contained prize winning pieces judged in competition by an official jury of six distinguished educators and artists. The items were arranged under the following headings: pictorial art, oils, design, prints, pencil, colored inks, black inks, mechanical drawings Spenserian pen drawings, applied arts and crafts, advertising art and photography. As the work has been internationally selected it represented the best of what has been reproduced in high school art.

The exhibit, which was open to the public, was displayed in the west wing of the Industrial Arts department, located on the top floor of the Florida high school building.

Collegiate Comebacks

(Continued on page four)

rest—and mercy—abide with you hereafter and forever more).

• • • •

Our Own Mother Goose Rhymes

Little Jack Horner sat in the corner
Eating a Christmas pie;
He put in his thumb, and pulled out a plum,
And said, 'Aw nuts, I thought this was apple."

Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall
Humpty Dumpty had a great fall;
All the king's horses and all the king's men
Had egg-nogg.

Mistress Mary, quite contrary,
How does your garden grow?
With cockle-shells, and silver bells,
And the rest haven't come up yet.

In the papers this week we read where eighty per cent of the feminine graduates from a certain college—name withheld—say they have never been kissed. As fond papa said at daughter's graduation, "I wonder if our little Nell will marry or will have to prefer a career."

• • • •

"I'm gonna quit this hold-up game!
"I'll hang 'round joints no more!"
So with a sigh,
And a faint little cry,
The garter stretched out on the floor.

• • • •

"It's Joe E. Brown, D. M. now. Whittier College, Whittier, California, recently conferred on him the degree which means, "Doctor of Mirth'."—Exchange. Far be it from us to diagnose, Dr Brown, but it seems to us that what college paper humor columns need is a cathartic to get rid of their stale jokes.

• • • •

At 11:00 a. m. Friday, April 12, over 100,000 college and university students throughout the nation who are opposed to war and fascism will go on strike for an hour. Wonder if Florida state students are interested enough in war to strike, or rather, interested enough in striking to oppose war.

Among our fan mail (!) we received the following from an anonymous contributor:

Oh! Pi Phi's have a little goat
A little goat is he;
They said he was their mascot true
And tied him to a tree.

And when they go and leave the brute
He makes an awful fuss;
It doesn't seem to bother them
But it sure is hard on us.

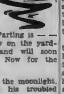
We hope he'll soon be big and strong
So he can stand the strain,
For when he baas, baas and baas,
It is an awful pain.

Which reminds us of another poem about a goat, which we reprint for the Satisfaction of our anonymous contributor.

The goat's not my favorite mammal
Though Ghandi dotes on it, I know.
Its milk is delicious,
And doubtless nutritious,
But I don't like the creature's B. O.

• • • •

My, my, I'm actually sitting in a puddle of tears at having to write the last paragraph. Latest reports from the weather bureau indicate that the puddle is now on the columnist's one-yard line, and rising steadily. Oh well, when you gotta go you gotta go. Parting is — — The puddle is now on the yard-and-a-half line, and will soon reach the chin. Now for the pome.



They sat alone in the moonlight,
And she soothed his troubled brow.
"Dearest, I know—blub—my life's been fast—blub,
But I'm on—blub—blub—my last
"But I'm on—blub—blub—my last —blub—lap—blub—now—
(blubbles)

Exhibit Traces Manuscript Tale

Illuminated Display Open To Students Monday

Beginning Monday, April 8, an exhibition of Illuminated Manuscripts in Historic Sequence will be shown in the studios of the Industrial arts department on the top floor of the Demonstration school building. The exhibit, secured as a part of the artist series from the American Federation of Arts, will continue through Friday and be open to students from 9:00 a. m. to 5:30 p. m.

The exhibit is composed of fifty original manuscripts and thirty reproductions. Phases in the development of manuscripts from the classical period through the high renaissance, including character of the script and musical notation, types of initial letters on borders, the illumination and miniature painting from the eleventh to the sixteenth century in Spaio, Germany, Flanders, France, and England, can be noted in these original leaves.

Among the interesting leaves to be seen is a large choral leaf from a chained book originally found in a church in Granada, Spain. One of these large books placed on a lectern sufficed for half a choir, which might consist of sixty to one hundred voices.

Concert Given By Glee Club

Reddick is Presented In Three Solos For Violin

The college glee club, augmented by the chorus, presented its spring concert in the auditorium Wednesday night under the direction of Miss Etta Robertson, head of the voice department and director of the glee club for the past two years.

The program was varied in period and style, opening with Rossini's "Ave Maria," sung "a capella" by the glee club and the chorus. This was followed by a group of songs including "Going Home" from the New World Symphony by Dvorak.

A trio composed of Jo Binion, Margaret Melzer, an dEvalyn Patterson, then sang a group of folk songs, Margaret Melzer singing the solo in the German folk song "Lauterbach," arranged by Reutter.

Following the intermission Martha Reddick, violinist, accompanied by Miss Mary Esther Winslow at the piano, played three selections, "Romance," by Wieniawski, "Perpetual Motion" by Bohm, "Hejre Kati" by Hubay.

The glee club then continued the program with a group of American compositions including the "American Lullaby and "Approach of Spring." The latter was accompanied by two pianos. The concluding number on the program was "Garnet and Gold" sung by the glee club and the chorus and accompanied by the two pianos.

Contemporary Student Thought

(Continued from page four)

agencies as the FHA and the HOLC. We hope they have.

Undoubtedly, by making it easier to build and to create solid assets for the home owners, the government is giving itself a much safer position. And it will be in need of such a position within these next few years, when now prominent national and international figures are giving Europe from one to ten years to prepare for war.

It is not ridiculous to suppose that students are interested in homes. The male eyes that wander around are perhaps falling upon ',the only girl" and picturing her in some structure more interesting than a school building.

To look a bit into the future and to strengthen confidence in its superiority over the past, attend the displays this week at the city auditorium. The building show conveys some idea of the pains taken to make us luxuriously comfortable physically.—The Creightonian.

PHI BETA KAPPA—
A Challenge

Last week the first members in course of the local section of the Alpha of N. C. chapter of Phi Beta Kappa were announced. Thus we have received national recognition for the college, and, as Dr. Jackson ably expressed it, "the college has become of age scholastically."

Those students who were elected are among the most prominent members of the school. But what about those other girls ranking equally high whose names were not mentioned? Because they chose work along technical, vocational, and professional lines, they are not eligible for membership in Phi Beta Kappa, which is limited to those students majoring in Liberal Arts or pure science courses.

There are honorary fraternities for them, however. Sigma Xi was established for those students majoring in both pure and applied sciences. Mu Phi Epsilon honors only women music students. Omicron Nu draws its members from those students specializing in home economics; and Delta Psi Kappa was created for those students of physical education who make high scholastic records.

We have laid a foundation on this campus in being recognised by Phi Beta Kappa; and with that as a basis, it would be relatively easy for the other departments of the college to secure similar recognition in their respective fields of study. The beginning has been made and the work ought to be continued.

It is not fair to the student of the more technical courses who has made excellent grades to have to stand by and see her friends—some with no higher rating than her own—be given such an honor as Phi Beta Kappa, while she receives no recognition.

What have you to say—you members of the music, home economics, physical education, and scientific departments? Will you accept the challenge thrown out to you?—The Carolinan.

Zeta Tau Alpha Annual Scholarship Day Noted

The Beta Gamma chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha observed its national scholarship day by a special service and a contribution to the scholarship fund April 1.

The observance of this scholarship day is a nation-wide Zeta custom dating back twenty-three years.

Funds contributed on this day are used to finance the college education of members of the sorority and other girls.

Books Satisfy College Moods

Are you moody? Act your mood.

"If a college student is overworked or discouraged, if she is disappointed or blue, she feels that these experiences are just as much a part of life as times when life is a bowl of roses. She despises a Pollyanna. According to her, the mood's the thing.

"The college girl dresses to suit her mood, she arranges her hair to suit her mood, so why shouldn't she select books to suit her mood?" questions the library staff, implying the answer.

Colorfully proclaiming to the public eye the seeming truth that the college student is one of the moodiest of people, the library exhibit this week features a bibliography of books to suit her varied moods. The bibliography contains not only titles of a number of comparatively new books, but books which time after time have satisfied students.

If you find lige boring allow the mood specialist to suggest More Power to You, by Pitkin. If you are indifferent, One More River, by Galsworthy, may be just what you are looking for. For people in love, About Ourselves, by Overstreet, will satisfy.

If you are still indifferent, you might try Educaton of a Princess, by Grand Duchess Marie; and if one has a case of really blue blues, Aldrich's Miss Bishop will probably fill the bill.

The library staff believes that every student should have a bibliography compiled for her and prescribed as individually as a doctor prescribes medicine for his patients.

Lounge Open In Jennie Murphree

Social and Redecorations Committee Are to Be At Home Saturday

The opening of Jennie Murphree lounge will take place on Saturday, April 6, from five to six in the afternoon. At this time the committee on redecoration of lounges and the social committee will be at home to residents of Jennie Murphree hall.

The lounge is furnished in modernistic style, with furniture of chromium, upholstered in yellow, green and red leather. A bridge table, writing desk, and coffee table are included in the furnishings.

Members of the committee on redecoration of lounges include Mrs. Beatrice Williams, Miss Henrietta Sivyer, Miss Maude Flowers, Miss Anna Tracy, Mr. H. D. Mendenhall, and Dean Olivia N. Dorman. Social committee members who will assist in receiving at this time are Miss Edith West, faculty advisor, and Martha Whitaker, Anne Lee Dunn, Elizabeth Stout, Lucy Fulghum, Jean Hamner, Tommy Tucker, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Sara Krentzman, Edith Webb, Ruth Mock, Mary Catherine Gibson, Martha Makemson, Sue Whitaker, Mickey Conn, and Edith Merrill Ramsaur.

Peggy Middleton, member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority is recuperating in a hospital in Lake City from an accident which occurred near there last week-end. Peggy was returning to Tallahassee from Jacksonville where she had been visiting. She suffered bruises and an injured hand.

New Way Laundry and Dry Cleaners
Tallahassee's Oldest and Largest
"Wear Clean Clothes"
Representative in Lower Bryan Hall
Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 183

Entertain in
The Party Rooms
at
The Dutch Kitchen
Phone for Reservations

THE SWEET SHOP
"Opposite Gilchrist"
Week-end Special
Potato Salad Served with all 15c Sandwiches
Phone 1001 We Deliver

The very dress for Dance, Dinner, and Street wear. New Dresses and Hats arriving daily from New York in Silk and Cotton.

Dresses $1.95 and up | Hats $1.95 and up

THE LADIES SHOP
"Where Styles are shown first for less"
305 S. Monroe St.

...I do not irritate—
I'm your best friend
I am your Lucky Strike
LUCKY STRIKE CIGARETTES
LUCKIES USE ONLY CENTER LEAVES
CENTER LEAVES GIVE YOU THE MILDEST SMOKE
They Taste Better

I am always the same... always mild, fine-tasting and fragrant. I am made of center leaves, only. The top leaves are undeveloped, acrid and biting. The bottom leaves are grimy, tasteless and harsh. I am made of only the fragrant, expensive center leaves. I give you the mildest, best-tasting smoke. I do not irritate your throat. I'm your best friend.

Copyright 1935, The American Tobacco Company

The Social Week

Gym Will Furnish Setting For Annual Sophomore Hop

The gymnasium will be transformed into a Coconut Grova tomorrow night for the annual Sophomore Hop which will begin at 8:30 o'clock to the music of the University Clubmen.

Modern palms will stand at each side of the entrance of the gym over which the name "Cocoanut Grove" lighted with colored lights will be placed.

Large silver stars, palms, and a dark blue background will be used to give the "open-air" effect in the gym. The stars, shining by means of floodlights from behind, will provide the only light at the dance.

Stars against a dark background will form the orchestra pit where the Clubmen will play.

Carrying out the night club idea, entertainment will be impromptu. Mary Jeanne McKay, acting as mistress of ceremonies, will turn a spotlight on notables at the dance and request a speech, song or dance.

Pages will meet guests at the door to check their wraps and show them to their places. Refreshments of punch will be served at two booths in the lobby

Invitatione have been issued to Miss Marguerite Taylor and Dr. and Mrs. H. L. Waskom, faculty advisers, and to Dr. and Mrs. Guy L. Diffenbaugh, Dr. and Mrs R. S. Cotterill, Dr. and Mrs. W H. Rogers, Dr. and Mrs. M H DeGraff, and Dr. and Mrs. L. S Barber, to serve as members of the floor committee

Others invited include the Governor and Mrs. David Sholtz, Mrs. Charlotte M. Beckham, Dr. Edward Conradi, Dean Olivia N. Dorman, Miss Louise Conradi Dr. and Mrs. W. G. Dodd, Dr. and Mrs. N. M. Salley, Dean Ella Scoble Opperman, Dean Margaret Sandels, Dr. Elizabeth Andrews, Mr. and Mrs. S. R. Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Williams and Miss Maude Flowers.

Among the sophomores who will attend the dance and their guests are Anna Durr, Paul Knight; Frances Morrow, Talbot Birlock; Kathleen Simpson, Julian Lane; Marian Heper, Charles Root; Carroll Patterson, John Knawlton; Jean Clark, Robert Ayer; Betty Parker, George Moye; Betty Hammond, Kent Boyle; Catherine McGarry, Martin Carey; Marion Knight, Ed Marsh; Clotilde O'Rourke, John Goggin; Adelaide Ireland, Percival Cuellman; Lillian Shulte, Malcolm McCollum.

Rosemary Hamly, Phil Alexander; Jana Holland, Glenn Wood; Inez Harrison, Al Church; Sallie Anthony, Thorp Purcell; Dorothy McLean, George Lewis; Louise Schwaderer, John Dougal; Elizabeth Ayala, Jimmy Love; Marjorie Noggle, Bill Fuller; Helen Murray, L. K. Cannon; Hazel Elliot, George Johnson; Esther Boozer, Franklin Cox. Goldie Johnston, Fred Jones.

Marion Fertell, Bud Blalock. Agnes Reedy, Dr. Flynn; Marjorie Moore, George Watson; Peggy McMichael, Randolph Thrower; Ruth Roble, Harry Gonzales; Pat Foster, James Spurlock; Marie Spurlock, Murrell Coker; Eleanor Biggers, Charles B. Roe; Leila Dickey, Chesley J. Curry; Alma Lester, Irby Avirett; Madeline McCall, Buddy DeGunther; Frances Lowry, Allan Anderson; Virginia Turner, Wayne Withers; Sylvia Guito, Robert Dopp; Dorothy Wright, Vance Harris; Elizabeth Bronson, Pat Millnor.

Dorothy Norfleet, Harry Duncan; Virginia Hamilton, Charles Thompson; Gladys Abensor, Burton Kahn; Marian Weeks, Red Davis, Annie Laurie Rentz, Harold Brown; Clarice Sanchez, Olin McKenzie; Banks Wood, Charles Sharp; Mary Ennis, Van McCoy; Carmen Moran, Ellis Fernandez; Annette Brewer, Johnny Hawkins. Roberta Rogers, John Sims; Grace Whitaker, Roy Turner; Mary Jo Clayton, George Saunders; Dot Benford, Wesley McRae; Frances L. Ellis, Guy Andrews; Ellen Fleming, Joe Edwards; Mary Lou Moore, Finky Peters; Flossie Henry, Barton Dennis; Elizabeth Whiddon, Bob Besser.

Ruth Marvin, Clifford Todd; Margaret Pinkoson, Subs Allison; Katherine Smith, Bill Gillis, Muriel Baker, D. W. Butler; Miriam Frye, H. P. Beasley, Virginia Clark, Cecil Russell; Ruth Myrick, Claude Adams; Dorothy Rawls, Russell Henderson; Marion Lessey, Bill Latimer; Frances Forth, George Allen; Louise Johnson, Lane Smith; [illegible], Jim Corbett; Ava Scott, [illegible] Lewis; Lillian Simmons, Neal Dale.

Blanche Rothstein, Bennett Applebaun; Margaret James, Fred Price; Ruth Esther Rosen, Joe Witterstein, Lois Lewis, Jerry Griffiths; Mildred Clein, Sidney Baker; Ela Arozarena, Steve Sashoff; Mary Catherine Gibson, Sherwood Spencer, Ruth Nasholm, Ashton Thomas; Virginia Peyton, Bill Lantaff; Virginia Baggs, Harold Trammell; Virginia Amann, Godfrey Smith; Elizabeth Malone, Gtis Farrington; Gladys Ahern, Bill Patterson; Virginia Richards, Paul Huff; Bonnie Smith, Warren Capell.

Lorena Lorenz, Ralph Henry; Doris Pounds, Tom Sweat; Mae Whitten, Alfred Grunevell; Jessia Mead, Mac Batey; Mary McGunagle, Bob Walters; Margaret Fee, Sonny Jones; Marian Bailey, John Crowell; Jane Tharin, Bob Herring; Eloise Moeller, Billy Moeller; Kathleen Robinson, Madison Pacetti; Rita Snyder, J. C. Williams; Mary Stewart Clark, William Covey; Edwenna Hamilton, Charles Turney; Katherine Kyle, Burt Bassett.

Frances Mock, Jack Woliston; Eleanor Flint, John Sweeny; Jenet Charles, Charles Yancey; Margaret Ware, Jack Pinkerton; Virginia Kee, Mac Grisby; Betty Peck, Bill Taylor; Mary Tilgman, Jack Tilghman; Marie Taylor, John Warren Tilghman; Marie Ginn, Ralph Wilson; Jeannette Snyder, Blaky Clark; Julia Ruth Radford, Buster Willis; Doris Goddard, George Mitchell; Beulah Dixon, Robert Basso; Elizabeth Simpson, Francis Williams; Dorothy Borden, Davis Atkinson; Ruth Bradley Davis, Jack Guthrie; Maxine Ward, Harry Gaylord.

Minnie Jane Clark, Bill Airth; Margaret Mizel, C. W. DeLong. Jeannette Annin, Jerry Chase; Nell Bahrt, Bill Leventhal; Lawson May, Tod Bell; Amber Turner, Charles Morris; Betsey Anderson, Charles Bardin; Lucy Watson, Charles Kimble; Saran Helen Hendry, Mac Hendry; Bonneviere Tomlinson, Frank Ward; Elizabeth Matheny, Stokes Tomlin; Lucile Ham, Victor Anderson; Margaret Lafferty, Joe Demetree.

Virginia Laughuer, Bob Bary; Fortune Lopez, Frank Alvarez; Betty Hamilton, Frank Percival; Virginia Rogers, Sidney Smith; Helen Turnoull, Bud McLean; Betty Mack, Warren Waters; Martha Lee Wilkerson, Hamilton Strickland; Mattafoy Hart, Spencer Murpny, Minna Yockey, Bill Bliss; Mayme Russell, Richard Carolling; Margaret Neff, Ralph Powers; Edwina Wakefield, Howard Biggers; Isabel Yon, Robert Knight; Martha Crocker, L. P. Davis, Carolyn Phillips, John Nottingham.

Stags include Jo Binson, Helen Godwin, Lesh Andrews, Dot Wright, Daisyanna Massey, Ruth Nasnolm, Mary Frances Burford, Syrena Stockoridge, Mary Ola Reynolds, Gertrude Tomkies, Aleta Jones, Sunshine Maines, Helen Ballenger, Helen Wilson, Clara Kramer, Lynora Young, Ethel Pacheco, Eleanor Williams, Glivia Taylor, Rosalyn Daum, Frances Boots.

Elizabeth Carter, Johnnie E. Weeks, Elleen Dayson, Mary Miller, Mary Shryock, Edith Hays Effinger, Mildred Hurst, Beth Daane, Mary Louise Hoenshel, Anna Marie Mitchell, Grace Rummell, Lula Mae Mooty, Ellen Anderson, Mary Burgoon, Arline Lockhart, Westa Wilkins, Betty Ann Graham, Alma Butler, Gline McAdams, Annabetie Larsen, Mary Meginniss, Christian Burgoyne, Helen Wohlberg, Roberta Diamond. Mary Dickenson, Ruth Sadler, Sara McGregor, Mary Myrick and Gertrude Parks.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
April 5 to April 13

Friday
5:00 p. m.	Informal tea at Sigma Kappa house honoring delegates at Sigma Kappa regional convention held here
8.00 p. m.	Formal reception at Sigma Kappa house
8:00 p. m.	Chi Omega reception
8:00 p. m.	Alpha Chi Omega pledges entertain the active members at a laissez-faire night club party
8:00 p. m.	Play-nite in gym
Saturday
8:00 a. m.	Alumnae and college discussions at the Sigma Kappa regional convention meetings
2-8 p. m.	Open house at all the sorority houses and upperclassman dormitories for sophomores and their guests
8:00 p. m.	Formal banquet for the Sigma Kappas at the Floridan hotel
8:30 p. m	Sophomore Hop. Physical Education building
Sunday
11:00 a. m.	Church services
5:00 p. m.	Orchestra concert in auditorium
7:15 p. m.	Y. W. C. A. vespers
Monday
8-8 a. m.	Opening meeting of twentieth anniversary celebration of the Florida Flambeau, Augusta Conradi theater
5:30 p. m.	Orchestra rehearsal
7:30 p. m.	Glee club rehearsal
9:00 p. m.	Sorority meetings
Tuesday
11:30 a. m.	Convocation. Helen Hunt West will speak on "The Political Responsibility of Women"
5:30 p. m.	Orchestra rehearsal
6:30 p. m.	Flambeau banquet at Floridan hotel
7:30 p. m.	Freshman home economics meeting
Wednesday
7:15 a. m.	Worship service
8:15 a. m.	Helen Hunt West will speak on "Women in Journalism" and Ben J. Grant, jr. will speak on "The Newspaper Game," in the Augusta Conradi theater
9:15 a. m.	Behind the scenes—tour of a student newspaper in the making, Flambeau office
7:30 p. m.	Glee club rehearsal, in auditorium
Thursday
11.30 a. m.	Behind the scenes tour of a newepaper printing plant. Free transportation, cars leaving college gates at 11:30 promptly
5.30 p. m.	Orchestra rehearsal
Friday
8.00 p. m.	A. A. U. W. meeting
8:15 p. m.	Informal reception for Classics department in Broward club room. Guest speaker, Dr. G. M. Whicher on "Hnraca in English Poetry"
8:15 p. m.	"Peggy and the Pirate," demonstration school operetta, auditorium
Saturday
10:00 a. m.	All county play day. College athletic field and gym
8:15 p. m.	Lecture. Dr. G. M. Whicher will speak on A. E. Hauseman, author of Shropsire Lad.

Personal Mention

Mrs. Joseph N. Franklin, Baxley, Georgia, president of Alpha province of Alpha Delta Pi, will arrive at the Alpha Delta Pi house Sunday afternoon for a visit of several days here.

◆

Elizabeth Carter, Narcissus Leland, and Betty Brooks wil spend this week-end in St. Petersburg.

◆

Opal Atwater will be a sponsor at the Engineers' Ball in connection with the Engineers' Fair at Raleigh, N. C., this week-end.

◆

Mary Carson left today to attend spring dances at Stetson university, Deland.

◆

Dorothy Finneren will visit har parents in Jacksonville this week-end.

◆

Mr. Edward Conradi will be in Atlanta April 8 to attend a conference of colleges and university presidents.

◆

Miss Louise Smith, state secretary of the Young Women's Auxiliary, will be the guest this week end at camp Flastocowo of the Baptist studente' union. While at camp Miss Smith will teach a class in "People of the Jesus Way", a mission study.

◆

Tobiah Lovitz, Tarpon Springs, graduate of the class of '34, is spending the week-end on the campus as a guest of the Delta Phi Epsilon sorority.

◆

Martha Caralton went to Tampa to spend several days with her parents.

◆

Wilma TerBush will meet her mother in Jacksonville and visit at her grandmother's this week-end.

◆

Nancy Wilkinson is visiting her parents in Palatka this week-end.

Alpha Chi's to Have Night Club Party

The Alpha Chi Omega sorority house will depict the opening night of a laisez-faira night club tonight at a party at which the pledges will entertain the actives.

Tables placed around the living room and balloons suspended from the ceiling will be used in picturing the night club scene.

Invitations will be written like those issued for the formal opening of a night club, and the entertainment will feature a dance revue. Helena Cordes will act as master of ceremonies.

BENNETT'S
Beauty Salon
"The Smart Woman's Choice"
PERMANENTS:
$3.00 to $10.00

SIGMA KAPPA PLANS MANY FUNCTIONS FOR REGIONAL CONVENTION DELEGATES

Social functions on the program for the Sigma Kappa regional convention to be held here at the Sigma Kappa house this week-end include an informal tea this afternoon, a formal reception tonight, a picnic lunch at Kakulla Springs and garden tea tomorrow, and initiation and a formal banquet tomorrow night.

Maroon and lavender will be the dominating colors in the bouquets of spring flowers used in decorating the sorority house for the various social activities over the week-end.

At the informal tea this afternoon, Miss Marion Young and Evelyn Kennard, general chairmen of the convention, assisted by other members of the active and alumnae chapter, of Sigma Kappa will be hostesses to the some twenty-five delegates that are expected. Mary Delia Irvine will pour tea.

The visitors will be entertained at an informal dinner in the college dining room tonight, for which Sara Hosea is in charge of arrangements.

In the receiving line at the formal reception at the Sigma Kappa house from 8 to 10 tonight will be Mrs. B. R. Varner, regional president; Mrs. R. B. Watson, district counciler; Miss Leila Venable, faculty advisor; Mrs. Pauline Cozart, sorority chaperon; Miss Margaret K. Anderson, president of the active chapter, Miss Mildred Davis, Alpha Omega delegate and Miss Billie Bibb, Sigma delegate.

Refreshments at the reception will consist of crackers with roquefort cheese, chocolate cake and coffee.

Mrs. G. C. Parker, Sr., and Mrs. Glen Terrell will pour at the reception. Other patrons invited to the reception include Dr. and Mrs. M. H. DeGraff, Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Bagless, Miss Adrienne Taylor, Dr. and Mrs. Leland Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Greene Johnston, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Sealy, Mrs. R. M. Sealy, Judga and Mrs. Armetead Brown, Judge Glenn Terrell, Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Ong, and Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Tharpe.

Pledges who will assist at the informal tea and at the reception are Lou Chilson, Antoinette Courtney, Helen Dixon, Lois Forester, Jane Gage, Martha Wright, Mary Hoffman.

The alumnae chapter in town will entertain the visitors and the active chapter at a picnic luncheon at Wakulla Springs tomorrow. Mrs. Myrtle Burr is in charge of the arrangements.

Miss Miriam Terrell will be hostess to the group for a garden tea at her home in Glenwood estates tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock.

The maroon and lavender color scheme will be further carried out in the place cards and programs at the formal banquet at the Floridan hotel tomorrow night. The place cards and programs will be triangular in shape and will bear the Sigma Kappa crest.

Miss Marion Young, president of the Tallahassee alumnac chapter, will be toastmistress, while Mrs. Glady. Proctor and Miss Clarice Parker will play piano and violin selections at the banquet.

Members of the alumnae chapter who will be hostesses to the visiting delegates are Miss Sue Pitchford, Mrs. Eaton Burr, Miss Louise Conradi, Miss Miriam Terrill, Mrs. Clyde Atkinson, Miss Jeanne Compton, Miss Marion Young, Miss Clarice Parker, Mrs. Ralph Proctor, Mrs. W. C. Lamb, Miss Mattie Sue Cnllins, Miss Leila Venable, and Mrs. Robert Watson.

ALPHA XI DELTA TO HONOR NATIONAL OFFICER AT FORMAL TEA WEDNESDAY

Members of Alpha Xi Delts will honor Mrs. Grace Cogger Carlson, national vice-president, who is visiting the Florida State chapter this week, and their chaperone, Mrs. J. W. Bland, at a formal tea to be held on Wednesday afternoon from four to six at the chapter house.

The house will be decorated with the pink Killarney rose, the sorority flower, and appropriate refreshments will be served, with Mrs. H. D. Mendenhall, patroness, presiding at the coffee table. She will be assisted in serving by Elizabeth Filer and Ruth Rainbolt.

The guest list for the occasion will include Miss Olivia N. Dorman, Dr. Elizabeth Andrews, Miss Maude Flowers, Miss Hazel Stevenson, Mrs. Carrie Scandreitt, Mrs. Charlotte M. Beckham, Miss Mamie Andrews, Mrs. Flossia Curry, Miss Rose Denham, Miss Ida Rowan, Mrs. Margaret Saynor, Mrs. Melanie Turner, Mrs. Luella Wimberley, faculty advisors, chaperones, and representatives of each of the sororities on the campus, and Miss Tillie Geiger, Mrs. Norma Bauer White, and Miss Anna Mae Sharp, faculty advisors of the sorority.

The receiving line for the affair will include Mrs. Carlson, Mrs. Bland, Miss Sharp, Althea Smith, and Elizabeth Stout.

Hostesses for the tea include: Elizabeth Stout, Althea Smith, Geneva Fisher, Barbara Garfunkel, Carlota Cubillas, Mary McGunagle, Juanita Pace, Jimmie Filer, Ruth Rainbolt, Marion Weeks, Betty Bailey, Jean Crago, Jessie Mead, Mildred Lovell, Helenmary Fritsch, Clotilde O'Rourke, Charlotte Kinzie, Monica Wiley, Lula Walker, Mildred Boss, and Dot Hoffman.

Melvyne Wahnish Has Buffet Supper For Flambeau Staff

Miss Melvyna Washnish will entertain formally with a buffet supper Sunday evening at her home on Calhoun street honoring the members of the out-going Flambeau staff.

The table will be centered with a low bowl of pastel sweet peas and other spring flowers, flanked by tall lighted tapers.

The invited guests include Barbara Garfunkel, Louise Robertson, Mildred Boss, Althea Smith, Betty Ellen Smith, Gertrude Kuhn, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Edna Hoffman, Edith Patterson, Daisy Parker, Lorraine Hudson, Elaine Klepper, Mrs. M. R. Hinson, Mr. and Mrs. Earl L. Vance.

Students May Have Phi Beta Programs

Phi Beta Kappa installation programs, according to Dr. Venila L. Shores, may be had by anyone who will call for them at her office in 218 History building.

Several girls have asked for extra programs for their scrap books.

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Claudette Colbert
in
"IMITATION OF LIFE"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Jeanette MacDonald
in
"NAUGHTY MARIETTA"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Georgia Arliss
in
"THE IRON DUKE"
THURSDAY
Virginia Brice
in
"TIMES SQUARE LADY"
—ALSO—
"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT"
RITZ THEATRE
SATURDAY
Randolph Scott
in
"ROCKY MOUNTAIN MYSTERY"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
"IMITATION OF LIFE"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
"NAUGHTY MARIETTA"

Series Of Freshman Teas Continued During Week

Miss Lou Miller, Dr. and Mrs. Leland Lewis, Miss Isabel McKinnall and Miss Anna Mae Sharp entertained this week at a number of informal teas for their freshman students.

At 5:30 Tuesday afternoon in Reynolds parlors Miss Miller was at home to Dorothy Hill, Grace Edna Lee, Margaret Pierson, Isabella Sands, Dorothy Atkinson, Lillian Burford, Dorothy Dismukes, Hazel Anderson, Helen Louise Bassett, Ruby Ellen Wiggins, Martha Wright, Celia Gary, Rita Gillinhen, Glivia Boland, Beatrice Grus and Minna Jane Hackney.

Dr. and Mrs. Lewis entertained at a similar function on Wednesday afternoon at 5:30 in Jennie Murphree. At this tima those present were Sarah Graham, Margaret Adkins, Margaret Knokles, Emma Bradford, Mary Lee Lanaban, Edna Feinberg, Martha Jones, Constance Williams, Geraldine Meyers, Ida Larkins, Lula Mooty, Margaret Christine Walden, Etta Virginia Turner, Marie Wagner, Inez Seabrook, Dorothy Phillips and Mary Frances Deese.

Bryan sunparlor furnished tha setting for a similar affair on Thursday at 5:30 at which time Miss Isabel McKinnell and Miss Anna Mae Sharp ware joint hostesses. The guest list on thie occasion included Haal Anderson, Adelaide Emanuel, Marguerite Sjostrom, Frances Sadler, Helena Powell, Joy Bailey, Vivian Brizard, Annette Harris, Dorothy Branch, Jessica Jane Mackey, Margaret Jean Duncan, Mary Ellen Thorpe, Mary Lea Wheeler, Dorothy Branch, Anita Easton, Anne Jane McRae, Mildred Hurst, Eleanor Brothers, Janet Pierce, Adeline Gehkins, Virginia Northcutt and Marlon Rogers

Chi Omegas to Give Formal at Home To Friends Tonight

Members of Chi Omega sorority will be at homa to friends tonight from 8 to 10 o'clock.

The Chi Omega colors of cardinal and straw will dominate in the bouquets of spring flowers used to decorate the house. During the evening a punch and ice course will be served.

Mary Jeanne McKay and Viola Taylor will meet the guests at the door, while in the receiving line will be Dean Ollvia Dorman, Miss Rowena Longmire, Mrs. O. S. Lanier, and the following officers of the chapter: Esther Daffin, Betty Manning, Henrietta Thames, Elizabeth Kirby-Smith, and Francis Moore.

PARTIES FOR BAPTIST SECRETARY AND METHODIST HIKE ON CHURCH CALENDA

Highlights of denominational activities were several parties honoring Miss Sibyl Brame, a guest of tha Baptist Students' union, and a hike was given by Miss Winnie Lee Davis for Mathodist hall chairmen last week-end.

The Baptist Students' union was hostess last week-end to Miss Brame, the associate south-wide Baptist student secretary from Nashville, Tenn., headquarters for the union. Included in the parties given for Miss Brame was a banquet at the Three Torches at 7 o'clock Saturday night, to which were invited Baptist council members, officers of the Sunday school, Baptist Young People's union, Life Service Band, and the Y. W. A. After tha banquet there was beld a B. S. U. council meeting at which Miss Brama gave a talk.

Activities of this organization held Sunday included an after dinner coffee from 2 to 3:30 at the Baptist student house. Sunday morning in the Masonic Temple, Miss Brame addressed the Sunday school.

Dr. and Mrs. Raymond Bellamy were special guests at a council dinner given in tha collega dining room last Monday night. Immediately following the dinner, a short social hour and council meeting was held at the Methodist students' house.

Last Friday afternoon at 6 o'clock Miss Winnie Lee Davis entertained at a supper hike honoring the Methodist hall chairmen of residence halls. Methodist chairmen who attended the were Mildred Stevens, Doro Green, Ruth Lovelace, Howard, Clara Belle Lipsey, M eline McCall, Mary Tiller, Im gene Holland, Margaret Delan Pearl Overhultz, Anna M Cray, Willa Mary Greer, Nell Johnson, Catherine Pr Dorothy Dismuks, Lois Marjorie Raulerson, Virginia Tu ner and Lois Atkins.

Two Faculty Groups Add to Series Of Freshman Teas

Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Becker will entertain a group of freshmen on Monday, April 8, at five-thirty in Reynolds Hall parlors.

Guests for this occasion include: Mary Porter, Inez Shellhorse, Susan Lester, Estelle Johnston, Marianna Aicurl, Hazel Greene Anderson, Edith Arbuthnot, Laurence Buckley, Glivia Boland, Virginia Carroll, Elise Scarborough, Jana Morford, Annette Marco, Willa Mary Greer, Grace Green and Mavis Clark.

On Thursday, April 11, at five-thirty in Jennie Murphree parlors, Miss Sadie Young, Miss Beulah Briley, and Miss Mary Luella Richey will entertain a second freshman group, composed of: Jean Jackson, Elizabeth Flake, Antoinette Courtney, Hattie Barco, Alice Dyal, Margaret Endsley, Rose Evans, Marie Foley, Virginia Godwin, Esther Hay, Ruth Knight, Lorce Lamb, Ethel Jones, Iris Machen, Juanite McElhannon, Jeanette Robertson, Doris Strauss, Leona Thornton, Sara Tillman, Virginia Christine Tofaletti, and Nan O'Shaughnessy.

Zetas Will Entertain With German Super

Members and pledges of eZta Tau Alpha sorority will tertain at the chapter house night with a German supper.

The table will be centered red verbena and decorated black and white carrying out color schema of the German Pumpernickel, saurkraut, liverwurst, and other foods will be served.

Among those who will be ent are Virginia Thornton, O da McFatter, Dorothy Bord Mary Frank Price, Billie Frances Lingle, Mary Simpson, Clara Lankford, Ev Stump, Esther Hay, Jean Matheson, Virginia Shultz, Maze, Marjorie Stump.

Others invited are: Mabel A derson, Margarat Arnold, Ruff, Jeanette Robertson, Fellows, Mary Elizabeth and Isabell Sands.

Methodist Choir Will Offer Easter Prog

The Methodist Student and Dramatic group are ing an Easter Program at Methodist church, Sunday, A 7 at 8:00 p. m. A feature of program will be a drama of Christ entitled "Simon the L by Dorothy Clark Wilson, and rected by Miss Elizabeth Th son.

The organ prelude will be dered by Mrs. Ricks of the M odist cho.. and Mr. Sellers pley the cello. Following prayer and offertory services [illegible] organ recital will be [illegible]

Those who will appear characters in the drama inc Sara Hosea, Sue Whitaker, M jorie Raulerson, Peggy M Nelle St. John, Annette Ha Willa Mary Greer, and Betty Graham.

◆

Miss Marjorie Mayer, sw ming instructor, has accepted position at Coloradn State Co lege for the summer session associate professor and acting rector of the physical educat department.

THE FRILL IS THE THING!
By
PETER PAN
Away with severe necklines! Frame your face with a foam of flattering feminine frills.
$14.95

This tantalizing "pussy-cat" bow fairly beckons to every saucy little miss who wants to double her chic this spring in a "PETER PAN suit.
Color: Navy Blue only $14.95

P. W. Wilson Company
Since 1837

Welcome to The New
Flambeau Staff—
Farewell to The Old

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

Holiday Greetings to Student Body
For Easter Vacation

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, April 12, 1935 NUMBER TWENTY-FIVE

Florida State Opposes U of F In Armaments

University Men Propose Diplomatic Isolation And Rearmament

NO DELEGATE TO NSFA FROM HERE

Senate Telegram Urges Cooperation And Disarmament

In a telegram sent yesterday afternoon to the Southern Regional Convention of the National Student Federation, now meeting in New Orleans, the senate of College Government association expressed strong opposition to a resolution to be of Florida Delegation urging United States rearmament and diplomatic isolation.

The telegram read as follows: "The student government senate of Florida State College for Women strongly opposes passage of resolution for United States rearmament and diplomatic isolation, to be introduced by University of Florida delegates. We urge aggressive stand for international cooperation and disarmament." The telegram was signed by Carolina DeMontigue, president.

Proposed Resolution

The University of Florida delegates were to in introduce their resolution in the Southern Regional Convention of NSFA today, urging "rearmament by the United States, which will in the opinion of the General Staff insure our borders against invasion."

The resolution, drawn by the delegates, Will Fairbanks and Bill Lantaff, also recommends an endeavor to "impress upon the youth of the United States through college training that eternal preparedness and the ability to repeal violently and attempted invasion of our shores, together with diplomatic isolation from the intrigues of other nations, is the surest path to peace."

The regional NSFA convention was one of the conventions to which the CGA senate decided early in the year not to send a delegate. Later Florida State College was asked to have her delegates take charge of one of the meetings, but since the decision for non-attendance had been made, a delegate was not sent.

Nevertheless, at a meeting of the senate yesterday afternoon at 1:15 the resolution to send the above telegram, introduced by Louise Robertson, was passed unanimously by the senate.

Orchestra Gives Spring Concert

Group of Selections By Director Presented

The college orchestra under the direction of Walter Ruel Cowles presented its annual spring concert Sunday afternoon in the college auditorium which was enthusiastically received by an appreciative audience.

The greater part of the program consisted of melodious masterpieces from the classical period. Dean Ella Scoble Opperman, of the school of music, offered special credit to the soloist in the Mozart concerto, Martha Reddick and Betty Parker, violinists, and Yvonne Tait, cellist, and in the Mozart concerto for orchestra to Wilma Bristol, flutist, and Elizabeth Love, harpist.

During the program Mr. Cowles presented several of his own compositions. Miss Etta Robertson sang three of his songs for which he recently orchestrated the accompaniment.

Moffett to Speak Sunday

Miss Natalie Moffett, Presbyterian mission teacher in the Union Girls' school in Hangchow, China, will speak to college girls Sunday morning at the Sunday school hour in the annex at the Presbyterian church. Her topic will be on the work she is doing with thte girls in China.

Miss Moffett, a graduate of Florida State and a member of Kappa Delta sorority, will be at the college this week-end.

Dr. Whicher Will Talk on Housman

Dr. G. M. Whicher, scholar and poet, who will speak tomorrow evening at 8:15 o'clock in the Augusta Conradi theater will center his talk about A. E. Housman, author of Tha Shrapshire Lad. Dr. Whicher, whose appearance is being sponsored by Eta Sigma Phi, classical honorary, was for twenty-five years head of the classical department of Hunter college, New York City. He is also the author of several books of poetry, including, On The Tibur Road, Sonnet Singing, Roman Pearls, and Roba D'Italia.

This evening at 8:15 o'clock Dr. Whicher will address members of Classics department at an informal reception in Broward club room. His topic at this meeting will be "Horace in English Literature." Dr. Whicher will also read selections from his own poetry.

Journalistic Jamboree Held

Staff, Alpha Chi Alpha Observe Flambeau Anniversary

Beginning with informal talks by veteran journalism students Monday night and culminating yesterday morning with a tour of the Democrat publishing plant, the Journalistic Jamboree, sponsored by Alpha Chi Alpha, journalistic honorary and the Flambeau staff, fittingly observed the twentieth anniversary of the Flambeau. The four days of celebration provided opportunities for embryo journalists and all interested in the profession to learn something of the various aspects of the work, the hardships as well as the glamour.

At the meeting Monday night, Dr. David Briggs presented Hazel Bowman with the five-dollar award offered by Alpha Chi Alpha, journalistic honorary, for the best article on "Should College Set Up Life Situations as a Means of Training for Citizenship?" Second place was won by Carol Parabee and third by Sara Rutledge.

A highlight of the annual Flambeau Tuesday night at the Floridan was the announcement of the recently appointed editorial and business staffs which are as follows: news editor, Hazel Bowman; feature editor, Martha Baker; literary editor, Eleanor Williams; society editor, Margaret Claire Lafferty; sports editor, Elaine Klepper; outside news editor, Grace Mary Webster; exchange editor, Virginia Early; copy editor, Arline Lockhart; business manager, Mary Patterson; assistant business manager, Lillie McGuire; advertising manager, Jane Gale; circulation manager, Cell Levy; assistant circulation manager, Caroline Adams.

Flambeau keys for outstanding reportorial work were awarded to Nedra McNamara, Carol Parabee, Hazel Bowman, Ruth Persons, and Martha Baker.

Featured Wednesday night were Mr. Ben J. Grant, jr., representative of the Associated Press, formerly associated with the Jacksonville Journal, who gave a graphic description of actual newspaper conditions as experienced by beginning reporters, and Mrs. Helen Hunt West, one of Florida's most outstanding woman journalists who discussed "Women in Journalism." She emphasized the fact that the field of journalism is growing ever broader for women and that fewer doors are now closed to them. Mrs. West also addressed the student body in convocation Tuesday speaking on "Women in Politics." Following these talks, all interested were conducted through the Flambeau office.

Student speakers Monday night and their topics were Edith Patterson, "Twenty Years Before the Masthead"; Betty Ellen Smith, "The Ins and Outs of a Campus Reporter"; Ethyle Mae Edwards, "Business Training on Student Publications"; Lucy Fulghum, "The Place of Journalism in a Liberal Education"; and Barbara Garfunkel, "The Flambeau and the Future." Mr. Earl L. Vance, associate professor of journalism, discussed "The Place of the Student Newspaper in a College Community."

Heinlein Makes Address

Dr. C. P. Heinlein will be the speaker at the next meeting of the Psychological Seminar on Tuesday, April 16, at 8:00 p. m. The title of his address will be "Some Fallacies of Behaviorism."

B Averages In Third Quarter Show Decrease

Two Hundred Forty-Two Total Number Making Approbation

ARTS, SCIENCES GROUP IS FIRST

Juniors Lead Classes With Seventy-two On Honor Roll

Two hundred and forty-two students qualified for scholastic recognition on the approbation list for the third quarter. decrease in the number of B or better averages as compared with the honor roll for the first semester.

The college of Arts and Sciences leads all other departments with a total of 129 students on approbation; the school of Education takes second place with 84 students. The School of Home Economics has 17 students on approbation; the School of Music, 5; the graduate school, 7; and special students, 3.

Juniors Lead

The junior class is best represented of all the classes, having 72 students on the list; the senior class is next with a total of 64. There are 49 sophomores and 47 freshmen on approbation.

Five students made a straight A average. Of these Clarissa Knight, senior in the college of Arts and Sciences, is carrying the heaviest schedule, 18 hours of work. Lillian Turlington, junior in the college of Arts and Sciences, had 17 hours of A for the last quarter. Two of the straight A students are carrying 12 hours of work, Ida Engel, senior in the college of Arts and Sciences, and Gwendolyn McReynolds, graduate student. Anita Mitchell, senior in the college of Arts and Sciences, made 6 hours of A. Ida and Anita are doing honors work.

Eight students made 14 or more hours of A. They are Muriel Evelyn Baker, 15 hours of A, one hour of C and ½ hour of B; Josephine Binion, 15½ hours of A and one hour of B; Rebecca Keith, 16 hours of A and two hours of B; Bernice Oliver, 15 hours of A and ½ hour of C; Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, 15 hours of A and 3 hours of B; Martha Frank Wildman, 14 hours of A, 4 hours of B and ½ hour of C; Anna Cone Groover, 17 hours of A and ½ hour of C; and Daisy Parker, 14 hours of A and 4 hours of B.

Graduate students on approbation are Mrs. George Ames, Margaret V. Campbell, Helen S. Everett, Gwendolyn McReynolds, Eunice C. Nicholson, Isabel Perkins and Christine Scarborough. Special students on the honor list are Mrs. Elberta Hinson, Alice Somerville and Rose L. Williams.

Seniors on List

The following seniors are on approbation: Opal Atwater, Bessie Bailey, Mary Ellen Bailey, Elizabeth Barker, Marion Brantley, Anne Louise Burgess, Martha Carlton, Marjorie Carter, Esther Daffin, Ruth Daniel, Dorothy Dif-

(Continued on Page Two)

Five Apply For Honors Program

Senior Examinations Will Begin Next Week

Five sophomores have applied for honors work which will cover their junior and senior years, according to an announcement from the registrar's office this week.

The students and their major fields are: Virginia Early, American literature; Hasel Sangster, English; Daisy Parker, American history; Anne Sams, industrial arts; Frank Wildman, mathematics.

Comprehensive examinations for seniors who are candidates for honors degrees will begin next week.

Students who will take examinations in their major fields are: Elizabeth Barker, botany; Marion Brantley, chemistry; Margaret Dodd, home economics; Ida Engel, history; Lucy Fulghum, journalism; Belle Henshaw, French; Florence Jennings, psychology; Margaret Nickle, chemistry; Frances Parks, history; Elinor Payne, English.

Distribution of Extra-Curricular Activities

As Tabulated by Mortar Board

No. of Activities	0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	13	14	16	Total in Classes	Total Activities
Srs.	99	45	27	22	12	9	10	4	4	2	3	2	2	1	1	243	504
Jrs.	164	47	23	15	7	7	2	1			3					269	250
Soph.	227	81	24	15	6		2									357	218
Total Stu.	490	173	74	52	27	16	14	5	4	2	6	2	2	1	1	869
Total Activs.		173	148	156	108	80	84	35	32	18	60	22	26	14	16		972

Summary of Data

41% of the students carry on all the activities. 59% of the students carry no activities. 40% of the seniors have no activities. 60% of the juniors have no activities. 63% of the sophomores have no activities. 52% of the activities are carried by seniors. 26% of the activities are carried by juniors. 22% of the activities are carried by sophomores. The average number of activities is 1.12 per student among the students. The average number of activities is 2.30 per student among those participating. The greatest number of activities is 16 for one student. 50% of the activities are carried on by 8.9% of the students. The other 50% is carried on by 32.1% of the students.

Second Mortar Board Investigation Shows Activity Over Centralization

Fifty Per Cent of Upperclass Extra-Curricular Work is Carried by Nine Per Cent Of the Students

That the campus of Florida State College for Women is suffering from a condition of over-centralization of activities rather than from a condition of over-organization is indicated in the results of an investigation of extra-curricular activity distribution made public this week by Mortar Board.

Far from dissolving existing organizations, among other recommendations, Mortar Board urged the establishment of new organizations to offer extra-curricular activity to students who are excluded under the present system.

The entire report, copies of which were submitted to the chairman of the faculty committee on student affairs, the personnel director and the president of College Government association, is quoted as follows:

The data presented in this report are the result of an investigation of the extra-curricular activities in which individual students are engaged on the campus of Florida State College for Women. When the report on the survey of campus organizations was made in January, the facts did not reveal a condition of over-organization, but seemed to indicate that the problem was one of over-centralization. The most illuminating fact brought to light in the aforementioned survey was that among the seventy-four groups examined, seventy had honorary membership and two had virtual automatic departmental membership; only two had voluntary membership: Y.W.C.A. and the Astronomy Club. Membership in Y.W.C.A., it seems, does not necessitate responsibility or activity, and membership in the Astronomy club is closed early in the year due to limitation of facilities. This, taken in conjunction with the fact that student offices are elective, forces the conclusion that in the main, participation in campus activities is not a voluntary affair.

This investigation is based on the premise that every student above the freshman level should participate in at least one student activity in which she has ability and interest, and that no student should be overburdened with extra-curricular responsibility; otherwise, we cannot claim to offer a well balanced educational program for all. Many girls, it would seem, are in need of the type of training which extra-curricular activity affords, and are not being given that training. Many of these students may be capable and interested but haven't enough "push" to make themselves noticed by the student body at large. In addition, tasks are often delegated to students who have "proven" their ability in some other performance, in preference to giving them to girls who are free from other responsibilities.

In an effort to secure accurate statistics for the study of this problem, Mortar Board went to the sources which seemed most reliable, that is, information which the students themselves gave about their own activities. The blanks which were filled out for the use of the Flastacowo were used first. Where data was incomplete in the Flastacown files we turned to the alumnae and publicity office files, which consist of cards filled out at the time of registration. The general tendency on both of these records, we observed, was in the direction of exaggerating rather than understating the number of activities of each student. Each extra-curricular activity was con-

(Continued from page three)

Student Learns Beauty Treatments Aren't What They're Caked Up to Be Finds Appearance "After Using" Befits A Circus Clown

"And, ladies, this powder is absolutely guaranteed not to cake and withstand wind, rain and sun It comes in all the new shades from fawn to peachbloom. Our line also carries this indelible lip rouge. It will not come off during the most trying office hours or equally trying hours at night. And now, ladies, for the finishing touch, apply a dash of these 'French Love Drops' at the tips of the ears and you will be perfectly made up for any occasion. And ladies, the prices—"

After hearing this lecture on beauty culture and make-up, I was firmly convinced of all the sins which I had committed daily in my cosmetic routine. Forthwith, I hied myself to Madame Egletine, and proceeded to squander my entire fortune of seven dollars and sixty cents on her products. Leaving the store with my small but expensive packages, I was in the most elated of spirits. Swinging on one of the straps of the trolley on the way home, I read diligently the booklet given me by Madame Egletine. Not only did Madame Egletine show me the paths of righteousness in the ways of beauty, but also the wizened old maid behind my left shoulder and the plump, red-faced gentleman on my right. Both seemed quite absorbed in my "First Aids to Beauty". I have often wondered if they tried the same treatment I did that fateful night, and what results they met with.

"Cover face and neck well with Eglatine Water-lily cleansing cream," I reread later in the privacy of my boudoir, "and pat in well. Then rub with upward, downward, and rotary strokes." I pondered a moment, trying to absorb the full meaning of those words: then I began. I rubbed upward, I rubbed downward, I used a rotary motion, until my finger tips tingled, still my rouge would not give up its rosy tint on my cheeks. "Well, I thought, perhaps I had better call in the aid of my friends, soap and water." After scrubbing my face for at least ten minutes, I managed to clear away enough of the greasy cream to get down to my skin. Now looking like a new born babe, I started back to my beauty treatment.

"Next supply a small portion of tissue or nourishing cream. Rub in gently and remove surplus with a tissue." That didn't sound hard, so again my hopes for a glorious

(Continued on page three)

Minstrels To Be Presented In Two Weeks

Girls from Four Classes Have Been Selected For Committees

SHOW TO INCLUDE DRAMA AND MUSIC

Songs Composed by Two Florida Students Will Be Used

Music, dancing, and clever lines are all embodeis in the Junior Minstrel, "She Was Only a Farmer's Daughter," a comedy in three acts, which will be presented in the college auditorium on April 27, according to Sarah Krentzman, chairman.

Supporting the main cast of 14 members, 23 people will be used in the group and individual dances, which are being directed by Carolina Oliver, Mildred Smith and Tad Goodwin will be at the pianos, and vocal and violin trios will be used in novelty numbers.

Student Composed Song

Among the songs features will be "Girl from Tallahassee," composed by Bill Bryan, and "Blue Haze," by Billy Van Brunt, both students at the University of Florida.

Mildred Emmelhainz, chairman of the advertising committee, has announced that the price of tickets will be twenty-five cents, and that anyone who sells ten tickets will receive one free.

Working with Mildred Emmelhainz on the advertising committee are Betty Osland, Katherine Pratt, Jane Gale, and Dorothea Marsh.

Other Committees

The costume committee consists of Minna Dunn, chairman, Margaret Thompson, Sara Nance, Katherine Todd, Sarah Anthony, Ann Misell, Mary Litschgi, Helen Miller, Lucy G. Linn, Betty Meyer, Martha Briese, and Minna Yockey.

The members of the stage committee are Floy Lenert, chairman, Polly Flint, Betty Brooks, Virginia Cromartie, Louise Lingo, Marjorie Raulerson, Jane Hubbard, and Barbara Hubbard.

The property committee includes Bert Clifford, chairman, Virginia Cary, Betty Bow, Marguerita Sjostrom, Lorriane Yarbrough, Mary Lopez, Jean Gillis, and Geneva Lamb.

Kappa Delta Pi Will Initiate

Twelve to Be Honored At Banquet Saturday

Alpha Delta chapter of Kappa Delta Pi, education honorary, will have its spring initiation and banquet Saturday night at the Women's club in Los Robles. Twelve pledges will be initiated at this time, according to Mrs. Dora Skipper, president.

Mr. Kenneth Williams, critic teacher in Demonstration school, will be toastmaster at the banquet which will be opened with a talk, "Alpha chapter—Reminiscences" by Mrs. Ralph Eyman. Dean N. M. Salley will review an article by Horace Mann, "Pioneering in Education" from the March Kadelpien, and Mr. Robert Moon will speak of "The Laureate Chapter—Internationally known Kadelpians". An appreciation of Alpha Delta Chapter" will be given by Mrs. Paul Finner, with responses by Mrs. Skipper and Helen Wilson. The roster, "Who's Who in Alpha Delta Chapter, 1935" will be led by Dr. Ralph Eyman. The new initiates will then present their skit.

The address will be given by Mr. James L. Graham, of the state department of education, on "Your Challenge."

Students who will be initiated tomorrow night include: Lois Hazel, Virginia Cromartie, Murae Reddick, Julia Norfleet, Nancy Wilkinson, Ruth Persons, Mina Dunn, Rebecca Keith, Carol Reeves, Anna Groover, Mary Claire Kimball, and Alice Porter.

Board of Control Meets

The State Board of Control will hold its regular meeting here Monday. Due to the fact that the new offices in the Education building have not yet been completed the meeting will be held in the Alumnae office.

Education Building May Be Done May 1

The new Education building will probably be completed by May 1, according to Mr. J. G. Kellum, business manager of the college. However, due to the fact that provisions have not been made for the buying of furniture, the building will not be ready for occupancy at that time.

The next project of the FERA on this campus will be concerned with lighting facilities. It is planned, among other things, to install new lamp posts on the campus, especially around the road which passes by the gymnasium. The same men who have been working on the Education building will be employed for this work which will begin as soon as the building is completed.

Journalists To Attend Parley

Patterson, Krentzman, Persons, and Gibson Go to Louisiana

The eighth annual meeting of the Southwestern Journalism congress and the Southwestern Students' Press club will be held at Louisiana State university, April 12 and 13. Ruth Persons, Sarah Krentzman, Mary Bruce Patterson, and Catherine Gibson are representing Florida State College for Women at this meeting which will feature talks by many outstanding professors and directors of journalism schools.

Professor M. G. Osborn, director of the School of Journalism, president of the Southwestern congress and a member of the national journalism association's accrediting board, will preside at the conference sessions.

President James Monroe Smith will give the welcoming address at the opening session on Friday which will feature addresses by three directors of the journalism schools of the University of Georgia, University of Alabama, and the University of Minnesota. "Opportunity for Research in Journalism" is the topic of the talk to be presented by Dr. Ralph D. Casey, director of the University of Minnesota School of Journalism and the editor of the "Journalism Quarterly"

Visiting professors and directors of the journalism schools of the University of Oklahoma, University of Texas, and Southern Methodist university will speak to the group in the afternoon session. Professor Osborn will also speak at this time on "Teaching Agricultural Journalism." An address will be given Friday night by Dr H. F. Harrington, director of the Medill School of Journalism, Northwestern university.

Professor H. H. Herbert, director of the University of Oklahoma Journalism school, will speak on "Employment for Journalism Graduates," Saturday morning. Professor Curtis Vinson, director of publicity, Texas A. & M., will speak on "Making Use of What Journalism Teaches." Other speakers who are also directors of journalism schools, will be Professor J. Willard Ridings, Professor George E. Simmons, and Dr. Harrington.

At the faculty-member program Saturday afternoon "Journalism as a Career for Women" will be discussed by Miss Helen Zene Wortman, director of the Mary-Hardin-Baylor college journalism department, Professor Delos E Nooe and Professor C. F. Smith will also give addresses.

The afternoon program will feature talks by Professor C. H. Brite, general manager of student publications, and Professor Clarence E. Cason.

Besides the conference sessions many social activities have been planned for the week-end. Included in these activities will be a reception and tea at the home of President and Mrs. James Monroe Smith, and a Soiree masque to be held in the Venetian room on Saturday night.

Botany Class Makes Trip

The class in advanced botany will spend Saturday at Appalachicola River Bluffs looking for rare plants.

The group will leave the campus at five o'clock a. m. and have breakfast at Mt. Laurel Creek. At noon they will have a steak fry at Aspalga.

Those making the trip are Dr and Mrs. H. Kurz, Betty Barker, Winona Ireland, Frances Ellenberg, Harriet Knapp, Katherine Kerrick, Eloise Brizard, and Mary Porter.

New Elective Course Added For Next Year

"Introduction to Contemporary Civilization" To Be Title

AIMS TO DEVELOP SOCIAL ATTITUDES

Will Supersede Three Of Present Courses For Freshmen

A tentative plan for the course, "An Introduction to Contemporary Civilization," has been outlined by the social studies committee and approved by the curriculum committee. The course, which has been worked out after conferences with students will take the place of economics 101, sociology 101, and geography 110, and will be open as an elective to freshmen only.

The first part of the course will deal with some aspects of contemporary civilization, while the second, with this general knowledge as a background and starting point, will take up the possibility of progress and some suggested lines of social improvement.

Students May See Plan

A committee outline of the plan will be at the disposal of all students by Monday when a copy will be placed on reserve in the library. A joint and open meeting of faculty and students will be held in the near future to discuss these plans, and as in past co-operative meetings, to exchange criticism and suggestions toward the proposed program.

As now planned, students who elect the course will be grouped in five sections, each of which will be conducted through the year by a member of the social science faculty. The aims of the course, as stated in the plan are:

"The primary purpose of this course shall be to develop in the students wholesome and desirable social attitudes. The secondary purpose shall be to acquaint them with certain basic facts about our social and national life which will make it possible for these attitudes to take expression in purposive activities, including the pursuit of further information along the same lines

Stresses Open Mind

"Of primary importance among the attitudes which we shall endeavor to instill shall be that of open-mindedness. We realize that concerning questions of social significance there is an almost universal disposition to hold fixed, biased attitudes. We realize further that this fact is probably the greatest cause of social distress that exists. It shall be our endeavor to develop readiness, to look impartially for all information possible concerning questions of race, politics, crime, poverty, unemployment, labor troubles and all other matters pertaining to human society.

"Closely related to the fact of biased minds is the appalling ignorance of elementary facts concerning human society. This ig-

(Continued on Page Two)

Eyman Has Part In College Meet

Leads Discussion Group On High Schools

At a meeting of the Florida Association of Colleges in DeLand last week, Dr. Ralph L. Eyman, professor of education, lead a discussion on "What the High Schools Can do to Help the Colleges."

Other topics discussed included college testing and grading, and the general movement towards new curricular set-ups in connection with which talks were heard on the lower division plan at the University of Florida, Colgate, Hiram, Chicago, Goucher, and Bennington.

S. R. Doyle, vice-president of the association, and Dr. David Briggs, associate professor of education, also represented this college at the meeting.

Other member institutions of the Florida association of colleges are the University of Florida, University of Miami, University of Tampa, Stetson college, Southern college, Rollins college, St Petersburg junior college, Porter university, Ringling School of Art, and Palm Beach Junior college.

Briggs Lectures on Art Trends Of Modern Times and Relative Values

Discusses Cubism, Impressionalism, Super-Realism As Desire of Artists to Free Selves From Many Influences

Complementary to the paintings representative of modern art now on exhibit in the art room of the administration building, Miss Amy Ferris Briggs, of the are depart- Ferris Briggs, cf the art departncon, discussing the various modes of modern art and their relative value, and showing the evolutionary qualities of the modes comprising modern art.

In preface to her discussion of the forms, Miss Briggs quoted from Agnes Rindge, who arranged the exhibit for the College Art association, to the point that "whereas in previous epochs, at least superficially, one mode prevailed, and the period was measured by its maximum, in our day countless meritorious visual attitudes exist side by side. It is possible today for a painter to expolit light, perspective, attractive colour without feeling that these elements are inherently dangerous to him, although a painter of 1910 probably did have to feel so."

The fundamental difference between recent art and modern art as expressed in Miss Briggs' quotation is that "whereas extra pictorial elements (those involving suggestion) were of prime importance in nineteenth centory thought and painting, the one constant chord in the whole twentieth century product is the justification of painting in term of painting, not moral values, scientific perception, even psychological data—but the picture."

Forms of modern art, cubism, impressionism, super-realism, etc., as explained by Miss Briggs are the outgrowth of varying desires of the artist to free themselves from what they felt to be repressing influences, to see objects, or view them from many and sundry angles, and other ambitious dependent on the artist.

Monet and Renoir, among others represented in the exhibit, through their impressionistic style give the feeling of more than mere organization of values. It depicts impressions rather than a picture of what first meets the eye. For exampla a still life of Monet was characterized by its coloring—not the smooth organized type of romantic art, but rather that with complementary colors, broken up as color, psychologically speaking, actually is separated into its wave components.

Out of impressionism, evolved cubism, which represents several angles and points of view; an arm, for example, is pictured many times viewed from various positions. Craftsmanship, in cubism, is not so important, said Miss Briggs, as effect. Cubism is a constructive effort, an organization of forms.

Purism, the next step in the evolutionary process, depends for its pictorial quality, said Miss Briggs, on the color areas breaking the picture into besutiful shapes. Since it is a form wherein art is reduced to its simplest form, there is little future in purism.

Closely related to the cubistic purpose is that embodied in the free style form. While the cubists are static, not dynamic, and not mechanic, artists using the medium of free style represent motion and achieve this illusion to presenting the object in many positions.

In contract to cubism is expressionism, which has no form. Originating in Germany where there is a definite opposition to theory, abstract forms, and organization, expressionism is the result of the Nordic desire for pure expression. Untinged by any intentional meaning, expressionism, said Miss Briggs, should be enjoyed for its beauty of color, its playful spirit. Significant of this intention was a story illustrating this point to the effect that when an old master painted an apple, he had a beautiful apple, but when a modern master painted it, he had a beautiful piece of paint.

Factualism as seen in the works of Hiler, Wiltz, and others, is mostly a representation of the obvious, of what meets the visual eye.

The super realistic mode grew out of other movements, expressionism, futurism, cubism, said Miss Briggs. One form of super-realism, Dadaism, deliberately strives toward a satirical spirit, even tending towards the bitter. The main aim of the artists is not to take themselves seriously.

The result of all these experimental forms, a gradual, evolutionary outgrowth, is the neo-romantic form, reflecting the values learned from all the foregoing forms which should be regarded, said Miss Briggs, not as ends in themselves, but as lessons.

Miss Briggs will lecture again Monday at 7:30 and the exhibit will be open daily until Wednesday from 9:30 till 5:30.

New Elective Course Added for Next Year

(Continued from page one)

norance is perhaps no greater than the ignorance in other fields, but the situation differs in that there is no realization of this ignorance. Ordinarily, college students, as well as others, think they are in possession of a mass of facts about human society when, in reality, they are clinging to a mass of superstitions and falsehoods. It shall be our endeavor to develop a realization of the lack of true knowledge and substitute a questioning attitude.

"A third attitude which we shall strive to develop will be that of concern. There is a notorious lack of any feeling of social responsibility among all classes. We shall try to give our students as vital an interest as possible in human welfare and as deep a feeling of personal responsibility as can be achieved.

"As to the factual material to be presented, there is an embarrassing amount from which to choose. We shall present a few of the more elementary and outstanding facts. But our instruction shall predominantly take the form of introducing social questions, indicating their significance, and leaving the students to draw their own conclusions, it is to be hoped only after further study."

B Averages In Third Quarter Show Decrease

(Continued from page one)

fenbaugh, Margaret Dodd, Marion Dow, Virginia Earle, Margaret Early, Ollvia Embrey, Ida Engel, Frances Fabrici, Myrle Fillingim, Esther Ruth Finley, Mary Helen Forth, Adielyn Fox, Barbara Garfunkel, Cornelia Garrick, Louise Gehan, Anna Marie Good, Hazel Goza, A. Jane Oraham, Opal Gray, Irene Green, Jean Bradley Hamner, Elizabeth Hampton, Lois Hazel, Belle Henshaw, Betty Hintermister.

Lorraine Hudson, Florence Jennings, Mary Clare Kimbell, Clarissa Knight, Evelyn L'Abbe, Avaline Lancaster, Sarah Maxwell, Nell Mayes, Ovieda McFatter, Nedra McNamara, Janice Anita Mitchell Laura Moore, Mary Mooty, Jennie Rae Nall, Muriel Nelson, Frances Parks, Elinor Payne, LaLuce Plank, Evaline Rankin, Carol Reeves, Helen Shelley, Josephine Skeels, Marie Slack, Mildred Smoak, Mildred Stevens, Bertha Stulpnar, Melvyne Wahnish, Elizabeth Wheeler, Martha Whitaker, Jessie Lee Wilder.

Juniors on approbation are: Evelyn Ballard, Elizabeth eBach, Mary E. Bennett, Katheryn Beyer, Mary Elizabeth Brantley, Anne Brooks, Mary Carson, Virginia Cary, Virginia Chandler, Roberta Lee Clifford, Jean Crago, Barbara Crosland, Barbara Curry, Anne Curtright, Ruth Dickson, Mary Catherine Drennan, Mary Frances Dunn, Minna Dunn, Marjorie Fain, Helen Feinburg, Mary Lucille Gould, Florence Greene, Anna Cone Oroover, Irene Hamowitz, Marjorie Harris, Winifred Hanson, Becky Lou Hopkins, Melba Hutchinson, Mauda Ireland, Rebecca Keith, Jewel Kelly, Charlotte Kinzie, Harriet Knapp.

Sara Krentzman, Gertrude Kuhn, Mary Lanehart, Opal Langley, Rosalie Lastra, Goldie Lewinsky, Anna Belle Linger, Lucy Gee Linn, Jessilee Lumpkin, Mauvis Lussier, Zula Marchetta, Mary Elizabeth Marshall, Marion E. Mason, Sadie Mathews, Laura Mathis, Sara Mikell, Dorothy Osincup, Clarinelle O'Steen, Gladys Oliver, Rosalind Parker, Laurita Pearson Mary Frances Pemberton, Alice Porter, Martha Reddick, Murae Reddick, Annie Leigh Rollins, Helen Frances Shephard, Lurline Smith, Valerie Stubbs, Nettie Taylor, Wylma Ter Bush, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Lillian Turlington, Mrs. Frances Wall, Grace Mary Webster, Nancy Wilkinson, Constance Windham, Lillian Yates, Katherine M. Yongue.

HONOR SOPHOMORES

The sophomores are Bernice Allen, Ellen Anderson, Muriel Baker, Josephine Binion, Annie Black, Esther Boozer, Hazel Bowman, Frances Brewer, Marion Carson, Mildred Clein, Rosalyn Daum, Elise Davis, Margaret Delaney, Mary Elizabeth Dolfin, Robbye Lee Estes, Sarah Everett, Frances Forth, Anna Love Olsn, Mary Clyde Grace, Rosemary Hamly, Nina Howard, Lottie Ruth Howard, Mary Jetton, Lynelle Kennington, Betty Mack, Martha Makemson, Mary McOunagle, Betty McKinnon, Anna Marie Mitchell, Carmen Moran, Mary Myrick, Annawilda Norris, Bernice Oliver, Ethel Pacheco, Daisy Parker, Anne Louise Pates, Emily Pinney, Julia Radford, Blanche Rothstein, Shirley Stevens, Yvonne Tait, Mary Ellen Tiller, Matilda Trott, Helen Turnbull, Julia Vanderipe, Anna Marie Von-Dohlan, Holly Waker, Marie Wesley, and Martha Frank Wildman.

The freshmen are: Kathryn Andrews, Phil Asher, Frances Baldwin, Dorothy Barclay, Rosalie Berga, Marie Busselle, Charlotte Carlton, Mary Olenn Coarsey, Kitty Craney, Helen Daniel, Irene Day, Evelyn Fisher, Inez Frink, Maxine Fugate, Phyllis Gewin, Evelyn Olazier, Annette Harris, Mollie B. Holden, Edith Huddleston, Elizabeth Jinks, Genevieve Kenly, Elizabeth Knapp, Nellie Lamar, Ermine Lawrence, Frances Lewis, Fortuna Lopez, Charmian Lufburrow, Hazel Manuel, Dorothea Marsh, Darween Morrell, Hazel Myrick, Geneva Nelson, Mary Pfeiffer, Elizabeth Pierce, Ruth Prather, Edith Ramsaur, Eileen Robinson, Rachel Rothstein, Eleanor Rulf, Rose Safer, Margaret Schmidli, Sarah Sealy, Violet Shampine, Jean Tilden, and Helen Wilhelm.

Webster to Head Catholic Club

Four Members to Attend Conventions in April

At the regular meeting of the Newman club, held last Sunday night, March 31, officers for the coming year were elected and announcements for two coming conventions of Catholic clubs were made.

Officers elected at the meeting were: president, Grace Mary Webster; vice-president, Mauvis Lussier; recording secretary, Jane Quinn; corresponding secretary Vivian Testa; treasurer, Clotilde O'Rourke; and parliamentarian, Catherine McGarry. After the elections, it was decided that, as an innovation this year, the Newman club would have an installation banquet in honor of the new officers at the Dutch Kitchen the first week in May.

Delegates to the state convention of the National Council of Catholic Women to be held in Jacksonville, April 23-25, will be Rosa Doub, senior delegates, and Grace Mary Webster, junior delegate. Announcements concerning the other convention scheduled for April 27, at the Hotel Ansley in Atlanta, Georgia, included plans for a special bus leaving Tallahassee, April 26. The delegates for this convention of the southeast province of the Federation of College Catholic clubs will be Margaret Roe, senior delegate, and Mauvis Lussier, junior delegate.

Regulations for Easter Vacation to Be Same

College regulations for students going home at Easter will be unchanged this year, according to Miss Maude Flowers, director of residence halls.

Probation will be lifted, and for freshmen and sophomores the Easter holidays will not be counted as a week-end. Students are required to sign up on a regular permission card signed by either a parent or guardian. Arrangements must be made in advance if a student is leaving by a night bus or train, and she must leave directly from her college residence.

Double cuts will be given students leaving early or returning late.

Sport Slants

On The Spot With Sports

The basketball class games will be played Friday afternoon at 4:30, freshmen vs. sophomores and juniors vs. seniors.

The first class-games in tennis must be played by Friday, according to an announcement by Betty Bailey, president of the athletic association.

An F-Club hike, given by the F-goats for the active members will take place Sunday morning at 6:00 o'clock. The girls are planning to hike out to the ravine and have a steak breakfast.

The men who have signed up for the faculty tennis tournament that is to begin next week are as follows: Dr. Paul F. Finner, Dr. William Rogers, Mr. Owen Sellers, Mr. Kenneth Williams, Dr Hugh Waskom, Mr. Ward F. Fletcher, Dr. Raymond Bellamy, Mr. Earl L. Vance, Mr. Oval Harrison, and Dr. Coyle Moore.

The regular play night will take place Friday from 8:00 to 10:30, featuring a real Scotch dance by Betty Beach. The pool will be open from 8:00 to 9:00 o'clock.

Tennis Class Games To Be Played Coming Week

The class games in tennis are scheduled to be played this week, according to Dorothy Lancaster, the director of the games.

In the freshman-junior matches four games of singles and one of doubles will be played. The line-up is as follows: Rebecca West vs. Wynn Tuten, Eileen Robinson vs. Ceil Levy, Evelyn Glazier vs. Nettie Taylor, and Marie Joffre vs. Carolyn Athon; in the doubles, Frances Lewis and Viola Brooks vs. Ceil Levy and Wynn Tuten.

In the sophomore-senior matches the line-up is: Marion Lessey vs. Lucille Fergeson, Mary Clark vs. Charlotte Cameron, Martha Baker vs. Frances Hurlin, and Janice Borton vs. Betty Bailey; in the doubles, Lucile Fergeson and Charlotte Cameron vs. Mary Clark and Janice Borton.

During the week after Easter holidays the winning teams will play each other for the championship and the losing teams will also play against each other.

The following week, the Odds are scheduled to play the Evens.

New Frontier Of Education Is To Develop Citizenship

Training in Character To Displace Philosophy Of Discipline

By ELAINE KLEPPER

Educators of today are evolving a new philosophy of education which displaces the old idea of drill in subject matter and harsh discipline with an idea of character building and of training students for good citizenship. School policies and curricula are based on the philosophy of bringing so called life situations into the classroom, taking into account the physical, mental, moral, spiritual, and religious aspects of the student's life.

Within this century rapid strides have been made toward improving the health and general physical welfare not only of the students but of the entire community in which the school is situated. Public health units, visiting nurses, and house doctors and nurses in the larger and more progressive public schools are tangible evidences of the trend toward a healthier community.

Two or three years ago when the Florida legislature named physical training a "frill" of education and discarded it from the curriculum of the smaller state schools as an economic measure, educators brought out much data showing the folloy of this move. Oranting the loss of health training itself, they pointed out also that the discarding of gaming activities made it harder for teachers to instill habits of good sportsmanship. nI one day on an open baseball field more can be learned concerning leadership, initiative, and good sportsmanship than in hours of classroom lectures.

As for the matter of discipline, there is a marked increase in the number of delinquent students when physical education is taken out of the schools. Many cases arise because the student has had lessened chances of showing off his physical prowess in organized games, in indulging his sense or desire for adventure, and in ridding himself of excess energy. Physical education for this one reason alone is more economical in the long run.

Then comes the mental aspect of the student's life. It is this phase of life in which schools are most actively interested. However, here too, a revolution is going on. Taking into consideration the three mind movement of learning, namely, drill, problem solving and appreciation, we find thet emphasis is changing for disciplinary drill to practical proble msolving and appreciation. For instance, instead of drilling high school students on mere facts of history, the old memoritur process, they are given "contracts" to write in which they must individually work out some of the problems in history so that they can appreciate the economic, political, or cultural trends of civilization and see their true relationship to life. Such "contracts" are designed to give students practice in originality in writing and independence of thought, while more credit is given for extra work and deeper thinking.

Next, the moral side of the student's nature is considered. The term "moral" is used in the sense of community codes, not in the individual, or ethical, sense. A code of morals is determined by the environment in which one lives, and leads one to behave in a socially approved manner. For instance, it is praiseworthy for a Mohammedan to have more than one wife, but such a practice is considered so immoral in the United States thet it is punishable by law. After all, the cultured and educated man is he who knows his environment and adapts himself most readily to it. Such phases of community morals as obedience to law as a means of preserving government, or the doctrine of "freedom under rule," are discussed in the classrooms.

Then we come to the spiritual and religious phases of the student's life. These are the NEW FRONTIERS in education. Though the two concepts are so closely related there is still a slight distinction made. In explanation, it may be said thet one gets spiritual satisfaction from viewing a glowing sunset, listening to the Unfinished Symphony, or looking at a Gothic-towered cathedral of architectural perfection. The minister may at once think of God; the artist notes lines, color, and technique; the layman may receive nothing more than pure emotional satisfaction — but each in his way has a spiritual appreciation of the sunset, the music, and the cathedral. Modern educators feel that students can be taught such appreciation; their problem is how to present and put across their ideas: what sort of program or technique of teaching to follow

The same problem confronts those interested in religious education. Modern educators are concerned with religion as a way of life rather than as a theological creed. But in public schools professors are afraid to touch on the subject. One professor, who is noted for his frankness when speaking on almost any topic in and out of the classroom, admitted that in class he would talk on practically anything, but he conscientiously sidesteps religious topics. Such an admission doesn't seem logical coming from a man of frankness.

But to continue, religious educators are trying to instill the attitude that there is really no fundamental differences in religion among the people of the United States, Protestant, Catholic or Jewish; the difference comes in theology. Does it really mean so much whether we do or do not accept Jesus and the Virgin so long as we live the "good life" according to accepted social codes? These modern religious educators say it doesn't. The teaching of men with such an attitude certainly makes for more cooperation and brotherhood of man than do the rantings of hundreds of gospel-criers each extorting the populace to follow his particular creed.

To work out an effective program of education for inculcating young students with broadened spiritual and religious concepts is a necessary and important task for educational pioneers.

Eligibles Will Enter Swim Meet

"A" Health is Necessary For Speed Events

All students who have the scholarship eligibility for participation in sports are invited to enter the swimming events of the new season which began April 9. The events are 40 yards free style, side stroke for form, standing front dive, plunge, 25 yard free style, breast stroke form, jack knife dive; 25 yard side stroke, crawl form, back dive, 25 yard breast stroke, back stroke form (back crawl), swan dive, resting back form, optional dives, 25 yard back crawl, and relay.

Any stndent wishing to enter is requested to get a practice card from Mrs. Clark at the distribution window and to write her name and college address on the card. "A" health is required for entrance into speed events but a student with a lower grade may enter the form events if her doctor writes a permit on the back of her practice card indicating which and how many events she may enter

Each entree must practice twelve times and must have a guard sign each practice on the card before May 3. Then she must report to Miss Marjorie Mayer either 5:15 or 6:00 p. m. Wednesday, May 1, for a final check-up.

Entrees should meet the class manager at the pool Thursday, April 25, at 5:30 to sign up for the events. Each contestant may enter two speed and any one other events. Diving includes all dives (enter one or all and the sum of points counts toward the winner). Form swimming includes all form strokes (enter all or only one and the highest sum wins).

The first meet will be at Play Nite, May 3, at 9:00; Juniors-Seniors versus Freshmen-Sophomores. The second meet will be held May 4, at 10:30 a. m. The Odd-Even meet will be Saturday, May 11, at 10:30 a. m. The Swan club of the University of Alabama will help officiate at this contest.

Abbey Will Speak On Present Crisis

Dr. Kathryn Abbey will talk on "The Versailles Treaty and the Present Crisis" at an open meeting of the International club in the Augusta Conradi theater Monday night at eight o'clock.

The public is invited to attend the meeting which will be followed by an open forum discussion.

Absent-Minded Student Lacks Dress for Prom

"Insufficient Address" Fails to Deliver SOS Postcard

A post office clerk, unfortunately not being a mental telepathist, caused some harried student to miss wearing a red evening dress, black bag and ear bobs to the recent prom or hop.

A typical college student's post card with the address side of the card blank except for the mail clerk's mark "Insufficient address," and the Tallahassee stamp, found its way to the Flambeau office.

The correspondence side of the card read:

"Dearest Mama,

"Please send my red evening dress if you can by Friday. Send the black bag and the ear bobs.

"How is everybody? I have really been putting out this week.

"Love.

"Elizabeth."

Writer may have the same by calling at the Flambeau office.

Eta Sigma Phi Elects Thistlethwaite Head

Eta Sigma Phi, classic honorary, elected officers for the coming year at its last regular meeting of the year held Thursday evening.

New officers are: president, Mary Etta Thistlewaite, vice-president, Lillian Turlington; secretary, Rebecca Keith; and treasurer, Jessilee Lumpkin.

These officers will be installed this afternoon.

Tomorrow Eta Sigma will hold a meeting to organize a Florida Classical association. A number of their alumnae will be present for the organization meeting, as well as for the Eta Sigma Phi banquet to be given tomorrow evening at 6:00 o'clock at the Three Torches.

Intra-murals Postponed

The inter-mural games in individual sports, which were scheduled to be played Thursday, April 11, have been postponed until the Thursday after Easter holidays.

Summer School Bulletin Ready

Library Science Courses Will Allow Teachers To Meet Needs

The only change of importance in the new summer session bulletin which came out this week is thet of additional hours to be offered in library science if such registration warrants them, according to S. R. Doyle, registrar.

Heretofore only eight hours of library science have been offered in the summer session; this year three additional courses carrying two hours of credit each and making a total of six extra hours will be given.

These courses are offered especially for librarians in accredited high schools throughout the state who wish to meet the standards set up by the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges several years ago. The association gave librarians several years in which to fulfill these requirements, the deadline being set at September, 1935. Librarians who have not taken the specified number of hours by that time will no longer be allowed to continue their work in accredited schools.

Library Hours For Holidays Announced

The library will be open at the following hours during the Easter holidays, according to Miss Louise Richardson, librarian, and the following regulations will be in effect:

Thursday:
8:15-12 a. m.
1:30 4 00 p.m.
Friday:
9:30-12:30 a. m.
7:30- 9.30 p. m.
Saturday:
9·30-12:30 a. m.
Easter Sunday—closed.
Monday:
9:30-12:30 a. m.

On Friday night only the periodical room and the browsing room will be open. The reserve room will be open from 9 30 to 10.30 a. m. after Thursday morning, and reserved books may be borrowed for use outside the library at that hour. They must be returned the following morning at 9·30 to 10:30. Books borrowed Monday are due as usual at 9 00 a. m. Tuesday morning, April 23

From 9:30 to 12:30 each morning the main floor of the library will be open and books may be borrowed as usual. On Thursday reserve books may be borrowed from 11·30 to 12 a. m. and are due Friday at 8.30 to 10:30.

The browsing room will be open all of thtet above hours after Thursday a. m.

New Way Laundry and Dry Cleaners
Tallahassee's Oldest and Largest
"Wear Clean Clothes"
Representative in Lower Bryan Hall
Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 183

New Shipment of Paradise
FOOTWEAR
Just Received at Turner's
YOUR STORE
"Our Styles are the Guide to Smartness" Whites—Combinations—
Newest Styles—
AAAA to B—2½ to 9.
$5.85

Now... the shoe with a
MAGIC SOLE!
AIR STEP
Brownbilt
Distinctively styled shoes for women

$5
Invisible Cushion of Comfort turns hard sidewalks into soft carpets
Smart to look at. Smart to wear. America's most comfortable style shoe A cellular layer in the sole absorbs every jar and jolt.
• Exclusively at Strickland & Riley
Brownbilt Shoe Store
College Ave.

SCIENTIFICALLY CONSTRUCTED
Lassies
PAT. PENDING
THE PANTIES OF MOULDED BODY DESIGN . . . .
That Fit Like Your Skin!

The secret of these LASSIES WONDER PANTIES, lie in the BANDS AND INSERTS OF LASTEX LACE. They fit so snugly — yet so comfortably — that through the most vigorous, active life of sports they will never [illegible] "ride up," or "bump" uncomfortably [illegible] fact, you'll hardly know you have them on! LASSIES may be worn under the sheerest, sleekest frocks — and will never show the slightest bump. You'll buy the first pair for their cool, airy beauty. But YOU'LL WEAR THEM ALWAYS for the thoroughly modern comfort and freedom they give! Open or closed sides. Good Quality Silk. Sizes 15,16,17. The name is LASSIES — the WONDER PANTIES WITH LASTEX LACE.
LINDEN'S FASHION SHOPPE
"Smart Styles for Smart Women"

Something New in CHIFFON COMBINATIONS

mble Suits
Co-Ed
[illegible] hardly does justice
[illegible] of this very smart
[illegible] printed chiffon and [illegible] Ideal to wear
[illegible] into the Spring.
[illegible] the Co-Ed Label
Your Protection
GELBERG'S
[illegible] Plus Economy"

Campus Equestrienne Pursues Unique Trade In Spare Hours

Marie Taylor Initiates Novices in Gentle Art of Riding

"They say it takes nine falls to make a rider," smiled Marie Taylor, who has spent most of the leisure moments in her life on horseback. "The other requirement is to love it," she went on, in giving her criteria for good horsemanship. Indeed, Marie, sophomore at Florida State, has "loved it" so thoroughly that during the past two years she has spent all the time she could possibly snatch from a busy college routine in teaching girls to ride.

A unique trade on a campus overflowing with dormitory beauty specialists, term-paper typers, and tutors of all varieties, Marie's attractive little posters tempting the college girl to "win the blue ribbon" at a horseshow have brought her quite a respectable number of would-be equestriennes as customers. They come in all stages of advancement, Marie says, but most of her pupils have to be taught the fundamentals from the ground up (as well as safely back down again).

There is a definite trend today, according to Marie, back to riding, hunting and the glorious days of the spectacular horse show. Soon all America will once more be a-horseback, she believes. A commerce major here, Marie's eye for business has taught her to grasp the opportunities in collegiate life here.

Marie's career as a horsewoman began at an early age at the home of her aunt, who is a member of the Huntington Valley Hunt club in Philadelphia. As soon as she had mastered the technique taught her in her first riding lessons there, she was allowed to hunt with the club pack and has never missed a hunt occurring during her stays in Philadelphia, since.

When her family moved to Florida, Marie's lessons continued in Miami, and at her present home in Fort Pierce, "Lady," her especial companion and friend, is waiting for her young owner to come home this summer. On her part, Marie looks forward to nothing so much as her daily romps with the horse who is her pal. She and "Lady" often swim together at the beach at low tide, "and the horse enjoys it too," she says.

Marie's first experience as a teacher came at Allegheny, a private camp in West Virginia, several summers ago, when she showed some of her fellow-campers "how she did it." Since then, she has been much in demand as an instructor in horsemanship, and intends to go on with this work in the summers. One of the chief delights of her camping trips to Marie is the horseshow in Hot Springs, Virginia, which closes each summer season. Here she renews, every year, her first vivid thrill in seeing the pride of the "horse country" assembled and put through its paces.

Her training course, which Marie adapts to the individual temperament and skill of each pupil, has developed as the teacher gained in experiences from simple road riding to expert horseshow paces, and the varied knowledge of jumping and hurdling requisite to the follower of the chase. At camp in the summer, she gives lessons in a ring especially designed for the purpose, where her students iron out their difficulties with "posting" and other species of technique under her watchful eye. At Florida State, the open road is her training ground. The students who are put through their paces here under her direction all have the same trouble, she says, in learning to "post." "Knowing how to jog up and down correctly and painlessly is an art that cannot be acquired by concentration," the student instructor avers. "It just comes over you all of a sudden", she laughed.

Throughout her experience as an instructor, Marie has successfully avoided any accidents, either to herself or to her pupils, her only mishap being of the type that a ten-year-old in her training once experienced, when she forgot to give her mount any slack rein to allow it to crop some grass, and tumbled gently over the horse's hungrily stopping head, to the merriment of onlookers.

If the college does not install a course in horsemanship next year, Marie expects to continue her courses. Just now, she can't wait to get home to "Lady."

Mortar Board Investigation Shows Activity

(Continued from page one)

sidered as one unit. As units wa included the following: all student offices, including offices in religious organizations; membership in campus organizations excluding College Government Association, Athletic Association, Y.W.C.A., religious organizations and social sororities; membership on athletic teams; delegates to conventions; and any type of work on a publication. In the case of a few students there seemed to be no record, but the number is negligible.

The freshman class was not included in this survey; if it had been, the statistics would obviously have indicated a much more serious condition of over-centralization. Very few first-year students are active in extra-curricular endeavor, and, as it is the opinion of many persons that this is a desirable condition, the freshman class has been ignored for the purpose of this investigation.

From the data which is tabulated on the following pages, Mortar Board has, after serious deliberation, come to the following conclusions:

1. The campus is not suffering from a condition of over organization. The average of 1.12 activities per student should, in our opinion, be regarded as an approximate minimum for any student above the freshman level.

2. The campus is suffering from a serious condition of over-centralization of activity. Less than half the students above the freshman level participate in extra-curricular activity at all, and one-half the activity is carried on by less than one tenth of the students.

Mortar Board therefore makes the following recommendations as possible remedies for this condition of over-centralization, which we regard as a major problem confronting the campus:

1. That there be a sufficient number of new organizations with voluntary membership set up to offer extre-curricular activity to those girls who have not been elected to office or honored by membership in existing organizations.

2. That there be further freshman guidance aimed at the extra-curricular adjustment of the individual student: that each student be encouraged to discover her one or two outstanding interests or abilities and to concentrate on activity along that line.

3. That the possibility of limiting the number of organization memberships as a part of the point system be investigated.

Respectfully submitted on this the 3rd day of April, 1935.

Signed:

LOUISE ROBERTSON,
Chairman of Investigation
MARION BRANTLEY,
President.

BENNETT'S

75c	BENNETT'S CLUB LUNCHEON	40c

CHOICE OF:

Fried Chicken, Country Style
Tuna Fish Salad with Boiled Egg
Meat Loaf with French Dressing

VEGETABLES:

Fresh Turnips Cream Carrots
Pineapple Salad
Biscuits or Corn Muffins
Banana Pudding

20c Maple Pecan Sundae	10c
20c Frozen Fudge Sundae	15c
15c Double Dip Ice Cream Soda	10c
15c Chocolate Syrup Sundae	10c
20c Chicken Salad Sandwich	15c
20c Peanut Butter Sandwich	15c
Russell McPhail Ice Cream, pt.	25c

Presbyterians Present Easter Play Entitled "Pilgrims of the Way"

An Easter play, "Pilgrims of the Way," will be presented by the Presbyterian Student League in the church auditorium Sunday evening at eight o'clock. Special Easter music will be given by the student choir.

The setting of the play will be laid in a garden in Jerusalem. The cast of characters in the play will be: Janice Borton as Saul of Tarsus; Jane Tombaugh as John Mark; Felicia West as Barnabas; Martha Bishop as Mary, the mother of John Mark; Genevieve Kenley as Rhoda, the maid to Mary; and Edith Taylor as a messenger.

The committee in charge of the stage will be Marjorie Fain, Floy Lenert, Nell Mayes, and Phoebe Messer. Costumes have been designed and made by Dot Godman and Margie Medlin.

Members of the student choir who will take part in the service include: Marian Conn, Martha King, Sara Hethcox, Mary Wylie Klueppelberg, Betty Hampton, Nell Mayes, Adele Barnard, Frances Fabrick, Alma Loudermilk, Maxine Ward, Jean Crago, Anita Mitchell, Barbara and Jane Hubbard, Margie Medlin, Katherine Kyle, Betty Ellen Smith, and Annabelle Larsen.

School of Music Gives Concert Wednesday As Part of Weekly Series

The School of Music continued its series of student recitals Wednesday afternoon with a program including selections on the violin, cello, piano and organ. These student recitals are being given for the joint benefit of the student body and the pupils in the school of music, all of the latter appearing on at least one program during the series.

The program Wednesday included Sonata in G Major, Tartini, Betty Parker, violinist; Lento, Cyril Scott, by Virginia Northcutt; Danse Negre, Cyril Scott, by Gwendolyn O'Berry; Sonata, first movement, Henri Eceles, by Charlotte Veith, celloist; Eroica Sonata, G minor, MacDowell, by Margaret Nickle; Sonata in A major, Corelli by Evelyn Patterson, violinist; Canon, Schumann, Concert Overture, Rogers, by Julia Munroe, organist.

Play Day Held This Weekend

Ten Schools Participate In Various Events At Gymnasium

This week-end marks the county-wide play day in which ten schools of Leon county will participate. The students range from the fourth to the eleventh grades, and adults accompanying the participants are expected to number about one thousand.

In the city students from Leon, Florida high, Sealey Memorial elementary, Caroline Brebard elementary, will take part in the events. Out of city participants will come from Chaires, Woodville, Lake Jackson, Strickland, Fort Branden and Miccosukee.

The morning program will begin at 9 o'clock with a flag raising ceremony and a brief welcome by President Conradi. At 9:30 o'clock in the college auditorium Leon junior high students will debate, after which students of Woodville will stage a one-act play. The Caroline Brevard toy band will play at 10:30 o'clock, and the Fort Braden quartet and the Florida high glee club will sing. A creative writing program sponsored by the Sealey Memorial elementary school will take place at 11 o'clock.

After lunch, which will be served at 11:30 on the grounds near the Physical Education building, a committee will judge handicraft displays on exhibit in the administration building.

Participants will register in front of the gym from 11:30 to 1:00 o'clock on Saturday morning. After registration group-singing and skits by color teams followed by a health pageant at 2:30 o'clock under the auspices of the Leon County Health Unit, will take place. All children may enter the games and contests held between 3:00 and 4 45 o'clock.

After a program for adults from 4:45 to 5 o'clock in the gym, judges will announce the closing awards.

The program is in charge of the Physical Education department, the faculty, and major and minor students, assisted by FERA students and Miss Edna Beatty, recreational director of Leon county, and Dr. L. Graves and Miss Elisabeth Perkins of the Leon health unit.

As the Stork Laughed

What is Your Preference, a Brother or Sister? Elberta Wanted Neither, But the Joke Was Ultimately on Her

By ELBERTA HINSON

That "the doctor finds a baby in a hollow stump and delivers him to your home in his little black bag," I was supposed to believe at the age of nine, and I did—not! For several months I had seen mother quickly hide away dainty little garments in her sewing basket whenever I appeared unexpectedly, so I was not totally ignorant of the coming event, nor was I, the eldest child, especially thrilled over it.

There was the queer odor of chloroform and a hush about the home that early June morning that seemed to make even the youngest, a mere toddler, realize that something unusual had happened. Six little heads could be seen in the back hall peeping at the doctor with his small black bag as he tip-toed his two hundred and ninety pounds out the front door and rattled away in his buggy.

About that time our grandmother, who officiated on all important occasions in our family, called to us from the "company room" door, "Children, come here." We trooped in. Grandmother, large and fat, stood at the foot of the double bed. Beginning with the youngest, she asked each child which he would rather have, "a boy or a girl," if he had the choice of a new baby. One would say, "I want a little boy," another, "a little girl" until she came to me. Although grandmother was usually rather austere, I thought I saw a merry little twinkle in her eyes that morning. With her hands on her hips she propounded, "Now, Elberta, which would you rather have a little sister or a little brother?" I replied very emphatically, "I don't want either one!" At that, it seemed to me the twinkle in her eyes became a laugh. Anyhow, she pulled the cover back from the foot of the bed and behold! Two little heads peeked out.

Everyone had gotten his wish, but me. I took one look and flew as fast as my heels could carry me. At the back of the house on the kitchen steps I sat and cried out my grief. Twins. It meant bondage for the rest of my life! To sit and rock a fretful baby, No! babies now, while my feet fairly ached to be outdoors skipping a rope, or tagging with my brothers at my father's heels up and down the rows as he ploughed, planted, or hoed. It meant getting down on the floor and amusing a crawling baby—No, babies!. I kept forgetting—when I longed with all the strength of my being to be out climbing a tree, finding a bird's nest, or searching for blackberries in the fence corners. It had been bad enough before with only one baby, but now, the wonderful, wonderful things I could see slipping away from me. But there! It was no use, bettering against bars that could not be broken. So, resigning myself to my fate, I dried my eyes, and went slowly into the kitchen to help a neighbor prepare breakfast.

Presently, my father already jubilant over the arrival of his twin babies, came in to tell us, in high glee, that his finest Jersey cow had "found" twin calves during the night. I looked at him in a sort of apathy—"Had all the world been presented with tiwns the night before?"

Cocoanut Grove Theme Featured at Sophomore Dance Saturday Night

The sophomore hop, for which the music was furnished by the University of Florida Clubmen, was held in the college gymnasium Saturday night from 8:30-11:45 o'clock.

Decorations of gilded stars suspended from a dark ceiling, clouds, and green and blue flood lights, operated by Dr. Ralph Bellamy and Dr. Harold Richards, were used to carry out the effect of the famed Cocoanut Grove. Music was played for six program dances interspersed with "breaks."

Features of the entertainment were Mary Jeanne McKay, mistress of ceremonies, who pointed out the who's who present, and the singing of "Believe It, Beloved," by the trio, Martha Lee Wilkerson, Charlotte Veith and Evalyn Patterson.

Student Learns Beauty Treatments

(Continued from page one)

complexion soared. The hitch came when I tried to open the jar of cream. Try as I might, the top remained firmly in contact with the modernistic black and green jar. After ten minutes of useless twisting and turning, I decided to omit this step for the present.

"Follow up the tissue cream with the Egletine Double Strength Astringent. This should be applied with small bits of cotton. Quick pats give the most desirable effects." I can easily see why Madame Egletine is prosperous. The cotton soaked up the Egletine Double Strength Astringent like a German soaks up beer, the only difference being that there weren't any pretzels to go with my astringent. However, after using about half a bottle, my face and neck began to tingle as though someone had thrown a pint of carbolic acid at me. Hastily, I made a dash for my instruction booklet.

"The most important thing to remember in correct make-up is how to apply the rouge. With the tip of the third finger, pat on in small quantities our most becoming shade of paste rouge. It may prove a trifle difficult at first but after several trials, it will be indispensable." How true were those words. The tint was becoming more vivid, the rouge was more than a trifle pasty, it was truly indispensable since I could not even rub it off, and to be perfectly frank, I looked as though I had suddenly developed a violent case of scarlet fever or measles. Never having been in such a state before, I had no idea how to proceed. It was certain that this was not a beautiful skin that I gazed at in the mirror, yet I had faithfully endeavored to carry out all of Madame Egletine's steps to beauty.

Then a sudden thought struck me—powder. Perhaps that would tone down my rather vivid color. Madame Egletine may have been correct when she said it would not cake and would withstand wind, rain, and sun; however, she did not say how one would look after applying it over streaked paste rouge. To make a long story short I looked as though I was ready to turn a few handsprings in a three-ring circus rather than just before embarking upon a night of dining and dancing at an elite hotel.

"It would do no good to use more of Madame Egletine's Water Lily cleansing cream." I thought dolefully. My fate was sealed—I just couldn't go. Trickle, drop, trickle, drop—water in the bath room. That noise had never before or has never since been so welcome. My friends, soap and water, would help me solve my problem. And so they did, for in less than twenty minutes, I looked at least presentable, even though I was not a perfect specimen of "Youth's Bloom."

Minna Dunn is New Freshman Advisor

The senate of College Government Association elected Minna Dunn senior advisor to the freshman class of 1938 at its meeting last week. At the same meeting it elected Betty Hintermister chairman of the College Government auditing committee.

Other business brought before the meeting included transference of $100 from the College Government fund to the recreation fund which will eventually be used for refurnishing and redecorating "Rec" hall.

FLORIDAN DRY CLEANERS
"There's a Difference"
PHONE 811
Madeline Duncan, College, Agt.,
Lower Bryan

When two is company I don't make a crowd
I'm your best friend
I am your Lucky Strike
LUCKY STRIKE "IT'S TOASTED" CIGARETTES
LUCKY STRIKE
LUCKIES USE ONLY THE CENTER LEAVES . . . CENTER LEAVES GIVE YOU THE MILDEST SMOKE
They Taste Better

Never a bitter, undeveloped top leaf in me. Never a grimy, tough bottom leaf. I use only the fragrant, mellow, expensive center leaves . . . the leaves that give you the mildest, best-tasting smoke. I do not irritate your throat. No wonder I'm your best friend.

Copyright 1935, The American Tobacco Company.

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF
RUTH PERSONS .... Editor
ALTHEA SMITH .... Associate Editor
GERTRUDE KUHN .... Managing Editor
MILDRED BOSS .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Martha Baker; Sports, Elaine Klepper; Society, Margaret Lafferty; Exchanges, Virginia Early; Literary Editor Eleanor Williams; Copy Editor, Arline Lockhart; Outside News Editor, Grace Mary Webster.

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Jessie Mead, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty, Nedia McNamara, Sara Beth Davis, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Marjorie Fain, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Ruth Bentley, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell

BUSINESS STAFF
MARY PATTERSON .... Business Manager
JANE GALE .... Advertising Manager
CEIL LEVY .... Circulation Manager
Assistant Business Manager, Lillie McGaire; Assistant Circulation Manager Caroline Adams

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Do We Need a Foreign Student Here?

A drive to bring a foreign student to this campus for a year of study and to send a local student in exchange was begun last week by the Florida State unit of the International Relations clubs sponsored by The Carnegie endowment.

This movement is not an idle one; there are definite purposes behind it—purposes which will ultimately affect every student on this campus in one way or another. At present one fact stands out: Students here can do their parts to prevent future wars by becoming acquainted with the ideals and the tradition of at least one foreign country through direct contact with a young woman from that country, and every student can show her willingness to foster peace by co-operating in this drive.

"What would a foreign student do for this campus?" the skeptical ask. With a foreign exchange student still a thing of the future it is hard to say definitely what benefits we would reap. But to anyone this much is readily apparent—a foreign student would jar this campus out of the provincial belief that no nationality is as good as our own. A foreign student would stimulate the student-body at large to take an active interest in maintaining peace between the two countries involved in the exchange.

International peace has been threatened more than once within the past six months. With war propaganda pouring out from the cinema, the press, and the radio an increasingly hard battle must be waged if peace is to be maintained. The colleges and universities should take their places in that battle now before the crisis of war is upon us. Why should not Florida State college be a leader in this movement towards international understanding? A foreign exchange student is the logical beginning.

Florida Pedagogy Challenges Teachers

Recently the Flambeau cited Florida State College for Women as Exhibit A to disprove a statement to the effect that only non-public agencies made experiments in education.

This week we impale as Exhibit B, the University of Florida at Gainesville, state institution and, may we add, research laboratory for empirical educational methods.

At the present date, through the P. K. Yonge Laboratory school, the College of Education of the University is engaged in an experimental program which may lead to the elimination of the twelfth grade of the high school, except for specialized training.

According to Dr. A. R. Mead, director, the laboratory school curriculum is devised to coincide with the theory that the most valuable work for every student is the salient consideration. Interest is the lodestar guiding the course of the pupil. However, special class room guidance is employed to direct the child who follows his natural interest to the neglect of other salutary training.

"Integrated Curriculum" is the name given to this system of education. Beginning with the kindergarten and continuing through the sixth grade, a program is perpetrated that inducts what is valuable in separate classes into one vast "class" that touches and is touched by what is valuable in life itself. This same program will eventually be applied to the grades beyond the sixth.

With its two state institutions of higher learning experimenting in educational methods, it is patent that Florida has set a premium on efficient education. It is well for college graduates, potential teachers, to know this. Too long has the teaching profession been maligned as a last resort until marriage or, after thirty years, just a last resort with no untils.

The graduate from Florida State College for Women entering the teaching field in Florida will step out into a stage alive with new educational drama, perhaps a mystery drama, for no one knows as yet the final solution. The curtain has fallen on the once staid, museum-like form of pedagogy. Whereas formerly the invitation to teach in Florida had all the elements of a rest-cure, today its elements combine to spell the one word—challenge.

Her Honor, Judge Allen!

Ability and leadership—what an infinite number of adjectives can be used to delineate the illusive qualities of those two words.

And perhaps there is no other one motivating impulse which tends so much to keep youth on its toes striving to reach its goal as the lives of men and women who have efficiently and successfully lived those two qualities which made them tower above their fellowmen.

Just such a person is Miss Florence Allen, the first woman in any country to receive a life appointment as a judge in a court of general jurisdiction. Judge Allen was recently accorded this honor when she was appointed as judge to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Cleveland by President Roosevelt.

Throughout her life Judge Allen has exemplified the qualities of ability and leadership. Naturally endowed with a keen, observing, and inquiring mind, she turned automatically to the legal profession and has made it her life's work. During the years when she was demonstrating her ability through legal apprenticeship, she was developing her leadership as a faithful and tireless member of the Woman's Suffrage party. Here she gained friends and regardless of her own "lack of vaulting ambition" as she puts it, her fellow-workers, "sort of pushed her into running for judge and the successive things have just happened."

However, the results are more of her own making than would appear. Judges and court attendants soon found that she would not "nap" on the bench and that she was remarkably impartial in her decisions. One of her former colleagues on the State Supreme court, Judge W. P. Stephenson, says of her: "There is no court too big for Judge Allen to sit on. She is for the people, she has no natural prejudices that I have ever been able to observe, and she is honest, fearless, and outspoken."

Judge Allen is also identified with the world peace movement, is a lecturer on international law, is vice-president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women, and is one of the two women who have been "mentioned" for president of the United States.

Thus the people of Ohio and America rightly unite to acclaim a woman who through ability and leadership has reached the top, a woman whose life will serve as a beacon to those who wish to achieve greatness, a woman who says, "I hope some other woman will come after me. I want many women to do that."

And now that the seeming barrier between faculty and students is being consistently torn down and a feeling of mutual understanding is being erected in its place why delay starting a similar breaking down of the barrier existing between student government officials and the rest of the students?

The latest advice on how to reduce comes from one of our screen stars. Her method is to stay away from the scales and reduce the appetite instead of running to the scales in between candy bars and sodas to see if any weight has been gained.

With the addition of the nursery school to its educational program Florida State College for Women is now prepared to educate students from the tiny tot stage on up to the granting of a master's degree.

And, have you noticed how easy it is to get by with an unprepared class assignment merely by donning dark glasses and joining the "Dark Eyes chorus"?

Magazine Thumbings

By ELEANOR WILLIAMS

THE PROGRESSIVE TRADITION

By Rexford G. Tugwell

The Atlantic Monthly, April, 1935

The desire to live and achieve within a degree of human dignity is the essence of a national attitude or an American faith that has given expression to our social history three times, Rexford Tugwell, under-secretary of agriculture, says in this article, which was given as a recent address at Union college, Schenectady.

The third affirmation of this purpose was the people's voting as a whole in 1932 for a New Deal, the success of which depends largely on whether or not the people keep their faith and consider characteristic expressions of it in the past in evolving the program of the New Deal.

Tugwell's opinion of our ethical heritage may be described as an invincible determination to get the necessary thing done regardless of the cost, to be let alone and not bothered with details, to disregard basic property rights when they interfere with what we want to do, and to realize and not repeat our mistakes, although we do not admit them.

We can always change our institutions if we keep to our purpose, but we must restore belief and confidence in this purpose in order not to fail as a nation and as a civilization. The New Deal should be the most merciless of revolutions, Tugwell concludes, for we have not individuals to fight but institutions created by men who misread our cultural purpose.

• • • •

WHAT IS PUBLIC BUSINESS?

By Stuart Chase

Current History, April, 1935

Stuart Chase, who is writing a series of articles on the New Deal, of which "Government in Business" was reviewed recently in this column, draws the line in this article between private and public business.

Considering economic activity from the angle of commodities, Chase divides it into three great common groups—that providing the essentials of life, that affording the niceties or luxuries of life, and the natural resources which provide the underlying industries for the first two groups.

Industries which provide for the first and third should be public controlled, Chase believes, and the control of the luxuries left to private enterprise.

From the angle of the functions of public business which the war and the depression have made evident, the grouping is the same. The community has an explicit interest in doing those things which private business does not do, as making provision for education, unemployment, and public sanitation: in maintaining services which, because of losses, private business is abandoning, for instance, agriculture, railroads, an banks; and in conserving natural resources, which private business either wastes or causes an artificial scarcity of in order to make huge profits, for instance, the power companies.

Although many details have to be worked out, Chase see that the program of the New Deal or whatever we put in its place must grow to include every business within these three large groups.

• • • •

DARE THE TEACHER BREATHE?

By Frederick Neltzin

The American Scholar, Spring, 1935

Teachers are pawns to be moved about or discarded at will, Frederick Neltzin, professor of education at the University of North Dakota, concludes after an investigation of 2500 court decisions on public school teachers' contractual relations with school boards.

Besides numerous restrictions and regulations regarding the teacher's dress, habits, political and religious convictions, Neltzin finds laws in two mid-western states which state that the day the teacher does not appear at school she is automatically dismissed, regardless of illness or anything else.

With rural school board members, for the most part, intent on getting a teacher at the lowest price possible and dismissing her without just cause for another, the average professional life of a public school teacher is between three and four years, and Neltzin concludes, a constantly shifting army of ill-prepared youngsters are the mind builders of America.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . By Williams

BEYOND THE COLLEGE GATES

BY DAISY PARKER

WAR or peace? This question is still the theme of European news. The demands of Adolf Hitler as presented to Sir John Simon at the recent Berlin conference are laid bare and do not bring smiles of joy or relief to the faces of European statesmen. Herr Hitler demands for the safety of the peace of Europe—as far as Germany is concerned—an air and land force equal to that of England; a navy thirty-five per cent as large as England's; a nonagression pact signed by all the powers of Europe; a satisfactory settlement of the question of the ownership of the territory of Memel, former German possession, satisfactory settlement being, no doubt, return of Memel to Germany; and a "noninterference" pact in Austria. There is spread this week the seemingly authoritative rumor that France and Russia are soon to sign a pact of mutual military aid.

Meanwhile the dove of peace hovers hopefully over Stresa, Italy, where on Thursday France, England, and Italy are meeting to try to bring about some peaceful solution of the horrible entanglement in which Europe finds itself. Mussolini, who is playing host to this gathering of state dignitaries, is putting aside special funds for the occasion, an exorbitant amount being set aside alone for flowers. Lest an event similar to the King Alexander visit to France occur the Duce, is having Stresa guarded by three thousand soldiers.

Sir Anthony Eden of England, who has done so much that this conference might have success, will be missing from the meeting, illness keeping him in England. The strenuous responsibility and concern put on Sir Anthony in arranging the conference and its issues have overtaxed his heart, and necessitated a month's rest from matters of state. The argument has often been advanced that peace will never come until men can gloriously serve it and die for it if needs be. We hail Sir Anthony as our first peace victim and wish him speedy and complete recovery.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT returns from his brief holiday to find the United States again threatened with a major strike. The rubber industry is threatened with a walk-out because, as employees charge, the employers have not allowed them the right of company elections, as allowed them in legislation passed by the Congress immediately preceding the present one.

"THE ILLUSION that pacts, courts, and international conferences stop the surge toward war long enough ago was laid here," proclaims the Spectator, official organ for the students of Columbia university. The occasion for this vehemence comes with the announcement by the "American League Against War and Fascism" of a strike called in all the eastern universities, today at eleven o'clock when all students may express their conviction that America must not have another war or must not adopt Fascism. This strike is largely engineered by Columbia university students, the chairman of the committee on the strike being twenty-year-old Edwin Bunaway of Columbia. About one hundred thousand students are expected to respond to the strike announcement.

Despite the natural odium that has grown up around anything labeled a "strike" one cannot but admire the intention behind this move on the part of the students who will dare to express their conviction not to fight. Perhaps the only means of outlawing war will be for cannon fodder to say, "We will not be cannon fodder."

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

PRIVATE EXPLOITATION OF THE AIR

A national commission with full powers to control broadcasting and to eliminate radio advertising has been set up in Canada by the government, according to an article, "Is Canada Going Red?" written by Ernest Thomas for the February 15 issue of "Christian Century."

Under the new plan each owner of a receiving set will pay an annual license fee of two dollars. In presenting this measure, Prime Minister Bennett said that there was no other method of insuring that the benefits of radio might come to sparsely settled areas "without regard to class or place." He added, "I believe that there is no government in Canada that does not regret the day that it has parted with some of these natural resources for considerations wholly inadequate, and on terms which do not reflect the principle under which the Crown holds all the natural resources in trust for all the people."

Recognizing that by such processes we have lost much of the land, the forests, and the water, Mr. Bennett said that he could not think "that any government would be warranted in leaving the air to private exploitation and not reserving it for development for the use of the people."

We are prone to agree perfectly with the writer of this article, not only because private enterprise is taking away many of our rights. Why must we have to listen to the qualities of this coffee or that when we don't drink coffee. If we do drink it, then the chances are that we drink the kind we like and all the advertising in the world would not change us.

It is now almost impossible to listen to any radio program without being interrupted evrey five minutes by some announcer extolling the healing remedies of Quicklife, the aid to health.

In Canada tremendous opposition of the most unscrupulous kind emanated from the powerful private interests thus menaced, but the scheme was accepted by Parliament with no official opposition. Why doesn't some individual with the interest of the great American public at heart start a move to banish commercial advertising from radio programs. The air is not for private exploitation.—The Campus Chat.

NO STRIKE HERE

Five so-called peace and religious organisations have called upon the students of American colleges and high schools to strike against war next Friday at 11 a. m. These organizations ask merely that students walk out of classes at the given hour in order to make their stand against war known. "We call upon the progressive and liberal forces on the American campus to take a stand. Our lives are at stake. Strike against war!" That is the cry.

But what would be accomplished

(Continued on page five)

Political Pot-pourri

By GRACE MARY WEBSTER

Amidst a melee of orange-jacketed and blue-jacketed bills, mounds of papers and a steady stream of telegrams the solons of our state, who convened ten days ago for the twenty-fifth session of Florida legislature, meet daily to pass laws which will make for better governmnet.

In the house under a haze of blue smoke, bills are being introduced by the score, and promptly referred to the committees under whose jurisdiction they fall. Speaker Bishop, pacing the length of his platform beneath crossed American flags and George Washington's portrait, puffs at a cigar intermittently and wields a diminutive gavel. Representatives at their desks read the morning news, look over the house calendar, and peruse the morning mail and telegrams from constituents back home. Pages duck in and out of desks with telegrams and messages; the man at the press table types on and on with his noiseless typewriter, interpreting for his newspaper each bill as it is introduced. And still the bill-reader pours out a stream of unintelligible words, raising his voice at rare intervals and then lowering it again to a dull monotone.

A girl in the next seat, much concerned over the lack of attention to the reader says, "Dear me! I'd be so insulted if I were that man." A vote is being taken on a bill which provides for turning back race-track tax money to the county from which it proceeds. As the roll is called for vote each man automatically answers "aye," some not even looking up from their work in order to do so; one man absent-mindedly answers "here" and no one notices the slip. And the public, viewing the legislative process, goes home with a disillusioned feeling because the representatives don't seem interested in their own work, little realizing that all the real process of legislation goes on in committee meetings behind closed doors.

In the senate a more dignified, less noisy and less smoky atmosphere prevails. Senator Hodges, with all the dramatic sense of an actor, aims a pointed finger at some senator and declares "I recognize the senator from 14!" There are fewer newspapers, fewer men reading correspondence and more attention. One man is ready to question anything that comes up, and a genial tolerance for the armed neutrality of two senators is observed. The pages are at rest and everything is more leisurely except the reading of the bills. Here a woman reads the bills at even a higher rate of speed than they are read in the House and a man in the row ahead says in amazement, "That was a remarkable performance." The cal-

(Continued on page six)

On Other Florida Campi

The Non-Fraternity party, a mere babe in arms, pulled a "smoothie" in elections at the University of Florida, taking 13 out of 21 campus-at-large offices. The also-rans were the Progressive-Liberals with the largest fraternity bloc vote in the history of the University.

The campaign was one of the warmest in years with the usual cigar passing, hand shaking, and all night campaign meetings. It seems that the rumpus all began when the Beta Theta Pi's withdrew from the old Students party and lined up with the Progressive-Liberals, changing the balance of the scales of political power. The Students' party collapsed and a dozen political minds at the University built up a winning machine in twelve days which placed its candidates in most of the major offices.

Jack Butler of Miami (N-F) was elected president of the student body, defeating J. B. Patterson. Gordon Moyer of Miami (also N-F) was named vice-president; Hubert Schuct of Sarasota (P-L), secretary-treasurer. Gordon Lovejoy of Gainesville (N-F), chancellor of the honor court; Everett Clay of Miami (N-F) editor of the Alligator; and Walter Sample of Ft. Pierce (N-F), editor of the Seminole.

The student body of the University of Tampa will join tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock in the nation-wide "strike" protesting against war and fascism. The administration is cooperating with the students in the anti-war demonstration.

The nation-wide movement, to be participated in by 150,000 students in many colleges and universities, will continue for 24 hours, terminating Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. However—irony of life—spring holidays at the University of Tampa were scheduled to begin Saturday anyway.

Students at this college would be glad to stage a demonstration next Wednesday afternoon in time to make the afternoon train.

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticisms. Letters should be signed marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the postoffice.

A CHALLENGE

At the convention of the National Student Federation of America to be held in New Orleans today, our brother institution has a rather interesting resolution to present to the assemblage "urging rearmament by the United States, which will in the opinion of the General Staff insure our borders against invasion." It goes on to say that the University of Florida also recommends an endeavor "to impress upon the youth of the United States through college training the eternal preparedness and the ability to violently repel any attempted invasion of our shores, together with diplomatic isolation from the intrigues of other nations, is the surest path to peace."

It is the surest path to war. Put temptation in the way, and some-one is bound to take advantage of it. What is the matter, bo Have you been reading William Randolph Hearst again? The foregoing statement sounds suspiciously like a reporter's assignment for a Hearst paper. Did ever occu to you that peace ca not be gained through the a cation of the violent means suggest. Or are you embryo mi tary officers who would like commission at the end of yo academic education?

You would have the Unit States maintain a positi splendid isolation which for nomic reasons can not last any great period of time or atta any permanency. As long as have our great manufac plants abroad, our great amoun of American capital backing for eign enterprise, and our great nee of certain types of imports cannot maintain such a po Great Britain could better do Also, amicable relations canno attained as long as the tool war are produced and wielde the stupendous degree which imply. Why not work for pe rather than war? Why not to dispel the international distru that nations display rather th to further it?

We of the Florida State C for Women have sent yo opinion in a telegram. We that it is read and that some effect upon your bel ency. Something should ser temper your bellicoseness w little peace and unde based on reason rather tha tion.

(Signed) Edith Po

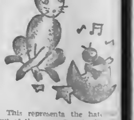
Collegiate Come-Backs



This represents the hat out of the new "Comebacks yumist, who chirps for the time in this issue under the eye of the retiring editor, h scarred and weary. Like a cer well-known cleansing agent haven't scratched the surfac but unlike that well-known ticle, we do not guarantee utterly harmless. Cheep, che

• • • •

With the influx of senator representatives into town, begun to take every man straw hat for a member legislature. And they've be take every girl seeking a p nent theater pass for a girl. Well, we've been eg by our parents and professo thinking that we were lack initiative for a long time but bet our new Easter bonnet legislators won't agree Mo grammed milk tops to all girls who tracked their men and got their passes.

• • • •

To girls looking for a prof marriage, those geologists seem about the best bet: the fellows with the rocks.—ucky Kernel

Geologists are so rare, why hook a garage mechanic? He always have the jack.

• • • •

DUDE'S DICTIONARY

Bronx—A section of Ne York City

Cattle—A pot used for cooking

Colt—What you catch from

(Continued from page five)

The Social Week

Gainesville House Parties Are Weekend Attractions

House parties, sponsored by the University of Florida Inter-fraternity Council, will attract many Florida State students to Gainesville this week-end.

Featuring the activities will be picnics, swimming parties, tea dances, novelty parties, balls and masquerades which will be given at different fraternity houses and the gymnasium. Music for most of these affairs will be played by the Clubmen, an orchestra which is well known on this campus for its ability, having played here both for the junior-senior prom and the sophomore hop.

The week-end was officially begun last night when the opening ball was held in the gymnasium. This was followed by a series of picnics and swimming parties which were given this morning by several of the fraternities.

This afternoon several tea dances will be given and will be supplemented by dinner dancing tonight. The most important affair given tonight will be the L'Apache ball which will take place from 10:00 p. m. to 1:00 a. m

The chief item on the program for Saturday morning and afternoon is the series of novelty parties sponsored by many of the fraternities. Among these are a Come as You Like" dance, a Shipwreck" dance, a "Cabana" dance, and a "kid" party.

Saturday night there will be several balls and one Spanish dance. Those will conclude the planned activities for the week-end.

Among those who are attending the house parties are: Charlotte Pelsang, Virginia Turner, Adelaide Duval, Margaret Ware, Betty Wheeler, Neil St. John, Louise Rogers, Laurabel Hopkins, Jean Tilder, Dorothy Osincup, Viola Taylor, Minna Yockey, Dorothy Ryan, Frances Moore, Esther Bassin, Betty Manning, Virginia Peyton, Pauline Spencer, Pat Given, Jean Gilmer, Marjorie Moore.

Margaret Adkins, Hilda Spradlin, Nina Kirkland, Frances Passmore, Elizabeth Yockey, Mary Shackleford, Edith Merrill Ramseur, Edith Hudleston, Bay Bacon, Mary Baird, Marian Knight, Genie Whiteside, Jean Blount, Jean Lykes, Caroline Oliver, Ethyle Mae Edwards.

Helen Miller, Edith Perkins, Mary Edna Moore, Jo King, Marjorie Nogle, Grace Whitaker, Dot McLean, Frances Thomas, Dorothy Hill, Lilla Parramore, Annette Harris, Jane Grey Stevens, Frances Gates, Alice Dean Mabry, Anne Lee Dunn, Sara Tillman, Betty Perrill, Helen Turnbull, Virginia Rogers, Sue Whitaker, Helen Ayala, Sara Knight, Anne Misell, Anne Bailey, Christine Griffins, Eleanor Fulford, Catherine Wilhelm.

Mary Frances Whisnant, Elizabeth Malone, Lucy Houser, Barbara Hendry, Mary Pollock, Virginia Richards, Emilie Hart, Julia Munroe, Betty Sweet Smith, Olive Towles, Charmian Luffburerw, Elizabeth Whidden, Elizabeth Ann Wortman, Tommie Grace Faircloth, Mary Brandon, Judy Whidden, Mary Lou Moore, Ann Durr, Margie Helvenston, Helen Kibler, Genevieve Wilkins, Katherine Rogers, Mary Elizabeth Ramsey, Kathleen Simpson, Florence Currie, Ethel Mae Shaffer, Betty Parker, Ellen Wiggins, Edith Hays Effinger, Marian Turner, Anita Jones, Grace Groff, Mary Jane Gallemore, Marian Bailey, Spurgeon Fulford, Lou Hill, Mary Elizabeth Halstead, and Kitty Beyer.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert King of Lakeland, and Dorothy Dougan of Cleveland, Ohio, visited Jo King this week.

Spend the Junior Year In Europe

At this interesting moment in world history many American college students would like to have first-hand knowledge of conditions in Europe.

The "Junior Year Abroad," a program of supervised study approved by colleges generally throughout the United States, offers highly recommended students from the departments of French, Spanish, and Italian in accredited American colleges an opptrnuity for a year'e etudy in the countries named below, with full credit toward graduation for the year's work

For men and women:

France (Tours, summer—Paris, regular session)

For women only:

Spain and Italy (Perugia, summer —Florence, regular session)

For detailed information, ask the head of the appropriate department in your own college, or address

THE COMMITTEE ON THE JUNIOR YEAR ABROAD
Institute of International Education—2 West 45th St., N. Y. City.
Why Not Discuss This at Home?

COLLEGE CANENDAR
1935
April 14 to April 20

Sunday—April 14

11:00 a. m. Church services
4:00 p. m. Alpha Chi Omega tea
4:30 p. m. Theta Upsilon tea
7:15 p. m. Y. W. C. A. Vespers

Monday—April 15

5:30 p. m. Orchestra rehearsal
8:00 p. m. Beta Pi Theta meeting
9:00 p. m. Sorority meetings

Tuesday—April 16

11:30 a. m. Convocation—special musical program
5:30 p. m. Freshman tea in Broward club room
8:30 p. m. Orchestra rehearsal

Wednesday—April 17

7:15 p. m. Worship service

Thursday—April 18

11:30 a. m. Beginning of Easter vacation

Tri Sigmas' Banquet To Be Celebration Of Founders' Day

The Sigma Sigme Sigma sorority will celebrate its thirty-seventh Founders' Day with a banquet at the Dutch Kitchen tomorrow night. The toastmistress for this occasion will be Katherine Inglis who will carry out a patriotic theme in the program.

During the course of the banquet a number of toasts will be made. Katharine Inglis will propose a toast to the Founders, Wilma Bistol, a toast to Sigma Sigma Sigma; Sylvia Guito, a toast to Mabel Lee Watson, and Lydia Craig, a toast to the national officers and chairmen. These will be followed by a toast to the active chapters given by Rosenia Meriweather, a toast to the alumnae by Mary Newbold, and one to John Randolph school Library by Maria Gutain.

Attending this affair will be: Kitty Beyer, Wilma Bristol, Lydia Craig, Katherine Inglis, Mildred Johnson, Mary Pichard, Clara Stringfield, Mary Newbold, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bass, Dr. and Mrs. J. V. Knapp, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Proctor, Miss Rachel Gregg, and the sorority patrons and patronesses.

Athletic Association Has Annual Banquet Tomorrow Evening

A feature of the second annual Athletic Association banquet which will be given Saturday night at 7:00 o'clock at the Dutch Kitchen will be the presentation of athletic keys to the members of the old board by Rose Panowski, incoming president.

The skyscraper theme will be carried out in the invitations, place cards and programs. Miss Katherine Montgomery will toast the two faculty members who will not be here next year, Miss Mildred Stewart who is returning to Coumbia for her masters' degree, and Miss Marjorie Mayer who has accepted a position at Colorado State College.

Guests will include members of the old and new athletic boards, all sports managers, class managers and physical education instructors.

The committee in charge of the affair is as follows: invitations, Hazel Royal; placecards, Mildred Emmelhainz; general arrangement, Viola Brooks; program, Frances Hurlin; music, Yvonne Tait: written program and menu, Evelyn L'Abbe; and transportation, Beth Danne.

Theta Upsilon Plans Informal Sunday Afternoon Tea

Members and pledges of the Theta Upsilon sorority will entertain rushees at an informal tea in the sorority house Sunday afternoon.

The house will be decorated with bowls of sweet peas and cornflowers placed on tables throughout the rooms. Refreshments of tea and cookies will be served.

Those who will be hostesses at this affair are Marcia Buchanan, Helen Evans, Johnny Hardee, Virginia Tucker, Lillian Trotter, Anne Donnell, Margaret Neff, Neita Wright, Gertrude Tomkies, and Barbara Greene.

When You Think
of
Cleaning, Dyeing and Alterations
Think of the

Central Cleaners
"Your Patronage is Our Pleasure"

Personal Mention

Betty Bradford visited relatives and friends in Atlanta this past week-end.

Betty Ann Graham will leave today for Tampa to spend the Easter holidays with her family.

Elinor Payne spent last weekend in Panama City with friends.

Adelaide Duval was in Ocala last week visiting friends.

Ellen Moore spent last week-end in Jacksonville and the balance of the week in Orlando where she was detained because of illness.

Evelyn Ballard left yesterday for Miami to spend the week-end with her parents.

Dorothy Watson will visit her family in Jacksonville this week-end.

B. Feinberg of Lake Wales is spending a few days here with his daughter, Ruth.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Kramer of Jacksonville visited their daughter, Clara, this week.

Mrs. M. H. Mabry from Tampa is spending a few days at the Kappa Delta house visiting her daughter Alice Dean.

Margaret Thomas, a Kappa Alpha Theta alumna from Gainesville, spent a few days at the sorority house on College avenue this week.

Evelyn Marks, an Alpha Omicron Pi alumna from St. Petersburg visited here last week-end at the sorority house on Park street.

Elizabeth Simpson and Clara Lankrodd will go to Atlanta this week-end to visit friends.

Mrs. Charline Philbrook Richardson, of the class of '33, was a visitor on the campus for a short time Wednesday. Charline has been doing public accounting with a certified firm in Wniston-Salem, North Carolina, since her graduation. Last Saturday she was marreid to R. R. Ricahrdson of the same office, but who is now being transferred to similar work in Mobile, Alabama.

Fenton Woodward will spend this week-end in Quincy with friends.

Ola Deare Vickers has gone to Palatka to spend the week-end.

Mrs. J. M. Franklin, the province president of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority has been visiting at the sorority house on Pensacola avenue during the past week.

Evelyn Hanshaw is expected as a guest at the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority house this week-end.

C. T. Hoffman returned to Miami Wednesday, after a short business trip in Tallahassee. While here Mr. Hoffman visited his daughter, Dorothy.

Mildred Cline left yesterday to spend the Easter holidays in Atlanta with friends and relatives.

Rosalyn Daum left yesterday for Miami where she will spend the Easter holidays with her parents.

Cotterills Entertain History Classes On Outing Saturday

Last Saturday Dr. and Mrs. Robert S. Cotterill chaperoned the classes in frontier and southern history on a day'e outing at St. Marks. The purpose of the trip was to allow the students to view the fort and other historic surroundings.

At noon the party enjoyed a picnic lunch on the banks of the Wakulla river.

Those who attended were: Mrs. G. L. Diffenbaugh, Mrs. Boyd, Daisy Parker, Gladys Folsom, Amorette Bullard, Goldie Lewinsky, Agnes Goss, Nell Ward Mayes, Bessie Ruth Falk, Elizabeth Brown, Ruth Rainholt, Sadie Matthews, Rebecca Keith, Helen Schweigart, Sara Maxwell, Alice Fletcher, Jane McCown, Dorothy Shaw, Agnes Campbell, Mary Dunn, Lurline Smith, Mary K. Williams, Betty Kimball and Rosalind Parker.

BETA PHI ALPHA HONORS MISS MAYER, MRS. PALMER AT FORMAL RECEPTION

Beta Phi Alpha sorority will be hostess tonight at a formal reception in honor of Mrs. Pasco Palmer, sorority chaperon, and Miss Marjorie Mayer, faculty adviser. This affair will be given at the Beta Phi Alpha house from eight to ten p. m.

Guests will be met at the door by Doris Seals and Margaret Nickle. The receiving line will consist of the honorees, Miss Mayer and Mrs. Palmer, Dr. Hazel Stevenson, and Genevieve Crowley, president.

The reception rooms will be opened en suite and will be decorated with bowls of spring flowers carrying out a color motif of green and gold. Refreshments of sandwiches, nuts and punch will be served. Dr. Eleanor Valentine and Miss Mildred Stewart will preside at the punch bowl.

The guest list will include members of the other sororities on the campus, administrative officers, faculty members and their wives. Other guests include: Mr. and Mrs. C. M. McCall and Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Greene of Monticello, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Campbell, Mrs. Esther Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Greene, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd, and Mrs. Edwards of Quincy, Dr. and Mrs. R. F. Godard, Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Davis, of Quincy, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Tharpe.

Miss Alma Tharpe, Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis, Mrs. Bryan Page, Miss Elizabeth Love, Mrs. J. F. Gibson, Mrs. Rosabel Gilliland, Mrs. Josephine Levy, Mrs. Pauline Cogart, Mrs. D. F. Lanier, Mrs. Agnes Perkins, Mrs. Mary Bland, Miss Kate DeMilly, Mrs. D. D. Marshall, Miss Rhea Scott, Mrs. Loula Sikes, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Timberlake, Mrs. Scott, Mrs. McKay, and Miss Margaret Campbell.

ALPHA CHI OMEGA WILL COMPLIMENT MIAMI VISITORS WITH INFORMAL TEA

Members and pledges of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority will entertain at an informal tea, Sunday afternoon, at the sorority house on Park street, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Witters of Miami. Mrs. Witters was formerly Mary Alice Cosper, graduate of last year and Alpha Chi alumna.

The house will be decorated with bowls of spring flowers. Refreshments of tea and cookies will be served.

Assisting in the hospitalities will be Yvette Breaux, Nita Buchanan, Betty Brooks, Linna Cheney, Irene Collins, Carolina DeMontigne, Mary Catherine Drennan, Polly Flint, Pat Foster, Margaret Graham, Rosemary Hamly, Mary Key, Harriet Lawrence, Dorothy Leach, Annabelle Linger, Sara Mikell, Margaret Murray, Kay Sands, Lillian Shulte, Edith Toffaletti, Betty Wheeler, Martha Wolliston, Narcissa Leland, Beverly Brown, Elizabeth Carter, Helen Cate, Lurline Goodman, Edwina Hamilton, Marie Spurlock, Cora Cheney, Hazel Bennett, Helen Cordes, Mollie Holden, Adelaide Jones, Frances Mock, Mildred Seekins, Virginia Toffaletti, and Bertha Veith.

A number of Mrs. Witters' friends have been invited to call during the afternoon.

Contemporary Student Thought

(Continued from page four)

if the students merely walked out of their classes and said, "We are against war?" Not one thing. Nearly everyone who has any common sense is against war. We certainly are, and we are willing to do almost anything to avert another war. We believe in peace at any price.

If these organizations that are sponsoring this strike would encourage teachers to lecture against war at that hour, to send recognized peace leaders out to the colleges and hold orderly assemblies to inform the student of his responsibility they would be doing a great good and we would support them one hundred per cent. But just to have students walk out of their classes at a certain hour of the day is stupid.

This newspaper has over and over again preached the necessity of peace, and urged students to consider the futility and the wrongness of war. We have tried to keep our feet on the ground when writing of such matters. We have tried not to become connected with radical peace organizations, for we believe that they do more harm than good.

Instead of calming the waters, as all peace organizations should do, such groups as these sponsoring the strike are stirring up discord and conflict. That is fighting fire with fire. It is using the same tactics for peace thet Hearst uses for war.—Crimson White.

Mrs. Grace Cogger Carlson, national vice-president of Alpha Xi Delta who visited at the Alpha Omega chapter here this week, left yesterday to attend the Alpha Xi Delta province convention in Atlanta. Mrs. Carlton was accompanied by Althea Smith and Elisabeth Filer.

Sivyer, Meador Joint Hostesses at Tea Party Tuesday

Miss Henrietta Sivyer and Miss Sara D. Meador will continue the series of faculty-freshman teas next Tuesday afternoon from 5:30 to 6:30 in Broward club room.

Twenty freshmen have received invitations to attend. They are: Constance Marshall, Mary Kirkpatrick, Florence Kerr, Gertrude Hastings, Lucille Williams, Margaret Adkins, Margaret Alford, Christine Walden, Blanche White, Emma Bradford, Helene Cordes, Isabel Harden, Katherine Hartsfield, Gertrude Hastings, Mae Whitten, Hazel Myrick, Mrs. D. C. Palmer, Dorothy Phillips, Raymondine Ponce, and Evelyn Robson.

German Club Members Have Easter Party

Das program der neuen mitgliederinnen or the beginers' program sponsored each year by new members of the German club in honor of old membere was given yesterday afternoon in Broward club room.

The program for the afternoon included poems, stories, and songs by the new members. After the proram an easter egg hunt was held in the club room with Mary Carson winning the prize for finding the most eggs.

The program was as follows: Easter Customs in Germany, Betty Beach; Eulenspiegel lehrt einen Esel, Mary Carson; Mozart, Virginia Northcutt; Treue Liebe, ein Lied, Eleanor Marchman, Miriam Stein, and Marjorie DeWitt with Gertrude Kuhn accompanying them at the piano; Ein Gesprach swischen Mutter and Tochter, Qwendolyn O'Berry and Betty Hamilton; Mendelssohn and Friedrich der Grosse, Charlotte Kinzie; Der Osterhase (eine Geschishte), Miriam Stein; Eulenspiegel backt Eulen und Affen, Ruth Feinberg; Du, du liegst mir im Herzen by some trio; Zu Ostern, ein Gedisht, Bertha Stulpner, Ostergedicht, Mary Smith, and Erfrischungen.

Those in attendance at this meeting besides those on the program were Miss Myrtle Dolbee, faculty sponsor of the German Mary Wing, secretary, Ida Engel, club, Katherine Blood, president, Florence Jennings, Margaret Kader, Marjorie Harris, Sarah Beth Davis and Hazel Bowman.

Be Sure to Get That Birthday or Greeting Card
at
THE GIFT SHOP
"Mrs. Fitzgerald's"
So. Monroe St.

SUPERIOR
Dry Cleaners and Dyers
"SUPERIOR SERVICE SELLS CLEANING"
SILKS AND FANCIES OUR SPECIALTY
All Garments Insured Against Fire and Theft
308½ S. Monroe - Telephone 216

Alpha Delta Pi Honors Mrs. J. N. Franklin At Tea Tuesday

Iota chapter of Alpha Delta Pi gave a tea Tuesday afternoon honoring its province president, Mrs. J. N. Franklin, of Baxley, Ga., who is making her annual visit to the chapter.

The house was decorated with spring flowers. Mrs. Fred Moor, Mrs. Frank Shaw, Mrs. Jack Simmons, and Mrs. R. Rice presided at the two punch bowls in the dining room which were banked with asparagus fern and rosebuds.

In the receiving line were Audrey Smith, president, Susan Palmer, retiring president, Mrs. J. N. Franklin, honoree, Mrs. Arthur Williams, Miss Lucy Lester, faculty advisor, and Mrs. J. N. Sikes, house mother. All wore corsages of rosebuds and lilies of the valley

Members of the sorority were assisted in entertaining by Mrs. C. F. Waller, Mrs. Frank Coles, Mrs. C. A. Thornton, Mrs. LeRoy Willis. More than 300 guests called during the afternoon.

Collegiate Come-Backs

(Continued from page four)

sitting in a draft.
Corrall—A sort of shell.
Cowboy—A bull.
Heifer—A gentle breeze.
Mare—The head of a town.
Ox—To question.
Ranch—A sort of tool.
Rodeo—Used for listening to broadcasting stations.
—Exchange.

• • • •

Fashion note: The "nature in the raw" motif will be absent in the dress of the well-dressed F. S. C. W. miss while the legislature is in town. For those who have the good of the legislators at heart and wish to keep from distracting the poor dears from their tedious tasks, we suggest blinders and a veil.

• • • •

Our nomination for the most energetic boot-licker (dirty-noser) on campus is the "A"—aspirant we saw inserting a rose in the lapel of a certain Shakespeare professor after class Monday. If said young damsel does not wish her name disclosed in this colyum —O! Sister, you'd better pin a rose on ME!

• • • •

"Imagine the embarrassment of one of our freshmen when she walked downstairs to find she had a date with a stranger," says the Drexel Triangle. Huh! Imagine the surprise of some of our freshmen if they ever walked downstairs and found they had a date with someone they knew. Well considering the pulchritude of some of our Tallahassee specimens, maybe it's a good thing that most of them are blind dates

Which reminds us that the students of Shortridge High school of Indianapolis recently held an "Uglyman dance," at which a prize of three bucks was awarded to the ugliest mug present. It'e not the looks we mind so much, but we do think that a consolation prize should be awarded the girl who snatched deepest into the cradle at the Sophomore Baby Parade.

• • • •

There are smiles denoting dumbness,
There are smiles where knowledge fails,
There are smiles that show the mind is vacant,
And the babe contents himself with wails.
There are smiles that are devoid of meaning,
There are smiles when nothing else remains,
But the co-ed with a smile is favored
To the one who has nought but brains.
—Log.

Elizabeth Steffee of Kissimmee, graduate of 1932, spent last week-end here with her sister, Mary Steffee Degtoff, and with Mrs. J. Chapman of Los Robles, also a graduate of 1932.

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

All Merchandise
REDUCED FOR EASTER
Special to College Girls.
MAE'S SHOP

ANNUAL JOURNALISTIC BANQUET HELD TUESDAY EVENING AT FLORIDAN HOTEL

The annual Flambeau banquet, the outstanding formal social event given each year for the staff and reporters, was held last Tuesday night at the Floridan hotel. At this time the business and editorial staffs that have been appointed to serve next year were announced.

A unique and original program arranged by Betty Ellen Smith, toastmistress, followed the banquet. A welcome to the guests given by the toastmistress under the title "Welcome to the Visiting Baseball Team" was followed by a toast to the old staff. The "Departing Clergymen," proposed by "a member of the congregation," Grace Mary Webster. Edna Hoffman then toasted the new staff in a short talk entitled "Congratulations to the Owner on the Opening of a New Restaurant."

An enlightening address was then rendered by Dr. Harold Richards in which he traced the history of the "Charity Bazaar in World Literature" from the time of the old Chinese writer Lee Po, up to the time of the jemorea trilogy, O'Henry, O. O. McIntyre and O. Rare Ben Johnson." In the famous quotation, "The charity bazaar, the charity bazaar, Hi Ho, the charity bazaar," Mr. Richards admitted that the nub of the whole thing lay in the "Hi Ho."

In an interesting address on "Twenty Years of Progress Exposition," Earl L. Vance commented upon the growth of the Flambeau for the last twenty years.

The highlight of the evening was the awarding of the Flambeau keys and the announcement of the new editorial and business staffs. Barbara Garfunkel, outgoing editor, acted in the capacity of "scout mistress" and presented five flags, or keys, of recognition for faithful service to the following "girl scouts": Nedra McNamera, Carol Farabee, Hazel Bowman, Ruth Persons and Martha Baker.

Ruth Persons, new editor, and Mary Patterson, new business-manager, then announced their staffs as follows: news editor, Hazel Bowman; feature editor, Martha Baker; literary editor, Eleanor Williams; society editor, Margaret Claire Lafferty; sports editor, Elaine Klepper; outside newe editor, Grace Mary Webster; exchange editor, Virginia Early; copy editor, Arline Gray Lockhart; assistant business manager, Lillie McGuire; advertising manager, Jane Gale; circulation manager, Ceil Levy; and assistant circulation manager, Grace Caroline Adams.

The committee in charge of the banquet was: chairman, Barbara Garfunkel; programs, Edna Hoffman; toastmistress, Betty Ellen Smith; and decorations, Melvyne Wahnish and Mildred Boss.

The members of the faculty and students who attended the banquet are: Dr. E. L. Conradi, Miss Louise Conradi, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. G. L. Diffenbaugh, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Kellum, Mr. and Mrs Leslie, Miss Maude Flowers, Mr. and Mrs. J. Kilgore, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Tapers, Mr. Perkins, Miss Elizabeth G. Andrews, Mr. Ben J. Grant, Mr. and Mrs. West, Miss Rowena Longmire.

Gertrude Kuhn, Ruth Persons, Barbara Garfunkel, Mary Elisabeth Cooley, Eleanor Williams, Claire Williams, Nedra McNamara, Hazel Bowman, Margaret Claire Lafferty, Melvyne Wahnish, Martha Baker, Carol Farabee, Althea Smith, Blaine Klepper, Clotilde O'Rourke, Grace Mary Webster, Arline Gray Lockhart, Ethyle Mae Edwards, Anne Donnell, Mildred Boss, Jo Douglas, Mary Patterson, Virginia Early, Louise Robertson, Sara Rutledge, Edna Hoffman, Edith Patterson, Ceil Levy, Lil McGuire, Jane Gale, Grace Caroline Adams, Virginia Rogers, Daisy Parker, Edith Hobson, and Betty Ellen Smith.

Mrs. Gordon Witters will spend the week-end here as a guest of the Alpha Chi Omega's. Mrs. Witters was formerly Mary Alice Cosper, a graduate of last year.

Barnett's
COTY FLORAL PERFUMES
ANNOUNCE Spring
. . . Just as definitely as the first crocus, Coty floral fragrances are a sure sign of Spring! As a special value, eight of Coty's loveliest perfume replicas of garden flowers are now presented in a yellow-mimosa "print" box, in bright new flacons that represent a double value in perfume. Two sizes, ½ oz.—$1.10 and 1 oz.—$2.00!
HELIOTROPE
VIOLETTE POURPRE
LA JACEE
L'OEILLET FRANCE (Carnation)
LA ROSE JACQUEMINOT
LILAS POURPRE
IRIS
MUGUET (Lily of the Valley)

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Claudette Colbert - Joel McCrea - Joan Bennett
in
"PRIVATE WORLDS"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Ruby Keeler and Al Jolson
in
"GO INTO YOUR DANCE"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Margaret Sullivan and Frank Morgan
in
"THE GOOD FAIRY"
THURSDAY
Joan Blondell
in
"THE TRAVELING SALESLADY"
—ALSO—
"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT"
RITZ THEATRE
SATURDAY
BUCK JONES in "CRIMSON TRAIL"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
"PRIVATE WORLDS"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
"GO INTO YOUR DANCE"

Shooting Germans With Curtain Rod Begins Patriotism in Student's Life

Student Believes World Needs More Active Peace Patriots

By GERTRUDE KUHN

My first burst of patriotism came when I was four years old. I still have a vivid recollection of the time when the little neighbor girl and I took the curtain rods which were in the corner of the room and played "shoot the Germans." I also remember how very much dismayed I was when my brother came into the room and told me that she and my father were Germans. I was puzzled. My kindergarten teacher had told me that all Germans were bad and wicked people and I knew that my mother and father were not bad. I just couldn't understand. I had pictured the Germans big and terrible-looking like the giants in the fairy tales who ate children.

The next recollection I have of being a patriot was when I toddled up to the front of the room in the first grade, saluted the flag in the corner with my chubby hand, and repeated the Pledge of Allegiance in a childish voice. I knew that that flag was something dear from the serious and awed tone which the teacher used when she talked about it. I also knew that I must never let it touch the ground or something terrible would happen to me. What the flag stood for or what the Pledge of Allegiance meant, I had no idea. I think that primary reason for my liking the flag at that time was that the colors appealed to me.

From that time on I do not remember any definite incidents in the development of my patriotism. As I look back on my grammar school days I remember that I just literally devoured the American histories placed in my hands. No matter how little I knew of any other subject, I always made an A in history. In the summertime I would take my mouldy history out of the closet and read certain episodes over and over again. I learned all the battles and generals by heart. Many times I would prop up my chin with my arms and relive the Boston Tea Party and Washington crossing the Delaware. I knew that my country, the United States of America, was the greatest country in the world and because we were always in the right, we always won the wars.

I will never forget how horrified I was when I found some Italian children in Chicago using the American flag as a rug on the ground. I tried so hard to explain to them why they mustn't use that flag for a rug. But they didn't understand English very well and my pleading carried no weight. I wanted to take the flag and burn it because it had touched the ground, but when I started to pick it up scowls appeared on the faces of the children and having the odds six to one against me, I decided I had better leave. I ran home and told my uncle about it. He smiled knowingly and patted my head, saying "Never mind."

As I went through high school I began to realize that perhaps in some cases my country could be wrong, but I would not have admitted my thoughts to anyone. I did not think much about the matter for I had no direct contact with any of the political and economic disturbances. I still loved my history with its battles and generals. War was still glorious and an opportunity for heroism.

And then came college and disillusionment. The disillusionment did not come suddenly, but extended over a period of two years. I began to absorb gradually some of the material taught in my courses and to read articles in the better magazines. Slowly as I awakened I saw that the political and judicial systems in America were corrupt and inferior to those in Europe; I realized that we had entered the World war not to save democracy but because many wealthy Americans had lands and money in Europe which needed protection; I came in contact with some of the people who have bitter feelings against the United States for her interfering foreign policy; and I learned that in many ways England excelled America.

Concurrent with these revelations I began to see war as it is with all of its horrors and the suffering and despair which follow in its wake. This fact was more forcibly borne home to me when I saw a boy mangled to death before my very eyes in an accident. I realized what war must be like. I began to hope that the peace and disarmament conferences would accomplish something and make war impossible. Everytime I heard someone say that war in Europe was inevitable and only a matter of a few hours I felt a contraction near my heart. I could not and cannot bear the thought of having another war and seeing the people I know and love being killed or worse than that, injured or maimed for life. So I became a peace advocate.

Thus I have reached the other extreme. All my ideals and ideas have changed. They are no longer founded on the distorted narratives found in history books and stories told by my teachers, but on hard and concrete facts. My patriotism has not changed, but it has reached another stage of development.

I have not told this evolution in my life just to be writing. I feel that the experiences which I have related are average experiences in most respects and that many members of my generation in every country have gone through these same stages and feel the same way. And is such an evolution necessary? I feel that it is not. If we are going to have the word internationalism become a fact and not a dream, we must take definite steps in that direction beside the numerous international conferences held each year. Each nation must begin this work at home on a small scale among her own people.

And the most logical place to begin the project is among the younger generations in the schools. Instead of giving those children histories which are in reality war anthologies, we should give them histories which emphasize the industrial, inventive, and artistic development which is taking place and which is closely connected with that of other countries. The scientist and the inventor should be pleyed up above the military and naval heroes. All descriptions of war should be given in bare facts and as truthfully as possible.

Patriotism should be taught but in an entirely different manner. Patriotism today is associated mainly with military prowess and heroism in time of war. This must be changed before we can have internationalism. Apropos of this, Chief Justice Hughes once said, "We need patriotism in time of peace even more than in war. We need patriotism in finance, in the conduct of business and in rendering loyal obedience to law and order." Our patriotism must take on an internationalistic aspect. We can be just as loyal to our community, state, and nation, but we must not be so obsessed with this loyalty that we cannot realize that we also are liable to make mistakes and perhaps the other "fellow" is right, and that we cannot realize that he has the same emotions and feelings and patriotism that we have.

The progress toward the worthy goal of internationalism has been slow. We need more peace advocates who are willing to put their words and theories into action and who are willing to experiment as to which is the better way to forward this cause. We need teachers who will teach true patriotism and tolerance to the generation which as yet has not become prejudiced one way or the other and who through correct guidance will make the dreams of their parents become an actuality.

Florida High To Give Show

"Peggy and the Pirate" Is Name of Operetta Here Tonight

The Florida high school will present its annual operetta in the college auditorium tonight at 8:15. The name of the production this year is "Peggy and the Pirates," a fast moving story in two acts with lyrics and libretto written by Goeffrey O'Hara.

Most of the action takes place on the island of Pandora where Mr. Mayfield takes a party of his daughter's friends. The island, which is open for homestead claims, is desired by Mr. Mayfield to be developed into a summer resort. Two strange men, McGinniss and Gassaway contrive a plot to claim the island and to sell it to Mr. Mayfield.

In the last of the first act finding out that Mayfield intends to leave immediately for the island, they plan to catch the earliest boat and beat him there.

Meanwhile, Don, who is in love with Mayfield's daughter, Peggy, discovers that she wants a hero for a husband and immediately tries to rise to the occasion. He is helped by Bill, who suggests a plan whereby he and the rest of the boys will precede Mr. Mayfield and the ladies to the island, disguise themselves as pirates, and pretend to kidnap Peggy and the ladies when they arrive. In the meanwhile, Don will look for his chance to become a hero by foiling the pirates. Bill explains his plan to the boys, and it is approved.

At the opening of the second act, the girls and Mrs. Mayfield are seen on the beach of the island with Don and Mr. Mayfield out looking over the island.

Don comes on the scene in time to propose to Peggy again. This time, however, his proposal is not a complete failure, because he succeeds in making Peggy promise that she will marry him when he has proved himself a hero.

In order to get all the details of the "kidnaping" clear, Bill and his gang have a last-minute talk with Don. Then they hide in the bushes to await their chance to stage the fake kidnaping. Before hiding, however, they put Bingo, a colored porter on guard with a gun.

When the ladies reappear, the "pirates" rush to the attack, Bill seizing Peggy. Hearing Peggy's calls for help, Don rushes in to carry out his part of the plot.

From this point on, a startling series of happenings contribute further to make this operetta one of the most interesting ever staged by the school.

The lyrics and libretto of the operetta were written by Goeffrey O'Hara, one of America's foremost operetta composers. The production includes quite a few solo, ensemble, and trio numbers which are very ably presented by the principals and the chorus.

The cast is composed of Edwin S. Yates as Don; C. D. Williams as Bill, Clara Trushin as Winnie, Betty Dale Miller as Peggy, Joe Demetree as Mr. Mayfield, Catherine Burgess as Mrs. Mayfield, Joe Davis Lowrie as Bingo. Due to the illness of Hardy Noland, Irene Bannerman will take her place in the cast as Jane Fisher. Other members of the cast are Bill Rickards as Gassaway, and David Forrester as McGinniss.

The choruses include Alberta Lloyd, Davison Phillips, Althea Lloyd, Theron Owen, Harriett Kent, Glenn Terrell, Irene Bannerman, Jack Eixway, Virginia Williams, Cecil Levy, Ruth Hawes, Frank Linzy, Mary Charles Pendley, Tony Diffenbaugh, Margaret Salley, Bill Alfriend, Frances Joe Culley, Carolyn Inman, Connia McCann, Ruth Terrell, Jane Reagin, Betty Fendley, Gatherine Philips, Jeanne Eyman, Mary Armes, Mary Rhame, Elizabeth Rogers, Anna Bess Smith, Frances Brooks, Sally Rivers, Evelyn Ann Doyle, and Frances Russell.

Songs and dialogue are under the direction of Mrs. Cecil Strong, director of the Florida High music department. Miss Mary Settle is in charge of all dances.

Other members of the production staff are Edith Toffaletti, Jean Noland, Elsie Parker, Mary Whirnant, Clairnelle O'Steen, Ellen Johnson, Rosalie McDonald, and Joe Demetree.

The Augusta Conradi theater orchestra, directed by Owen Sellers, will furnish music before the performance starts and between acts.

Owen F. Sellers Discovers He's Missed Calling

College Celloist Should Have Been a Fireman

"The winner of the $100.00 at Bank night tonight is Mr.- Mr. Owen - Mr. Owen - how many of you men here have the first name, Owen?" Still unconcernedly the college celloist held the baby while the announcer continued, "Mr. Owen F. Sellars."

Hastily thrusting the unoffending infant into the arms of a stander-by Mr. Sellars attempted to make a center-rush for the theatere door. To a casual onlooker it seemed that his coat and the child had become inextracably mixed. However, in the manner of a crab pulling off his own foot when caught, Mr. Sellars stripped out of the hampering garment and, hair streaming, made a B-line dive through the multitude. What a priceless treasure he would make at a bargain-sale!

Political Pot-pourri

(Continued from page four)

endar is cleared ahead of time and the senate adjourns early.

Out in the hall the lean and hungry lobbyists wait and watch in groups. The anti-chain store lobbyists wear orange colored badges; the Municipality League lobbyists look anxious; the pro-sales tax and bond house lobbyists are there too. As a senator or representative emerges a lobby group descends upon him, takes him off to one side and starts to work. The floor is strewn with pamphlets labeled "What the Sales Tax Will Do to Florida" or "Why Chain-stores Should be Done Away With."

Perhaps the biggest question before the legislature right now is that of financing schools. Two plans have been suggested in opposition to Governor Sholtz's plan of making an "appropriation of $10,500,000 for public schools by re-allocating the gasoline taxes now used to retire county bonds, or by enacting a three per cent general sales tax." The first opposition plan, suggested by Senator Tillman of Tampa, was opposed to the use of tax money given to retire county bonds and suggested instead taking that part of the gasoline tax which is now going into the general treasury. The second opposition plan, introduced by Senator Beacham of West Palm Beach, provided for cutting the gasoline tax from seven to five cents and giving the schools four-fifths of that money.

Sholts also suggested in his message that automobile license tags be reduced to a flat sum of $5 and $10. In regard to the liquor problem he suggested that Florida allow private business to handle liquor, rather than have a state system of dispensation. He also recommended a plan for having free textbooks for all the children in the public schools, a project which would cost $500,000.

Yesterday and the day before two different sales tax bills were introduced in the house, one to raise about seven million dollars and the other to raise the total amount suggested by Sholtz for public schools, ten million dollars. The first introduced provides for a uniform three per cent tax on tangible articles for personal consumption and use, and on amusements and real estate sales. The second, introduced by Larson of Clay county, calls for a three per cent tax on all commodities sold at retail, on real and personal property and on amusements. The only items exempted would be insurance and gasoline which are already exempted. This plan is still not the one Governor Sholtz recommneded as an alternate method of school finance. A third plan is expected soon.

The Florida Recovery act, commonly known as the anti-chain store bill, has brought scores of independent merchants to Tallahassee "to save our businesses." One enterprising representative tried to get the government to furnish tents "for 800 lobbyists coming to urge passage of the bill to abolish chain stores," but the state refused.

The question of pensions has occupied much legislative time this year. The senate judicial committee to whom all bills introduced must be referred to investigate their constitutionality, blocked this problem by holding that such measures would be unconstitutional because of a provision in Florida's basic law which says that social relief is the problem of the counties, not the state. Proposals to amend this section of the constitution are pending in both the house and senate.

Other interesting bills introduced include one which provides for appropriation of $5000 to install an elevator in the capitol building which was voted down; a bill providing for sterilization of afflicted persons; a bill which would provide assurance that assessed valuation of homesteads in Florida would not be increased to offset the homestead tax exemption; a bill providing for more and quicker divorces as an attraction to winter visitors; and one which would prohibit walkathons, marathons and skateathons under a $1000 penalty. Action on this last bill is being rushed in order to stop a marathon which is in progress at West Palm Beach now.

One bill has been passed by both houses and gone into effect already; this bill extended the deadline for payment of taxes to June 1st.

And so under an avalanche of new bills and committee meetings the Florida legislature goes on.

Norris Speaks To Y.W. Group

Committee Appointments Announced at Meet Of New Cabinet

The work of the new Freshman Cabinet got well underway with the appointment of committee chairmen and members and discussion of their duties at a meeting of the cabinet last night in the hut. Anne Norris, vice president of Y. W. C. A. and new advisor for the cabinet, talked to the cabinet about plans and work for the year. Seven-thirty on Thursday evenings was set as the regular time for meetings of the cabinet.

Committees and chairmen appointed are: social, Mary Ellen Tharpe, Elizabeth Jinks, Dagmar Prippe, and Katheryn Ely; vesper, Dorothy Brown, Jene Gallamore, and Lois Long; campus friendship, Ruth Lind, Sara Graham, Lily McGuire, Beverly Brown, Marjorie Jones; choir, Louise Bryan, Kathryn Todd, Isabelle Sands, and Virginia Turner; worship service, Sara Nance, Virginia White, Martha Lester; poster, Louise Doyle, Louise Lingo, Jane Rice and Blanche Lamar.

Day Students Elected Fain, Lamb, Wells

Marjorie Fain was elected president of the Day Students' organization at the elections yesterday.

The Day Students' organization was formed last year to provide for the affiliation of non-resident students with the College Government association. All students who are members of this organization enjoy those privileges afforded to resident students such as the right to vote in campus elections.

Other officers who were elected yesterday are Geneva Lamb, vice-president; Sara Wells, secretary-treasurer; Daisy Parker, publicity chairman; Margaret Maxwell, parliamentarian; Mattie Lou Love., social chairman; Louise Gehan, athletic chairman; and Winifred Hansen, senate representative.

◆

Custom among the Zulu Kaffirs of South Africa requires a man to stand at a distance when addressing his mother-in-law and he must never address her by name.

◆

Every floor of the eight-story Basin Park Hotel, at Eureka Springs, Ark., is a ground floor. The hotel is built on a mountainside and runways connect the floors with the mountain.

The Laundry Does It Best!

Phones: Laundry 808
Dry Cleaning 666

The White Way Laundry & Cleaners

Scientific Sanitary Service

The Best by Test—Let Us Prove It

WE HAVE IT!....

The very Dress for Dance, Dinner and Street Wear. New Dresses and Hats arriving daily from New York in Silk and Cotton.

DRESSES
$1.95
and up

HATS
$1.95
and up

THE LADIES' SHOP
"Where Styles are Shown First for Less"
205 S. Monroe St.

Three-fourths of your time is spent in your shoes....

Why not keep them in good condition?

—Let Us Do It!—

SHOES DYED
ANY COLOR

BEN STEWART
Incorporated

Expert Shoe Repairing

—so far as we know tobacco was first used about 400 years ago

—throughout the years what one thing has given so much pleasure..so much satisfaction

It was a matter of pride with a host in Colonial days that his guests should smoke tobacco grown on his own plantation.

Today the Governor of North Carolina says to the Governor of South Carolina—

"Have a cigarette"

TODAY people all over the world use tobacco in one form or another.

They chew it, they smoke it in pipes, they smoke cigars and cigarettes, and here is what an eminent physician said about cigarettes:

"I have been something of a student of cigarettes, and it is my belief that they offer the mildest and purest form in which tobacco is used."

Yes, nowadays the cigarette is the most popular form in which tobacco is used. A good cigarette certainly gives men and women a lot of pleasure.

Have a Chesterfield—

For one thing—they're milder.

For another thing—they taste better.

© 1935, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

Take Your Senior Sister to the Banquet and Minstrels

The Florida Flambeau

See Annual Puppitry Play on Thursday "School for Scandal"

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, April 26, 1935 NUMBER TWENTY-SIX

Minstrel to Be Offered Here This Saturday

She Was Only a Farmer's Daughter' is Title Of Junior Opus

VIOLIN AND SONG TRIO FEATURED

Depicts Rise of Country Lass to Heights On New York Stage

"She Was Only a Farmer's Daughter," the 1935 junior minstrel, will be on the auditorium stage at 9:15 tomorrow night, according to Sarah Krentzman, general chairman.

This musical show, concerning the rise of an inocent country girl to success on a New York stage, was written by Mary Irene McKay and has a supporting cast of 14 members with an additional 23 people in the dances.

Special Features

Special features of the enter nment include individual ances and numbers by violin and ng trios. A two-piano team mposed of Mims Smith and d Godwin will furnish music the songs, two of which were ritten by University of Florida dents. These songs are "Girl om Tallahassee" by Bill Bryan d "Blue Haze" by Bill Van mt.

The cast for "She Was Only a rmer's Daughter" includes ire Hiram Hebb, Claire Red d; Charles McCoy, Betty Bai Tom Buchanan, Marie Lyons; enezer Hebb, Jimmy Lewis; kial Hebb, Winifred Hansen; b. Ruth Lind; Maria Hebb, e Wahl; Abbey Hebb, Lois zel; Rena Del Ray, Mary anne McKay; troup members, ary Lou Moore and Betty tty.

Committees in Charge

The committees which have d charge of the Minstrels this ar are script, Mary Irene Mc y; director, Emily Johnson; es, Caroline Oliver; music, ce Wahl; costumes, Minna nn, assisted by Margaret ompson, Sara Nance, Katherine d, Sarah Anthony, Ann Mizell, ry Litschal, Helen Miller, Lucy Linn, Betty Meyer, Martha ee, and Minna Yockey; stag Floy Lenert, assisted by Polly nt, Betty Brooks, Virginia Cromartie, Louise Lingo, Marjorie lerson, Jane Hubbard, and rbara Hubbard; properties, Clifford, assisted by Virginia y, Betty Bow, Marguerita strom, Lorraine Yarborough, ry Lopez, Jean Gillis, and Ge a Lamb; programs, Janie Lee ne, advertising, Mildred Em hainz, assisted by Betty Ost d, Katherine Pratt, Jane Gale, Dorothea Marsh; and finces, Audrey Farmer.

One ticket to the Minstrels is en free to anyone selling ten. e admission price has been an nced as twenty-five cents.

Cotterill, Lewis And Vermillion Leave For Conventions in North

Dr. R. S. Cotterill, professor of tory, Dr. L. J. Lewis, professor chemistry, and Miss Gertrude rmillion, instructor in chemis are attending conventions in north this week.

Dr. Cotterill left Tuesday to at nd the Mississippi Valley His cal association meeting in Cin nati. He is a member of the ociation's executive council.

Dr. Lewis and Miss Vermillion in New York attending the eting of the American Chemi society. Miss Vermillion was ently appointed as representa of the Florida section for the man Service commission of the erican Chemical soceity.

Gleason Goes to Meeting

Miss Flavis Gleason, state home monstration agent, left Talla see yesterday afternoon for ami where she will attend a ting of the senior county ncil of Dade county and will part in the Four H Club achievement day.

While in Miami she will also end the convention of the e Parent Teachers associa where she will take a part in program.

Dodd Will Repeat Address in Chapel

Dr. William G. Dodd, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, will speak on "An Intangible in College Education" at convocation Tuesday.

This is the address Dr. Dodd gave at the Phi Beta Kappa installation banquet which aroused much favorable comment, and in response to numerous requests Dr. Conradi has asked Dr. Dodd to deliver it to the student body.

Italian Trips Offered Here

Students Taking Italian Eligible for Award Of Trip Abroad

Florida State college students who have completed two years of succesful attendance in Italian courses in college or at both college and high school together are eligible for one of the five free trips abroad which are awarded annually by the Italian government to American college students.

The five to be selected for the summer of 1935 will all be women students. Candidates must be of good character and they must be regularly enrolled students of any one of the four undergraduate classes. In addition to the application blank, only one of which will be received from any college, the complete scholastic record of the candidate must be submitted.

Candidates must submit letters of recommendation from the dean and the president, and letters from the Italian teacher and other teachers of the college they are attending. These will be forwarded to the committee of awards who will choose the five winners.

The successful candidates will embark from New York City with the teacher-leader appointed by the committee. Upon arriving in Italy, the group will be met by a representatives of the Italian tourist office or by a representative of the Italian government. From this point there will be a fixed itinerary, and there will be no charge to any member of the group for hotel accomodations, board, fares, or laundry service. The teacher-leader will have full disciplinary powers, and the students will be expected to cooperate fully with her, according to the announcement.

Phi Kappa Phi Has Initiation

Banquet for Members Follows Ceremony

Phi Kappa Phi, general scholastic honorary, held initiation services for twenty-one students and three faculty members in the Augusta Conradi theater.

At the Phi Kappa Phi banquet at the Dutch Kitchen following the initiation ceremony, Miss Katherine Montgomery, president of the local chapter, welcomed the new members. Dr. Ralph Eyman gave the response for the faculty initiates and Ida Engel for the students.

During the banquet a student trio composed of Martha Reddick Yvonne Tait, and Margaret Nickle played "Finalle from Trio in C Minor" by Mendelssohn.

Dr. Beulah Briley, professor of economics and commerce, and Miss Louise Richardson, librarian and professor of library science, were the other two faculty initiates.

Students who were initiated at this time are Betty Barker, Marion Brantley, Anne Louise Burgess, Marjorie Carter, Carolina DeMontigne, Alma Ruth Durrenberger, Virginia Earle, Ida Engel, Opal Gray, Belle Henshaw, Florence Jennings, Anita Mitchell, Ellen Moore, Margaret Nickle, Frances Parks, Elinor Payne, La Luce Planck, Carol Reeves, Mildred Stevens, Bertha May Stulpher and Elizabeth Wheeler.

Dorman to Be Officer

Dr. Olivia N Dorman, dean of students, has been elected vice-president of the state of Florida of the Classical Association of the Middle West and South.

Its annual convention was held April 18-20, in St. Louis, Missouri, which Dean Dorman attended as a delegate.

YWCA Cabinet Assumes Office Sunday Night

Installation Plans Made By Freshman Group At Past Parley

LUCY GEE LINN IS NEW LEADER

Woman's Committees To Arrange Flowers and Music

Installation service for the new executive and Freshman cabinets of Y.W.C.A. will be held Sunday night at 7:15 o'clock in the Augusta Conradi theater, when the newly elected officers for the coming year will be presented.

Installative Plans

Plans for the installation service were discussed Thursday night at the first meeting of the Freshman cabinet which Miss Marguerite Taylor, new faculty advisor for the cabinet, attended. Pansy corsages are to be made by the cabinet for the service, music arranged by the choir committee and posters by the poster committee.

New officers to be installed are Lucy Gee Linn, president; Anne Norris, vice-president; Sue Whitaker, secretary; and Helen Cate, treasurer taking the places respectively of Jennie Rae Nall, Lucy Gee Linn, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, and Sara Krentzman.

New Executive Cabinet

New executive cabinet members to be installed are: Gladys Oliver, Mary Jeanne McKay, Mary Irene McKay, Jane and Barbara Hubbard, Marie Spurlock, and Marcia Scott.

Old executive cabinet members are Georgia Ruth Work, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Helen Hartness, Sara Butler Logen, Mercia Scott, Anna Marie Mitchell, Margaret K. Anderson, Rachel McKinnon, Janilee Rhyne, Elizabeth Weatherly, Katherine Ash, Jean Hamner and Carolina De Montigne, ex-officio.

Eta Sigma Phi Initiates Two

New Officers Installed During Celebration Of Founders Day

Eta Sigma Phi, classical honorary, began its celebration of Founder's day Friday afternoon with the initiation of its two junior pledges, Rebecca Keith and Jessilee Lumpkin. After the initiation service, officers for the new year were installed: president, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite; vice-president, Lillian Turlington; secretary, Rebecca Keith; and treasurer, Jessilee Lumpkin.

Dr. G. M. Whicher, poet and author, spoke Friday evening at 8:15 o'clock in Broward clubroom at an informal reception given by Eta Sigma Phi honoring members of the classics department. Dr. Whicher briefly discussed the Latin poet, Horace, and his Sabine farm. He concluded by reading several poems, of both a serious and an humorous nature, from his own volumes of poetry of Doba Dulteliz and Roman Pearls.

Saturday morning a classical association of Florida was organised with active and associate members of Eta chapter of Eta Sigma Phi and alumnae as charter members. The purpose of the association is to develop and to promote interest in classical civilizations among students of colleges, universities, and preparatory schools throughout the state, as well as to stimulate interest generally in those civilizations.

Officers of the association for the coming year are: president, Dr. Olivia N. Dorman; vice-president, Martha Bradmerkel of Jacksonville; secretary, Virginia Earle, senior and retiring president of Eta Sigma Phi; treasurer, Louise Goodbread, alumna of Florida State and member of Eta chapter of Eta Sigma Phi.

Saturday evening at 6:00 o'clock Eta Sigma Phi held its annual founder's day banquet at the Three Torches. The program included a asiutation by Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, incoming president a toast to Eta Sigma Phi by Virginia Earle, retiring president; and a toast to the Classical club

(Continued on page three)

His Five Keys To Happiness Are Revealed By Musician

Gehrkins Thinks Friends, Books, Pictures And Music Priceless

Mr. K. W. Gehrkins, leader in the field of music and father of Adelaide Gehrkins, freshman here, offers to the college girls of Florida State his five keys to happiness.

"TO WORK hard for not too many hours a day at some task that I enjoy for its own sake; giving this task my best effort because of the joy that I feel in doing a thoroughly honest piece of work and the elation that follows successful accomplishment.

"TO HAVE many leisure hours during which I may read, enjoy music, talk to friends, or meditate—according to the fancy of the moment.

"TO DESIRE and to have the ability to broaden my horizon by reading widely, by listening to those whose acquaintance in certain fields is more extensive than my own, and by thinking deeply and constantly about the relationships of people, things, societies, and the universe.

"TO BE AWARE of and to enjoy beauty in all its various phases ;the beauty of music and pictures and poetry; the beauty of trees and flowers; the sublimity of sea and lake and mountain; the majesty of slow-flowing river, the romance of mountain stream, the gorgeous color of the sunset; the loveliness of human face and form, especially when animated by enthusiasm or when expressing musical rythm; the beauty of thoughtful courtesy, if ardent love, of sustained devotion.—and sometimes to lose sight for a little while of the things that trouble me in my own life or in the universe, during the contemplation of these various kinds of beauty.

"TO KNOW many different men and women of various kinds, to have a sympathetic understanding of and a genuinely friendly feeling toward them all; and to be utterly confident that at least a few are truly my friends in that they love me sincerely, as I am, unaffected, without the necessity of concealment or deceit on my part, and are as loyal to me when I am absent as when I am present.

"To possess these things—interesting work, leisure, a broadening horizon, awareness of beauty, a friendly attitude and a few loyal friends is to have in one's hands the five keys that will unlock the doors to as great happiness as may be achieved in a world whose predominating characteristic is imperfection."

Mr. Gehrkins visited for a few days at the college recently during which time he made an address to the music students and others interested.

Sociology Meet Held Recently

Moore and Bellamy Take Part in Convention

Prof. Coyle Moore, Dr. Raymond Bellamy, professors of sociology here, and Dr. L. M. Bristol, professor of sociology at the University of Florida, attended a convention of college sociology professors in Knoxville, Tennessee, last week, which met to form a Southern Sociology association for the purpose of unifying social work in the south.

It was decided to meet once a year to consider social problems in the south, with the work of the Southern association not to overlap that of the national association.

Dr. Moore and Dr. Bellamy went to Norris dam Saturday where they were shown various phases of the Tennessee Valley experiment. They saw the model town which is being built for the workers there and a descriptive film of the work of the TVA.

Efforts have been made to bring the film here, said Dr. Bellamy, but a definite date for its showing has not been set yet.

Dr. Eleanor Nims, who was recently elected president of the Florida chapter of the American Association of Social Workers, met with the executive committee of the group in Jacksonville last week end.

Problems concerning the training for social work to be worked out in connection with this college's courses, the standards of the personnel and certification of the social worker were considered at the meeting.

Press Meeting Held at L.S.U.

Local Publications Heads Attend Conventions

A resolution condemning the actions of Louisiana State university authorities and particularly President James M. Smith, in their recent controversy with staff members of the school paper and for their suspension of these students was among the proposals passed at the final general assembly of delegates to the combined convention of the Southern and Southeastern divisions of the National Students' Federation of America, the Southern Federation of College Students and the Southern Press Representatives, which was held at the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans, Louisiana, recently.

Delegates from Florida state to the press division included Edith Webb, newly-elected editor of the Flastacowo; Sarah Krentzman, editor of the Distaff; Mary Brace Patterson, business manager of the Flambeau; and Ruth Persons, editor of the Flambeau.

A student government representative was not sent.

The resolution calling for national defensive rearmament in the United States, which was introduced by the University of Florida delegates at the closing session of the convention before a combined meeting of all delegates, was rejected when the delegates declared that rearming tends to encourage international disputes.

In the resolution concerning the L. S. U. incident the student delegates endorsed the "courage and fearlessness" of Jesse Cutrer, suspended editor of the "Reveille" in refusing to submit to "unwarranted faculty censorship" and also condemned "the manner in which

(Continued on page three)

Baptist Student Councils Confer

Catholic Students Send Students to Meet

Activities of religious organizations on campus this week and next will center about the sending of delagates to conventions and installation services.

The annual conference of the Baptist Student Union Councils from Florida State College, University of Florida, Stetson University and Southern College will be held in Live Oak today and tomorrow. Miss Katherine Rawls, student secretary, Dr. and Mrs. Christie and the following council members of this college are expected to attend: Evelyn Collins, Gladys Oliver, Eleanor Murill, Sara Rutledge, Lillian Turlington, Sunshine Maines, Jane McCown, Bernice Oliver, Mary Nell Pinckard, Doris McKenzie, Sara Sealey, Anne Norris, Mary F. Pemberton, Alice Fletcher, Wava Godwin, Evaline Rankin, and Cornelia Morford.

Margaret Roe and Mauvis Lussier, will be delegates of the Newman club to the Southeastern province convention of the Federation of Catholic Clubs in Atlanta this week-end. Grace Mary Webster and Rosa Doub, as delegates of the club, attended the state convention of the National Confederation of Catholic Women in Jacksonville from Monday through Wednesday of this week.

Mary Frances Pemberton will direct the student choir during the installation of the newly elected Baptist Student Union Council Sunday evening in the First Baptist church. Installation service for the Presbyterian Student Council is expected to be held Sunday, May 5.

The Young Women's auxiliary of the Baptist church held a meeting in the Baptist student room Thursday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The theme of the program was Ridgecrest, a playlet under the direction of Mary Nell Pinckard.

The Presbyterian student council held an outdoor meeting and regular monthly services on the Jackson Bluff road last Sunday. The girls left the college early in the morning and hiked out to the site of the services.

The program for the morning was in charge of Mary Wallis Keppelburg and included several violin selections played by Janet Pierce. During the program each girl read aloud her favorite Easter poem.

Puppetry Cast Will Feature English Play

Entire Production to Be In Students' Charge Next Friday Night

BRIGGS DIRECTS SOCIETY SATIRE

"School for Scandal" Will Reveal Frivolities Of Sheridan's Age

Richard Sheridan's "School for Scandal" will be presented by the puppetry class under the direction of Miss Amy Ferris Briggs, instructor of art, in the Augusta oCnradi theater next Friday at 8:15 o'clock.

Satire On Society

The cast of the play which is a satire on the frivolous society of the eighteenth century will consist of fourteen marionettes made and costumed entirely by the students in the puppetry class.

Each girl in the class chose a character from the play and made the puppet from a modeled head, and such materials as wood, wire, tape, leather, plastic wood and paint.

During the past semester the girls costumed the puppets, designed the scenery, and rehearsed the parts of their individual puppets.

The advanced design class made the posters which are being used to advertise the play and four girls outside of the puppetry class will assist with the performance.

Members of Cast

Those who are in the cast of the play are Mary Mooty, Sir Peter Teagle; Olivia Embrey, Sir Oliver Surface; Hallie Bailey, Charles Surface; Evelyn Ferguson, Rowley; Althea Smith, Moses; Frances Thomas, Hoseph Surface; Doris Risk, Snake; Frances Morrow, Maria; Katherine Wilhelm, Lady Sneerwell; Laura Bell Hopkins, Trip; Mar Lou Moore, Lady Teagle; Margaret Reedy, Mr. Crabtree; Virginia Scholts, and Ortrude Parks, Sir Benjamin Backbite.

An admission price of twenty-five cents will be charged.

Graham Talks To Kadelpis

Fraternity Holds Spring Initiation Banquet At Los Robles

In his address to members of Kappa Delta Pi, education honorary at the spring banquet and initiation Saturday at the Women's club in Los Robles, Mr. James Graham, centered his discussion upon the importance of high standards in training culture for teachers, and upon the value of introspection as a means of attaining them. The title of his address was, "Your Challenge."

He presented a number of interesting statistics to prove thet an appalling number of teaching positions throughout the state are held by men and women with second and third-grade certificates obtained by examination, many of them with only high school training or even less. He advocated higher teaching standards to raise the educational level of the schools.

Mr. Graham urged prospective teachers to become real live members of the communities in which they work, and to supply as many as possible of the varied demands upon their time. "Much is expected—teaching all week, singing in the church choir on Sunday, and when there is nothing else to do setting a good example."

New initiates present included Virginia Cromartie, Anna Groover, Lois, Hazel, Rebecca Keith, Mary Claire Kimbell, Julia Norfleet, Alice Porter, Murae Reddick, Carol Reeves, Nancy Wilkinson.

Others attending included Doris Bourgeois, Opal Gray, Marjorie Carter, Helen Wilson, Lillian Cross, Marion Prior, Carolina de Montigne, Helen Smith, Margaret Pfluge, Louise Burgess, Marie Slack, Betty Ellen Smith, Mrs. Helen Shelley, Miss Carmine, Elizabeth Wheeler, Mrs. Dora Skipper, Dean Nathaniel M. Salley, Miss Nita Pyburn, Miss Florence Tryon, Miss Leonora Smith, Mrs. Marion Hay, Mr. Harrison, Miss Maude Schwalmeyer, Mrs.

(Continued on page four)

Seniors Will Get Annuals on May 4

Copies of the Flastacowo, college annual, will be ready for distribution to members of the senior class, according to Hazel Goss, chairman of the 1834-1935 Flastacowo staff, between 9 and 12 o'clock on Saturday morning, May 4.

Seniors only may receive a copy by calling at the College Government office in the basement of the library.

Delegates Go To Convention

DeMontigne, Blood, Graham, Fain, Gilles Are At Gainesville Meet

The combined convention of Florida Student Government Association and Florida Inter-Collegiate Press association will be held at the University of Florida, Gainesville on April 26 and 27.

Carolina De Montigne, Katherine Blood, Margaret Graham, Marjorie Fain, and Jean Gilles will represent Florida State College for Women at this convention which will be attended by delegates from practically every college and university in the state.

After registration of delegates on Friday morning, a short business session will be held after which there will be discussions on various problems arising in student government as well as in college life. There will also be discussion groups in which competent leaders from various schools and some of the outstanding journalists and newspapermen of the state will give addresses. Social activities will include a banquet and dance on both Friday and Saturday nights.

The purpose of the Florida Student Government Association which was organised at Florida State College for Women last spring is to facilitate mutual relationships between various institutions of higher learning in the state. At the time of organization of the association, there were delegates from four schools, Stetson, Southern, St. Petersburg Junior college, the University of Florida, besides Florida State.

The present officers of the Florida Student Government Association include William Sherrill as president; Carolina De Montigne, vice-president; Jimmy Phillips, second vice-president; Etna Cook, secretary; and Etta Turner, treasurer.

Florida Inter-Collegiate Press association's officers include Devane Williams as president; Gordon Jones, vice-president; Olga Minor, secretary; and John Hollis, treasurer.

Expert Addresses Home Ec Classes

Discusses Nutrition And Evaporated Milk

Dr. Marietta Eichelberger, director of the nutrition service for the Evaporated Milk association in Chicago, was the guest speaker last week of the School of Home Economics. During her brief stay in Tallahassee, Dr. Eichelberger gave five talks to different groups of Home Economics students on various phases of the nutritional aspects of evaporated milk, illustrating her talks with movie slides.

Since the foremost research project of the association at the present time is the irradiation of evaporated milk for the purpose of increasing the vitamin D content, Dr. Eichelberger stressed this point in her talks to the advanced nutrition students. In these talks she also discussed the methods by which the vitemin D potency of evaporated milk is determined.

At the Home Management house on Tuesday night, Dr Eichelberger talked to a group of students on the "Recent Advancement in the Nature of Research Carried on by the Evaporated Milk Association." In talks to the freshman class and the experimental cookery class on Wednesday, Dr. Eichelberger spoke of the production of evaporated milk stressing the importance of using evaporated milk in food preparation.

Dr. Eichelberger, a graduate of the School of Home Economics at Mississippi State College for Wo-

(Continued on page three)

Spanish Group Will Install Local Chapter

Phi Beta Sigma Becomes Alpha Delta Branch Of Sigma Delta Pi

CARTER TO HEAD NATIONAL FRAT

New Division is First Added to Honorary In Four Years

Phi Beta Sigma, local Spanish honorary, will be installed as the Alpha Delta chapter of Sigma Delta Pi, the national Spanish honorary fraternity on Thursday, May 2, as the twenty-eighth chapter of that organization. Dr. R. A. Seymour, Dr. Margie Burkes and Mrs. Dorothy Breen, chapter members of Lambda chapter, established in 1926 at the University of Illinois will officiate at the installation of the national chapter here. It will be the fourth chapter to be established in the southern stetes east of the Mississippi river and the third to be added to the national society since 1931.

Officers to Be Installed

The initiation ceremony will be followed by a banquet at the Floridan hotel. The present officers of the local chapter will be installed as officers of the national chapter. They are, president, Marjorie Carter; vice-president, Rosa Doub; secretary, Ruth Dickson; and treasurer, Julia Norfleet.

Sigma Delta Pi aims to maintain interest in the study of Spanish literature and Spanish culture and to encourage scholarship among students of Spanish. It was established November 14, 1919, at the University of California under the patronage of the department of Spanish at that university. It became a national fraternity in 1926 and has steadily expanded until there are at present twenty-seven active chapters, extending eastward as far as New York and Vermont.

In the southern states there are chapters at Baylor university, Baylor College for Women, University of South Carolina, Davidson college in North Carolina, University of Maryland and University of Texas.

The establishment of a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa here recently was a distinct recommendation for the installation of a chapter of Sigma Delta Pi according to Dr. Seymour, professor in the modern languages department.

Honorary Faculty Members

The honorary faculty members in the local chapter are: Dr. R. A. Seymour, Mrs. Dorothy Breen, Miss Margie Burks, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Mrs Ada Allen, Miss Myrtie Dolbee, Mr. Manuel Lopez, Dr. Marion Hay and Mrs. Irene B. Miller.

The local chapter members who will be initiated are: Betty Bailey, Marjorie Carter, Jennie Rae Nall, Martha Woliston, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Ruth Dickson, Rosa Doub, Minna Dunn, Mary Helen Forth, Sara Krentzmann, Abbie Lyle, Laura Mathis, Julia Norfleet, Murae Reddick, Mildred Stevens, Ruth Feinberg, Opal Gray, Winifred Hanson, Anna Groover, Becky Lou Hopkins, Wylma Ter Bush, Virginia Cromartie, and Margaret Campbell.

Outstanding Students Chosen Thursday Night To Join Even Honorary

Esteren, local honorary club to which outstanding Evens are elected, tapped eight girls last night in the dining room.

The purpose of Esteren is to strengthen Even friendships and to help carry on the traditions of Even classes. Upperclassmen tapped last night were Katherine Blood, president-elect of the College Government association, and Margaret Graham, chairman-elect of judiciary.

Freshmen elected to Esteren are Frances Lewis, Hilda Spradlin, Marjorie Raulerson, Ann Mizell, Ermine Lawrence, and Susan Blow.

Old members of Esteren are Caroline Oliver, Marjorie Helveston, Betty Meyer, Margaret Thompson, Minna Dunn, Edith Webb, Dot Leach, Margaret K. Anderson, Janet Griffitts.

Faculty members are Miss Louise Richardson, Miss Hazel Stevenson, Miss Katherine eMntgomery, Miss Elizabeth Lynn.

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF

RUTH PERSONS	Editor
ALTHEA SMITH	Associate Editor
GERTRUDE KUHN	Managing Editor
HAZEL BOWMAN	News Editor

DEPARTMENTS

Features: Martha Baker; Sports, Elaine Klepper; Society, Margaret Lafferty; Exchanges, Virginia Early; Literary Editor Eleanor Williams; Copy Editor, Arline Lockhart; Outside News Editor, Grace Mary Webster.

REPORTERS: Carol Farbee, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty Nedra McNamara, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF

MARY PATTERSON	Business Manager
JANE GALE	Advertising Manager
CEIL LEVY	Circulation Manager

Assistant Business Manager, Lillie McGuire; Assistant Circulation Manager Caroline Adams

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

All Behind Petticoat Theories Is Not Bustle

We are curious to know if the redoubtable Mr. Fairbanks was supported by student opinion at Gainesville in his editorial diatribe in last week's Alligator, directed at the student body and faculty of Florida State College for Women, at feminine education in general, and at all those who are so naive and unknowing as to propose international cooperation and disarmament as an alternative to man's age-old custom of killing his kind.

"Facts versus Theory," was the head, but the editorial itself was so replete with invective and vituperation that we find it difficult to answer it in our usual vein. The "facts" for which the writer so ardently expresses his devotion include (if we are to judge by his own writing) the fact that we students at FSCW are a bunch of "pinko-pacificts." We do not think that anyone has ever brought out that fact before, in fact, not to our knowledge has any group of students at this institution been designated as any color of pacifists. We have, of course, been called "Flowers of Florida" which the versatile Mr. Fairbanks himself might have attributed to us in his lighter moments, as he points out that we women are still, perhaps, most effective when regarded as ornamental.

If the bellicose business manager of the Alligator were able to temper his ire with a small sense of humor he would not make his ex cathedra statements so melodramatic. Of course any one who thinks he has succeeded in reducing disarmament to an exact science before there has even been any disarmament in human history, and who knows beyond the shadow of a doubt that it is a failure before it even begins, will make such statements, and will moreover declare that if FSCW students do not believe as he (Will Fairbanks) does, it is because our faculty is itself in grevious need of education. But there seems to be one thing that we know that even the erudite Mr. Fairbanks does not know: we know not only that we don't know but we know that he doesn't know. And we know that international cooperation, like all other modes of human cooperation, begins with faith, not knowledge, with theory and not fact. A hundred years ago the abolition of slavery was not a fact; slavery was the fact, and had been since the dawn of human history. Now, the outlawry of war is not fact and cannot be dealt with on that basis; the war system is the glaring inescapable fact, a fact which if it remains entrenched in society much longer must inevitably bring about the suicide of civilization. The fallacy in the argument that at present we are rearming instead of disarming and that therefore disarmament has failed, should be self-evident.

While the irate Mr. Fairbanks fairly bristles with a denouncement of our addiction to "theory," it is plain that he was guilty of theorizing himself when he incorporated into his famous resolution which was killed at the regional NSFA convention the doctrine that "To impress upon the youth of the United States through college training that eternal preparedness and ability to repell violently an attempted invasion of our shores, together with diplomatic isolation from the intrigues of other nations, is the surest path to peace."

That sounds somewhat like "theory" to us—familiarly like the theory of a Nazi minister of propaganda. It failed to convince southern students of the advantages of a Fascist ideal of education. Students in the South, however successfully indoctrinated by the ROTC, are not yet ready to put their minds under a jingoist, chauvinist surveillance by the United States military. However inarticulate about it they may have been, when the NSFA delegates at New Orleans turned down the University of Florida resolution, they were protecting the thing which alone can keep the lamp of civilization burning in these dark days—the freedom and the integrity of the intellectual life.

A Good Opportunity—And It Comes Only Twice in a College Career

At the college dinner given on Wednesday night in honor of members of the 1935 Florida legislature, girls of each district extended a welcome to their own delegations from the senate and the house.

The repetition of this occasion has made of it another of our "traditions", though it is to be hoped that this one, at least, will not fall into the overworked or useless category. Though "tradition" has gradually become a term which will taboo any movement on campus, occasionally a new one springs up to defy ridicule. What is looked upon as simply a gesture, one made to each new group of legislatore until it is now traditional, can surely grow into more than a symbol of welcome.

We, who as college students, con our political science, study the economic situation, and learn to express ourselves concerning the world around us, are interested in what is going on in our state as well as in our country—our world.

We know, for example, that the coming of this session of the legislature at the end of a long period of economic depression makes it necessary to curtail the state's expenses to an extent that may endanger some of the progressive measures of the past few years. We know that the legislatore are taking on themselves the responsibility of eliminating all excessive expenditures without destroying Florida's progressive development which has extended over a long period of effort on the part of the state's ablest men and women. We know, too, that the steps the legislature is taking now to meet present crises are not limited in influence to the two years the present body will hold office. Its actions will cover a far-reaching span of years, including the work of many men and women of the past as well as forming the guideposts for many others of the future. Their problem is a difficult one and they need our intelligent support.

The students of Florida State College for Women have welcomed the legislatore to Tallahassee and have wished them success in the performance of their duties to the state. Since we, as college students, have not only an excellent opportunity for first hand observation of state leaders at work, but also the equipment and facilities to make our observations both intelligent and fruitful, in any future achievements that may be chalked up to our own credit, should not our annual social contact with this group then be significant not only as a welcome, but also symbolic of our active interest in the efforts and accomplishments of our lawmakers?

Our biennial opportunity to see the theories set forth in our texts brought home in the official activities of our own leaders is here again, and could be of real worth.

Will our latest "tradition"—our dinner for the visitors, which has become a regular occasion, grow to mean our real appreciation of an opportunity we are making the most of?

NSFA Scores Another Hit

This week has seen the formation of the nucleus for an agency designed to help the millions of unemployed young people who are out of school. So gigantic an undertaking can bring immeasurably happy results when carried out, and it is to the credit of the NSFA that the Division of Youth Service has taken over the task of assembling facts to show a clear picture of the situation and of working, then, with local governments in devising remedial programs.

The latter, according to United States Education Commissioner John W. Studebaker, will include a guidance and adjustment center in each community as well as more practicble coordination of relief measures and stimulation of educational facilities.

We hope that our own communities will see fit to endorse this movement and will take aggressive action toward establishing the proposed units.

Magazine Thumbings

BY ELEANOR WILLIAMS

SHOULD I BE DEPORTED?

By John Strachey

Scribners, April, 1935.

Mr. Hearst's answer is yes, says John Strachey, a young Englishman who made a series of lectures in this country recently and who was arraigned in Federal courts on charges of radicalism, but the question in itself is unimportant to anyone but himself, he adds. However, the principle involved as to whether or not we should retain our liberty to criticize the workings of an economic system is worth discussion, he says, especially when we generally agree that the present economic system is not working satisfactorily and that it is desirable to make alterations in it with the least amount of economic dislocation and civil and international violence possible.

If Mr. Hearst and similar persons in Great Britain want to make criticism a crime as it is in Germany and Italy, they will have to change the law, he writes, and they must first change it before attacking the small minority of us who believe in the Marxist critique of capitalism.

However, since the theory best explaining the capitalistic system is the Marxist theory, and since Marxism precedes on careful investigation and testing and retesting of every link in its program, he advises us to study it scientifically and see from it that our only solution lies in the abolition of the capitalistic system.

If we are not to be allowed to meet together and consider each other's views carefully and scientifically, he concludes, we will retard and may even destroy civilization.

HOW THE HOLDING COMPANIES MILK INVESTORS

By A. Wilfred May

The Nation, April 17, 1935.

To the furor created by the President's anti-holding company policies, the writer reveals facts that frankly contradict the general belief that the abolition of holding companies would cause investors to suffer.

Figures from the accounts of large companies, such as the Associated Gas and Electric System, the North American Company, the American Water Works and Electric Company, show that by devious methods, the owners of holding-company equities, who are imaginary investors, have duped the investors in the operating companies, the real investors, out of thousands of dollars.

Holding-companies are anti-social financial devices offering a legal method for parasitic high finance to garner huge profits to itself and crucify the real investors, May concludes, and although the Wheeler-Rayburn bill is not perfect, it is a move in the right direction.

SOVIET TABOOS

By William Henry Chamberlin

Foreign Affairs, April, 1935

William Henry Chamberlin, who was for some years Moscow correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, describes conditions in the Soviet Union which have been official taboos for foreign journalists in recent years.

Judging from the fact that Soviet officials demanded a preliminary censorship of all press telegrams and refused to allow foreign journalists to leave Moscow without special permission during the famine of 1932-33, Chamberlin concludes Russia has been stronger than any other country in crushing political criticism and opposition.

He estimates four million died in this famine which never existed officially, and in the neighborhood of two million well-to-do peasants who opposed collectivism have been arrested and exiled to labor under inhuman conditions. Other phases of Soviet life which are taboo to journalists are the religious-persecutions and the depreciation of the Soviet ruble which officially remains the same, although wages constantly fall just as in decaying capitalism, Chamberlin says.

Although a government has an unquestionable right to establish regulations and bar undesirable aliens, censorship is a serious obstacle to objective political and economic study, Chamberlin concludes, and it is well for the uninitiated reader to be given a general idea of the taboos that exist.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By Williams

POLITICAL POT POURRI

BY CLOTILDE O'ROURKE

The fur has really been flying on Capitol hill during the past two weeks. Ever since the introduction of the Florida Recovery Act—or the anti-chain store bill—into the senate by Tillman of Tampa and into the house by the Hillsborough delegation both chambers have been open for the liveliest scrap of the legislative session thus far.

Hundreds of farmers, and small town merchants and wholesalers poured into town for the public hearing of the bill before eight house and senate committees last week. These worthy gentlemen wore bright colored badges on their lapels and had a flock of arguments that left the legislators in a daze.

The ardent supporters of the bill will not be content to outlaw chain stores, commissaries and itinerant merchants from the state; the proposed bill further provides that all partnership owners and stockholders in corporations shall also be bona fide residents of the state, and that permits to sell merchandise at retail shall be limited to one for each classification to any one person, firm or corporation.

In other words, no outsiders would be allowed to do business in the state and those already here would be required to get out. Furthermore, the homefolks would be required to confine their business activities to one spot, since no branch stores or extensions would be allowed.

Several modifications of the bill were made by the senate committee and approved by the senate Thursday. Amendments to the bill would eliminate chain feed stores, commissaries and seasonal stores in tourist cities.

Senator Beal is the most ardent opponent of the bill in the upper house. When consideration of the bill is resumed Friday he is expected to offer a series of amendments designed to delay the time of taking effect and seeking to strike provisions from the measure. He has already suggested a referendum at the next primary or general election so that the consumer himself may decide whether he is in favor of outlawing chain stores as an answer to business recovery in Florida.

In the meanwhile, the solons have struggled through the fourth week of the session without having yet passed a bill of major importance. Plans for public school financing, levy of a general sales tax, reduction and abolition of property taxes, pension for the aged, liquor taxation and control, public and private relief debt, reallocation of revenue from gasoline taxes, citrus control and many other suggested measures comprise the 900 or more bills that have been poured into the mill-hopper thus far. They are receiving plenty of discussion, but no decisions.

Realizing the need for action, the senate has sent to the house a resolution authorizing the senate and house rules committees to meet jointly this Friday and at any time they wish thereafter for the purpose of determining what bills shall be considered on the floor of both branches of the legislature. If approved by the house, the resolution will establish a joint steering committee with the power to say which bills shall or shall not be considered.

The big problem of the day is public school financing, the sum of which has been set at $10,500,000. A three per cent general sales tax on practically everything bought or sold in the state heads the list of proposals. Governor Dave Sholtz, however, is opposed to the general sales tax, and has made three unsuccessful attempts to offer alternatives.

The most recent one, which was rejected by the house and senate committees this week, involved diverting part of the gasoline tax revenue now used to retire county road bonds and revenue derived from flat rate $5 and $10 automobile licenses. This latter idea is said to be the governor's pet idea, but neither house seems particularly anxious to approve it. In the meanwhile, the sales tax is the favored suggestion for raising the school fund.

After three days of heated debating at the opening of the week, the house finally passed, 88 to 3, a bill to broaden exemption privileges under the homestead tax amendment to the constitution. As finally passed, the bill extends tax exemption up to an assessed valuation of $5,000 on homesteads to "every head of a family who is a citizen and resident of the state of Florida," and it defines single persons, widows and widowers without dependents who own their homes as heads of families.

Last week, the house also passed the workman's compensation act by a majority of 72 to 15 which provides a scale of wages, ranging from $4 to $18 weekly, for employees injured in their jobs. A three member commission would administer the act, and employers would pay insurance premiums to

(Continued on page four)

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

YOUTH'S BUSINESS

During the final general session of the National Student Federation convention in New Orleans last week a resolution was proposed to the effect that the students go on record as approving a large army and navy for the purposes of defense. It was brought out that with conditions as they are at the present time in other parts of the world that it was necessary for the United States to build large armaments in preparation for the next war.

A motion was made that the resolution be rejected. Heated debate ensued and feeling was growing intense when one student rose and urged the students to drop the resolution "because students have plenty to think of besides war. It is not any of our business and we should leave it to other people. Let us talk about things of which we know something about and which will have some definite effect upon our student bodies."

That, in the opinion of this newspaper, was as dumb a statement as was made at the whole convention. Why is it not the business of the students of America to discuss such questions? Regardless of whether one was for or against the proposed resolution he surely should not take the point of view that the student just quoted did. War is a damnable business that no self-respecting person should ever sanction, but at the same time it is something that is, of course, at the present time imminent. It is the business of everyone, and especially of the youth of America, to think, talk, and write about this business of war. It is the business of the youth organizations to think and think hard about the position they are to take regarding international disputes and conflicts for the simple reason that it is the students who will be drafted to fight a war.

The resolution was finally rejected, much to our satisfaction. However, there was no further discussion concerning the issue. We were sorry that the convention did not go on record favoring disarmament and peaceful settlement of international disputes.

We repeat that it was the duty of the convention to discuss the problem of war and to take a firm stand against it, notwithstanding the argument of the student who held that we had other more important matters to consider. We join the Middlebury Campus in saying that "war is youth's business, after all, and if youth can lift a protest loud enough, that protest cannot be ignored."—Crimson White.

◆

WHAT ABOUT OUR STATE UNIVERSITIES?

In an address before delegates to the National Student Federation of America and the Southern College Press Association convention in New Orleans last week, one speaker made the statement that he was very dubious of the advisability of continuing to build large state colleges and universities. He gave as his reason the fact that so many of these schools are dominated by political consideration and that the heads of these institutions are often politicians rather than educators.

Now this is a serious challenge to a democratic principle to which so many of us give lip service. Whether or not it would be better slowly to do away with public institutions of higher learning and establish entirely the system of privately endowed institutions is a question that is open to considerable debate. In this country the emphasis has consistently been to train men to make a living. There is little hope that our principle of education will be fundamentally changed as long as we continue to employ mass methods of producing college graduates.

At the present time our colleges and universities are far from being what they should be. But the unfortunate situation is that no one knows exactly what should be done. Whether the abandonment of our college owned institutions would help is certainly unknown. But since the recent wranglings that have taken place in Montgomery over the subject of appropriations between the University and Auburn one is led to believe that these institutions could be little worse off if they were privately owned.

In our public institutions there are so many students who should not be in college. Today at this university the classes are so ov crowded that it is difficult for to get more than a mere sm tering of what he should get in t way of education. In some cla there should never be more th ten students, but at present th classes have over fifty in some stances. Very little is acco plished under such conditions.

This whole problem of edu
tion is so complicated that our educators seem helpless. T do not know in which directio turn. The only hope is that so one will have the courage to f
the situation squarely and to w out a fair solution to the proble
Otherwise our educational inst
tions will fall under their weight.—Crimson-White.

Pro and Con

Opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily expressions of the editorial policy of the paper. It is a column of personal comment and is open to all who wish to submit sincere and constructive criticisms. Letters should be signed, marked "Flambeau" and mailed in the postoffice.

◆

To His Excellency—the Duke of Gainesville.

The fact that the business manager of the Florida Alligator has chosen to write a two column editorial cannot be passed by lightly. Work of such merit deserves some consideration, otherwise we could pass it by with a little good advice.

Mr. Business Manager has chosen to be irrelevant in his choice of rebuttals. Most of them can be ignored as having no bearing, direct or otherwise, upon the subject of peaceful relations on an international basis. He quotes an article from Time magazine which merely states the amount of expenditures made for armaments by various nations. No one can deny that war is an instrument of national policy and that nations are arming to the teeth to keep it so. Our premise is not for one nation to disarm as against the increasing armament programs of other nations, our premise is to foster amicable relations among all nations.

If Mr. Fairbanks can prove that "F. S. C. W.'s pinko-pacificists" (touching expression, that) have asserted anything about their "international peace movement," then he isn't very well informed. If being proud of a resolution which kept a reputable organization from going on record as preferring peace is a virtue, may we congratulate him on his virtuosity. Also, the attack of Mr. Fairbanks upon our faculty was unjust and unfounded. Perhaps he is proud of that too.

And as for women being merely ornamental (and who would ever "dream complacently of a beautiful world in which all Men were noble"?), we should like to lay a wager as to how many of these noblemen of nature would be the first to enlist should a war be declared. They would look lovely in uniform cheering at the sidelines or issuing orders, but beyond that they would detest war. That's our theory—a theory which is also a fact. Heroism is nothing if it is merely verbal.

If there is anything more we can do for you, let us know

Signed, EDITH PATTERSON

Collegiate Come-Back

◆

With the termination of E ter vacation spring fever has cended upon us mightily. For information of the general pu it is a malady in which the in the blood of the patient turn lead and settles in the rear p tion of the lap. At this pe college professors are particula annoying, especially those w disturb our slumbers by lectur in magnified tones. Which minds us that some profess don't realise that the twenty-after bell means that class is o
Although we have one particu faculty member in mind, we there'll be more than one of w this will apply.

* * * *

We heard one of the legisla members at the dinner Wedn night officiously announce " world is never going to be sav nothing but education." Did mean bigger and better kin gartens, Mister?

* * * *

The Cincinnati Bearcat a
"We can get along without Hu
Yeah, but for Huey Long?

* * * *

What's the matter with business eye of the aver
F. S. C. W. miss? The siege measles, followed by the donni smoked glasses has not as yet b the inspiration for a single tu
—We'd gladly buy the cup some aspiring student who'd s the profits.

* * * *

The Brown Jag defines vir
in the female, lack of temptati in the male, lack of opportun
Although we're rabid femin
we guess we of Florida State h to be placed in the second cla fication.

* * * *

To those who have lived thro the following experience we de cate this poem:

Alone, alone he strugg soaked in the downpouring to rent,
And the drowning forces b him down with a voice for boding and rearant.
The elements rushed a horribly hiss'd,
And gasping his last in t
heavy mist,
He turned and fell, and fa
ly swore,
"Who the hell left the s on the shower room floor"
—L'

* * * *

Seniors' friends please t
note: only twenty-six shopp days till graduation.

* * * *

The Bulldog offers fo
weekly daffynitions:

Malady—a rhythmic song
Boron—a person mentally d ficient.
Flaw—the bottom surface
a building.
Cup—slang for policeman

* * * *

We are told that chapel
Wellsley was abolished in 190 predict that at Florida State ch el, like the brook, will go on f ever.

* * * *

I used to eat wheaties breakfast every morning. I d open the top of the package a bread knife, sprinkle a quan of the cereal in an ordinary meal dish, pour in just eno cream, and coat the mixture some plain white sugar. It wa so bad when, grasping the edg the bed to pull myself out mo ing, I'd tear the bed to bits u me. I didn't mind particul
when the steering wheel of car crumpled under my hands we turned over three times the ditch. I thought it wa good joke when I banged the of my freternity and the b fell to the ground. But wh tried to kiss the only girl I loved and broke her neck, I w back to grapenuts.—Frivol.

* * * *

Lazy Man's Poem

You are a wonderful
Marvelous gal.
Et cetera, ditto,
And so forth, et al.

Mercer Clust

The Social Week

Juniors to Honor Seniors At Banquet Saturday Night

The first annual Junior-Senior banquet will be held in the downstairs dining room tomorrow night at 8:30. This banquet which will take the place of the usual outdoor party given by the juniors for their senior sisters each year, will be a formal affair.

Mercia Scott, general chairman for the banquet, announces that the color scheme of blue and orange will be carried out in the floral decorations and in the candles which will be placed on each table. The favors consisting of paperweights with pencils attached will be presented to each of the seniors.

Following the banquet juniors will escort their senior sisters to the Junior Minstrels in the college auditorium.

Girls in charge of the arrangements include: Mercia Scott, general chairman; Dorothy Shaw, chairman of signing up; and Nadia Grainger, chairman of decorations and favors.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
1935
April 26 to May 4

Sunday
11:00 a. m. Church services
7:15 p. m. Y.W.C.A. Vespers

Monday
5:30 p. m. Orchestra Rehearsal
6:00 p. m. Newman club banquet—Dutch Kitchen
7:15 p. m. Miss Sayer—lecture on "Dress and Personality—Broward club room
7:30 p. m. Glee club rehearsal—Auditorium
9:00 p. m. Sorority meetings

Tuesday
11:30 a. m. Convocation—Speaker, Dr. W. G. Dodd
5:30 p. m. Freshman tea—Miss Gertrude Vermillion hostess
5:30 p. m. Orchestra Rehearsal
8:15 p. m. A. G. O. Music recital

Wednesday
7:15 a. m. Worship service
5:30 p. m Freshman at home—Jennie Murphree—Dr. Barber, host
7:30 p. m. Glee club rehearsal
8:15 p. m. Emily Johnson—Spoken English recital—Augusta Conradi Theater

Thursday
11:30 a. m. Day students meeting
8:30 p. m. College dinner
7:30 p. m. Orchestra rehearsal

Friday
6 30 p. m. Piastacowo banquet—Floridan Hotel
8:00 p. m. Play Night—Gymnasium

Saturday
8 30 a. m. Sophomore - Senior breakfast
5:00 p. m. May Day
8:15 p. m. University of Florida Glee club

Newman Club to Hold Banquet for Newly Elected Officers

The Newman club will hold its first annual installation banquet at the Dutch Kitchen Monday at 6 30 p. m. At this time the officers who were recently elected will officially assume their duties and the various committees for next year will be appointed.

The outgoing president, Rosa Doub is the general chairman and her committees are as follows: Invitations, Clotilde O'Rourke; publicity, Jane Quinn; arrangements, Mauvis Lussier; and place cards, Angela Griley.

Following the banquet there will be a program consisting of toasts to the new and old oficers.

The girls who will be installed at this formal banquet are; president, Grace Mary Webster; vice president, Mauvis Lussier; recording secretary, Jane Quinn; corresponding secretary, Vivian Testa, treasurer, Clotilde O'Rourke, and parliamentarian, Catherine McGarry.

The outgoing officers are: Rosa Doub president; Grace Mary Webster, vice president; Eloise Brizard, treasurer: Clotilde O'Rourke, recording secretary; Marjorie Meuller, corresponding secretary; and Mauvis Lussier, parliamentarian.

Vermillion to Have An "At Home" For Twenty Freshmen

Miss Gertrude Vermillion will entertain twenty freshmen at an "at home" in Reynolds Hall parlor Tuesday afternoon from 5:30 to 6 30.

Those who have been invited to attend are: Dorothy Swanbom, Dorothy Williams, Adelaide Sleughter, Mabry Sumner, Martha Battey, Helene Cordes, Alucia Crowell, Amy Marie Harris, Marthe King, Elizabeth Knapp, Catherine Levy, Mildred Long, Hazel Myrick, Genette Perry and Letta Peck.

Barber to Entertain Freshman Students With Tea

Dr. and Mrs. L. S Barber will continue the series of freshman teas Wednesday afternoon at 5.30 in Jennie Murphree parlor.

The freshmen who have received invitations to attend are: Carroll Henderson, Margaret Ames, Charlotte Peisang, Marguerite Byrd, Martha Craig, Julia Whaley, Jimmie Richbourg, Barbara Holmes, Mary Sadler, Margaret Jury, Pauline Jacobson, Sarah Sealy, Freida Maxwell, Jean Baughman, Virginia Lide, Florence Trushin, Audrey Hastings, Ida Tyler, Kathleen Gruppe, Mildred Lee, Willa Mae Hall, and Marguerite Huxford.

Mauvis Lussier, Rosa Doub, and Grace Mary Webster will attend the Southeast Province convention of the Newman clubs which is being held at the hotel Ansley in Atlanta this week-end.

Personal Mention

Sarah Graham will attend the installation of a chapter of the Alpha Omicron Pi sorority at the University of Georgia in Athens thris week-end.

Yvette Broux will spend the week-end in Miami with friends.

Grace Mary Webster and Rosa Doub attended the convention of the Florida division of the National Council of Catholic Women which was held in Jacksonville this week.

Margaret Smith of Lake Wales is visiting Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews this week.

Doris Lockhart visited Betty Ellen Smith Wednesday. Doris is a Kappa Alpha Theta alumna from Sophie Newcomb and while here she also visited the local sorority.

Among the visitors to the college this week were Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Sanquist, Mrs. W. E. Middleton, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Frippe, and Mr. and Mrs Hugh Williams.

Mrs W F Hosea is visiting her daughters Sarah and Martha at the Sigma Kappa house

Margie Glen is spending the week-end in Chipley with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Monroe, Grace Monroe, Shands Commander, and Betty Mason, all from Jacksonville, attended Julia Monroe's organ recital here Tuesday.

Miss Gladys Koch was called to her home in Spencer, Iowa, on account of the serious illness of her father.

Press Meeting Held At L. S. U.

(Continued From Page One)

his liberties were retricted." They also condemned "the subservience fo President James M. Smith to Senator Huey P. Long in enforcing this restriction" and deplored "the apathy of the L. S. U. student body in taking no action against this imposition on their student press."

Four L. S. U. delegates to the convention argued to reject the resolution and particularly the phrase "deploring the L. S. U. student body" because they declared every student paper has censorship and that L. S. U. should not be made an example.

However, the resolution was passed by a vote of 42 to 13 with the representatives in favor of the passage taking the stand that "if we don't resent censorship steps taken by Long we will give him the opportunity to repeat his actions."

The three-day meeting, which was attended by approximately a hundred students from southern colleges and universities, was divided into four discussion groups including one on newspapers, one on annuals, a group on women's student government, and one on men's student government. General editorial policies, campus coverage and general news, the editorial staff in general, business management of publications, and newspaper mechanics were among the topics discussed in the newspaper division, which was separated into the editors' and business managers' groups.

At the opening meeting of the convention many welcoming addresses were made, including short talks by T. Semmes Walmsley, Mayor of New Orleans, Dr. Dinwiddie and Dr. Butler, President of Tulane and Sophie Newcomb, respectively, T. Hale Boggs, editor of Tulane Hullabaloo, and John McDaniel, president of the student council.

Principal speakers for the convention included Thomas Neblett, president of N. S. F. A., Dr. Harris, dean of Tulane university law school and president of the association of American law schools, and J. M. Thompson, publisher of New Orleans Item Tribune.

It was decided by popular vote to hold the press convention in Memphis next year.

COLLEGE GIVES BIENNIAL DINNER IN HONOR OF MEMBERS OF LEGISLATURE

The biennial formal dinner given by the college in honor of the legislators was held in the dining room last Wednesday evening at 6:50.

The tables at which girls from the different counties entertained their representatives and senators were decorated with low bowls of spring flowers.

Hostesses for the various districts for this occasion were: First district, Robbye Estes, Mary Hudson, Grace McKee; second district Barbara Bell, Julia Lamar; third district, Westa Wilkins, Grace Green; fourth district, Rachel McKinnon; fifth district, Myrtle Pillingim, Mayme Russell; sixth district, Alma Lester, Marjorie Butler; seventh district, Elizabeth Whiddon, Alucia Crowell, Carol Farabee, Virginia Clark, and Mildred Booth; eighth district, Louise Robertson; ninth district, Frances Lingle and Esther Hay; tenth district, Audrey Smith; eleventh district, Annette Terris, Cornelia Garrick, Marion Mason and Hazel Goza.

The twelfth district, Mattaloy Hart, Julia O'Quinn, and Marion McKinney; thirteenth district, Helen Eisman, Mary Frances Hales, and Catherine Fox; fourteenth district, Anna Groover and Ruth Persons; fifteenth district, Evelyn Chauncy and Evelyn Stump; sixteenth district, Marie Spurlock; seventeenth district, Mary Elizabeth Swear; eighteenth district, Mildred Boss, Julia Monroe, and Elizabeth Kirby-Smith; nineteenth district, Eleanor Flint, Edith Ayers, Muriel Baker, and Alice Wahl; twentieth district, Virginia Cromartie and Roberta Rogers; twenty-first district, Lucille Watson; twenty-second district, Gladys Folsom; twenty-third district, Frances Pemberton and Elise Barrett.

The twenty-fourth district, Mary Beaver, Mary Frances Whisnant, Margaret Duncan, and Nancy L. Stewart; twenty-fifth district, Melba Hutchinson, Annis Bowen, Ruth McAnulty, and Lucille Clendennon: twenty-sixth district, Mary Ola Reynolds, Marjorie Carter, and Nancy Wilkinson; twenty-seventh, Wava Godwin, Muriel Nelson, Margaret Roe, and Dot Ryan; twenty-eighth district, Anne Sams and Minna Dunn; twenty-ninth, Mary Key; thirtieth, Ines Harrison; thirty-first, Raymondine Ponce and Edith Manford; thirty-second, Wilma Bristol, Lillian Turlington, and Louise Bryan.

Thirty-third district, Marjorie Horton, Ava'ine Lancaster, Marjorie Raulerson, and Lillian Simmons; thirty-fourth district, Mary Irene McKay, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Evelyn Collins, and Eleanor Murrill; thirty-fifth, Anna Marie Mitchell, Caroline Oliver, and Mary Massie; thirty-sixth district, Mary Alford, Adelaide Slaughter, Mary Francis Burford, Edith Hobson, and Mary Helen Forth; thirty-seventh district, Doris Risk, Betty Sweet Smith, and Virginia Earle; thirty-eighth district, Elsie Parker, Lucille Edenfield, Sarah Graham, and Lucille Clendennon.

BECKHAM ENTERTAINS FORMALLY WITH TEA AT HER HOME TUESDAY AFTERNOON

Mrs. Charlotte M. Beckham entertained day students, members of sororities, and off-campus students with a formal tea in her home on West Call street Tuesday afternoon from 5:00 to 6:00.

The rooms of the house were opened en suite and attractively arranged. The decorations consisted of mixed spring flowers which were matched by the candles on the tea table.

The guests were met at the door by Marjorie Pain and Martha Makemsom and were escorted to the receiving line consisting of Mrs. Beckham, Jean Gilles, Miss Rose Denham, and Margaret Graham.

Pouring coffee were Mrs. Rosabelle Gilliland and Miss Elizabeth Timberlake.

The refreshments of coffee, a variety of sandwiches, and mints were served by Evelyn Ballard, Nadia Grainger, LeLuce Planck, Marjorie Carter, Phyllis Gewan, and Genevieve Crowley.

Assisting Mrs. Beckham in caring for the guests was a floor committee of floor hostesses comprised of Mrs. Flossie Currie, Mrs. B. K. Scott, and G. S. Lanier.

The arrangements of the rooms was planned by Mrs. Flossie Currie and the flower arrangements was in charge of Miss Rose Denham.

Expert Addresses Home Ec Classes

(Continued From Page One)

man, received her Ph.D. degree from Columbia University. At Columbia she studied under Dr. Sherman who is prominent for his work in the field of nutrition. After receiving her Ph.D. degree, Dr. Eichelberger joined the staff of the Midwestern Branch of the American Red Cross as assistant national director of nutrition service. In February 1931, she accepted a position with the association with which she is now connected. Part of her time is spent lecturing on food and nutritional problems to educated groups at nearly all of the leading universities and colleges in the country.

In addition to her business duties, Dr. Eichelberger has found time to be an active member of both the American Home Economics and the American Dietetics association.

Kent Receives Copy Of "Florida Poets"

Harriet Kent, a senior at the Florida High school was awarded a 1924 copy of "Florida Poets" for her poem "Illimitable" which appeared in the March issue of the "Cycle."

Judges considered her poem the best submitted by a high school student this year.

A poem entitled, "Florida," written by Frances Johnson, a student at the demonstration school, also appeared in the March issue of the "Cycle," which is a magazine for the poetry of undergraduates and high school students.

Eta Sigma Phi Initiates Two

(Continued From Page One)

by Marcia Buchanan, president of the club. The colors of Eta Sigma Phi, royal purple and gold, figured in the decorations and favors. The banquet was concluded with the singing of "Garnet and Gold" in Latin. Guests invited: Dr. Wicher, Dr. Conradi, Miss Louise Conradi, and Dr. and Mrs. Seymour.

Following the banquet Dr. Wicher, who is the former head of the classics department of Hunter College, spoke in the Augusta Conradi theater at 8:15 o'clock on Arthur Hausman, poet, and author of the Shropshire Lad and Last Poems. He discussed the life and personality of that English poet, reading selections from several of Hausman's poems. Immediately after the lecture Dr. Whicher read selected poems from his Sonnet Singing.

Alumnae of Eta Sigma Phi who returned for the week-end were: Isabel Brainard, Louise Goodbread, Annelie Ball Sterk, Catherine Williams, Katherine Williams Lawrence, Katy Gold Parker, Martha Bradmerkel, Margaret Scott, Josephine Tharpe, Madele Halms, Vivia Craig, Jesse Rou Moon, Dorothy Feinberg, and Irene Brunson Miller.

PI BETA PHI CELEBRATES FOUNDER'S DAY WITH BREAKFAST AT FLORIDAN

The members of the Pi Beta Phi sorority will celebrate its Founder's Day with a breakfast tomorrow morning at 9:00 in the Floridan hotel. The breakfast tables will be decorated with bowls of spring flowers arranged with asparagus fern.

The program, which will consist of toasts and speeches, is being planned by Miss Elizabeth A. Griffing, faculty adviser for the sorority. The general chairman for the breakfast is Mary Lee Perkins.

Members and pledges of Pi Beta Phi who will attend are, Betty Boggs, Jean Clark, Marguerite Groover, Evelyn Haynie, Marjorie Helveston, Helen Kibler, Frances Lurvey, Mary Irene McKay, Frances Morrow, Martha Neeld, Ethel Fair Pillans, Charlotte Stevens, Mary Virginia Warren, Helen Wilson, Ruth Conner, Anne Durr, Marian Heper, Betty Parker, Edwina Wakefield, Arline Grey Lockhart.

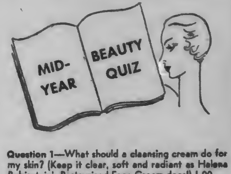
Phil Asher, Dorothy Bellamy, Betty Chitty, Betty Clark, Rose Evans, Eloise Prink, Celia Crey, Sarah Graham, Florence Kerr, Mary Kinser, Mildred Long, Virginia Laughlin, Juanita McElhannon, Kasimer Mumby, Betty Mumford, Dorothy Osburn, Shirley Pemberton, Mary E. Ramsey, Marian Alice Rogers, Katherine Rogers, Ethel Mae Shaffer, Katherine Todd, Jean Treadwell, Bobbie Wells, Virginia White, Ellen Wiggins, Martha Lee Wilkinson, and Lois Adkins.

Theta Upsilon Will Entertain Rushees At Camp

The members and pledges of the Theta Upsilon sorority will entertain their rushes informally at camp this week-end.

The group will leave for camp Saturday morning and will return Sunday. An informal program consisting of games and skits has been planned.

Hostess for this affair will be Marcia Buchanan, Helen Evans, Johnny Hardee, Virginia Tucker, Lillian Trotter, Anne Donnell, Margaret Neff, Neita Wright, Gertrude Tomkies, and Barbara Greene

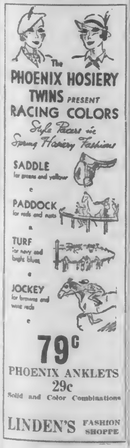


Question 1—What should a cleansing cream do for my skin? (Keep it clear, soft and radiant as Helena Rubinstein's Pasteurized Face Cream does!) 1.00.

Question 2—What shall I do for blemishes? (Wash nightly with Blackhead and Open Pore Paste, and apply Acne Cream to affected parts. This scientific treatment by Helena Rubinstein is wonderfully effective for every type of skin.) 1.00 each.

Question 3—Should I use cosmetics? (They are a necessary part of good grooming! Cosmetics created by Helena Rubinstein actually benefit your skin; accent your natural coloring perfectly!) Smart, Parisian make-up in the latest shades. From 1.00.

Bennett's



The PHOENIX HOSIERY TWINS PRESENT RACING COLORS
Style Pacers in Spring Hosiery Fashions
SADDLE for greens and yellow
PADDOCK for reds and rusts
TURF for navy and bright blues
JOCKEY for browns and wine reds
79c
PHOENIX ANKLETS
29c
Solid and Color Combinations
LINDEN'S FASHION SHOPPE

SUPERIOR
Dry Cleaners and Dyers
"SUPERIOR SERVICE SELLS CLEANING"
SILKS AND FANCIES OUR SPECIALTY
All Garments Insured Against Fire and Theft
308½ S. Monroe Telephone 216

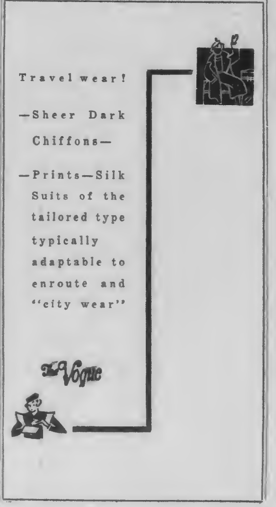
Bennett's

Bennett's Special Rich Ice Cream—pint 15c

Bennett's Club Luncheon 40c

CHOICE OF:
Baked Chicken with Dressing
Tuna Fish Salad with Boiled Egg
VEGETABLES:
Fresh Turnips
Asparagus on Toast
Pineapple Salad
Banana Pudding
Sweet Milk
Coffee
Iced Tea
Buttermilk

20c Fresh Fruit Strawberry Sundae 10c
20c Frozen Fudge Sundae 15c
15c Chocolate Syrup Sundae 10c
15c Apple Pie a la Mode 10c
20c Chicken Salad Sandwich 15c
15c Orangeade with Pineapple Sherbet 10c
15c Maple Pecan Sundae 10c



Travel wear!
—Sheer Dark Chiffons—
—Prints—Silk Suits of the tailored type typically adaptable to enroute and "city wear"
The Vogue

Try me
I'll never let you down
LUCKY STRIKE
Copyright 1935, The American Tobacco Company.
I'm your best friend
I am your Lucky Strike
TUNE IN—Luckies are on the air Saturdays, with THE HIT PARADE, over NBC Network 8 to 9 p. m. E. S. T.

Rose Festival Is Held Today

Thomasville Show Draws College Students And Teachers

The fourteenth annual rose show which is being staged in Thomasville this afternoon will be attended by many of the college students who will make the trip in private parties and on a special bus.

The rose festival is held each year on the last Friday in April in the airplane hangar at Vose field, a location well adapted to the handling of the large throng of visitors.

The building was formally opened to the public at 11 o'clock this morning and will remain open until 11 o'clock tonight, the exhibit being held for one day only. Just prior to the public opening of the building, the judges inspected the various exhibits and awarded the ribbons in accordance with the decisions.

Among the flowers which will be placed on exhibition are azaleas, violets, pansies, and every kind of flower grown in this section. Thousands of rose bushes are now in full bloom and an eyeful of beauty awaits those who will visit the show.

According to a statement received from the office of the director of residence halls students on academic probation will be permitted to make the trip provided they do not miss any classes and provided they return to the college campus by 8:30 this evening. The trip will not be counted as a week-end if the above requests are adhered to.

Students may make the trip in private parties or on the special bus leaving the college in front of Bryan hall at 2:30. Students will sign on pleasure slips in the offices of the residence halls.

Among the students who have signed up to make the trip are:

Mary Wallis Brandon, Dorothy Edwards, Mary Smith, Arline Edwards, Evelyn Ballad, Macy Waller McCormick, and Wilma Ter Bush, Frances Forth, Mary Helen Forth, Mae Whitten, Gertrude Kuhn, Jean Clark, Mrs. Frances Wall, Dorothy Shaw, Bonnie Tomlinson. Members of the faculty are also expected to attend this fete.

County Welfare Under Students

Social Science Courses Offer Experience

In the absence of the Leon county executive secretary of social work, students in sociology 402 have taken over a great deal of the social work in Leon county under the supervision of their instructor, Dr. Elinor Nims.

The students look after specific cases in the county and "cover" the office of public welfare headquarters on Saturday morning. They have worked for the past month and will continue their duties through May.

Dr. Nims has in other ways been instrumental in giving professional guidance to problems of the local community and the state.

She now acts as advisor to the committees of the Emergency Relief Administration and the Leon county welfare association who meet with a state administrative officer for conferences with her every two weeks.

Dr. Nims also has an article appearing in the current issue of Welfare Progress, a magazine of the Florida State Board of Welfare, on "Opportunities for Training for Social Work in the Summer of 1935." It is a discussion of graduate training in social work and a new plan which will be endorsed at the summer session of this college.

Snooping Sportster

With spring fever come the class baseball games! This afternoon at 3:30 the winners of last week's meet, Juniors vs. Freshmen, will compete for the championship of the school. A game between the two losers, Seniors vs. Sophomores will follow. Here's the lineup:

Seniors: Captain L'Abbe, Bailey, Ferguson, J. Lewis, Redfield, Cameron, Takach, Evans, Lovell, Stevens.

Juniors: Captain Tombaugh, Emmelhainz, Tuton, Levy, Harold, Athon, Blood, Farabee, Mackery.

Sophomores: Captain Viertel, Lessey, Weeks, Stevens, Clark, Danne, Hethcox, Miller, Baker, Ward.

Freshmen: Captain Gehan, Sjostrom, West, F. Lewis, Marsh, Holloway, Arbuthnot, Cook, Brooks, Joffre, Pratt, Ostlund, Barrett.

Officials: Mary Settle, Dorothy White.

Odds and Evens will be at it again bright and early Saturday morning, 9:30, to see who can crack the hardest balls, (and the most bats).

From these teams will be chosen the one to play against the Faculty at 3:00. The Faculty team is also still unknown. One prof confessed he not only didn't know what time the game was to start but murmured that the team will be composed of the first nine nine to reach the field. Those first nine may think the Student team is a gang of sissies—but they may be fooled.

Been seeing a number of girls with wet hair in the late afternoons from practicing for the Odd-Even swim meet next Friday at Play Nite. Anyone wishing to compete is to see her class manager. They are: Freshman, Janet Cook; Sophomore, Martha Makemson; Junior, Carol Farabee; Senior, Claire Redfield.

Life Saving classes for new membership, renewal of old, and Examiners will be started Friday night at 8:00 and finished Wednesday at the same time.

See you at the gym!!!

Faculty and Students Will Attend Regional Eta Sigma Phi Meeting

Ten members of the local chapter of Eta Sigma Phi, national classical honorary, and two faculty members will attend the regional meeting of the fraternity to be held in Decatur, Georgia, at Agnes Scott college today and tomorrow.

Faculty members of Eta Sigma Phi who will attend the meeting are Miss Edith West and Dean Olivia Dorman, professors of classics, while students from here attending are Lillian Turlington, Dorothy Moorhead, Rebecca Keith, Marcia Buchanan, Virginia Earle, Evelyn Lancaster, Catherine Ash, Martha Whitaker, Helenmary Fritsch, and Mary Etta Thistlethwaite.

Josephine Thorpe, local alumna of Florida State College, will also attend.

Political Pot-Pourri

(Continued from page one)

protect the claims of injured workmen.

The senate, which is far ahead of the house with its work, has passed only minor bills for want of something better to do. Last week, it approved a conditional moritorium on public indebtedness in Florida which had already passed the house, 86 to 5. This bill requires that for a period of two years the courts shall not require payment upon principal or interest due upon bonds or any other evidences of indebtedness of taxing units "for a sum greater than is found to be reasonable."

Other bills of secondary importance that passed the senate this week were: the house-approved bill, repealing sections of the 1929 act, permitting foreclosure on tax deeds for collection of state and county taxes; a bill providing for regulation of the sale and handling of poultry and eggs; and the administration-approved bill to provide free school books for all public school children.

Among the dozens of minor bills that have slid through the house was the Coogler bill to establish delinquent tax adjustment boards in the counties, and a bill by Kelly of Nassau allowing absentee voting by persons who maintain their legal residences in Florida.

Routine grinding of the mill closed the fourth week of session and all wait hopefully for the first major decision.

Speech Students Portray Russia

Annual Free Production To Be Presented On May 10 and 11

"He Who Gets Slapped," a play of the old Russian regime, will be presented May 10 and 11 in the Augusta Conradi theater under the direction of Miss Kemper Martin Moore as the annual speech department play given free for students.

The scene is laid in a European circus, the main character being "He," a clown who is always being slapped and who is thwarted in all that he attempts. The heroine of the story is "Consuelo" who represents an ordinary type and who is a mere pawn in the hands of her father in gaining his ends. The other characters are all circus people—clowns, bareback riders, trapese performers and ringmasters, all of whom are authentic types of the old Russian school.

The cast of the play, which is composed of members of the advanced classes in speech, includes Virginia Kee, Jimmy Lewis, Catherine McGarry, Ruth Mock, Betty Etlinger, Wilma Mayor, Emily Johnson, Betty Boggs, Rosalie Powell, Lois Hazel, Helen Hammond, Viola Taylor, Frances Lingle, Mary Jeanne McKay, Louise Schwaderer, Vivian Marshall and Sarah Hosea.

Members of the speech department on the production staff are: stage manager, Betty Peck; assistant stage manager, Evelyn Collins; properties, Pauline Spencer; sound effects, Rosalyn Daum and Mary Lou Moore; and music, Jane Hafer.

Emily Johnson To Give Recital May 1

The speech department will present Emily Johnson in her junior recital in the Augusta Conradi theater Wednesday, May 1, at 8:15 p. m. in a program consisting of two one-act plays, "The First Dress Suit,", a comedy by Russell Medcraft, and "The Hour Glass" by William Butler Yeates.

Emily, who is a speech major, has been active for the past three years in campus productions. This year she directed the Even demonstration and is at present directing Junior Minstrels. She is also taking part in the play "He Who Gets Slapped," which will be presented by the speech department next week.

All students are invited to attend the recital, according to Mrs. Mary Buford, associate professor of speech.

Books Call All To Adventures

The library, in keeping with national book week, is displaying a large print copy of the poem, "Everyday in Books," by John A. Holmes. The table devoted to the topic of the week offers a wide selection of romance and adventure books, of which the following are recommended as being especially interesting:

Ding Goes to Russia, Jay N. Darling; Ranchero, Stewart Edward White; Trader Horn, Alfred Horn; People of The Serpent, Edward Herbert Thompson; Hot Countries, Alec Waugh; Odtaa, John Masefield; The Purple Land, W. H. Hudson.

The second show case features a display of wood-cuts depicting the many types of ancient sailing vessels—Anglo-Saxon boats of Richard the second's time, Noah's the Spanish galleon, the Mayflower, Norman vessels, Genoese warships, Dutch and French men o' war, medieval barques, and lastly, Magellan's "Victoria."

Music Faculty Members Judge Tampa Contest

Five members of the College music faculty are in Tampa this week acting as judges for the high school state music festival and contest held annually in that city.

Faculty members officiating include Dean Ella Scoble Opperman, dean of the school of music; Miss Anna Mae Sharpe, professor of violin; Mr. Owen Sellers, professor of cello and wind instruments; Miss Zadie Phipps, assistant professor of public school music; and Miss Mary Esther Winslow, professor of piano.

Graham Talks To Kadelphis

(Continued From Page One)

Ruth Taylo r,Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Williams, Dr. and Mrs. David Briggs, Dr. and Mrs. Ralph Eyman, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Finner, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Moon, Mr. and Mrs. James Rickards, Dr. Mark De Graff, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Graham.

Beta Pi Theta Pledges Present French Comedy At Meeting Last Week

At the meeting of Beta Pi Theta French honorary, Monday night, April 15, in Broward lounge the new pledges presented the play "L'Homme Qui Epousa Une Femme Muette" ("The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife") by Anatole France. The cast was as follows; Dr. Simon, act 1, Ruth Dickson; Dr. Simon, act 2, Ruth Feinberg; Maitre Pierre, Wilsa Ter Bush; Fanchon, Lillian Turlington; Jean, Mrs. Irene Miller (who replaced Leona Stimmel); Dr. Pollidore, Mary Carson; Lafemme Catherine, Marjorie Carter. The play was a requisite to initiation which will take place in a few weeks. The evening program was concluded with refreshments.

The faculty members attending were: Mrs. Irene Miller, Miss Lucy Lester, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Miss Dorothy Breen, Dr. A. R. Seymour, and Dr. Marjorie Burkes. The student members of the fraternity present were: June Bullard, Olivia Embrey, Opal Gray, Belle Hanshaw, Elinor Payne, Virginia Tucker, Betty Boggs, Alice Porter, Mauvis Lussier, Anita Mitchell, and Ruth Mock.

GELBERG'S
"Style Plus Economy"

Annual
COTTON WASH DRESS SALE

All fast colors — all sizes — new merchandise — values to $3.95.

— Sale Prices —
$1.00
AND
$1.95

Including all famous leading brands—Outstanding values—latest style—huge money savers.

Ideal Dresses for School, Sports and Street Wear

ALL OXFORDS, values to $4.95, on sale at one price $2.95
Solid White, Brown and White, Black and White.
All sizes . . . Newest. styles.

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

The Laundry Does It Best!
☞ Phones: Laundry 808
Dry Cleaning 866
The White Way Laundry & Cleaners
Scientific Sanitary Service
The Best by Test—Let Us Prove It

FOR MOTHER'S DAY
May 12th
Send her the gift she will treasure most,
the one that only you can give . . .
YOUR PHOTOGRAPH
PIKE'S STUDIO
107 W. College • Telephone 787

THE SWEET SHOP
OPPOSITE GILCHRIST
708 W. Jefferson WE DELIVER Telephone 1091
— TRY OUR —
Small Salad Plate with 5c Drink 25c
or
Regular Cold Plate with 5c Drink 35c
ONLY THE BEST OF EVERYTHING!

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Fredric March - Chas. Laughton
in
"LES MISERABLES"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Ben Bernie - Geo. Raft.
in
"STOLEN HARMONY"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Richard Barthelmess
in
"4 HOURS TO KILL"
THURSDAY
Warren William
in
"THE CASE OF THE CURIOUS BRIDE"
—ALSO—
TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT!

RITZ THEATRE
SATURDAY
Ken Maynard
in
"IN OLD SANTE FE"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
"LES MISERABLES"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
"STOLEN HARMONY"
THURSDAY AND FRIDAY
"ONE NIGHT OF LOVE"
with GRACE MOORE

"Sure, enjoy yourself," said Jim. "It's a ding good cigarette."

I was working way late at the office one night and ran out of cigarettes. When Jim the watchman came through I tackled him for a smoke.

"Sure," says Jim, and he handed over a pack of Chesterfields. "Go ahead, Mr. Kent, take three or four."

Jim said he'd smoked a lot of cigarettes in his time, but he'd put Chesterfield up in front of any of 'em when it came to taste.

..."and they ain't a bit strong either," is the way Jim put it.

That was the first Chesterfield I ever smoked. And I'm right there with him, too, when he says it's a ding good cigarette.

Interesting—how people find out about Chesterfield

© 1935, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

Make Your Obiesance
To the May Queen
And Her Court

The Florida Flambeau

Published bv the Students of Florida State College For Women

Congratulations To
The Incoming CGA
Personnel

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, May 3, 1935 NUMBER TWENTY-SEVEN

Installing Of CGA Officials To be Monday

Blood and Graham Will Succeed De Montigne And Fritsch

OUTGOING GIRLS PASS ON TORCH

Student Body is Invited To Gilchrist Hall Reception

The newly elected members of the executive council, judiciary, and lower court of the College Government association for the year of 1935-1936 will be installed in a ceremony to be held in front of Bryan hall on Monday evening at 7:15.

Members of the student-body are invited to attend the reception being given by the old officers of C. G. A. for new officers in Gilchrist parlors after the ceremony of installation.

New Officers

Those who will be installed Monday evening are Katherine Blood, president of the College Government association; Margaret Graham, chairman of judiciary; Martha Makemson, first vice-president; Janice Borton, second vice-president; Marjorie Raulerson, secretary; and Margaret K. Anderson, treasurer.

Under the judiciary division of college government, additional officers to be installed are Betty Meyer and Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, senior representatives to senate; Josephine Binion and Marjorie Moore, junior representatives; and Dorothea Marsh; sophomore representative. Betty Aiken, Gladys Oliver, Virginia Cromartie, Audrey Farmer, Lillian Turlington, and Barbara Greene will be new house chairmen; Hilda Spradlin, chairman of freshman commission, and Minna Dunn will act as freshman advisor for the coming year.

Annual Ceremony

Led by the retiring president, Carolina DeMontigne, this year's officers will enter from the steps at the right side of Bryan hall to meet the incoming official, led by Katherine Blood, president-elect.

Carolina and the retiring chairman of judiciary, Helenmary Fritsch, will hand their caps and gowns to the incoming president, Katherine Blood, and incoming chairman, Margaret Graham. The two latter will light their candles at the flames of the candles held by the outgoing officials. Then the new president will install the other officers of the association, who will light their candles from

(Continued on Page Two)

Exhibit Relates Schools' History

Books Depict Education 300 Years Ago

The college library is displaying etchings of old schools and school scenes in observation of the tercentenary anniversary of the high school's establishment in the United States.

The etchings include such scenes as the master forcing his way into the building and the recess hour. Old-fashioned illustrated alphabets, multiplication tables, and selections from the reading material of the old primers are shown, as well as some of the elementary spelling books and New England readers.

The other show-case offers as samples of the handiwork of earlier days, a hand-woven coverlet, two samplers, and a little girl's doll.

The bulletin board bears an illustrated map of the United States showing significant incidents in the westward movement of secondary education from the Atlantic coast. It is based on historical data furnished by Professor R. D. Matthews of the University of Pennsylvania.

The following books give an insight into early education: In Our Convent Days, Agnes Repplier; Liberalism and Education in the Eighteenth Century, Allen Hansen; A Schoolmaster of the Great City, Angelo Patri; Early New England Schools, Walter Herbert Small; A Mountain School, O. Latham Hatcher; Some Famous American Schools, Oscar Fay Adams. The Evolution of the Common School, Edward H. Reiser.

NEW OFFICERS TO BE INSTALLED

KATHERINE BLOOD
MARGARET GRAHAM

Katherine Blood, of Winter Haven, as president of College Government Association, and Margaret Graham, of Tampa, as Chairman of Judiciary, will be installed with the traditionally impressive ceremony on Bryan hall steps, Monday evening at 7:15.

Chemists Hold New York Meet

Lewis and Vermillion Are Placed on Awards Committees

Dr. Leland Lewis was appointed a member of the Charles Herty award committee and Miss Gertrude Vermillion was appointed Florida representative of the oWman's Service committee for the next two years at the eighty-ninth meeting of the American Chemical society in New York City April 22-26 which marked the tercentenary of the American chemical industries. The Charles Herty medal is given annually to the most outstanding chemical scientist in the southern states.

The Reverend Julius A. Nieuwlands, professor of organic chemistry at Notre Dame university, received the Nichols award for his work with acetyie which led to the discovery of synthetic rubber and which was considered the greatest achievement in industrial chemistry during the past year.

Mr. Francis P. Garven, president of the Chemical Foundation, announced that he had established a fund for awarding a medal each year to the woman chemist who has done the best work in the field. It will be comparable to the Nichols award for men. The name and the receiver of the medal will be decided by the Women's Service committee.

This committee will also award the two fellowships for graduate work in chemistry for women only that will be given by Mr. Garvan during the next two years. Mr. Garvan is remembered on this campus for the leather-bound copies of "Chemistry in Medicine" which he gave to faculty members and chemistry students about six years ago.

For the first time in the history of the society a symposium on recent advances in micro-chemical analysis was given, which included discussions of applied mi-

(Continued on page two)

Regulations for Traffic Issued

The college authorities have requested, as a safety measure, that no girls ride on the running boards of automobiles driving through the campus or the city of Tallahassee.

The city has warned J. G. Kellum, business manager of the college, that a case will be brought against the college the next time the city riding ordinances are broken by students.

Mr. Kellum wishes to call to the attention of students that a girl was thrown from a running board and fatally injured in front of Reynolds hall several years ago. He hopes that this warning will be taken seriously.

The city has requested that students be made acquainted with the city riding regulations which are as follows:

"Not more than three persons shall occupy the front or driver's seat of a motor vehicle, and no person, adult or minor, shall be seated in the lap of a driver, nor shall the driver be seated in the lap of a person when the motor vehicle is in motion; nor shall any person ride on the running board of any car, except a mechanic or one acting as mechanic engaged in testing the motor of said car; nor shall anyone ride upon the rear deck of any roadster."

Editor of Distaff Makes Staff Known

Sara Krentzman, editor of the Distaff for the coming school year, has announced the complete list of new staff members.

Next year Goldie Lewinsky will act as associate editor; Daisy Parker as junior editor; Grace Whitaker, art editor; Mary Catherine Gibson, business manager; Mary Jeanne McKay, advertising manager; and Sarah Sealey; circulation manager.

The last issue of this year's Distaff will be published within the next two weeks, according to the editor.

Study Shows Most People To Be "Chew-the Paper" Addicts

Flambeau Phone Books No Longer to Suffer Tearing Fads

Whoever said this campus is overridden with passing fads was right as far as the passing part is concerned. Take for instance telephone directories. Who passes a telephone book without tearing at least a tiny bit from its leaves to chew upon reflectively while going to class. And who uses the telephone without carelessly caressing the book on the table beside it?

The Flambeau staff has made a long and detailed study of persons using the telephone, and in practically every case said persons were chew-the-paper addicts (or else why did they extract parts of the book?) This long study revealed, furthermore, that people prefer those parts of the directories which have vital facts printed upon them. Apparently no one likes to eat, tear, roll between fingers, or caress those unimportant parts of a directory devoted to advertising.

Imagine the chagrin of the managing editor who has forgotten the printing plant's phone number and on looking for it in the directory discovers that it is just another of those missing links. But as usual she calls her mental powers to the fray and sets about devising a way by which phone books may be kept at hand and yet kept intact.

Since Florida State college is afflicted with that dread malady called "bulletin boards," the managing editor saw how a malady could be a blessing. She promptly tacked a sign on the board by the Flambeau telephone advising everyone that the copy paper on the desk at the left is for the use of the public. "If you feel like chewing or tearing," said she, "we have supplied your wants with clean, white paper. It is said by all physicians to be preferable to paper containing printer's ink."

So the fad of tearing up phone books has become another of those things which we will tell our children and grandchildren about. These days will be looked back upon and described as "the days when everyone chewed telephone numbers."

Male Singers And Comedians Perform Here

Good Will Ambassadors To Sing at College Saturday Night

TO BE ASSISTED BY SKIT ARTISTS

Glee Club Will Present An Unusual Program Led by DeBruyn

The University of Florida Glee club will be presented at the Florida State College for Women Saturday night, at 8:15, in the college auditorium by their director John W. DeBruyn.

The Florida Glee club, called "The Ambassadors of Good Will" will present a program a little different from most male glee club programs. For example, they employ a preponderance of second tenors, whereas frequently other clubs use more low basses. The director conducts by indicating the melodic line, keeping in mind intrinsic rhythms and rubato.

Basic Elements Taught

Florida men are trained in interpretation from the standpoint of the elements which are basic in all arts. They are taught to analyze their reportoire from considerations of pattern, contrast, proportion, balance unity, and variety. Their idea is to build "tone pictures" in this evanescent art of music.

The University glee club was begun in 1925 when a group of students on the campus organized in a small way with not over twenty-five or thirty men. Now the club numbers about eighty-five.

Affiliated with the glee club is a group of skit artists, who appear at the latter part of each program. One of the skits to be presented will be an opera burlesque of "Cleopatra."

Soloists who will appear on this program include Harry Dale, a freshman from Miami who will play Valse Brillante on the piano. Roy Tew, baritone and assistant director of the glee club from Fort Myers will sing Sanderson's "Until." Frank Myers, of West Palm Beach, will sing L'Armour-Toujours-L'Amour by Rudolf Friml. Arthur Jordon, of Clearwater will sing a baritone solo, Mah Lindy Lou by Lily Strickland.

Other solo parts will be taken by Horton Hobbs of Alachua, Joe Adams of Tampa, Brian McCarty of Fort Pierce, and Gwynn Parker of Tallahassee.

Student Council To Be Installed

Presbyterians to Have Candle Service

The new council of the Presbyterian Student League which was recently elected will be installed with a candlelight communion service at the Presbyterian church Sunday at 8 o'clock. The junior council, a group of incoming sophomores, who will supplement and assist the council, will be installed for the first time this year.

The impressive installation service in which members of the new council will light their candles from those of the old officers will be followed by a prayer of consecration and the hymn "Pass on the Torch," sung by the out-going group. A short talk by Rev. Edward N. Caldwell, pastor, will be followed by a special communion service.

After the service, the incoming and retiring officers will be honored at an informal gathering in the church annex.

Members of the new council incluude Mary Wylie Klueppelberg, president; Marjorie Fain, vice-president; Barbara and Jane Hubbard, secretaries; Agnes Campbell, treasurer; Katherine Kyle, junior-senior class president; Mary Anne Moore, sophomore class president; Virginia Taylor, chairman of spiritual life; Sara Hethcox, music chairman; Frank Wildman, missions chairman; Rebecca Keith, Christian social service chairman; Floy Lenert, publicity chairman; Jane Tombaugh, dramatic chairman; Annie Leigh Rollins, distiltion; Jean Crago, freshman sponsor; Maxine Ward, assistant; Lillie McGuire, chairman of junior

(Continued on page two)

College Girls Eagerly Await Thursday Night

Possibility of Winning Money Draws Many Busy Students

Hope springs eternal in the college girl's heart. And so every Thursday night the possibility of winning a hundred or more dollars hypnotizes a goodly share of the Florida State population. Thus the trek begins.

Some go in the afternoon and miss dinner in order to get a good seat; others swallow their dinner whole, and adding insult to injury on the digestive processes, run all the way up the famous college hill in order to beat some of the more phlegmatic weekly attendants.

As nine o'clock draws near, the money to be raffled has been spent in collegiate minds for everything from next year's tuition to a month at the beach. No bride trips to the altar more willingly than the lucky person who will go to the stage. The time arrives and a man with an enragingly slow manner of speaking and all the time in the world comes out on the stage. Precious moments fly, and he finally calls a small child up to the platform. There isn't a collegiate fingernail left as he finally persuades the child to sing "Jesus Loves Me." After an interminable time the child draws a ticket out of the barrel. In what seems to be a supreme effort to antagonize the audience our friend, the master of ceremonies, calls out a first name, and every person of that name in the audience holds his breath until the last name is given. And than once again every person in the audience makes up his mind that never again will he fall for this gag—not until next Thursday night, at least.

Meet is Held In Gainesville

Graham is Elected Head Of Student Division For Coming Year

At a two-day combined convention of the Florida Intercollegiate Press and Student government associations held in Gainesville at the University of Florida, April 26-27, Margaret Graham of Florida State College for Women was elected president of the Student Government division for the coming year. Althea Smith, also from Florida State was voted secretary of the Press association.

Other officers selected were:

Press: President, Andreas Bothe, Rollins college; vice president, Everett Clay, University of Florida; treasurer, Beryl Ryden, University of Miami.

Student government: First vice-president, John Esterline, University of Miami; second vice-president, Robert Rogers, St. Petersburg Junior college; secretary, Gordon Moyer, University of Florida; and, treasurer, Jean Parker, Rollins college.

The initial session of the convention which was attended by approximately forty student leaders from seven colleges, opened Friday morning with addresses of welcome by B. A. Tolbert, dean of students at the University of Florida and Registrar H. W. Chandler, who also is president of the Florida Association of Colleges.

Discussion groups on problems concerning student government and the college newspaper included a talk on "Machinery of Student Government" by Jimmie Phillips of St. Petersburg Junior college; "The Power of a College Paper," Frank S. Wright, University of Florida; and "The Business manager of The Florida Alligator. Bill Lantaff, secretary of the University of Florida student body, lead a discussion on "Fraternity and Non-Fraternity" Relationships," while Carolina DeMontigne spoke on "Faculty-Student Relations."

Prominent leaders of the state included on the program were L. H. Chapman, superintendent of Florida State prison farm at Raiford, who spoke on "Youth and Crime" and William H. Rogers, president of the Florida Bar association, who gave an address on the work of his association and its influence on colleges.

At the final banquet of the convention, which was held Saturday evening, Charles P. Helfenstein, former president of the Florida Press association and editor of the Suwanee Democrat, spoke on "Extra-Curricula Activ-

(Continued on page two)

Annual Play To be Given May 10 and 11

"He Who Gets Slapped" Will Be Presented By Students

IS STORY OF OLD RUSSIAN REGIME

Cast Includes Members Of Advanced Class In Public Speech

"He Who Gets Slapped," a play of the old Russian regime by Leonid Andreyev, will be presented May 10 and 11 in the Augusta Conradi theater under the direction of Miss Kemper Martin Moore as the annual speech department play given free for students.

The play is not only considered Andreyev's best dramatic work, but a summary of his morbidly pessimistic philosophy which the revolution of 1905, the general ignorance of the Russian masses, the strain of the World War and the depreciation of human life as a value in itself had occasioned. It is the story of a man of high education, of great intellectual achievement, who leaves, life, willingly in appearance but forcibly in fact. The relations of man to man, of group to group, according to Andreyve, are such that the Man is forced to efface himself. "He" becomes a clown in a European circus. He performs stunts, he gets slaps; the public laugh being unaware that this laughter is a mockery at itself, at its culture, at its thought, at its achievement.

Love Triangle

"Consuelo," a bareback rider, and the heroine, is loved by "HE" and by "Alfred Bezano," another bareback rider. But she is caught in the meshes of her father's selfishness and used by him as a pawn in gaining his ends. The other characters are all circus people—clowns, jugglers, bareback riders and ringmasters. Andreyve tries to deal with them sympathetically, but life, a strange combination of fate, accident and cowardly slander, is stronger, and they collapse under the burden of the combination.

"He Who Gets Slapped" was first produced in English by the Theatre Guild on January 9, 1922, at the Garrick theatre in New York.

Seventeen in Cast

The cast of the play which is composed of members of the advanced class in speech is as follows: Briquet, the circus manager, Jimmy Lewis; Mancini, Consuelo's father, Virginia Kee; Zinida, a lion tamer, Lois Hasel; Bezano, a bareback rider, Catherine McGarry; Consuelo, the equestrian tango queen, Ruth Mock; Baron Regnard, Betty Etlinger; Tilly and Polly, musical clowns, Wilma Mayo and Emily Johnson; Jackson, a clown, Betty Boggs; HE, Rosalie Powell; a gentleman, Helen Hammond; first actress, Viola Taylor; second actress, Frances Lingle; Thomas, a strong man, Mary Jeanne McKay;

(Continued on page three)

Education Students Must See Advisers

Any student in the School of Education who has not seen her adviser as to studies for 1935-36 or for the summer school of 1935 should do so promptly. Even if a student is not returning for 1935-36 she should see her adviser. Prompt attention to business will avoid being excluded from examinations.

N. M. SALLEY, Dean
School of Education

College Dean Gives Address

Intangibles in College Education is Dodd's Theme for Talk

The influence of beauty, the lack of attention to it in the college curricula today, and the need for it in our world were brought out by Dr. W. G. Dodd, dean of the college of arts and sciences, in his address entitled "An Intangible in College Education" given at convocation this week. Dr. Dodd gave this address previously at the Phi Beta Kappa banquet and was requested to repeat it.

"Our natural preoccupation with the traditional subjects of the curriculum has led us to under-rate and often to disregard the importance of other elements which have their place in the education of our youth." Taking beauty as one of these important elements, Dr. Dodd pointed out that a living environment which is beautiful is an integral part in ministering to the spiritual needs of the student, and that such an environment should do much to alleviate the difficulties of the maladjusted.

"In addition to beauty of surroundings, students should have the opportunity of experiencing beauty in various arts. Art is the manifestation of the soul and mind of man in forms of beauty. It is through these forms that the artist communicates to those who have eyes to see and ears to hear the spiritual experience from which his art creation springs. To share this experience is one of the rarest of privileges that can come to any person, and when it is re-created for us by an interpretative artist of supreme excellence, we experience beauty in as nearly perfect a manner as possible. In furnishing to students the opportunity to hear such interpreters of the immortal pieces of symphony and song, of poem and picture, we bring into their lives an influence whose value cannot be reckoned."

Dr. Dodd went on to justify the place of the fine arts in the undergraduate curriculum on a par with other subjects as an instrument of training the emotions and imagination, such training being in harmony with the object of a liberal education—"to prepare its recipients for abundant living by offering those values which are permanent and which at the same time enrich life."

"To be sure, courses in history and appreciation of art and music have, I suspect with some reluctance, been admitted to the curric-

(Continued on Page Two)

Committee Defines The Rare Expression "Pinko-Pacifist"

Responding to Heavy Fan Mail They Huddle With Dictionary

In a recent issue of the Florida Alligator, a student of the university in a two-column editorial referred to students of F. S. C. W. as a "pinko-pacifists." In response to the numerous requests here, and in reply to dozens of letters from the University, too numerous to answer individually, all inquiring the meaning of the term, the editor of the Florida Flambeau appointed a committee of investigation to determine just what constitutes a "pinko-pacifist" and to make public their findings.

Using Webster's New International dictionary as the supreme authority, the committee attempted to dissect the word scientifically to determine its true significance. It was discovered that the word "pacifist" comes from the word "pacify" and is closely akin to the word, "pacifier," which is something mammas give their babies when they are in the process of hatching out tusks. It is possible that the young man meant to infer that one could cut one's teeth on the young ladies in question, although readers of his editorial are aware that he has already gnashed his.

The investigators encountered quite a bit of difficulty in discovering just what was meant by the word "pinko," used in reference to a lady. Webster states that a "pink" is sometimes a "vessel with a narrow stern." While it may be apt in some respects, a great discrepancy lies in the fact that a pink sinks readily, while the young ladies in question never give up the ship.

Then again it was discovered that a "pink" is often a "newly-hatched salmon, the European equivalent of our minnow." However, the investigators considered it highly improbable that any young man, no matter how misguided, would call a lady a poor fish. This meaning was declared irrelevant.

A third meaning is "to pierce with small holes, to stab or puncture." After due deliberation the committee decided that even if the writer knew of this obscure meaning and considered it, he

(Continued on page three)

May Fete to Be All Day Affair This Saturday

Sophomore Class Will Give Breakfast For Senior Sisters

U. OF F. GLEE CLUB WILL GIVE CONCERT

May Day Queen, Maids To Be Revealed In Dance Program

May Day festivities at Florida State College, which will begin early tomorrow morning with the annual sophomore-senior breakfast to be held in the college dining room, will also include a May pole celebration at the open air theater in the afternoon and the University of Florida Glee club concert in the auditorium Saturday night.

Plans Kept Secret

The theme and motif of the breakfast, which is in charge of Betty Peck, will be kept secret until the event takes place. Sophomores are to call for their senior sisters and escort them to the affair, with members of both classes wearing the traditional white, according to the chairman.

At the May pole celebration, to be held tomorrow afternoon at 5:00 o'clock in the open air theater, the identity of the May queen, her maid of honor, and the six maids, all chosen by popular vote, will be revealed.

The story of May day, consisting of four episodes is that of Proserpina, Pluto, and Ceres. Proserpina is stolen from the earth by the god of the underworld, Pluto. Ceres, the mother of Proserpina, thinking that the earth has swallowed her, pronounces the curse of winter upon it. However, when a messenger from the gods enters to tell Ceres that her daughter may return to earth for six months every year, the goddess alters her curse and makes winter only half the year. Following this, the May procession then appears bringing with it Proserpina, whom Ceres crowns Queen of the May, or Goddess of Spring.

The cast of characters for the program includes: Ceres, Mary Jeanne McKay; Pluto, Charlotte Stevens; Messenger from Jupiter, Peggy McMichael; Herald, Pauline Spencer; and Proserpina, until the queen is revealed, Mary Lou Moore.

Stage decorations are to be in charge of the pageantry class. Miss Mildred Stewart's advanced dancing class will arrange the dances, which will include a Dance of Welcome, Dance of Pity, Dance of the North Wind and Winter, Maypole Dance, a Dance of the Seasons and celebration. Marjorie Moor is the general chairman.

Phi Beta Sigma Has Initiation

National Group Members Install Chapter

Phi Beta Sigma, local Spanish honorary, last night became the Alpha Delta Chapter of Sigma Delta Pi, national Spanish honorary, at a formal initiation service in Ruge hall, followed by an initiation banquet at the Floridan hotel. Dr. Arthur R. Seymour, Dr. Margie Burks, and Mrs. Dorothy Breen, members of the national fraternity, installed the new chapter.

Honorary members of the fraternity who were installed last night include Dr. Marion Hay, Dr. Manuel Lopez, Miss Myrtle Dolbee, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Mrs. Ada Belle Allan, and Mrs. Irene Miller. Alumnae who were members of Phi Beta Sigma and who returned to be initiated in the national organization include Helen Peagin, Lilly Priscia, and Emma Holt.

Officers and active members of Phi Beta Sigma who were initiated into Sigma Delta Pi last night are: Marjorie Carter, president; Rosa Doub, vice-president; Ruth Dickson, secretary; Julia Norfleet, treasurer; Laura Mathis, historian; Betty Bailey, Margaret Campbell, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Virginia Cromartie, Minna Dunn, Ruth Feinberg, Opal Gray, Anna Groover, Winifred Hansen Becky Lou Hopkins, Sara Krentzman, Mary Helen Forth, Abbie Lyle, Jennie Rae Nall, Murae Reddick, Betty Ellen Smith, Mildred Stevens, Wylma TerBush, and Martha Woliston.

Florida High Crowns Queen

Jean Noland Rules at May Day Celebration

The students of Florida High School carried out their annual custom of celebrating May Day Wednesday afternoon by the crowning of a queen of the May.

Jean Noland was selected as queen from a group of upper class girls with the highest health records. Her knight, Foster Boone, was also chosen from a list of boys ranking highest in health and physical education. The theory that health and beauty go hand in hand was further stressed with the awarding of health certificates at this time by Dr. L. J. Graves, Leon County health officer.

The queen and her escorts, attired in simple old English costumes, left the Demonstration School in the late afternoon for the village green, that part of the campus north of the tennis courts.

In the procession the queen riding a garlanded horse, was preceded by the villagers, hobby horses her jesters, heralds, maidens, and squires, while her knight and Robin Hood and his men followed her

The program was divided into three parts: the crowning of the queen with a song by the villagers and attendants; the awarding of the health certificaates: the proclamation of the queen for all to make merry and gambol on the green. The third part consisted of the following interpretative rhythms: "Bees and Butterflies" by the first grade: March "Chimes of Dunkirk." second grade: tug-o-war; third grade stunts and combat activities; fourth grade: pyramids, fifth grade boys; "A-Hunting We will Go," fifth grade girls; "Butterfly Dance" by sixth grade; "Dance of the Goddesses" by Junior High School girls: "May Pole Dance" by upper school girls; and Sellinger's "Round" by upper school boys and girls.

After the program a tea dance was held in the gym from 6:30 to 8:00 o'clock.

Those who took part in the program inc [illegible] horses Quintus Ashmore, George Croy Cecil Levy and Chew Duke: queen's jesters, Francis Lowry and Billy Ervine; heralds, Winston Jones and Karl Roesch; queen's maidens, Ruth Eyman, Lavine Voss, Dora Koons, Jane Reagin, Harriet Kent and Betty Allen; squires, Horace Strickland and Greene Sarpe Johnston; Robin Hood and men, David Skipper, Earl Smith and Joe Culley.

Those who had charge of the celebration were: directors, Dorothy White, Mary Settle Grace Fox, and Oval Harrison costumes, Dora Skipper, Helen Everett and Sue Love; music Cecil Strong and Owen Sellers; program, Hardy Noland; decorations, Irene Brunson Miller.

New Course Offered For Summer Session

A course in Far East history will be given a tthe summer session for the first time this year, according to Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, professor of history.

This course, which will be taught by Dr. Annie Popper, associate professor of history, will stress the peculiar problems which the Far East faces today as a result of its impact with Western civilization. A brief survey of the rise of the Japanese and Chinese culture will be given during the first weeks.

Chemists Hold New York Meet

(Continued from page one)

cro-chemistry, general micro-chemistry and micro-chemistry in industry.

At the general meeting of all the chemical divisions, Lamont du Pont, president of Du Pont de Nemours and company, spoke on "Human Wants and the Chemical Industry." He pointed out that in the last two years general commodity prices have increased 35 per cent and that general chemical prices have decreased 7 per cent. He attributed this to the closer relations of chemistry with research where high efficiency would cause directly affected commodities to go contrary to general market trends. Thomas Midgley, vice-president of the Ethyl Gasoline company, spoke on "The Roll of Chemistry in the Next Hundred Years."

Following the symposium on the lecture demonstration method vs. individual laboratory work, Dr Lewis and Miss Vermillion met and talked with Dr. H. I. Schlesinger, Dr. Robert S. Swain, and Dr. William Foster.

The convention banquet was held at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel

Group to Report Local NSFA Plan

Senate Advises Activity Investigations

The student committee which has been studying plans for a local unit of the National Students' Federation of America expects to present a report of its work at convocation Tuesday, according to Margaret Graham, chairman of the committee.

The recommendations of the student committee will be submitted to a faculty committee composed of Dr. Jennie Tilt, chairman; Dr. William G. Dodd, Miss Rowena Longmire, and Dr. Edward G. Conradi and Dean Olivia Dorman, ex-officio.

The student committee's report will include recommendations concerning plans for a local NSFA forum and a definite program for the forum. Members of the committee are studying the programs in practice in other colleges and universities and with the help of the Dean of Students and other members of the faculty hope to formulate a plan which will be definitely suited to the needs of this campus.

Student leaders think a local NSFA unit would help to fill several well defined campus needs, according to the committee chairman. The campus, as shown by the recent Mortar Board survey of student-activities distribution, is not over-organized, but needs additional organizations to provide activities for the fifty-nine per cent of the student-body above the freshman level who take no part in student activities.

Since NSFA proposes to include every member of the student body in its membership, an NSFA forum would not only help to fill this need, but it would also tend to awaken student interest in those campus and national affairs of particular interest to youth, said Louise Robertson, chairman of the Mortar Board survey and recent delegate to the national NSFA meeting.

At a recent meeting the student senate sent a recommendation to the chairman of the faculty committee on student affairs asking that the committee encourage the formation of organizations with voluntary memberships as a means of relieving the under-activity situation.

Senate also recommended to the point-system committee that religious organization offices be included in the point system and that the possibility of limiting organization membership be investigated.

A recommendation that campus honaries sponsor interest groups for non-members who are interested in the same field was also passed by the senate in an attempt to further student interest in extra-curricular activities.

Meet is Held In Gainesville

(Continued from page one)

ities as a medium of Transition to Problems of Later Life."

Delegates from the student government of Florida State College for Women who attended the convention were Carolina DeMontigne, Katherine Blood, Margaret Graham, Marjorie Fain, and Jean Gilles. Representatives to the press division included Althea Smith and Ruth Persons.

Other colleges represented were Rollins, Southern, Stetson Miami University and St. Petersburg Junior college.

OFFICERS OF U. OF F. GLEE CLUB

Reading from left to right: top, Billy VanBrunt, president; Frank Lewis, vice-president; bottom, Brian McCarty, secretary; Joe Adams, business manager. The Glee Club will give its annual concert in the college auditorium tomorrow night at 8:15.

Mr. Sparrow Glumly Reports 5000 BB Gun Martyrs Have Succumbed in Raid

Spring Thinning of Vines Leaves Trail Of Destruction

Over 5,000 have been killed, unknown numbers of homes destroyed and families torn and separated from one another in an invasion of F. S. C. W. campus within the last two weeks. The dead and wounded lie strewn around every vine-covered building on campus after each onslaught by the enemy.

A reporter felt the urgent necessity of getting to the bottom of this wholesale destruction and proceeded to interview a feathered member of the unlucky Sparrow Colony.

Mr. Sparrow was busily bathing in a mud puddle in front of the administration building when the reporter found him. He flew to the nearest branch of a tree at her approach and looked at her suspiciously, but she assured him she was a friend.

"How did I escape, you ask? I just didn't stick around," Mr. Sparrow said grimly. "They do this every spring, through the summer and fall. I left at the first bang! bang! of Dan Mullino's beebee gun one morning at six-thirty. I knew what was happening. They killed my mate and little ones last year.

"Dan and Miller are the men with guns. Ed Winters is the man on the ladder who tears down all the nests. He has over 3,000 more to remove. Oh, they are janitors here. They work every morning from 6:30 to 7:30 from 12:00 to 1:30, and in the evening from 3:30 till dark trying to get rid of us."

He looked longingly at the mud puddle.

"Oh, sure, they've tried everything. They even thought of poisoning our food, but that was bad for the other birds, and the cats and dogs.

"We're a bad lot, he said, cocking his head to one side, "we're a fire hazard, we bring bird mites and eat the gardens, sez you. Pooh! Charges can always be trumped up against things you don't like.

"When the vines are heavy again sparrows will be as thick as ever. I know it's dangerous, but the young ones building homes won't pay any attention to an old codger like me.

"What happened to the wounded?" he repeated impatiently "Most of them died. A few are recuperating in the homes of students, who without previous training, stepped into Red Cross roles. Go away now. I want to finish my bath."

Installing of CGA Officials to be Monday

(Continued from page one)

those of the girls they are succeeding.

The outgoing officers are Carolina DeMontigne, president; Helenmary Fritsch, chairman; Margaret Graham, first vice-president; Katherine Blood, second vice-president; Martha Makemson, secretary; Abbie Lyle, treasurer; and Georgia Ruth Work, chairman of house chairmen.

Other outgoing officials are Anna Glen, Frances Hurlin, Ruth Daniel, Wava Godwin, Jean Hamner, Virginia Tucker and Barbara [illegible]ll.

YW Play Center Plans Underway

Executive Cabinet Will Rotate Committee Memberships

Preliminary plans for establishing a recreational center in one of the poorer sections of town for children between the ages of five and twelve were made at a meeting of the executive cabinet of the Young Women's Christian association Wednesday night.

The purpose of the project is to provide children of the lower economic group with a more normal and wholesome atmosphere of play. A map of the city will be studied by the cabinet before it decides where the center is most needed. Committees will be appointed to plan the programs and direct the games and story-telling. Vassar and Sweet Briar have successfully adopted this method through their Y. W. C. A. organizations.

The Tallahassee Boy Scouts under the leadership of Mr D. M. Burnette, Dr. Elanor Mims, professor of sociology and social case work, and Dr. Anna Forbes Lidell, advisor of last year's executive cabinet, will assist the Y. W. in this work.

It is felt that through the recreational center Y. W. on this campus will secure a little practical application of the ideals for which it stands, according to Lucy Lee Linz, president. Definite plans will be announced later in convocation and on the bulletin boards. Girls who are interested in the endeavor are asked to sign their names on the bulletin board list.

The new executive cabinet has organized all committees with the exception of the membership committee. A scheme has been devised whereby committees will rotate so as to give more girls an opportunity to work in Y. W. The executive cabinet membership has been reduced.

Committee chairmen appointed are: Vespers, Mary Jeanne McKay; world friendship, Mary Irene McKay, and finance, Helen Cate Other members of the cabinet are: Mercia Scott, Marie Spurlock, Gladys Oliver, Sue Whitaker, Anne Norris, Jana and Barbara Hubbard and Alicia Meacham.

Student Council To Be Installed

(Continued from page one)

council; Nettie Taylor, social chairman.

On the new Junior council are Mollie Holden, vice-chairman, Mary Kirkpatrick, secretary; Geneva Nelson, treasurer; Marcia Smith, missions; Marian Conn, music: Jean Duncan, social service; Marjorie Horton, social; Adele Barnard, publicity: Katherine Todd, dramatics: Felicia West, assistant dietitian; Grace Alena Taylor, Rosalie Berga, and Edith Taylor, freshman visitors.

Seniors on the outgoing council include: Frances Fabric, Betty Ellen Smith, Betty Hampton, Georgia Ruth Work, Alma Loudermilk, Margaret Nickle, Nell Ward Mayes, Dorothy Godman and Jean Hamner.

Classes Will Reunite Commencement Week

The class of 1930 will have its fifth annual reunion and the class of 1933 its second annual reunion during the commencement week-end, May 24-26, Miss Laura Strunk, executive secretary of the alumnate association, has announced.

The president of the class of '30 is Edna Mattox, who is now doing social service work in DeFuniak Springs; the secretary is Loyola McLaughlin, who is teaching in Tampa. The president of the class of '33 is Lucy Pope, who is teaching at West Palm Beach, and the secretary is Mary Lou Key, of Miami.

The visiting alumnae will stay in the dormitories.

Dean W. G. Dodd Gives Address on Education

(Continued from page one)

ulum; but as subjects to be studied through either the interpretative or creative process, these arts have not been so fortunate. Students are permitted to study about music and about art, but are not permitted to experience, for credit, the beauty of which they are the expression. When, . . . we make it possible for students, under the guidance and inspiration of teachers who themselves have the creative gift, to create beauty in some art form, whether it be in poetry, drama, music or painting, then and then only have we given to art its full opportunity to share in building the spiritual life of our students. To do less than all of this is to fall short of ministering adequately to their needs."

Dr. Dodd then went on to show that although his "plea for beauty" seemed a plea for the obvious thing, there are many who are interested in colleges and college students to whom its necessity is not plain. The first type he listed in this class are those "who would insist that the energies of educators should be bent only on training the intellect and on producing scholars," refusing thus to include the discipline of the emotional nature. "To a large number of people off the campus as well as on it, the term 'scholarship' connotes pedantry, crudeness or eccentricity of manner, and general unattractiveness of personality and lack of taste in personal appearance. How frequently may be heard from students that if scholarship means that, they prefer not to be scholars. There is no incompatibility between good scholarship and charm of personality, as any wise and well-informed person knows. But youth is not always wise or widely informed. In witnessing these specimens of the scholar, students sense in them a lack of balance, and without being able to define it, make the mistake of attributing to the scholarship itself the unloveliness from which they shrink . . . A good dose of practical aesthetics properly administered to these scholars, if that were possible, would go far toward retrieving the good name of scholarship and toward giving back its rightful prestige on our campuses."

"Another group to whom the need of beauty in education would be far from axiomatic is that which represents what I may call the spirit of Puritanism. And there are plenty of them. The grimness of the Puritan spirit has greatly relaxed since the early days when the other-worldliness of those people and the hard outward circumstances of their lives made them in character stern and forbidding; when all interest in beauty and pleasure savored of the worldliness which was inimical to the eternal interests of their souls. Conscience still has the rocking chair while Joy shivers in the corner." The presence of such people in the world of today, Dr Dodd said, is "one of the best arguments I can think of for making use, in our educational work, of the genial softening, humanizing influence of beauty."

The third type which does not accept the doctrine of beauty in education is the realist, whose utilitarian object in life denies the virtue of anything which will not help students to earn a living "The claim that the arts are humanizing agents they consider only so much sentimentalism, or at best, a foolish idealism which is out of place in the hard, practical realistic world in which students will have to live after college."

Finally, Dr. Dodd showed that beauty is "a powerful force toward unifying men, by combatting and destroying prejudices and intolerance. In disseminating beauty we are working for the wholesomeness of society." Coming back to the student Dr. Dodd then pointed out that it is the duty of the college to send out students who love beauty, as "apostles of beauty" to a world in sore need of it, and that in "instilling in them a love of beauty we are giving into their possession that which is permanent." In conclusion Dr. Dodd said, "And we may with all assurance, and with the completest satisfaction this assurance brings, enjoin our students to heed the poet's admonition.

"Forever seek for beauty—
She only fights with man against death."

Thistlewaite To Head Honorary

Southern Association Of Honorary Organized

The Southern Regional Association of Eta Sigma Phi, Latin honorary, was organised April 26-27, at Agnes Scott College, Decatur, Georgia. The officers elected were: president, Mary Etta Thistlehwaite, of Florida State; vice-president, Lois Cosper of Birmingham-Southern; secretary, Gertrude Lozier of Agnes Scott; and treasurer, John Alexander of Emory.

Those attending from Florida State included: Miss Edith West of the classics department, Martha Whitaker, Helenmary Fritsch, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Lillian Turlington, Dot Moorhead, Avaline Lancaster, Marcia Buchanan, Catherine Ash, Virginia Earle and Rebecca Keith. Josephine Thorpe of Tallahassee and Katherine Williams, alumnae, also attended.

First Graduation Recital Presented Tuesday Night

Julia Munroe, organist and pupil of Margaret Whitney Dow, gave her graduation recital in the college auditorium Tuesday night. It was the first of the season's series of graduation and certificate recitals in the School of Music.

The first group of her program included Bach's "Prelude and Fugue in D Major," the Bach chorale, "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" followed by a cantus and a choral accompaniment, and Schumann's "Canon."

Selections in the second group were from the works of modern composers

SUMMER TIME

is

COTTON DRESS TIME

Take advantage of our Big Cotton Wash Dress Sale. All new merchandise. Newest styles. Values to $4.95, divided into 2 groups.

GROUP 1
Values up to $3.00
SALE PRICE—
$1.00

GROUP 2
Values up to $4.95
SALE PRICE—
$1.95

Beautiful Prints, Plaids, Florals and Combinations. Suits and Sun Back Frocks suitable for street or sports wear.

GELBERG'S
"STYLE PLUS ECONOMY"

PARIS
in the spring—

and the camaraderie of a side-walk cafe . . . Seriously, this scene is very nearly duplicated at No. 216 East Park Avenue.

A new Tea Room offers a garden equipped for parties; a spacious porch dining-room, and a cuisine rivalling the French!

PARK AVENUE
TERRACE

Bennett's

EXTRA SPECIALS
25c Strawberry Fresh Fruit Sundae 10c

75c LUNCH AT BENNETT'S 40c

CHOICE OF:
FRIED CHICKEN COUNTRY STYLE
BREADED VEAL CUTLETS WITH TOMATO SAUCE
VEGETABLES:
FRESH TURNIPS CREAM CARROTS
TOMATO JUICE COCKTAIL
CORN MUFFINS OR TOMATO BISCUITS
SWEET MILK - COFFEE - ICED TEA - BUTTERMILK

40c PINEAPPLE SALAD A LA CARTE 25c
30c CHICKEN SALAD SANDWICH 15c
15c PIMENTO CHEESE AND OLIVES 10c
15c MAPLE PECAN SUNDAE 10c
15c DOUBLE DIP ICE CREAM SODA 10c

SHOES FOR GRADUATION

New summer styles for sports and dress occasions.

$3.95 and $4.95

McCallum Hose . . $1.00
In New Summer Shades

The French Shop
So. Monroe St.

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Marlene Dietrich
in
"THE DEVIL IS A WOMAN"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Evelyn Venable and Robert Young
in
"VAGABOND LADY"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Lionel Barrymore - Elizabeth Allen
Bela Lugosia
in
"MARK OF THE VAMPIRE"
THURSDAY
Franchot Tone
in
"ONE NEW YORK NIGHT"
—ALSO—
"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT"

RITZ THEATRE
SATURDAY
Tom Tyler in "Terror of the Plains"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
"THE DEVIL IS A WOMAN"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
"VAGABOND LADY"
THURSDAY AND FRIDAY
Clark Gable and Claudette Colbert
in
"IT HAPPENED ONE NIGHT"

Spring Brings Improvements, Repairs to College Campus

Mendenhall to Supervise Work on Ad Building And Renovation

The coming of the legislature, the coming of spring, or just necessity has resulted in many improvements and repairs on the property of Florida State College for Women.

Herbert D. Mendelhall, resident engineer at the college, has supervision of the conditioning in the administration building, the painting of the interior of the science building, and the laying of the roads at the kitchen and at the college dairy farm.

On account of an inadequate foundation of a strata of fuller's earth, the walls of the north wing of the Administration building cracked and necessitated the condemning of that section of the building.

Preliminary plans and studies have been made of the situation so that the college might apply for an FERA project to reconstruct the building under the same provisions as the education building.

If the present proposals are effective, the foundations will be laid in concrete and the entire wing of the building will be made fireproof with an attic added to accommodate classes if necessary.

Three classes that were held in the north wing are now held in rooms in the education building which have been conditioned for occupancy. A 12x20 foot section of room 203 in the administration building will be sandpapered and refinished for President Conradi's private office while the adjacent room will be painted and remodeled for his secretary.

For several months painters have been at work on the science building and ultimately the entire interior of the building will be painted.

The necessity for paved roads on campus has resulted in the paving of roads from the Gilchrist arcade to the kitchen entrances, to the Reynolds and Jennie Murphree service entrances, by the shops and to the infirmary parking area.

The roads were laid and "mixed-in-place" with "re-tread," paving of slag and "cut-back" asphalt. The state road department furnished the labor and the equipment while the college provided the engineering and the materials.

The paving at the dairy was completed recently and only fences need to be built before the herd is moved to the new farm.

Dairymen expect to occupy the farm by the first of June

Committee Defines The Rare Expression "Pinko-Pacifist"

(Continued from page one)

would never in this world have used it. It is much too pointed.

The meaning which the investigators considered as most likely that which the writer intended to convey is "a thing supremely excellent; the perfection of something; the highest type. They take this opportunity to express their admiration for anyone who can pay the highest kind of a compliment in such a subtle manner that not even the recipients—nor the complimenter himself, for that matter, could recognize it without scientific analysis.

The "o" in "pinko" gave quite a bit of trouble According to Webster, it signifies "an emotional, impassioned exclamation expressing pain, grief, surprise, disappointment, desire, fear, joy, ecstasy," etc. might also be his conception of the mental state of jitters into which his slightest attention would throw any pacifist—or any belligerent, either, from William Randolph Hurst on up.

The dash in the word really proved troublesome. Taking it to be a "sudden break or stop, as in a faltering utterance," we might have "p-p-pink-pinko-paci-paci-pacifist." Or if it indicates "a significant pause or special stress," we may choose between "PINKO-pacifist" or "Pinko-PACIFIST." Really, the dash quite stumped the committee.

After corralling all these possible meanings for the term, the investigators concluded that only the writer, and the powers that be, knew what he meant when he used it—and probably only the letter knows now.

Edna Hoffman Awarded Distaff Prize for Best Article in Last Issue

Edna Hoffman is again winner of The Distaff prize for having written the best article for the current issue of the magazine, according to Earl L. Vance, professor of journalism and chairman of the judging committee. Lucy Fulghum was awarded first honorable mention.

The article which won Edna first place this time is called "When History Puts Its Hand to the Plough." She also won The Distaff prize for an article in the first edition of the magazine and honorable mention for one in the second edition.

Lucy's article, for which she received honorable mention, is entitled "The College Girl's Religion" and is a re-interpretation of the Lord's prayer.

Annual Play to be Given May and 11

(Continued from page one)

Claan Shoven, Vivian Marshall; Henry, Louise Schwaderer; and Leonora, Sarah Hosea

Orchestra to Play

During the Entr'acts the little theatre orchestra under the direction of Mr. Owen Sellers will play "Valse Triste" and a selection of marches. The personnel of the orchestra includes the following: violins, Martha Reddick, Annabelle Larson, Betty Parker, and Marjorie Tillis; viola, Evalyn Patterson; cellos, Yvonne Tait, and Charlotte Veith, double bass, Martha Lee Wilkerson, and Sara Tyler; trumpet, Helen Sellers; trombone, Hazel Bowman; clarinet, Betsy Anderson; flute, Jean Crege; drum, Louise Johnson; and piano, Virginia Long.

Sivyer Directs Costuming

The costumes for the play are being designed and made by Sarah Camp, Gwendolyn Adair and Maria Yatter, under the direction of Miss Henrietta Ruth Sivyer.

The production staff is also comprised of members of the speech department and includes: stage manager, Betty Peck; assistant stage manager, Evelyn Collins; properties, Pauline Spencer; sound effects, Rosalyn Daum and Mary Lou Moore; music, Jane Hafer.

Rawls to Swim Here on Monday

Will Appear on Program Of Miami Beach Team At College Pool

Katherine Rawls, of Ft. Lauderdale, 17-year-old ace swimmer who holds 23 national and four world records, will appear at Florida State College for Women here Monday, May 6, in two amateur exhibition programs. The programs in Tallahassee are being made possible through Carl P. Weidling, of Ft. Lauderdale.

Both programs will be held in the college swimming pool the first at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon for the college students, and the second at 8 o'clock in the evening for Governor and Mrs. Sholtz, members of the Governor's cabinet and their wives, and members of the state legislature and their wives.

Appearing on the program with Miss Rawls will be members of the Miami Beach A. A. U. swimming team which placed second in the national championship last year, members of the Ft. Lauderdale High school swimming team, Miss Rawl's sisters of Ft. Lauderdale, and Betty Joyce MacMuni of Hollywood. Attempts will be made to break a number of the college swimming records at both performances.

Miss Rawls came into national prominence in 1931 at the age of 14 when she won her first national championship and at the same time broke the world's record in the 300-yard individual medley. She now holds 16 national championships for senior women, has thrice won the high point trophy in national competition, and is the only swimmer in the history of the sport to win high and low board-diving, individual medley, breast stroke and free style.

Miss Rawls has the additional distinction of being the only swimmer ever to have won championships in four different events in one meet. She accomplished this feat in 1932 just after the Olympics in the meet at Temple, Arizona, when she won the 10 foot spring board dive, 330-yard medley, 220-yard breastroke, and 880-yard free style.

Local Students Honored At Province Convention

Mauvis Lussier and Rosa Doub, members of the local Newman club, were elected chairman and reelected corresponding secretary respectively for the coming year at the southeast province convention of the Federation of College Catholic Clubs held in Atlanta last week-end. The convention is expected to be held at this college next year.

At a formal banquet given Monday night in the Floridan hotel by the Newman club, the new president, Grace Mary Webster, appointed the following standing committees for the coming year: Social, Mauvis Lussier, chairman, Raymondine Ponce and Dot Hoffman, membership, Angela Griley, chairman, Agnes Goss and Marie Jeffre; publicity director, Margaret Clarie Lafferty; choir director, Nan O'Shaughnessy; program, Catherine Fox, chairman, Mary Esther Wills, and Mercedes Garriga, athletic director, Mary Lee Laushan; art directors, Mary McGunagle and Mary Shyrock.

Mayer Resigns; Stewart Has One Year's Leave

Miss Mildred Stewart, instructor in physical education, has obtained a year's leave of absence to continue study on her Master's degree at Columbia University. Miss Stewart's major interests are dancing and orthopedics.

Miss Stewart was recently appointed head of the physical education department here for the summer session and will not leave for New York until August. Between terms she expects to attend the dedication services of three buildings at her alma mater, the State Teachers' College of Virginia.

Miss Marjorie Meyer, instructor in physical education, has resigned her position here to become associate professor of physical education at Colorado State university. She is a graduate of that university and expects to attend the summer session there.

Tobogganing, ice skating and skiing are included among the courses which she will teach at the university next winter.

Snooping Sportster

All you aquatic-minded people (and I don't mean those with water on the brain) who want to see some expert water-churning, turn out to see Katherine (Record-Breaker) Rawls Monday afternoon at 4:30 at the college swimming pool.

Well, just as we thought, the faculty got fooled when they played ball with the students Saturday afternoon. The student team kept far ahead until the seventh inning—when the faculty woke up and brought its score up within one point of a tie. The final score was 27-26 (looks more like a basketball score).

Here's the student team: Catcher, Tombaugh; pitcher, Tuten; first base, Levy, second base, Cameron; third base, Bailey, Short stop, Ferguson; right field, Farabee; center field, Harold; left field, Mackery.

And here are the faculty players: Catcher, Moore, pitcher, Settle; first base, Rogers; second base, Lynn; third base, Finner, Hall; short stop, Montgomery, Fox; right field, Everett, center field, Waskom; left field, Valentine.

The Odds may be able to play basketball but leave it to the Evens to win in baseball with a score of 27-7.

And the Juniors copped the championship of the school in the class games topping the Freshmen 20-3. In the losers' game the Sophiscated Seniors lost to the Iconoclastic Sophs.

Now girls what are you going to do with those Friday night dates? Here's the sad news, no more Play-Nites this season. Here's a gilded lily to the Physical Association for sponsoring them. We met some darn good dancers this season. We'll quickly forget the others just to please the P. A.

The class swimming meets will be May 3 at 3:30 p. m., and May 4 at 10.30 a. m. Watch for further announcements. Class managers are: Claire Redfield, senior; Carol Farabee, junior; Martha Makemson, sophomore; Janet Cook freshman.

Students going out for practice among the freshmen are Viola Brooks, Audrey Cooper, Frances Lewis, Louise Gehan, Mildred Booth, Mollie Holden, Betty Ostlund, Mary Katherine Scott, Marie Anne Folly. Juniors are Janice Borton, Beth Daane, Florence Devine, Margaret Marwell, Shirley Stevens; seniors are Mildred Stevens, Betty Bailey. What's the matter with you, juniors?

F goats have a week of grace before the F Club camp next week-end. Better be nice to Bailey, who is staying awake nights thinking up chores for the fortunate (?) goats.

Four-H Club Entertains Senior Members at Tea

The college 4-H club is entertaining its senior members at its annual tea in the home of Miss Virginia P. Moore, Extension Home Improvement specialist, Saturday, May 4, from 4 to 5.30 p. m. The faculty of the School of Home Economics, the staff of the extension department, district agents and those who have shown particular interest in the club in the past years are especially invited.

In the receiving line will be the senior 4-H members, Miss Virginia P. Moore, the club sponsor, Miss Anna Mae Sikes, the present president, Eleanor Murtell, and the past two presidents, Evelyn L'Abbe and Ruth Durrenberger.

Senior members of the club are: Mary Ellen Bailey, Cara Boyette, Lila De Vore, Margaret Dodd, Ruth Durrenberger, Dorothy Godman, Lois Hazel, Margaret Henderson, Lucille Jones, Evelyn L'Abbe, Susie Rae Meredith, Anita Mitchell, Leila Rushing, and Marie Slack.

Mental Hygiene Enthusiast Advises Students Not to Worry Over Exams

Victim of "Grade Fever" Tells of Personal Metamorphosis

By MARIE JOFFRE

I think, that of all my new experiences since I have been in college, my escapades, fostered entirely by new ideas hiding under the name of Mental Hygiene, have been, and probably will continue to be the most amusing.

During the first month I was very much impressed by the interest that everyone in general took in the freshmen. We were told how to study and how to adjust ourselves to the new environment. "Work," we were advised, "is the best cure for homesickness."

Please do not think that I am ridiculing such help. I think it was entirely necessary and it has benefited many of the new students. I mention it briefly, as an introduction to the main part of my discussion.

We were admonished—and this is the part that captivated me completely—not to worry, not to allow our studies to become burdensome, not to make everything seem difficult and unpleasant! This, of course, is wonderful advice, but consider it in regard to my case!

During the last five years of my school life I was attacked by the "grade fever"; not to such an extent that I expected grades without having to work for them, but for what work I did do I had to have my grades, and if they were not outrageously high, then I concluded that something was terribly wrong with me Consequently, my last five years have been filled with hard, earnest, scholarly work I have even been described as "the most serious, studious person in the class."

It has always been a pet belief of mine that the more I worried about something the better it would be, and if I ever made the mistake of not worrying, everything seemed to go wrong. The very thought of relaxing during the week was wonderful, but quite impossible; that was a luxury reserved for Fridays.

If I did not stay up until the wee hours of the morning doing my homework, then I must have forgotten to do something, or had done something else half-way. I might here mention briefly the struggle I have always had in drawing maps for history. It certainly was no fault of mine if I didn't have the house in an uproar and myself half dead in the process! I did finally manage to make an "A" on my last map of the year, but the teacher was forced to tell me that it was not neat enough (that was really a very mild way of expressing its true condition!) to be hung up for the admiration of the class. As a result of that year's work, mother grows pale at the mere mention of my drawing a map!

I graduated from high school with a few honors, but practically on the verge of a nervous collapse from trying to win valedictorian honors, besides writing a few important essays and doing numerous other scholarly and studious things. My friends and teachers had all managed to convince me that if I had any trouble in high school I might expect to slave and do some real work when I got to college. I trembled in anticipation, and spent all summer "resting up" for the ordeal!

Imagine my surprise, therefore, on being admonished not to worry, or to allow my new studies and a new routine to upset me! Why, I had spent all summer in idleness so that I would be able to work hard and worry to my heart's content when I arrived here! Imagine my further surprise when I discovered, after a few weeks, that my classes were no harder (I haven't taken history, incidentally) than those in high school had been.

"Well," I decided, "they ought to know what they are talking about. Maybe they're right and I should take things calmly." Right there and then I began to enjoy myself immensely! The tennis courts were so inviting, and the sight of a fencing foil and mask excited me more than a "98" in English had ever done. I played every afternoon after my classes were over and managed to do a little studying at night. While my friends were suffering agonies of fear over quarter exams, I was out playing tennis. When I received my grades for the quarter I found that I had barely missed making a "B" average.

Since I wanted to make approbation I decided that I would work a little harder during the next quarter and see which marks I could raise. Nok, here is the peculiar part, as soon as I tried to improve my marks, everything went wrong! My test grades were lower; I didn't seem to be able to understand anything that was going on in my classes. I couldn't imagine what was happening; it seemed that the more seriously I took things the more trouble I had, until I finally came to the conclusion that I would do better to recapture my first quarter attitude.

This I did with such success that I found it impossible to become excited over the final exams. Everyone else was upset, but my disposition has a peculiar

(Continued on page six)

Remember
MOTHER'S DAY
ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 397

Attend the SALE
at
THE LADIES' SHOP
"Where Styles Are Shown First for Less"
206 SOUTH MONROE

$3.95 Dresses Only $2.88
$5.95 Dresses Only $4.88
$7.90 Dresses Only $5.88

BLUE LINE
LUNCH
SPECIAL FOR THE COLLEGE GIRLS
Hamburger . . 10c
(Complete)
Sizzling Steak, with
Shoestring Potatoes 45c
Italian Spaghetti, special with Roman
Cheese 35c
IN THE UNION BUS STATION

The
SURPRISE STORE
"Tallahassee's Busiest Department Store"
Showing a Beautiful Assortment of ORGANDY DRESSES
$1.95 to $7.95
SANDALS, special value .... $1.00 pr.
Tallahassee, Florida Cor. Jefferson and Adams

UNDER A STRAIN?..
GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL!
© 1935, R. J. Reynolds Tob. Co.
MILLIONS MORE PAID FOR FINER TOBACCOS!
CAMEL
TURKISH
CAMEL'S COSTLIER TOBACCOS NEVER GET ON YOUR NERVES!

FREDERICK HEATH — MEDICAL. Heath says: "I'm in first year of medical school now, with the idea of specializing in neuro-surgery. Anatomy 'lab' takes three afternoons a week. Tuesdays and Thursdays—embryology. I spend three mornings a week on bio-chemistry, three on physiology 'lab' and lectures. And I have to face an exam in about one subject per week. I relieve the strain by smoking Camels. I prefer Camels, because when I'm feeling tired or distracted they unlock my supply of energy — soon refresh me. Camels are extremely mild. Not just mild-tasting, but really mild. They never tire my taste or get on my nerves. Camels taste so good 'I'd walk a mile for a Camel!'"

SOCIAL LEADER. "The minute I begin to feel tired, I stop and smoke a Camel," says Mrs. Ludlow Whitaker Stevens, of New York. "Fatigue disappears. It's remarkable the way Camels renew your energy."

STAR PITCHER. "I like Camels, and I've found that after a hard game a Camel helps me to get back my energy," says Carl Hubbell, star pitcher of the N. Y. Giants. "Camels are so mild they never ruffle my nerves."

"Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS — Turkish and Domestic — than any other popular brand."
(Signed) R. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO COMPANY
Winston-Salem, N. C.

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF

RUTH PERSONS .... Editor
ALTHEA SMITH .... Associate Editor
GERTRUDE KUHN .... Managing Editor
HAZEL BOWMAN .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS

Features: Martha Baker; Sports, Elaine Klepper; Society, Margaret Lafferty; Exchanges, Virginia Zarly; Literary Editor Eleanor Williams; Copy Editor, Arline Lockhart; Outside News Editor, Grace Mary Webster.

REPORTERS: Carol Farbee, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty Nedra McNamara, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Ellen Hobson, Hazel Bowman, Anne Fennell.

BUSINESS STAFF

MARY PATTERSON .... Business Manager
JANE GALE .... Advertising Manager
CEIL LEVY .... Circulation Manager
Assistant Business Manager, Lillie McGuire; Assistant Circulation Manager Caroline Adams

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

New Torches Are Lighted

The season for the exchange of new lamps for old is upon us. During the coming week, two ceremonies will bring to a formal close the services of those students in college offices, services devoted to the high standards upheld by the offices.

As the 1933-34 college government officials relinquish the trust given them, others will follow to take up their work, who will carry on for a one-year term; then, like their predecessors, will pass on the trust. And the procession marches on through the years.

So, too, will newly-tapped members of Mortar Board accept the torches surrendered to them by this year's group, and, seeing themselves, not as having attained a personal goal, but as part of a longer cavalcade marching steadily toward an all-embracing ideal of scholarship, leadership, service they will "carry on."

Other girls, who are passing their symbols of office to successors, in college government, Y. W. C. A., honoraries, and all other campus organizations, are also passing down their acceptance of the responsibility placed on them as well as their willingness to pledge their services to the best interests of those they govern.

They can't keep faith alone. Our campus leaders cannot lead unless students choose to follow. That is our responsibility—to cultivate the art of intelligent following, which complements that of leading.

We are each a unit in that long procession of marchers toward a goal. Here, at Florida State College for Women, as anywhere in life, each unit is called upon to add to the whole whatever she has to offer, either of service or of loyalty, so that at the close of another year when the trust is again passed on, it will have more of significant worth because of our share in the keeping.

Freedom Takes Another Step

During a recent fight against radicalism at the University of Chicago Charles R. Walgreen, the chain store head, withdrew his niece from school, Fearing that she, along with other college students, there were being indoctrinated with communistic principles the indignant father asked for an investigation of campus thought.

President Robert M. Hutchins is to be commended for standing firm and refusing to consider Walgreen's request, even though State Senator Charles Baker got himself into the quarrel and insisted that he would ask the legislature to take proceedings in order that youth might be saved from such influences as now prevail at the university.

The president's position is clearly that of an advocator of freedom as is shown in a recent speech in which he says that without freedom of inquiry, freedom of discussion, and freedom of teaching a university cannot exist. "Without these," he continues, "a university becomes a political party or an agency of propaganda. It ceases to be a university. The university exists only to find and communicate the truth. If it cannot do that it is no longer a university."

In answer to the charge that students are getting more and more Red, President Hutchins says that in universities where students are permitted to study and talk as they please there is no increasing redness. "The way to make students Red, he adds, is ato supress them. This policy has never yet failed to have this effect. The vigorous and intelligent student resents the suggestion that he is not capable of considering anything more important than fraternities and football. Most of the college Reds I have heard about have been produced by the frightened and hysterical regulations of the colleges. They are not Reds at all, they are in revolt against being treated like children."

It is up to the American people, Hutchins points out, to decide what kind of education they will administer. They must decide whether they will encourage the search for truth. "If they will," he adds, "the universities will endure and give light and leading to the nation. If they will not, then as a great political scientist has put it, we can blow out the light and fight it out in the dark; for when the voice of reason is silenced, the rattle of machine guns begins."

We are inclined to agree with President Hutchins in his views concerning freedom and to condemn Walgreen for his hasty action in removing his niece from the university. Mr. Walgreen would naturally not be in sympathy with communism since his drug system is a capitalistic organization. However, we deplore his lack of confidence in the home training of his niece which doesn't make her immune to insidious ideas. At any university a student will come in contact with various opinions. It is up to the individual student to formulate his personal philosophy from the ideas presented.

And Suppose All Committees Really Functioned

There are committees and committees. Some of them function along the same stereotyped channels in which their predecessors plodded, regardless of changing conditions and needs. Yet there is one committee which has taken the initiative and evolved for itself a program of activities planned to meet and fill the gaps in a well-rounded campus life. We refer to the enlarged and increasingly-important sphere of activity filled by the social committee.

In past years the group which was tagged with this all-inclusive title contented itself with attempting to police the dining-room for breaches of etiquette and bad table technique, and with making of itself a vigilance committee to censor unseemly conduct. Its influence was negative, faintly reminiscent of food mama's "Now don't do that, junior."

This year the social committee has taken a new lease on life and has built up a constructive program aimed to strike at the root of the evil—the lack perhaps of a social consciousness, or a sense of the fitness of things. It has tried by means of its many-faceted procedures to bring into their proper relationship on campus the social amenities and the niceties of everyday living which make for a cultured, poised existence.

The monthly student-faculty dinners in the dining hall were instituted for the first time this year for the purpose of promoting a closer relationship between the two groups on a friendly basis. The faculty at homes for their freshmen students have served in the same way, and both have tended to bring about a greater ease in social relationships. The committee also functions upon special occasions as a social agent, as when they arranged dates for the Yale Glee club and when they provided hostesses for the legislators' dinner.

The series of after-dinner coffees, at which talks along cultural and aesthetic lines have been given by faculty members, have formed an important part of the work of the committee this year. Another important phase has been cooperation with the committee on redecoration of the lounges in completely refurnishing and recreating the rooms set aside as social gathering-places.

The committee is above all to be commended for attempting to keep the machinery of every-day living nicely oiled by stressing courtesy and consideration for one's fellows.

It is to be hoped that any groups on campus who have heretofore been content to be a committee in name only will lay aside the mantle of tradition and precedent and sally forth to meet the changing needs of college life.

At a recent meeting of the five leading Iowa colleges student representatives announced their opposition to compulsory military training and decided to protest the Pacific naval maneuvers to taking place this spring.

This is only one of the many indications of which way the wind is blowing in such matters. Students of Iowa have taken their stand. Florida State has announced her policy. Whose turn next?

Magazine Thumbings

By ELEANOR WILLIAMS

NEW WORLD SYMPHONY

By Elmer Davis

Harpers, May, 1935.

Key West has awakened from a sleepy depression-hit Florida town to a promising tourist resort alive with "intellectual excitement," the writer would have us believe, since the FERA started feeding, rehabilitating and governing it a year ago.

Life in Key West now could only be described by music, he says, a new world symphony with, he adds a few sour notes.

The fact that there are people who are not working in this experiment but who will nevertheless profit by the increase in value of the city bonds is one of the sour notes.

Another problem concerns whether or not Julius Stone will continue to provide federal monies until the town becomes self-supporting. Officials see the town's self-support in the near future, however, if a project can be found which will carry the natives through the summer months and if people of the money-making type and those who follow in artists' wake do not overrun the town, thereby destroying the experiment.

In view of the fact that young intellectuals are administering their jobs with a "disinterested desire" to apply money rather than make it and that the natives are "catching" this spirit of cooperative planning, Davis finds hope for the future.

THE POOR PULITZER PRIZE

By Clayton Hamilton

American Mercury, May, 1935

Whereas Men In White received the Pulitzer prize as the finest contribution to American dramatic authorship, Clayton Hamilton, who was one of the three jurors on the recommendations committee, points out the jurors decided unanimously for Mary of Scotland.

The jurors who are considered professionals in their particular field are selected every year by the advisory board of the School of Journalism, Columbia University, who in turn make the final recommendations to the trustees of that university.

Since the advisory board can reject the recommendations of the jurors, as they did last year, a look at the members who compose this advisory board explains why Hamilton calls it "the poor Pulitzer prize."

The members are editors on various newspapers in different sections of the country, Hamilton tells us, and as they lead busy lives of their own, they can not possibly become experts in all the fields considered for Pulitzer awards.

If the advisory board continues to ignore the recommendations of the jurors, Hamilton sees no reason for the jurors, in his case, seeing every play during the New York season, only to have their decision rejected by men who have seen probably no more than two shows that season. Ultimately he says, the prestige of the Pulitzer prize will be destroyed.

MUST MARRIED WOMEN WORK?

By Katherine Gauss Jackson

Scribners, April, 1935.

Katherine Gauss Jackson frankly disagrees with Dean Gildersleeve, Mrs. Roosevelt, and Anna Kross that marriage should be only an "incident" in a woman's life.

Making a gracious and lovely home while taking time to keep "mentally self-supporting" is no part-time job, she says, and women who can do it and gain satisfaction from it are surely leading "useful" lives.

If the above-mentioned women-leaders mean a career that centers around the home when they say every woman should have a career, then Mrs. Jackson says she is glad to agree with them.

However, from her own experience and that of her friends, she finds it humanly impossible to work from six to eight hours a day in an office, run a beautifully-managed home, contribute all one can to the lives of one's children and then get satisfaction out of any one of them.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By Williams

POLITICAL POT POURRI

BY CLOTILDE O'ROURKE

With the half-way point of the 25th regular biennial session of Florida legislature reached this week not one piece of major legislation has been passed. And a bill providing for a biennial 90 day session instead of the present 60 day session was "okeyed" by the committee to which it was referred recently.

* * * *

The most sensational lobbying and arguing has been over the Florida Suicide Pact, otherwise known as the Florida Recovery Act, which was passed by the senate this week in a milder form than as originally introduced and with a referendum bill attached. There are two main phases to the bill:

1. A $5 license is necessary for a single store; $50 on two to five stores in a chain; $100 on six to ten; $200 on 10 to 20 stores; $250 on 20 to 50 stores; and $300 on all over 50 stores.

2. The bill puts a tax of half of one percent on the total receipts of one store; 1% on receipts of two stores; 2% on three stores; 2% on three stores; 3% on four or five stores; 4% on six or seven stores; 5% on eight to ten stores; and 6% on all over ten stores.

* * * *

It's an epidemic! Senator Beacham of West Palm Beach would drive the demon chain stores out of their buildings by taxing according to floor space too. The bill he introduced would tax $10 on the first 200 square feet of floor space and $1 on each additional 100 square feet. Wouldn't wall space hit the nail a little more squarely, senator?

* * * *

From out a cloud of senatorial smoke and house taxation arguments comes the suggestion to introduce a tax bill that will eliminate all tax bills and levy tax instead on all lobbyists—a dollar a heard for the session.

* * * *

College students who are praying for FERA funds on an educational program similar to the $200 "scholarship" fund of last summer should begin lobbying for the passage of the welfare bill which will set up a state board to administer direct relief in Florida—at the cost of $200,000. "An authoritative source" (according to AP) has it that unless such a bill is passed federal relief may shut down on funds for Florida.

* * * *

Now that we have a constitutional amendment making expedient the transfer of the movie industry from California to Florida shrewd salons have decided that there is only one more barrier to the happiness of stars—slow divorces. And so we're bidding for Reno's bread and butter with a 90-day divorce bill, which was passed by a small margin in the house recently. Representative McLeod sagely remarks, "I wonder to what extent Florida would prostitute herself for revenue."

* * * *

Morning snoozers were disturbed and raucous laughter broke out some days ago in the house when the following announcement was read:

"Will those representatives who brought their wives with them to Tallahassee please leave names and addresses with the sergeant-at-arms."

* * * *

Even fire-crackers, toy pistols and second-hand bicycles have come under senatorial fire this week. Senator Watson of Miami introduced bills to restrict the sale of fireworks in cities and prohibit such sale in rural districts; to prohibit sale of air rifles, cap pistols, toy guns and other devices capable of discharging projectiles. Another bill would require parents' consent for the sale of a bicycle by a minor.

* * * *

Even the introduction of "mikes" in order to broadcast over station WRUF caused an argument in the senate. The "mike" is passed to each speaker as he rises to speak. Senator Futch of Leesburg, after an afternoon of such procedure, declared "Mr. President, if we don't get rid of these radios we'll never get anything done." But the broadcast went on.

* * * *

Irked by filibustering and discussion of the anti-lynching bill in the national congress representative Johns of Bradford county declared the pending bill is "a direct insult upon the southern states. I want you to vote with me and let our United States senate in Washington know we are against this insult." What is the reaction, we wonder, of the college girl to a fourth-of-July statement that "the State of Florida is amply able to protect and defend the constitutional rights of each and every citizen of the United States of America within its borders and the proposed bill is a direct encroachment upon state rights and should be defeated."

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

ARE WE BEHIND TIMES?

The rigid recitation hour system is a poor think in an educational world where lectures, laboratory work, prepared papers, round table discussions, and illustrated talks are designed to teach students new and changing subjects most advantageously. The weekly class schedule has found itself gradually becoming superseded, but a complete reorganization of the system of study is necessary.

Individual study is hampered when no cognizance is taken of the fact that different studies must be taught in different ways. The recitation system is best for languages, where speaking is important, and combined with the lecture system is still advantageous for mathematics and other "classical" studies.

But in scientific fields laboratory work has replaced most of the time spent in mere talk, and actual work is becoming more and more used to teach history and social sciences. The use of many books for the preparation of papers and individual projects requiring research are making formal education change its system.

That this trend toward loosening teaching methods in order to provide more of an opportunity to work, not less, is accepted by educators, is shown by its hastening in such institutions as University of Chicago, Swarthmore College, Rollins College, Vassar, and many graduate schools.

To attempt to put new principles of teaching—working with books, learning by doing, exchanging ideas into the rigid old-fashioned system of a three-day-a-week class schedule is as foolish as putting new wine in old bottles. There is good reason for a gradual change, and almost as much argument for a sweeping reorganization of credits and hours to conform with the new ideas in education.—Ohio University Green and White.

ACADEMIC FREEDOM

The editorial columns of The Plainsman have followed the nation wide controversy over "Academic Freedom" throughout this semester. During the past few weeks we have read a number of interesting articles on the subject in The Nation. All the material we have found on this question seems to follow the developments in the conflict to no end.

Until now the fight has been between the liberal on the one hand and the conservative on the other—with the latter insisting, as The Nation puts it, that "dangerous ideas be kept out of the schools and colleges, while the former ridiculed the suggestion that any ideas could be dangerous and believed in the free school for the same reason that he believed in the free press."

The whole controversy appears to be rather involved and confusing. Such difficulties as defining "dangerous ideas" have entered the question only to broaden it and to generalize the discussion.

In many instances the liberal of yesterday has become the radical of today. During the change he has acquired an increased number of positive opinions. One result is that he seems to think less of the "free school" idea as he seeks to indoctrinate youth with his but newly found convictions. He no longer believes the school to be a place where the student should be exposed to conflicting ideas. He now agrees that the school is a place where "correct" opinions should be inculcated. When he reaches this point he runs into the difficulty of just what constitutes "correct" opinions.

It is true that academic freedom in this country has never been a substantial reality. The professor's right to speak his mind is too often denied because of the pressure of politicians, trustees, and public opinion of his community.

Those who foster the cause of freedom in schools and colleges hold that the student should be privileged to hear impartial discussions of both sides of every question. Even though there are those who claim that American schools are "free" there are very few which encourage their professors to present conflicting views on such topics as communism, anarchism, capitalism and the like. The professor, in most cases, is forced to indoctrinate the student with a certain set of ideas.

If the conflict is settled it will probably mean the "absolute totalitarianism of the right or a totalitarianism of the left." There will be no middle ground. Should the results go against academic freedom many of those who have engaged in the conflict in the interest of the cause will probably wish that the question had never been raised. The present status of the issue is much more to be desired than is that of Italian, German, and Russian schools.

—Auburn Plainsman.

Seniors Express Mixed Emotions On Graduation

Just Another Summer To One, But End Of Work to Other

On the subject of the approaching graduation, seniors express every feeling from "I don't see how I can bear it" to "It will be one of the happiest days of my life."

One of the perennial honor roll students said she didn't feel anything, "just another summer coming on," but another honor roll student said she felt her "day of work would be over."

"I wish I were a freshman again, but with all my college experience," said one senior yearningly, while another said she was anxious "to get out and get busy at something."

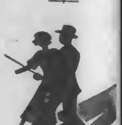
"You get in a rut but you like it," said an honors student, while a sensitive soul went into the physical reaction, saying, "it gives you a funny feeling right here," pointing to the pit of her stomach. One girl was definitely scared because she felt she had to take on a responsibility when she graduated, but most seniors expressed no apprehensions about the future.

"I feel there's a place for everyone if she will just find it," said one girl, and another added sourly, "yeah, always plenty of room in the bread line."

However, most seniors agreed "It's sort of a mixed feeling." You're glad to be graduating but you're sad at thinking of all the contacts you made here and will probably lose."

Few would come back as post-graduates though. "It just wouldn't be the same," they say.

Collegiate Come-Backs



For a while we nearly got heart failure thinking that the last stronghold of the female sex, Florida State, had relented and was going co-ed. In fact, we had even written home to mother for some new clothes Restrain yourselves girls. The blow has fallen, and the boy has gone home. All we can say is that any man who can stay up here a week and eat in the dining-room every day, too, is either in love or badly in need of medical attention.

* * * *

Freshmen aren't so dumb as we might believe. A few days ago after class one clever little number tripped up to her English professor and gushingly insisted that he was the perfect image of a dashing British poet of the Victorian period, that the resemblance was so striking she feared she might call him by the poet's name in class some day. Did he mind? No, he didn't. Well, anybody can use nine quality points.

* * * *

I'm fonder of caviar than cabbage,
And filet than potatoes a la mash;
But life in this famed woman's college
Has made me receptive to hash.
—Rolands

* * * *

Another argument for the virtue of higher education is seen in the statement by Warden Lewis E. Lawes of Sing Sing prison that college graduates make very good prisoners.

—Tower Times

After four years training they should. Of course, some colleges are better than others as far as turning out model prisoners is concerned We believe that two years at Florida State is equivalent to four years at any other institution of higher learning, and our system is not yet perfected.

* * * *

That she Has charms
I must Confess
But what
Are charms
Without access?
—Plainsman

* * * *

We nominate for the meanest man in the world the professor at West Virginia University who, after his students had paid one dollar each for advance copies of a history exam., changed the entire exam.

* * * *

The pen may be mightier than the sword, but did you ever try to defend your honor with a pen?
Yellow Jacket

Writing pens may not come in so handy at the crucial moment mister but we always have said there's nothing like a hat-pin for making a man see things our way

* * * *

At the faculty-student baseball game there was really some big league material. Don't quote us as saying that, however, because we were so nearly blinded by the gayer suits worn by the faculty that we can't be sure. Maybe the student team was affected in the same way, for take a peek at the score.

* * * *

We can stand self-confidence in small quantities, but when a man starts working cross-word puzzles with a pen—Well!

* * * *

The Johnsonian has defined a miracle as a woman who won't talk. How about a man who won't scatter cigarette ashes all over the new rug?

* * * *

TREES

I think that I shall never see,
Along the road an unscraped tree.
With bark intact, and painted white,
That no car ever hit at night.
For every tree that's near a road
Has caused some auto to be towed.
Sideswiping trees is done a lot
By drivers who are not so hot.
God gave them eyes with which to see.
Yet any fool can hit a tree.
—Plainsman

* * * *

The week's book report in brief: Dictionary—a bit plotless, but a splendid vocabulary.

—Morton Collegian

The Social Week

Breakfast for Sophmores And Seniors is Tomorrow

The annual sophomore-senior breakfast will be held tomorrow morning at 6 o'clock in the college dining room.

A novel theme will be carried out in the decorations including the place cards and menus. During the breakfast, which will be an old-fashioned southern meal consisting of fried chicken, grits and gravy, fresh strawberries, hot biscuit, orange marmalade and coffee, there will be several entertainment features. The theme of the breakfast, kept secret, will be revealed as the guests enter.

Betty Peck who is in charge of all arrangements has requested that all sophomores and seniors wear white.

Those who had signed up by Thursday noon were: Betty Mack, Margaret Edwards, Dorothy Bengard, Marcia Lindsey, Mary Jo Clayton, Mary Claire Moore, Helen Ballenger, Mary Leila Tumley, Betty Hamilton, Rachel McKinnon, Helen Wilson, Dr. Edward Conradi, Virginia Hamilton, Janice Borton, Miss Olivia N. Dorman, Kay Sands, Betty Peck, Mildred Smoak, Mary Jeanne McKay, Margaret Ansley, Gladys Pinder, Rose Rogers, Virginia Clayton, Elsie Mae Hamrick, Martha Flake, Julia Norfleet, Miriam Frye, Lillian Craig, Sara McGregor.

Opal Langley, June Bullard, Edith Smith, Ruth Howard, Margaret Davis, Sadie Mathews, Lila DeVore, Helen DeVries, Betty Kimball, Clarice Sanchez, Virginia Holt, Banks Wood, Josephine Skeets, Mary Ann Hills, Barbara Sandquist, Margaret Reedy, Nedra McNamara, Evelyn Ballard, Patricia Foster, Irene Collins, Linna Cheney, Katherine Kyle, Marie Surlock, Dottie Baxter, Barbara Bell, Leah Andrews, Johnny Hardee, Anne Donnell, Marcia Buchanan, Gertrude Tomkies, Sara Tyler, Helen Evans, Margaret Neff, Marjorie Horne, Louise Burgess, Lucile Dale, Frances Morrow, Ethel Fair Pillman, Kathleen Simpson, Mary Virginia Warren, Edwina Wakefield, Evelyn Haynie, Carroll Patterson, Charlotte Stevens, Virginia Laughner, Martha Neeld, Nell Ward Mayes, Barbara Hubbard, Frances Pabrick, Jane Hubbard, Alma Loudermilk, Virginia Taylor, Maxine Ward, Margaret Nickle, Laura Crow, Sara Hethcox, Lucille Ham, Margaret McLaughlin, Margaret Claire Lafferty, Rosa Doub, Frances Forth, Mary Helen Forth, Mary Dickenson, Elizabeth Dickenson, Margaret Early, Betty Ann Graham.

Carolina DeMontigne, Martha Makemson, Beth Daane, Frances Ellis, Hazel Royall, G. O. Work, Jennie Rae Nall, Myrtle Fillingham, Helen Cate, Billie Paxon, Frances Lingle, Dorothy Borden, Oneida McFatter, Elizabeth Simpson, Margaret Arnold, Rosalie Powell, Adelaide Ireland, Dorothy Edwards, Mary Smith, Marion Lessey, Belle Henshaw, Marie Taylor, Thelma Smith, Marion Weeks, Bill Lovell, Cornelia Garrick, Jewell Drawdy, Margaret Roe, Gladys Ahern, Carol Reeves, Rhodora Kimball, Sarah Wilkerson, Mary Laura Tilley, Irma Allen, Frances Hurlin, Anne Sams, Abbie Lyle, Polly Dabney.

Evelyn Chauncy, Muriel Nelson, Margaret Flook, Florence Devine, Mir[illegible] Bulkey, Frances L. Ellis, Ellen Anderson, Ruth Daniel, Mary Myrick, Alice Sloan, Ruth Myrick, Opal Gray, Mildred Boss, Marjorie DeWitt, Barbara Garfunkel, Clotilde O'Rourke, Elizabeth Stout Mary McGunagle, Juanita Pace, Eleanor Biggers, Leila Dickey, Ruth Sadler, Adelaide Duval, Virginia Turner, Charlotte Cameron, Mary Miller, Eleanor Payne, Betty McKinnon, Ellen Moore, Janet Charles, Margaret Ware, Gwen O'Berry, Esther Daffin, Hazel Goza, Viola Taylor, Margie Moore, Jean Hamner.

Bonnevieve Tomlinson, Mirabel Smith, Annette Brewer, Marie Lingo, Estelle Gamble, Lillian Schulte, Roberta Rogers, Helen Wahlberg, Roberta Diamond, Muriel Baker, Avaline Lancaster, Mary Frances Smith, Kathryn Smith, Margaret Pinkoson, Clara Bridges, Ruth Marvin, LaLuce Planck, Mary Frances Burford, Marion Brantley.

Louise Mackey, Marjorie Nogle, Sue Whitaker, Annette Dunn, Helen Mary Fritsch, Jo Binion, Peggy McMichael, Lucy Fulghum, Martha Whitaker, Grace Whitaker, Elsie Parker, Frances Gladden, Susie Rae Meredith, Sylvia Guito, Eleanor Green, Dorothy Wright, Gladys Folsom, Mary Smith, Mary Ellen Bailey, Helen Hendrey, Anna Glen, Helen Grey, Edith Hays Effinger, Margaret K. Anderson, Ruth Lind, Elizabeth Sponenbarger, Jessie Mead, Anita Mitchell, Margaret Delaney, Ruth Durrenberger, Marion Ferrell, Dorothy Moorehead, Lynnora Young, Frances Williams, Edna Myrick, Mary Claire Kimball, Edna Hoffman, Betty Ellen Smith, Polly Flint, Sara Rutledge, Betty Hampton, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Lillian Simmons, Marie Slack, Lois Hazel, and Catherine Tack[illegible].

Others are expected to sign up later.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
May 4 to May 11

Saturday

4:00 p. m.—Rushing teas given by Kappa Delta, Alpha Gamma Delta, and Sigma Sigma Sigma.
4:30 p. m.—Informal dancing in Bryan sunparlor.
6:30 p. m.—Rushing banquets at Dutch Kitchen and the Floridan hotel.
8:1. p. m.—University of Florida glee club concert—auditorium.
8:15 p. m.—Informal dancing in Bryan sunparlor.
9:30 p. m.—Glee club dance et the gym.

Sunday

11:00 a. m.—Church services.
5:00 p. m.—Dr. Edward Conradi and Miss Louise oCnradi entertaining C. G. A. officers.
7:15 p. m.—Y. W. C. A. vespers.

Monday

5:30 p. m.—Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, "et home" for freshmen in Reynolds.
5:30 p. m.—Orchestra rehearsal.
7:30 p. m.—Installation of C. G. A. officers in front of Bryan hall.
8:00 p. m.—Beta Pi Theta meeting.
8:00 p. m.—Reception honoring new C. G. A. officers in Gilchrist parlors.
9:00 p. m.—Sorority meetings.

Tuesday

5:30 p. m.—Orchestra Rehearsal—Auditorium.
7:30 p. m.—Convocation—Mortar Board Tapping.
7:30 p. m.—Home Economics club meeting.

Wednesday

7:15 a. m.—Worship service.
7:30 p. m.—Glee Club rehearsal.

Thursday

5:30 p. m.—Orchestra rehearsal.
8:15 p. m.—Speech Department play. Augusta Conradi Theater.

Friday

8:00 p. m.—A. A. U. W. monthly meeting.
8:15 p. m.—Speech Department Play. Augusta Conradi Theater.

The Kappa Alpha Theta sorority was hostess this week to Ruth Roberts, Betty Bloxom, and Merian Craig, all of Seattle Washington, who are visiting chapters of the sorority throughout the country.

Gifts for Mother's Day

Many many items purchased particularly for Mother's Day—
—Purses
—Hosiery
—Lingerie
—Wash Frocks

The Vogue

WE'LL PACK AND SHIP YOUR GIFT SELECTION

Personal Mention

Tri Sigma had as guests last week-end Bernice Adams of Jacksonville and Clara Stringfield of Pensacola.

Those making out-of-town visits this week-end included Lydia Craig and Mildred Johnson, both visiting in Pensacola.

Dr. Edward Conradi attended the Florida Congress of Parents and Teachers at Miami this week.

Mrs. W. M. Sirene, formerly of Marion Keyes, and a Beta Phi Alpha alumna from Birmingham, Ala., will visit here this week-end.

Alumnae who will visit at the Delta Delta Delta house this week to assist with the spring rushing program include Elizabeth Rollins, Donna Dekle, Mrs. John M. Allison of Tampa, and Catherine Murphy from Orlando.

Vera Green, an alumna from Mount Pleasant, visited here at the Beta Phi Alpha house last week.

Mary MacMillan, Theta Upsilon alumna, spent last week-end at the sorority house here.

Esther Daffin will leave Saturday for Marianna to attend e wedding there. She will return Sunday afternoon.

Muriel Watson has gone to Gainesville to spend the week-end.

Among the Kappa Delta alumnae who will visit here this week-end are: Sarah Hulsey, Mosella Orr, and Sarah Brantley Johnson from Tampa; Betty Runkle from Winter Haven; and Ruth McCalsky, and Louise Arnold from Lake City.

Mrs. Otto Wettstien, Mrs. Chuck Lavin, and Willa Mae Crosby have been visiting at the Pi Beta Phi house this week.

Frances Morrow, and Marjorie Helveston will attend the spring dances at Tulane university this week-end.

Miss Winnie Lee Davis, secretary of Methodist Student Union, attended the annual conference of the Florida Methodist Missionary Society in Miami from Monday till Saturday. While there she gave a report on the work done here by the student council for the past year.

Kappa Delta to Honor Visitors With Tea And Breakfast

Rushees of the Kappa Delta sorority who are visiting here this week-end will be honored with a formal breakfast at the Dutch Kitchen Sunday morning and a lawn tea tomorrow afternoon, according to Alice Dear Mabry, who has charge of the week-end entertainment.

The program at the lawn tea will consist of a harp solo by Frances Oates, a vocal solo by Arthur Jordan of Gainesville, piano selections by Bill Bryan, also from Gainesville, and vocal selections by a trio comprised of Sarah Tillman, Elizabeth Ayala, and Anne Bailey. Mary Claire Moore is chairman of the refreshment committee.

Following the tea the guests will be taken to the open air theater to view the May Day celebration.

On Sunday morning all of the house guests will be honored with a breakfast. The decorations including place cards and programs will carry out a color scheme of green and white, the sorority colors.

Frances Gates is the chairman of the entertainment for the breakfast. About forty guests are expected to attend these functions.

Hodges Will Receive Governor, Students, Legislators

Senator and Mrs. William C. Hodges will entertain with a formal reception at their country estate, Goodwood, Tuesday evening from 6 to 10 o'clock in honor of Governor and Mrs. David Sholtz and members of the legislature and their families.

Members of the faculty and student body of Florida State College for Women are invited to attend. Dr. Olivia N. Dorman, dean of students, has suggested that students call during the first hour.

Get That Good Shoe Repair Job
at
SUTTON'S
Half-Way Shoe Shop

SORORITY CHAPTER ENTERTAINS WITH FORMAL RECEPTION AT CHAPTER HOUSE

The members of the Alpha Omicron Pi sorority entertained at a formal reception in the sorority house on Park street, Wednesday night from 8:00 to 10:00, honoring Mrs. Elizabeth Huntington Anderson, the national president, and Mrs. Florence Bethea, new faculty adviser.

In the receiving line were Mary Filer, Sarah Graham, Mrs Anderson, Mrs. Bethea, and Mrs. Josephine M. Levy, while Opal Atwater presided at the punch-bowl.

Invited to attend the reception were the presidents and faculty advisers of all sororities on campus and other faculty members.

The hostesses at this affair were Opal Atwater, Edith Ayers, Charlotte Cameron, Mary Carson, Marjorie Carter, Mary Louise Filer, Agnes Goss, Sarah Graham, Laurita Pearson, Alice Porter, Alice Sloan, Evaline Rankin, Virginia Weldon, Mildred Williams, Dorothy Finneren, Doris Godard, Angela Griley, Betty Bary, Ruth Daniel, Lucille Finley, Elizabeth Penn, Saide Finney, Alline Freeman, Mary Frances Hale, Nina Hughes, Janice Logan, Mary Joyce Moorhead, and Flora Sinquefield.

NEWMAN CLUB INSTALLS WEBSTER NEW PRESIDENT AT BANQUET MONDAY NIGHT

The Newman club held its first installation banquet at the Dutch Kitchen last Monday night at 6 o'clock.

The banquet tables were decorated with red and yellow streamers and flowers and the place cards and programs, which were made to resemble the Newman club shield, were of the same colors.

Following the banquet, Rosa Doub, retiring president and toastmistress for the occasion introduced the speaker for the evening, Rev. Wm. J. Carroll, who commented upon the success of the club this year and congratulated the girls on their selection of officers for the coming year Father Michael Fox, a visiting speaker, then said a few words, commenting upon the place of the youth in the world today.

Grace Mary Webster the newly elected president announced her standing committees for the coming year, and introduced her executive board to the members.

A toast to the old officers and members was led by Jane Quinn, a new member this year.

Following this Mauvis Lussier, the newly elected chairman of the southeast province of the Federation of College Catholic clubs spoke to the members, asking for their cooperation for the coming year and announcing that the convention of the southeast province would be held here next year.

Among those who attended the banquet were: Rev. William J. Carroll, Rev. Michael Fox, Rosa Doub, Grace Mary Webster, Mauvis Lussier, Clotilde O'Rourke, Fortuna Lopez, Carmen Moran, Adelaide Lounds, Ela Arozarina, Alicia Sierra, Mary Beaver, Margaret Roe, Eloise Brizard, Isabelle Gleason, Margaret McLaughlen, Margaret Claire Lafferty, Jane Quinn, Vivian Brizard, Vivian Testa, Raymondine Ponce, Angela Griley, Agnes Goss and Nan O'Shaughnessy.

Sigma Sigma Sigmas Entertain Rushees At Many Affairs

The members and pledges of the Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority will entertain rushees with e series of affairs this week-end.

The first item of the program will be a slumber party at the sorority house tonight. This will be folowed by a trip to Wakulla Springs tomorrow, from which the guests will return in time to attend the May Day Coronation.

Tomorrow night the rushees will attend the University of Florida Glee club concert in the auditorium. Following this program another slumber party will be held at the sorority house.

Out of town guests for these affairs include Mary Emily Brooking, and Adalaide Celley, from Gainesville; and Sarah Louise Andrews, from Lake City.

Florida High Girls And Boys Receive Sport Letters

The annual Mothers and Daughters banquet of Florida high school will be given tonight at 8:00 o'clock at the Park Terrace. Miss Mary Settle and girls of the Letter club are in charge of the arrangements.

Last night the Fathers and Sons banquet was held at the Three Torches with the boys letter club and Mr. O. S. Harrison, director, in charge.

At the boys' banquet athletic letters were awarded and honorable mention made of those who had won other distinctions.

Boys receiving letters were: basketball, Jim Kitchens, captain, George Apthorp, Phil Alfriend, Bill Richards, Joe Henry Gray, Willard Books, Joe Davis Lowrie and Joe Demetrie, president of the Letter club; tennis, Bill Rickards, and Foster Boone.

The girls who will be presented with letters and stars tonight are: stars, Althea and Alberta Lloyd, Hardee Nolan, Harriet Kent, Dot Parker, Mary Emily Parker and Katherine Burgess; letters, Cora Newbold, Frances Johnan, Virginia Williams, Jane Reagin, Edith Chason, Mary Pendly, Dora and Peggy Koons, Sue Love, Bernelle McMiller, Jean Nolan, Jane Murphy, Mary Pichard, Avis Tucker, Clara Trushair, Marjorie Purse and Betty Ann Taylor.

Rushees of Chi Omega To Be Entertained By Sorority

The visiting rushees of the Chi Omega sorority will be entertained at several affairs this week-end.

The first is a fashion show and skit which will be given at the sorority house tonight. Mary Jeanne McKay, Viola Taylor, and Pauline Spencer are in charge of the arrangements.

Tomorrow there will be a luncheon at the Dutch Kitchen at which tables will be decorated with flowers, place cards and programs carrying out the color scheme of cardinal and straw, the sorority colors. Gwendolyn O'Berry is in charge of the program for thi. luncheon.

The week-end festivities will close with a breakfast at the sorority house Sunday morning. About thirty-five rushees are expected to attend these affairs.

INSTALLATION BANQUET FOR SIGMA DELTA PI HELD AT FLORIDAN HOTEL

The new members of Sigma Delta Pi, national Spanish honorary fraternity, gave a banquet at the Floridan hotel last night celebrating the installation of a chapter of that honorary on this campus.

The banquet room at the Floridan was decorated in red, yellow, and purple, the colors of the fraternity. The color scheme was also carried out by the programs which were made in the shape of the fraternity seal, and by the place cards.

Following the banquet Dr. A. R. Seymour gave a short speech which was followed by talks by the other faculty members present. Then each member of the fraternity was requested to get up and say a few words in Spanish.

Three alumnae of Phi Beta Sigma the local fraternity which became Sigma Delta Pi returned to the college for the installation of the national fraternity and they were at this time introduced and asked to speak to the members. They are: Lily Priscia, Helen Feagin, and Emma Holt.

The committees in charge of the arrangements for the banquet were: general chairman, Marjorie Carter; decoration committee, Minna Dunn and Murae Reddick; and the program committee, Mary Helen Forth, Betty Ellen Smith, Martha Wolliston, and Mary Elizabeth Cooley.

Those present at the banquet were: Dr. Arthur R. Seymour, Dr. Margie Burks, Mrs. Dorothy Breen, Dr. Marion Hay, Dr. Manuel Lopez, Miss Myrtle Dolbee, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Mrs. Ada Belle Allan, Mrs. Irene Miller, Helen Faegin, Lily Priscia, Marjorie Carter, Rosa Doub, Ruth Dickson, Julia Norfleet.

Laura Mathis, Betty Bailey, Margaret Campbell, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Virginia Cromartie, Minna Dunn, Ruth Feinberg, Opal Grey, Anna Groover, Winifred Hansen, Becky Lou Hopkins, Sara Krentzman, Abbie Lyle, Jennie Rae Nall, Murae Reddick, Betty Ellen Smith, Mildred Stevens, Wylma TerBush, Mary Helen Forth, Martha Wolliston and Emma Holt.

Pi Phi to Entertain Rushees Friday And Saturday Nights

Among the functions with which the Pi Beta Phi sorority will entertain visiting rushees this week-end are an informal dinner, a plate luncheon, and a formal banquet, according to Anne Durr, rush captain and chairman of the week-end arrangements.

The first activity on the list is an informal dinne at the Dutch Kitchen tonight. This will be followed by a plate luncheon at the sorority house tomorrow non. The program for the luncheon consists of a group of skits imitating celebrities, specialty dances, and novelty songs.

The official events of the week-end will be climaxed by a formal banquet at the Dutch Kitchen tomorrow night. A color scheme of wine and silver blue, the sorority colors, will be carried out in the flowers, place cards and date cards. The latter will be made in the shape of the sorority shields with arrows through them.

About forty-five house guests are expectec to be honored at these affairs.

New Way Laundry and Dry Cleaners
Tallahassee's Oldest and Largest

"Wear Clean Clothes"

Representative in Lower Bryan Hall

Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 183

To loneliness—I bring companionship

I'm your best friend
I am your Lucky Strike

I am a friend indeed. A better friend than others, because I am made only of mild, fragrant, expensive center leaves. I don't permit a single sharp top leaf nor a single coarse bottom leaf to mar my good taste or my uniform mildness. I do not irritate. To loneliness I bring companionship. I am the best of friends.

Copyright 1935, The American Tobacco Company.

TUNE IN—Luckies are on the air Saturdays, with THE HIT PARADE, over NBC Network 8 to 9 p. m. E. D. S. T.

Y. W. C. A. Cabinet Holds Services

Outgoing President Tells Of Year's Work

The installation of the new executive cabinet and other officers of the Young Women's Christian association was held Sunday night in the Augusta Conradi theater. During the service Jennie Rae Nall, outgoing president, reviewed the work of the different Y W. committees during the past year.

The membership committee, in order to bring students into closer contact with Y. W., held one meeting each month. These meetings were devoted to programs ranging in form of entertainment from the reading of poetry to comparative talks on religion.

The finance committee has sponsored several drives to secure pledges and payment of these pledges. The funds thus raised were contribute dto the national Y.W.C.A. budget, to the Seminole Indian reservation, to the Florida Children's Home, and part of the funds were used for the sponsoring of religious emphasis week on the campus, according to Jennie Rae. The finance committee also sponsored the convocation talk given by "Daddy" Fagg of the Children's Home society last November

The vespers committee gave weekly Sunday evening programs to which all students and faculty members were invited.

The world friendship committee has been in charge of the bulletin boards where world news topics were on display daily.

The executive cabinet also aimed throughout the year, Jennie Rae said, to gain for students on the campus a wider outlook on problems of the world.

After these introductory words Edith Toffaleti gave a special musical number, and two hymns were sung. A scripture selection was read by Jennie Rae.

The old officers presented pansy corsages to new officers as they took the oath of office.

Abbey to Entertain Freshmen Monday With "At Home"

Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey will entertain twenty freshmen with an "at home" Monday afternoon from 5:30 to 6:30 in Reynolds hall parlor.

Those who have been invited to attend are: Martha Evans, Katherine Harris, Jane Craile, Mary Elizabeth West, Katherine Rogers, Mary Irma Allen, Ella Virginia Brooks, Edna Feinberg, Bernice Jane Gorden, Margaret Adelaide Jones, Mary Lee Wheeler, Jewel Eugenia Drawdy, Nina Kirkland, Lillie McGuire, Anne Mizell, Hilda Spradlin, Jane Grey Stevens, Janet Cook, Gwendolyn Patterson, Carlie Mae Reynolds, and Dorothy Hill.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT AND PRESS CONVENTION AT GAINESVILLE

The meetings at the combined Florida State Government and Florida Intercollegiate Press association held in Gainesville last Friday and Saturday were called to order by President William Sherrill, First Vice-President Carolina DeMontigne, Secretary Etna Cook, and Second Vice-President Jimmie Phillips. top row, officers of the press association, Treasurer John Hoils, Secretary Olga Minor and President DeVane Williams.

The right photo shows the delegates to the joint convention. Included are: Al Robins, Lois Miller, Jimmie Phillips, Bob Rogers, John Hollis, Jane Shillito, Helen Young, Peggy Harrison, St. Petersburg Junior college; Olga Minor, Freddy Waltz, Beryl Ryden, William Robinson, John Esterline, University of Miami; Loyal Frisbie, Louise Kelly, Eleanor Morrison, Lewis Halley, Evelyn Middleton, Edna Cook, Southern college; Carolina DeMontigne, Althea Smith, Ruth Fersons, Katherine Blood, Margaret Fain, Margaret Graham, Jean Giles, Florida State College for Women; Helen Horne, Stetson university; Everett Clay, Walter Barker, Nathalien Futch, Thomas Spicola, J. Willard Oliver, William F. Blois, jr., Homer Wakefield, C. S. Hackett, Alex Pillsbury, Vance Duncan, William Calvin Sherrill, Nolan DeVane Williams, Manuel Michael Carcia, Frank Foster, Bruce Taylor, W. H. Anderson, Jack Rutler, Eugene Wang, Florida. Those not in the picture are Julian Rutledge Alford, William Ernest Fairbanks, Florida.

Theta Upsilon Will Have After Dinner Coffee Tonight

The members and pledges of the Theta Upsilon sorority will entertain rushees at an after-dinner coffee in the sorority house on West Jefferson street tonight at 8 00 o'clock.

The rooms will be decorated in the sorority colors with spring flowers. The chairman for the arrangements is Virginia Tucker.

Hostesses at this time will be: Marcia Buchanan, Helen Evans, Johnny Hardee, Virginia Tucker, Lillian Trotter, Anne Donnell, Margaret Neff, Neita Wright, Gertrude Tomkies, and Barbara Green.

Methodist Students Go to Camp Today

Forty-five members of the Methodist Student council are expected to leave at 4:30 o'clock this afternoon for Camp Flastacowo where they will hold a joint council meeting with the hall chairmen. This will be the final meeting before new councilmen are selected Sunday by the outgoing Senior members. The girls will return tomorrow afternoon.

Monday the Tallahassee Methodist league gave a picnic in the woods in which the college members participated.

Hygiene Enthusiast Edvises Students

(Continued from page three)

habit of being contrary to that of other people. Hence, I was so calm and collected that, confronted with three exams on one day, I found it impossible to study for them! I spent the day before that in reading poetry. I had spent the Saturday before exam week listening to an opera; that Sunday I went to see Will Rogers' latest picture. All during the emotional week I had a most uncontrollable desire to get close to Nature—so most of my spare time was spent in roaming over the campus. I bundled up in two or three sweaters and a coat and went tramping merrily; I also managed to read one or two books in the meantime. In short, as one of my friends expresses it, I did everything but study!

My friends are firmly convinced that I have lost what little sense I might have possessed before I came here, and maybe they are right, but this fact remains: in spite of all my peculiar doings, I did not have any trouble with my exams! This still puzzles me, but it is true and all I can say is that what little knowledge of mental hygiene I have acquired and tried out on myself has been highly successful. I must admit that there is no possibility of my winning any cups or plaques for my scholastic average, but I did make approbation. However, there is much more pleasure to be found in school besides that attached to making all "A's". Of mental hygiene makes it possible for us to find that pleasure, then I say, "Three cheers for mental hygiene."

"I Really Want to be a Teacher" Parker Reassures All Doubters

Pedagogic Inclination Is Discovered at Early Age of Four

By DAISY PARKER

"Are you very sure that you want to be a teacher?" asked my faculty advisor rather doubtingly when I first entered college.

"Yes, yes," I replied immediately.

"But your answer is so impulsive. I just wonder."

Impulsive? Why I have known that I wanted to be a school teacher since I was four years old. The discovery came with my consciousness of dolls as dolls rather than as objects to be chewed and thrown across the room. Dolls then came to mean to me—and they ever afterward remained—objects to be lined up in a row and taught the ABC's and 123's. Making doll clothes and the like never appealed to me. Mother could do all that. My interest was on a more lofty plane.

And during those pre-school days when I wasn't teaching dolls I was playing "school teacher" with whoever would bear with me. Usually it as the neighborhood sissy, the neighborhood tomboy, and her baby brother. Sometimes the dogs of the street formed part of th eenrollment, too

About the enrollment It was very systematically kept in multitudinous notebooks. Whenever I was allowed the choice of a gift for a birthday or Christmas I asked for a notebook so that I could use it as a "grade book" I have even today packed away in a box many molded and motheaten notebooks in which appear "John AAACCCABBBA, Lucy AAAAAA" and so on. Keeping grades was quite as much fun as teaching. I remember very distinctly trying to convert a playmate of mine who was determined to be an actress into a teacher with the argument, "Old actresses never get to give anybody grades."

When I went to real school my play "school teacher" didn't stop. In the afternoons I rounded up my classmates who lived near me and conducted a "home work" school. I am quite sure I was the most patient soul who ever taught the "mulpication" tables.

I do admit that once I nearly imagined that I didn't want to be a teacher. When I entered junior high I firmly resolved to quit all my foolish homework groups and to quit trying to "play teach." But I reckoned not with Latin. With the advent of that language into our schedule classmates sought me as a teacher rather than I as a teacher seeking them as pupils. It was quite natural too; in the past I had projected myself in front as a teacher so when help was needed I was the logical person to whom to turn. As a matter of truth, I was probably no better at Latin than they at first. But as has been said, "Put a person in responsible places and he will rise to them." And those first unsolicited pupils were my definite, and even sacred, responsibility; and I "rose" to them. I feel bound by no undue modesty to refrain from boasting that not a one of those pupils ever failed Latin.

During my junior high years I achieved, I am quite sure, the distinction of being the first teacher via telephone in the world. Then I no longer sought and desired to have an afternoon homework school but a night school of the same nature was thrust upon me. About 7:15—right after Amos and Andy—my telephone would start ringing—and it rang regularly 'til 10:30. Sometimes it was other fellow students of mine who were more adept at declensions and conjugations than those whom I regularly coached. (One of such calling one night said, "I know I'm not one of your regular 'clients,' but does this Caesar make sense or not?") Nor was I only professor of Latin over the phone. I explained the meter of EVANGELINE; conjugated Spanish verbs; explained our tripartite system of government and so on. This Wireless Academy, as we might call it was thrust upon me, but I loved it. If it had not come, I am quite positive that I should have sought other means by which to give expression to my desire to teach. As a matter of fact, I had sought one means as an outlet in taking on a Sunday school class of ten-year-old boys.

During my later high school days my "clientele" increased and the phone continued ringing. And I was taking on the aspect of a teacher, too, for more than new students took me to be a member of the faculty. And in the last two months of my senior year I experienced supreme happiness. I was asked to teach a "real" Spanish class one afternoon a week, due to an unforeseen conflict in the schedule of the faculty member who had the class. If I had never had any previous desire to be a teacher the tremendous th and joy that I received in teaching that class would have made clear to me the purpose of my l e career.

Yes, I am quite sure that I want to be a teacher.

Presbyterian Girls To Be Entertained

Mrs. H. D. Mendenhall will entertain at her home Tuesday afternoon from 4:00 to 6 00 o'clock with a garden party for the old and new Presbyterian Student councils. Mrs. J G Kellum and Mrs Glenn Terrell will assist in the serving.

Puppetry Class Will Offer Ancient Sati

Tomorrow nigh at e o'clock, in the Augusta Co Li le Theat e the pup under the direction of M.s Ferris Briggs, in of will present "School for Scand by Richard Sheridan.

For the past several weeks dents of the class hav ing eighteenth cent he likenesses of the ch Sheridan's play, ar dre sing them, and m hem. The play is a eighteenth century

Members of the Mary Mooty pulling Sir Peter Teagle: O Sir Oliver Surface: Ha e Charles Surface: E e n son Rowley. Al hea Mosses; Frances Thomas Surface; Doris Risk, Sna ces Morrow, Maria. Ka Wilhelm, Lady Sneerwe Bell Hopkins, Trip: Mary Moore, Lady Teagle Reedy, Mr. Crabtree Scholtz, and Ortrude Par Benjamin Backbite

There will be an admiss charge of twenty five cen

GRADUATION
PROM
and
PARTY
DRESSES
$3.95
to $6.95
Save at
THE HUB
STORE

Turner's
50 Dozen
LADIES' HOSE
85c Value
45c Pair
Specials for Saturday and Monday
May 4th and 6th
100 Ladies'
LINEN SUITS
$3.50 values. Sizes 12 to 20. All colors ....
$1.99

Showing New Summer Dresses for All Occasions—
EVENING
STREET
AND SPORTS
MAE'S SHOP
So. Monroe St.

ECONOMY TAXI
PHONE 1270
10c per Mile, in City, Baggage Extra
— 24 HOUR SERVICE —
Public Liability and Property Damage Insurance Coverage, While Riding in Our Taxis, For YOUR Protection.
Operating Under Railroad Commission Permit, Paying Required Mileage Tax.
Making Occasional Trips to all Parts of the State
H. J. REDD, Mgr.
Under Same Ownership and Management as
TALLAHASSEE-MONTICELLO BUS LINE

FOR MOTHER'S DAY
May 12th
Send her the gift she will treasure most
the one that only you can give . . .
YOUR PHOTOGRAPH
PIKE'S STUDIO
107 W. College • Telephone 7

LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO COMPANY
8,271 men and women visited the Chesterfield factories during the past year . . .
Chesterfield CIGARETTES

A man who visited a Chesterfield factory recently, said: "Now that I have seen Chesterfields made, I understand better than ever why people say Chesterfields are milder and have a better taste."

If you too could visit our factories you could see the clean, airy surroundings; the employees in their spotless uniforms, and the modern cigarette making machinery.

You could notice how carefully each Chesterfield cigarette is inspected and see also how Chesterfields are practically untouched by human hands.

Whenever you happen to be in Richmond, Va., Durham, N. C., or San Francisco, California, we invite you to stop at the Liggett & Myers plants and see how Chesterfields are made.

© 1935, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

Every Student a Member of the
Local Branch of NSFA

The Florida Flambeau

Published bv the Students of Florida State College For Women

Hearty Congratulations
To New
Members of Mortar Board

VOLUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, May 10, 1935 NUMBER TWENTY-EIGHT

Mortor Board Taps Thirteen Tuesday Night

Outstanding Students Of Junior Class Chosen By Honorary

LYNN DISCUSSES IDEALS OF GROUP

Symbolic Torches Glow During Inspiring Ceremony

[illegible] a ceremony inspirational [illegible] ritualistic solemnity, thirteen girls from the junior class [illegible] hundred and fifty-one [illegible] were tapped by present members of Mortar Board, senior honorary organization in the college auditorium Tuesday night.

Initiation for new members will be held Sunday afternoon [illegible] 30 at the home of Mrs. [illegible] Richards alumna and editor of the Mortar Board quarterly.

Students Honored

Students honored this year were Katherine Blood, Minna Dunn, Margaret Graham, Sarah Krentzman, Gertrude Kuhn, Dorothy Lesch, Lucy Gee Linn, Betty Meyer, Ruth Persons, Murae Reddick, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Lillian Turlington, Edith Webb.

Into the hushed silence of the darkened auditorium the eleven retiring members, wearing the caps and gowns of their senior order and bearing aloft the lighted torches symbolic of Mortar Board walked two by two down the aisles as the song of the organization, "Thy Ideals," was softly played.

The procession, of which alumnae, honorary members and faculty advisors were a part, formed a semi-circle on the stage where three torches steadily glowed in the center background.

Lynn Makes Address

Following a brief introduction by Marion Brantley, president of the organization, Miss Elizabeth Lynn addressed the student body on the ideals and aims of Mortar Board, offering to the students who would become members, the challenge of leadership, scholarship and service.

Marion then outlined the bases for selection to Mortar Board and Caroline de Montigne delivered the inspiring poem of Mortar Board, "The Torchbearers," which is read annually.

Lights filled the auditorium and

(Continued on page six)

C. G. A. Officials Newly Installed

Blood and Graham Repeat Traditional Oath

Katherine Blood, president of College Government association, Margaret Graham, chairman of judiciary, and other members of the executive council, judiciary, and lower court of College Government association for the year of 1935-36 were installed at a candlelight ceremony in front of Bryan hall, Monday evening, at [illegible]15.

After repeating the oath, Katherine Blood and Margaret Graham put on the cap and gown of Carolina DeMontigne, retiring president, and Helenmary Fritsch, retiring chairman, and lighted their candles at the flames of the candles held by the outgoing officials.

The new president installed the incoming officers who lighted their candles from the flames of the candles of the girls they were succeeding.

After the ceremony the outgoing officers held a reception in Gilchrist parlors for the new members of C. G. A.

Besides the president and chairman, new officers include Martha Makemson, first vice-president; Janice Borton, second vice-president, Marjorie Raulerson, secretary, and Margaret K. Anderson, treasurer.

Others in the judiciary division of college government are Betty Meyer and Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, senior representatives to senate; Josephine Binion and Marjorie Moore, junior representatives; and Dorothea Marsh; sophomore representative. Betty Aiken, Gladys Oliver, Virginia Cromartie, Audrey Farmer, Lillian Turlington, and Barbara Greene are the new house chairmen. Hilda Spradlin is chairman of freshman commission and Minna Dunn is freshman adviser for next year.

Seniors Will Have Meeting Wednesday

The senior class will meet Wednesday evening at [illegible]30 in 203 Administration building, according to Helen Wilson, president of the class. She urges that all seniors be present, since plans concerning commencement activities will be discussed.

Hoffman Wins Harpers' Prize

"And They Call It Relief" Takes First Place In Contest

Edna Hoffman, graduate student in history was awarded the $100 first prize in Harpers third college prize essay contest for her article "And They Call It Relief." which was recently published in The Distaff

The contest was open to all college students in America enrolled in classes which use Harpers magazine. Edna wrote this article as part of her work in journalism 301, a course in article writing in which Harpers has been used

The honor that has come to Edna, according to Earl L. Vance professor of journalism, is one of the greatest received by any student of Florida State College for Women in recent years. He says it is the strongest single item in a growing bulk of evidence—as witness the showings our publications have repeatedly made—that Florida State college students are turning out some journalistic and literary work of a significant nature.

Requirements for the essay prescribed three to five thousand words with no limitation on subject matter. The editors of the magazine were the sole judges.

Edna has been prominent in journalistic and literary work on this campus for three years. She has been a reporter, art editor, and exchange editor on the Florida Flambeau, and has been a regular contributor to The Distaff. The same article which won the Harpers prize, won a Distaff prize, and another article by Edna won first prize in the last edition of The Distaff She has also had an article accepted by the Journal of the Florida Education association.

Edna is the second student of Florida State college who has had an article accepted by a national magazine this year. The Literary Workshop, a magazine which uses undergraduate literary work, published "Religion Comes Of Age", an article by Louise Robertson.

Salley Gives Addresses

Dr. Nathan M Salley dean of the School of Education, gave a series of commencement addresses at the high schools of Escambia county on May 8 and 9. The general theme of his talks at the commencement exercises was on the meaning of the modern high school to the community.

Students Meet To Form Local Unit of NSFA

Campus Organizations Endorse Aims Of New Project

MARY J. McKAY TO BE CHAIRMAN

Harris, Bowman, And Asher to Serve On Executive Board

A local branch of the National Student Federation of America was organized on the campus of Florida State College for Women Tuesday morning at a meeting called by Margaret Graham, chairman of the student NSFA committee.

At this meeting letters from the World Friendship committee of the Y.W.C.A., the executive council of the College Government association, the staff of the Florida Flambeau, and the staff of the Distaff endorsing the proposed aims and purposes of the NSFA unit were read. The president of International club had also expressed the desire of the club to add its support to the new organization though this had not been put into writing.

The plan proposed by the senate committee, which was adopted by a vote of the students present at the first meeting, called for the election of an executive board to keep full and accurate record of meetings, to meet once each month for the purpose of planning programs, and to direct meetings of the NSFA. The executive board, as a result of the election held at this first meeting, is composed of Mary Jeanne McKay, chairman, junior, Marjorie Harris, senior associate chairman, and Phil Asher, secretary, sophomore.

Members of the executive board will work out a program for the fall term since the NSFA committee feels that the present school year is too nearly over to justify an elaborate program. The executive board will also appoint committees, the chairmen of which shall be subject to the approval of the group and shall be members of the board.

The senate committee, headed by Margaret Graham, made a study of local NSFA clubs in other universities and colleges. Its findings as taken from the report states that the Federation—of which this college has been a member for some years—has set up the following goals:

"To achieve a spirit of cooperation among the students of the United States and to give consideration to questions affecting student interests.

"To develop an intelligent student opinion on questions of na-

(Continued on page five)

Goats, Even to the Maa, Will Be Seen at Camp Flastacowo

Annual F Club Initiation Will Climax Water Sports Today

The classification of goats is varied and includes those which eat grass while browsing on the countryside, sorority and fraternity goats, and F Club goats. The F goats will shine this week-end at their initiation at Camp Flastacowo, which begins with a parade around campus and a walk to the camp this afternoon in remarkable costume.

Goats will appear under such disguises as a twinkle eye, lolkip, trappo, voussoin, roulette, trundle bed, water sprinkler, renunculus and pith, however that may be. Amid the assortment of things carried by these same goats are green turtles, one large spook, a frilled lizard, two renibles finnigins, corsets, a soft, soft corn, one eruption, and a metamorphosis.

Tomorrow morning the goats will be privileged to carry breakfasts to those club members still hitting the hay. Their duties will have just begun, for it is official water sports day and the feature is the F goat water pageant in charge of Louise Gehan and Frances Lewis.

The whole school is invited. All of the physical education teachers will be there to witness single canoe races run by representatives from each class, odd and even war canoe races, and to par- with what will be Wilma Bristol, ticipate in the faculty canoe race.

According to inside information there will be one race which spectators won't be allowed to see. That will be made by paddleless canoes manned by flannel nightgowned goat crews.

Jane Tombaugh, not a goat and general chairman for the occasion, has thoughtfully provided a plunge period for the guests in the afternoon.

The day for the goats will be interspersed with a great many duties imposed upon them by F Club members, since they're required to do anything requested.

Goats arriving as what and twinkle eye, dishabille; Sallie Bert Nuzum, a large snort, sorset; Elise Bennett, lolkip, one eruption; Viola Brooks, limicoline, a soft, soft corn; Mildred Seekins, trappo, corset; Rita Snyder, a clear concise staten metamorphosis; Nancy Wilkinson, water sprinkler, a frilled lizard; Mary Miller, voussoin, stampedes; Betty Ostlund, roulette, villain wearing his own moustache; Kitty Pratt, trundle bed, green turtles; Felicia West, ranunculus, two renibles finnigins; Audrey Cooper, pith, one large spook. How the following goats will appear isn't known: Louise Gehan, Frances Lewis, Wynn Tuten, Elizabeth Simpson, and Dorothea Marsh.

And to think these girls EARN their goathoods by being outstanding in athletic activities.

Busy College Students Consider Suggested Mother's Day Messages

Discriminating Selectors Of Cards Consider Poetic Lines

After one two, three or even four years of diligent college study—collegiate study might be better, there's a vast difference—one still finds groups of harrassed looking individuals solemnly perusing the "Mother's Day Suggested Messages" considerately provided by a certain American thought-saving institution on such occasions as that which now approaches.

"How about this one?" queries one particularly anxious soul:—"its implications are good," and she reads 'Every day is Mother's Day with me. Always your affectionate daughter'

"But this is more poetic chimes in another, 'I wish this were a magic carpet that would speed me to your side so that I could tell you once again how much I love you.'

"If you must be poetic," quotes yet another, this should do. 'I can't say much in words or rhymes, but I know you will read between the lines when I say 'Dearest Mother'."

Agreeing that somehow none of the offered selections quite answers the need, several students dash to town, missing lunch if need be, and gaze lengthily at the cards which seem yearly to grow more pathetically platitudinous.

Some manage to return with the wearily triumphant expression of a term-paper-just-finished, while just a glimmer of frantic despair shadows the faces of the less easily satisfied. These decide they would rather telephone anyway.

Word sentiments are difficult enough, but material expressions are even more harrowing, especially for those whose "money from father" hasn't yet arrived. Shall it be candy, or is that too trite? Or something symbolically permanent, something lasting — a book, perhaps? Nothing seems just right.

All of which levity only indicates the profundity of feeling with which students regard this one day by which they may emphasize, though it be revealed every day, the love, gratitude and devotion they bear toward the greatest of all persons, always, Mother.

Speech Students To Present Play

"He Who Gets Slapped" Will Be Offered

Leonid Andreyev's play, "He Who Gets Slapped," will be presented again tonight in the Augusta Conradi theatre as the annual free play given by the speech department students.

The play is directed by Miss Kember Martin Moore and is interpreted by members of the speech department.

The plot is centered around a man of high education and great intellectual achievement who abandons his ordinary mode of life, through actual force of circumstances, and becomes a circus clown. He performs antics and gets slapped repeatedly. The public laughs, but all the time unaware that their laughter is a mockery of their own life and culture.

Ruth Mock portrays Consuelo, a bareback rider and tango queen. The part of Briququet is taken by Jimmy Lewis.

The anonymous "He" is played by Rosalie Powell, while the clowns, Wilma Mayo, Emily Johnson, and Betty Boggs, add touches of comedy throughout the play.

Besides Jinida, the lion tamer, played by Lois Hazel, there is Virginia Kee as Marcini, Catherine McGarry as Benzano, and Betty Etlingo as the Baron Regnard.

Other members of the cast include Helen Hammond, a gentleman; Viola Taylor, first actress; Frances Lingle, second actress; Mary Jeanne McKay, Thomas; Vivian Marshall, Clean Shaven; Henry, Louis Schwaderer; Leonoca, Sarah Hosea.

Astronomy Club Elects Officers for Next Year

At a meeting of the astronomy club held recently, Marjorie Harris was elected president for the coming year. The other officers elected were, secretary and reporter, Sarah Beth Davis, and chairman of the telescope team, Annie Leigh Rollins.

Marjorie Harris spoke on "Modern Astronomical Beliefs," which was supplemented by a short talk by the Reverend Caldwell.

Diet Leaders Hold Meeting

Tracy and Sandels Design Plans for Florida Association

The Florida Dietetic association, which will be affiliated with the American Dietetic association, was organized at a meeting held Wednesday at the George Washington hotel in Jacksonville with Miss Anna May Tracy, dietitian at Florida State College as president.

Miss Tracy, who is a member of the executive committee of the national association, was selected for her position by thirty-one delegates from various parts of the state.

A luncheon meeting at which several talks on the value of dietetians was discussed, featured the meeting. Dr. Margaret R. Sandels, dean of the School of Home Economics here, presided.

The program included talks on "Public Health Problems of Concern to Florida Nutritionists," by Dr. F. A. Brink, director of the bureau of communicable diseases, Florida State Board of Health; "Program of the American Dietetic association," by Miss Tracy; "The Trained Dietetian: An Economic Asset to the Hospital," by Mr. Fred M Walker, superintendent of the Duval county hospital, Jacksonville; and "Nutritional Factors in the Problem of Dental Cares," by Dr. Martha Koehne, inspection chairman of the American Dietetic association and research associate in the dental school of the University of Michigan.

Survey Course To Be Offered

New Study is Requested By School Senate

An introductory course in home economics will be offered next year as an elective to all students, Dean Margaret Sandels, of the school of home economics, announced today.

The school decided upon the course at the request of the college senate, after a number of students expressed a wish for a study dealing with a general survey of problems in the field of home economics.

A special effort will be made to emphasize the material, according to Dean Sandals, which will help students in their daily living on the campus and family situations. A laboratory period will be arranged but the time will be flexible, so that the student may do her particular work and have individual conferences. Sections will be separate for freshmen, sophomores, juniors and seniors.

Dr. Ruth Connor and Miss Leila Venable will be responsible for the organization and conduction of the course, though other members of the staff will take charge of the work relating to their specific fields.

The course, listed in the new catalog, is designed for the general student, to acquaint her with the purposes and functions of the home and the family in modern society; the influence of the home environment, family practices and traditions on the individual's development and ability to adjust to other social groups; the responsibility of family members to one another. Leisure time activities, the spending and use of available income, the relation of good nutrition to health, and of dress and adornment to social and economic efficiency are studied as factors in successful living. Special attention will be given to individual difficulties.

Stevenson's Research On Chaucer Published

An article on "A Possible Relation Between Chaucer's Long Lease and the Date of His Birth," written by Dr. Hazel Stevenson, associate professor of English, appears in the current Modern Language Notes, a publication of Johns Hopkins.

This month's edition of Modern Language Notes is devoted entirely to research on Chaucer's life and works.

Dr. Stevenson's article, based on a coincidence, supports the speculation that Chaucer was born either in the late part of 1345 or the early party of 146 instead of 1340, an old date, appearing in high school text books, for which there is little foundation.

Koehne Holds Inspection Of Diet Courses

American Dietetic Group Is Considering FSCW For Approved List

ASSOCIATION HAS HIGH STANDARDS

Florida State is First Southern School To Offer Training

Dr. Martha Koehne of the American Dietetic association will inspect the student dietitian training course given in the dining hall of Florida State College for Women this week for consideration of approval by the American Dietetic association, Miss Anna May Tracy, dietitian and associate professor of institution economics, has announced.

Must Meet Standards

If the training course meets the required standards, Florida State College for Women will be placed on the approved list of the association and will gain the distinction of being the first educational institution in the south offering student training in administrative dietetics which is approved by the American Dietetic association.

"The student training course in dietetics is similar to the interneship which is required of all graduates of medical schools," Miss Tracy said. "In order to become a member of the American Dietetic association a dietitian must be a graduate of a standard home economics course and have served one year in training as a student dietitian in a hospital or other institution approved by the American Dietetic association. To enter the administrative field in dietetics, the students must spend the training period in a non-medical institution, and for diet therapy work she should receive her training in a approved hospital."

Training Courses Offered

At the present time, training courses for student dietitians approved by the American Dietetic association are only offered in the south in Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore, Duke University hospital and Watt's hospital in Durham, Vanderbilt University hospital in Nashville, and the Medical College of Virginia hospital in Richmond. So far as is known, Florida State College for Women is the first educational institution in the south offering training in administrative dietetics honored by having a representative from the association inspect the student training course for consideration by the association.

Dr. Koehne, who is inspecting the course at Florida State College for Women, is a former president of the association and one of the foremost leaders in the field of dietetics. Her present of-

(Continued on Page Two)

Rawls's Celebrate Holiday From One School At Another

Reporter Meets Obstacles In Getting Girls To Talk for Print

By HAZEL BOWMAN

Because life is usually a round of training, going to school, attending meets, and setting records, Katherine Rawls and her sisters had definitely made up their minds to have a good time while at Florida State College. Furthermore they did not want to waste any of their vacation talking to reporters for the college paper.

I waited around the gymnasium all Monday afternoon hoping to see Katherine, but it was the youngest Rawls that I finally had a chance to interview. Peggy was sketching an alligator in orange crayon from a model loaned by Miss Marjorie Mayer of the physical education department. "Peggy" was scrawled beside the hideous object on the paper.

"What have you been doing today?" I asked timidly; little children frighten me.

"She's been giving demonstrations for my swimming classes," Miss Mayer said. Peggy uttered no sound. I tried again. Still no sound. Finally in desperation I started to leave the room. here was one Rawls that wouldn't give me any material for a story.

"I've combed my hair!" Peggy had succumbed to my pleas for speech, but outside of the fact that she had combed her hair I could learn no more of her history.

And then the family champion, Katherine, arrived for the afternoon exhibition which was to be given at the college pool.

Her first words to me after I had made my purpose known were, "I'm from the Lauderdale Tide. How're you?"

I was taken aback: most people aren't that uninterested in getting their names in the paper even though it be only The Florida Flambeau. But apparently there would be no time for an interview because it was time for the exhibition and the pool balconies were overflowing. Katherine promised to see me after the show And now my next problem was getting in to see the exhibition.

There were twenty-five or thirty girls in bathing suits standing around the pool entrance. What could this mean? Were our own girls to put on the exhibition for the Rawls or were the Rawls sisters going to perform?

Then there was Miss Mayer explaining that anyone could go into the pool if she would put on a bathing suit. So armed with a note book, a pencil, and my glasses I managed to get a ringside seat. I decided then that I should never go to a swimming

(Continued on Page Two)

Andrews' Picture Omitted in Annual

The 1935 Flastacowo staff regrets that the picture of Dr. Elizabeth Gordon Andrews, director of personnel, was omitted by mistake from that section devoted to members of the executive council of Florida State College for Women.

Junior Senate To be Formed

Cabinet and Commission Make New Plans For Coming Year

At a joint meeting of Freshman cabinet and commission, held Wednesday night in the C. G. A room, plans were made for a junior senate to be composed of members of commission and cabinet, which would discuss student problems and though unofficial would make recommendations to the regular student senate.

The cabinet, which sponsors the college sisters for the incoming freshmen each year, also discussed ways of bringing a closer bond between the big and little sisters. It has appeared that in the last few years the sister usually meant no more than an escort to the college sister party held during the Freshman week, according to Anne Norris, vice-president of Y W. C. A.

The feature of the meeting was a talk by Dr Christie of the First Baptist church. He brought out the fact that the religion, education, and partiotism in the past has made the world what it is today and that one should have therefore a deep reverence and respect for the things of the past, the things which are today and the things which are to come.

Sarah Nance, of the worship committee of the cabinet, and Polly Eveleth, of commission, talked on the objectives of the two organizations for the year Janice Borton, commission sponsor, led the devotional.

A special dinner was given in the college dining room Wednesday for the old and new executive cabinets in order that old and new committee chairmen and officers might talk over future plans.

Library Science Expert Inspects Courses Here

Miss Anita Hostetter, secretary of the Board of Education for Librarianship, is visiting the campus for the purpose of inspecting the work offered in the library science courses here.

She will probably make some valuable recommendations to the college concerning changes in courses said Miss Louise Richardson, librarian.

Miss Hostetter has attended classes in library science interviewed instructors, and observed the practice work of the library students during the past week.

YWCA Secures Park for Play Center Locale

Social Science Students Will Plan Program For Recreation

NIMS, LIDELL, AND SCOUTS TO HELP

Project Provides Care For Children From Local District

Gaines Park, near the Caroline Brevard school, has been secured by the new Y.W.C.A. executive council to be used for a recreational center for children between the ages of five and twelve in that district. Workers on the project believe this place is particularly apt since there are a great many children in the vicinity who need recreational opportunities.

Plans for the project, which will not go into effect until the beginning of the 1935 fall term, include the visiting of homes in the playground section to inform the parents of the center Activities consisting of games, story telling, handicraft and dramatics will be conducted at first once a week, either Friday afternoons or Saturday mornings.

The Tallahassee Boy Scouts, under the leadership of Mr. D M. Burnette, Dr. Elinor Nims, professor of sociology and social case work, and Dr Anna Forbes Liddell, advisor of last year's executive cabinet will assist in the work.

In convocation Tuesday a formal announcement will be made concerning regulations for [illegible] participating in this work and [illegible] ing up the Y. W bulletin board

The general program will be formulated by students in physical education, social work, psychology, elementary education, and other such courses. Students working as the nucleus of the project are Gladys Oliver chairman, Annita Jones, Elizabeth Kirby-Smith, Beth Daane, Ruth Lynd, Elizabeth Jinks and Mildred Emmelhainz. Assistants and advisors for the plan are Mr D. M. Burnett Boy Scout executive of Tallahassee, Dr. Elinor Nims, Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, and Miss Dorothy White.

Flastacowo Has Universal Theme

Annual Expresses College As Part of Whole

"World-mindedness" is the theme of the new Flastacowo college annual, which was issued this week. It appears in colors for the first time in several years, with coral, blue, and black predominating against a background of light gray.

"Worlds etched in the side-panels and paintings of universities and scenes from different countries of the world, which appear in every section of the annual, are attempts to express the college as a part of the world, rather than of a city, or nation, alone." said Hazel Goza, editor-in-chief.

The "world-mindedness" motif is further emphasized by the cover, which has a map of the world in bright blue with a coral-colored compass in one corner.

The sports and feature sections are more informal than they have been in previous annuals. Individual snapshots appear in the former section, while the pictures in the feature section were taken on campus to portray "A College Girl's World," each girl representing a definite phase of a college life.

The faculty committee on the Flastacowo includes Miss Louise Richardson, Mrs. B. B Williams, and Miss Edith West, chairman.

Out-going staff members are Hazel Goza, editor-in-chief; Edith Webb and Antoinette Sullivan, associate editors; Viola Taylor and Frances Forth, assistant editors, Janet Griffitts, sports editor; Mary Miller, assistant sports editor, Louise Mackey, senior editor, Virginia Amann copy editor.

On the art committee are Grace Whitaker Sylvia Horner, Ellen Moore. Business staff includes Marie Lingo, Ann [illegible], Donna Gardner, advertising manager, and Betty Meyer, assistant advertising manager.

School's Beauty and Best Swimmer Attend International Student Meet

Convention Delegates Bring Back Reports Which Arouse Interest of Student Body In Mundane Problems

It was during chapel one morning three years ago at a woman's college which rates among the best in the United States that the president of the student body arose and said. "The trouble with us students, as Reverend Brown indicated this morning, is that we don't have any definite viewpoint toward mundane problems We're sort of isolated ourselves but we're going to change immediately I move that we send two outstanding students on this campus as our representatives to the International Student convention which will take place in New York in two months."

With much applause the motion was vigorously passed The delegates chosen were Sue, who only the year before had been elected as the prettiest girl on campus, and Billie, who was such a marvelous swimmer that her swimming instructor was going to see that she competed in the Olympics.

Upon the return of the delegation, the entire student body assembled to hear its report Sue, prettier than ever, very charmingly commenced as follows.

"Billie and I had a gorgeous trip up, though it began with a mishap. While the train was making a five minute stop in some little hick town about 175 miles away from here Billie decided that she just had to have the latest edition of the "Swimmer's Monthly" magazine. I went with her to purchase it and to our "horrification" when we went back to the train we found that it had gone with our baggage and left us literally stranded.

Panicy, we hired a cab (call it that if you've a good imagination) the most ancient model T Ford of which one could conceive to get us to the next stop in time to meet the train We screamed at the driver for going at such a speed, though he innocently insisted that he was merely driving ten miles an hour. Billie and I could just imagine the bottom of tha contraption falling and ourselves dumping out onto the "open road." It was terribly exciting when we finally caught up with the train and drove parallel with it. What seemed the longest motor trip we had ever taken, came to an end when the train stopped at the next station and we boarded it in a hectic condition.

The remainder of the trip, though relatively uneventful, was very pleasant. Billie and I formed some very charming acquaintances during the trip. Toward the end of it we were on pins and needles Why Billie and I were unable to eat a thing. Imagine!

We were received at the train by a committee and made to feel comfortable. They immediately took us to the hotel in which we were going to stay.

I'll let Billie tell you the rest, but first, let me thank you and tell you that I appreciated this opportunity that you so generously afforded me I just wish that each one of you could have attended the convention with Billie and me."

By this time Billie's athletic figure was at the center of the platform. She began:

"Well, I never in my life have seen so many people from so many different places at one time. There were students from Germany, Scotland, Rumania and from loads of other places. You should have heard them speak English. Of course, they do fine for absolute foreigners. It seemed as if we'd never be able to remember a soul. However, before long we learned to know most everyone.

"There was a boy there from Jugoslavia. He was so interesting He told the most fascinating facts about Jugoslavia, about the schools, the athletics, the shows. Gosh, you ought to have seen the way he danced.

"The morning after our arrival the president of the college gave a most spiritually uplifting address of welcome. After this we separated into different groups, each of which carried on a different discussion. Naturally, being unable to attend all of them at once, I went to the one which discussed and stressed college athletics. We finally decided that colleges should make physical education compulsory for those who are physically able.

"That afternoon we went on a sight-seeing tour. That section of the United States is so invigorating with its beautiful mountainous country.

"Gosh, I could rave on and on about the convention and those who attended it. Everyone was so nice. What I surmised, though, from my observation of the entire convention, was that our college has about the highest standards of them all. Girls, we should be so proud of our Alma Mater.

"I hope that we'll be able to reciprocate and invite the delegations of the different colleges here some day."

After many words of thanks to the student-body Billie sat down. Interrupting the applause of the appreciative audience, a senior, donned in cap and gown, arose and suggested that since the International Student convention met annually, that ample representation of the college at it should be provided. After a little parliamentary procedure, the motion was unanimously and enthusiastically passed.

This same women's college was still so enthusiastic over the convention idea two years later that they decided to act as hostesses to the next International Student meet. Committees and more committees were appointed for the entertainment of the guests. Arrangements with the florists for corsages for each female guest at each occasion were made The prevailing motto of the student body was "not to allow any of the guests to become bored for a moment." The students would see that the delegates were constantly on the go, so to speak.

One would never have believed that during the week of the convention, which was one of constant jollity, that these students were discussing and solving delicate matters of international concern

However, the president of the college gave evidence of this in chapel the day after the termination of the meeting when toward the end of his resume of the events of the preceding week he said.

"Ah, it is glorifying to witness your growth into fine women. You have matured into persons who are capable of bearing the torch onward and upward. I am happy to report that during the conclave last week bills were passed stating that the associated intercollegiate colleges uphold pacifism, that foreign nations pay their war debts to the United States punctually and that the United States hesitate before giving the Philippines their freedom.

"At last year students understand and are interested in these worldly problems. The ministry of teachers bow down in salute to your mundane interests."

Discussion on New Course to Be Held

A meeting of upperclassmen with the social science faculty will be held Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock in room 105, History building. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss the plan for the new course: an introduction to contemporary civilization. Copies for the outline of the course are on reserve in the library.

Examination Schedule

Second Semester 1934-35

Classes Which Meet:	Will Have Examinations:
M.Th. 8:30; T. 1:30	8:30-10:30 Monday, May 20.
All Freshman Hygiene Sections (In And.)	10:30-12:30 Monday, May 20.
T.W.F. 8:30	2:00-4:00 Monday, May 20.
M.Th. 9:30; T. 2:30	8:30-10:30 Tuesday, May 21.
All Freshman English Sections Economics 201 (All Sections)	10:30-12:30 Tuesday, May 21
T.W.F. 9:30	2:00-4:00 Tuesday, May 21.
M.W.F. 10:30	8:30-10:30 Wed'day, May 22.
All Freshmen History Sections Home Economics 201 (All Sections)	10:30-12:30 Wed. May 22.
T.Th. 10:30; F. 1:30	2:00-4:00 Wed, May 22.
M.W.F. 11:30	8:30-10:30 Thursday, May 23
All Freshman Geography Sections Home Economics 112 (All Sections)	10:30-12:30 Thurs., May 23.
M.W.Th. 1:30	2:00-4:00 Thursday, May 23.
M.W.Th. 2:30	8:30-10:30 Friday, May 23.
All one, two and three-hour classes not included above	10:30-12:30 Friday, May 24.
All Conflicts	2:00-4:00 Friday, May 24.

Note:
1. There should be no changes made in the schedule except for most urgent reasons. Such changes should be made and reported to the Registrar in advance.
2. Students may not change sections for the examinations even if the two sections are under the same instructor.

S. R. DOYLE, Registrar.

He Who Gets Slapped Turns Other Cheek Again Tonight

Glamour of Sawdust Ring Depicted in Russian Circus Drama

"Laugh, clown, laugh!

"Make believe you're having a swell time living! Don't dare to be yourself. Remember, you're enjoying life. Pretend! What matter if the world thinks you a fool, if it doesn't love you? What does anything matter to a clown . . clown . . . clown . . . FOOL?

"Lights! All characters ready! See that he has his make-up on straight. Where is Consuelo, the bareback queen? Not so much noise! The lion-tamer is nervous Ready? Lights!"

Thus, the curtain rises on Andreyev's "He Who Gets Slapped" tonight at 8:15 o'clock in the Augusta Conradi Little Theater The scene, as has probably already been guessed, is laid in a circus amid the glitter of spangles and the musty smell of sawdust Spirited horses, daring riders, pink lemonade, glittering costumes . all contribute to the background which is a part of the mocking life of He, who gets slapped. The sound of the drum, the expectant pause, the breath-taking silence . . everyone waiting for the clowns, for THE clown . . . He, who gets slapped, waiting . . . to laugh . . . at Him.

"Don't forget to play your part. You're a clown. Your job is to make the public laugh . . . to make everyone laugh . . . laugh, clown, laugh!"

Agriculture and 4-H Club to Have Meet

The college 4-H club and the Agriculture club of Gainesville will have a joint meeting at Camp Flastocowo tomorrow afternoon. Guests especially invited for the meeting are Miss Anna Mae Sikes, the club sponsor and state extension nutritionist, and Miss Ruby McDavid, district home demonstration agent, who will be in charge of the activities for the day.

German Club Has Meet

The meeting of the German club, held last week in one of the studios on the first floor of the Administration building, featured a study of Richard Wagner.

The composer's life and works were sketched by Hazel Bowman, while Charlotte Kenzie reviewed the opera "Lohengrin". A piano selection, Song of the Evening Star from "Tannhauser", was played by Hazel Bowman. Marjorie De Witt gave a review of Wagner's opera, "die Meistersingers von Nuremberg." One of the pieces from die Meistersingers, The Prize Song, was played from a victrola record.

Rawls's Celebrate Holiday from School

(Continued from page one)

exhibition in the Arctic. It isn't worth it even for your newspaper

Willis Colling, the Rawls' manager, put them through their paces for nearly an hour. And then it was my time. I stopped Katherine on her way to dress.

"Come along," she said, "and talk to me while I put on my colthes." But before I could ask her one question she asked me several.

"Are you studying journalism?" she asked. On my affirmative reply she let it be known that she wanted to study journalism too Then there was series of questions about the college paper. "I write the scandal column for my high school paper." Katherine said. "I didn't have sense enough to be editor, or maybe the teacher just didn't like me."

"Are you coming here to study?" was my first question.

"I don't know yet. I've been asked to go to Duke, Northwestern, Chicago U., and Rollins, but I think I prefer the pool here. The first problem is getting out of high school though. I've had to drop subjects and must make them up. Then I'll be out of school a year practicing for the Olympics. After that I'm going to college."

"What are the rest of your sisters planning to do?"

"We'll all be in the Olympics. That is, if Mother and Dad can stand another big meet. They practically swore off after the last one."

"Is Peggy really practicing for the 1940 games?"

"I suppose she is, but I really don't know"

All this time various girls had been interrupting us to introduce their friends to Katherine or to speak to her. Dorothy and Evelyn Rawls hung in the background There was the atmosphere of the stage about the gathering—everyone wishing to speak to the leading lady. And the leading lady was undisturbed just as leading ladies are supposed to be. She spoke to each little group that approached her and intermittently answered my questions.

"Say, I like this place more and more," she said. "I really would like to come to college here."

I, in the meantime, was thinking that the college will have to provide a ten-foot diving board for Katherine to practice from if she comes here. Her thoughts seemed to be on diving, too.

"You know," she said, "a swimmer is a diver who has lost his nerve, and a diver is a swimmer who has had his brains knocked out." I did not know whether this was to be taken literally or not, but judging from the diving and swimming of Katherine and, the other Rawls girls they have neither lost their nerve nor had their brains knocked out.

I had wanted to ask how it feels to win a big swimming or diving event, but by this time the crowd had grown to such an extent that I couldn't make myself heard above the hub-bub.

On my way out I found Mr. Colling, Mr. H. F. McMinn, secretary of the Miami Beach A. A U., and Mr. C. T. Weldling, who sponsored the trip to Tallahassee, on the gymnasium steps. At last I would find out the Rawls family history. As a lead I asked about the ages of the different girls.

Said Mr. Colling, "Peggy is seven, Evelyn and Dorothy, fourteen and fifteen, and Katherine is seventeen."

Katherine told me she was born on Flag day." I said.

"Yes, that is true." Mr Colling warmed to his subject. "In fact at least three of the girls have birthdays in June." He did not seem inclined to say mora for publication. But this much I know about the future of the Rawles.

Evelyn, I have found by further investigation, wishes to be a dress designer. Peggy will probably not be an artist, judging from the sample of her work which I saw, but her ability to dive from the height of 35 feet may stand her in good stead as a flying trapeze performer when she gets too old to win swimming and diving matches.

Katherine, as she has said wishes to be a writer. As for Dorothy, her future is still a mystery At least she did not reveal any of her secret ambitions while in Tallahassee

Koehne Holds Inspection of Course

(Continued from page one)

fice in the association is that of inspection chairman.

For the past five years Dr Koehne has been research associate of the School of Medicine of the University of Michigan where she is in charge of all the feeding experiments in a research project under way on the relation of nutrition to dental caries. She was formerly connected with the Universities of Washington and Tennessee in the home economics divisions, and served for one year as director of the department of nutrition of Presbyterian hospital in New York city.She holds the doctor's degree from Yale University.

Students Attend Hospital Clinic

Psychology Classes Make Trip to Chattahoochee

Classes in abnormal and cli- cal psychology attended a cl at the Florida state hospital Chattahoochee last week for th purpose of observing special ca of abnormality.

Dr. J. H. Pound, chief physic and surgeon of the hospital, a assistant physicians, Dr O W Jenkins, Dr. H. S. Howell, Dr M. Beggs, and Dr. P C Ros were in charge of the clinic. Th doctors gave information and ex amples of types of abnorma which were of special interest the classes, including involution melancholia, manic depress paranoia, and the four types schizophrenia: catatonic simp paranoid, and hebrephenic.

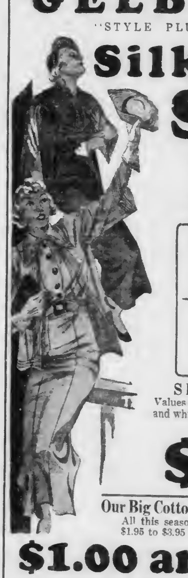
According to Dr. Paul Finn professor of psychology the cl was one of the best the class have ever attended.

Members of the abnormal ps chology class who attended we Julia Baker, Billie Faeon, Virgi Thornton, Melvyne Wahl Harriet Knapp, Marjorie Fa Tessie Dvoskin, Irene Edwa Evaline Rankin, Martha Carli Elizabeth Seay, Irene C Mary Catherine Drennen Eli beth Allan, Elizabeth Murr Carol Farabee, Rosalind Par Virginia Cary, Esther Davis Je nie Rae Nall, Barbara Garfun Myra Bulky, Margarette Ea Amorette Bullard, Marian T ner, Anna Glen, Mey Mar McLaughlin, and Georgie R Work

Clinical psychology stude who went to the clinic include Betty Bradford, Beth Fin Pearl Fleet, Evelyn Ballard Jo phine Skeels, Margaret Kad Florence Greene, Margue Groover, Helen Guthey, Mar Helvenston, Julia Lamar, Lu Gee Linn, Sara Maxwell, a Ruth Rainbolt.

ADAMS STUDIO
"Photographs That Please"
121 E. COLLEGE AVE. PHONE 297

New Way Laundry and Dry Cleaners
Tallahassee's Oldest and Largest
"Wear Clean Clothes"
Representative in Lower Bryan Hall
Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 183



GELBERG'S
"STYLE PLUS ECONOMY"
Silk Dress SALE

All new this season's merchandise. Beautiful silk dresses for street, sports and evening wear. All styles, all colors, all sizes—

Group 1	Group 2
$6.95 Dresses SALE PRICE $3.94	$7.95 & $9.95 Dresses SALE PRICE $4.94

Group 3	Group 4
$12.95 Dresses SALE PRICE $6.94	$18.00 Dresses SALE PRICE $10.94

SPORT OXFORDS
Values to $4.00 and $5.00, in white, brown and white, black and white. All new styles.
ALL ONE PRICE:
$2.95
Our Big Cotton Wash Dress Sale is Still On!
All this season's dresses in the newest styles. $1.95 to $3.95 values. SALE PRICE—
$1.00 and $1.95
Never again will you have the wonderful opportunity of purchasing such values!

REMEMBER . . .
MOTHER'S DAY
Sunday, May 12th
Russell McPhail
and Whitman's CHOCOLATES
A BOX FOR EVERY ONE!
from 25c to $7.50
Bennett's

"Aunty sleeps more soundly since you got a FORD V-8"

redits Given For Extension

rk Offered Only To Students Unable To Attend College

Work in all correspondence dy courses under the supervi- n of the general extension divi- n department of the University Florida will be accepted at rida State College for Women h hour for hour credit and the amount of quality points, ac- ding to Simeon R. Doyle, regis- ar Extension work in other rida institutions which meets e requirements of the general ension division, will also be accepted here.

The extension work is offered meet the needs of qualified men d women who are unable to attend the University of Florida or e Florida State College for omen. These courses are especially adapted for those who contemplate entering college at some re date; for students who are ced temporarily to leave college, and for public school teach- who are high school graduates who have had some normal ool work or other college training and wish to work either toward a degree or to qualify higher their professions.

Faculty members of the University of Florida and the Florida ate College plan the extension rse which contains an amount work equivalent to that done at esidence college. All departments offer courses except those quiring laboratory work. Each ester hour of work in a course nsists of eight assignments or ssons, which is the amount pted by the majority of accredited colleges and universities ering correspondence work.

In order to be eligible for correspondence courses, students ust meet the entrance requirements demanded by the University and the Florida State College. dents may enroll at any time the year, except in August hen instructors are away on heir vacations. In selecting rses students must follow the erequisite as in residence work. No person who is regularly enrolled as a student in any institution is permitted to take extension ork without the written permission of the dean of his college.

Not more than twenty-five per ent of the required work for a degree may be taken by extension. udents may not take more than elve semester hours by extension during the academic year and ot more than nine hours during e summer vacation period. Any erson suspended from the University or Florida State College ay not enroll until the period suspension is over and any person who dropped his studies may nroll with the approval of the ean of his college. In this case, ork must be completed with a assing grade before students are igible to return to college for esidence work.

Fee charge for each semester our is three dollars with an additional cost for textbooks. Reference books may be borrowed from the general extension division library for the cost of the postage both ways.

Food Fads Continue to Fool "Spinach-Conscious" Public

Newspapers and Radios Advance Propaganda To Consumers

BY EDITH HOBSON

The American public who considers itself advanced in civilization and education still continues to be fooled by food fads and faddists. Two thousand years ago the ancient Greeks practiced the plan of starvation to treat a fever; today, some of us believe cod liver oil and orange juice will cure intestinal tuberculosis which is an idea equally as fallacious. There is rich literature dealing with a thousand and one dietetic cures which have been tried by as many people throughout the ages.

As long as man remains a gullible creature, he will accept a food fad's merits, which are usually portrayed in such a convincing manner that the scientific truth seems questionable and uninteresting. Dynamic talks and writings of food faddists will sway the emotions of a sensitive and easily influenced individual who becomes convinced that he is daily being poisoned by mysterious toxins forming in his body as the result of eating certain food combinations. If he wants to live to a ripe old age he must buy the dietetic booklet as written by a doctor of so-called "international fame." This he does and when no miraculous cure occurs, he is still unconvinced he has been fooled and is ready to try another diet remedy.

Examples of food combinations which have been considered dangerous to the body include those of meat and starch foods eaten at the same meal, acid fruits and milk, and fish and milk. Arguments presented in favor of these fads insist that the body should not be burdened with the digestion of starch and protein at the same time and that fish and acid fruits curdle milk in the stomach, causing a solid mass to form that is indigestible. However, these faddists are ignorant of the scientific fact that the stomach never digests either starch or protein singly in any case, and that curdling of milk is a necessary preliminary to the digestion of milk.

Probably the greatest causes for the advancement of food fads in the past years have been the newspaper, magazines, and the radio. Individuals are hired by commercial concerns to disseminate the knowledge that their particular food product reigns supreme and is indispensable in the diet. In 1922, America became "spinach conscious." A few years ago it was quite a common practice for the American public to munch raisins during lunch time. The most prevalent of the commercialized food products today is yeast.

These fads are fundamentally sound, although unduly emphasized. The consumer doesn't realize that there are many vegetables richer in dietary essentials than spinach, that there are at least a dozen fruits and vegetables richer in iron than raisins and that the dietary elements secured in yeast can also be obtained in a well-balanced diet.

The yeast fad originated when Dr. Joseph Goldberger, working in his laboratory discovered yeast was essential in the treatment of pellagra among the poorer classes of people who subsist on a diet of corn meal, molasses, and salt pork. Commercial yeast concerns pounced on the fact that their product would cure constipation and launched a huge advertising campaign.

Another interesting food fad carries with it many objections to the eating of meat. These non-meat eaters, or vegetarians, insist it is morally wrong to eat the flesh of another animal, that meat tends to make one mentally dull, that it makes man more savage, that it injures the kidneys, and that it brings uric acid to the body and this is injurious. If one considers it morally wrong to eat meat, then there is no argument to be raised against this objection, but there are arguments to be raised against the other objections. History challenges the fact that meat-eating makes one mentally dull. The Anglo-Saxons were a race of beef eaters, and they are far from being mental laggards. As for meat-eating making one savage, one has only to consider the Eskimos, one of our most peace-loving people. The formation of uric acid in the body is a necessary procedure in normal cellular activity, and the amount liberated by a normal protein intake does not harm healthy kidneys.

So-called vegetarians are really not vegetarians in the strict sense of the word. If they were to secure all the amino acids necessary for growth and maintenance of the body, they would have to consume an extra large quantity of vegetables. Most vegetarians include in their diet eggs, milk, and cheese which are essentially animal products. Vegetarianism is a beautiful myth.

Some of the food fads which have their origin in superstitions still exist to this day, but most of them have gradually disappeared. Fruit was once thought to be gold in the morning, silver at noon, and lead at night. Bananas and cheese were considered indigestible. Other fanciful and fictitious beliefs state cucumbers are cooling, onions will cure colds and prevent insomnia, garlic will purify the system, blackberry juice is a great blood builder, and maple syrup and buttermilk will cure diabetes. No one should eat sugar except in the form of honey because it causes diabetes, and berry and grape seeds cause appendicitis. Cucumbers and eggplant were thought to have contained some poison which could be drawn out by a special preparation. Tomatoes, which are today considered so important that they are fed to infants, were once thought to cause cancer.

Like patent medicines of a former day, there are now proprietary foods which are supposed to accomplish a number of miracles. They are guaranteed to make us beautiful, to keep us from growing old, to keep us thin, and to guard against high blood pressure and diseases of various kinds. Consumers of these expensive foods overlook the fact that no matter what name a food is sold under it still consists of one or more of the recognized food constituents—proteins, fats, carbohydrates, vitamins, and minerals. These proprietary foods cannot accomplish anything that cannot be accomplished by the food in their ordinary form.

The fasting faddists insist one should fast from ten to twenty days each year in order to free the body from impurities, a sick person should eat sparingly or not at all, fasting clears the brain, and no one should eat when he isn't hungry, because lack of hunger is a sign the body needs no nourishment. Doctors have found that fasting for a long period of time is harmful and may result in acidosis or death, and fasting during illness is conducive to prolonging ill health. To disprove the statement that fasting makes the mind and senses more alert, one can cite the case of Lord Carnock of London, who began his month's fast by reading history and ended the fast by reading "Alice in Wonderland." He became so mentally unfit that light literature was all he was capable of reading.

Innumerable food fads are presented to the unsuspecting public, but it is hoped, as the science of nutrition develops to such an extent that everyone can share in the knowledge which scientists have accumulated, the number of foods fads will gradually decline.

Snooping Sportster

The Junior-Senior swim meet Friday night was an exhibition of fast and vigorous pulling with ties in eight of the sixteen events and Farabee establishing a new record of 16 seconds in the 25 yard breast stroke. We note also that Redfield came out with a pretty score to her credit, winning four and tieing in three events.

◆

The Sophomores and Freshmen swam even a closer race, tieing in ten out of sixteen events. Makemson had the lead, winning four and tieing in three events.

◆

Saturday the winners and losers had it out—Seniors and Sophomores had five ties out of sixteen events. Eight of the remaining eleven events were won by the Seniors—with Redfield coming in ahead five times and Mildred Stevens three times.

◆

The Juniors splashed the Freshmen under with seven out of fifteen wins, and eight ties. Lawrence gained only one point more than Tombaugh.

◆

Where were the swimmers at the Rawls exhibition when the lights went out? Trailing sparklers through the air and water! The youngest Rawls created almost as big a sensation as her famous sister when she rescued a life guard.

◆

Dives, pinwheels, musical splashes, pyramids all went to make the meet a lively one. It looked especially beautiful viewed from the top of a rickety table. None standing there could give a wholehearted Ah! for fear someone on the other corner would be pushed off. And that wouldn't be good sportsmanship.

◆

The big attraction this week-end is the water sports day at Camp Flastocowo. Not only the pageant participants—but also the F goats in all their regalia will be sent through their paces to delight our eyes and tickle one's funny-bones. Take a good look at your friends among the goats now—there are going to be some very original disguises on display.

A Sorority Study Hour

A Greek Reveals the Workings of a Female Mind Over Philosophy on a Typical Night In a Sordority House

The usual group of my sorority sisters left the dining room carrying books, notebooks, and pencils and headed toward the library. The fact that I continued in an eastern direction called forth many curious questions as to how I intended to spend the evening.

"I'm going to study," I replied, then added in a very convincing tone, "at the house."

I received the same sort of looks and comments I would have had I suddenly expressed my intention of making a trip to the moon or some other deed of equal impossibility. Nevertheless, I was detremined to stay out of the library that night and to do the studying I had to do in my room.

In the parlor of the house I was eagerly pounced upon by three attractive pledges who chose to ignore the scholastic phase of college life, and whose total worries at that time consisted in finding a fourth hand for a contract game.

After getting by them with exaggerated excuses and kindly regrets, I finally got to the upstairs hall. Jane's door was open and she stood in the middle of the room draped in a long loose gown of black satin.

"Where are you going?" I asked, suppressing the "in that thing" which almost followed.

Jane turned thoughtful and helpless eyes upon me and informed me, with her mouth full of pines, that she was trying to fix the dress over.

"Would you mind pinning this in the back?" she beseeched, and I, tender-hearted goose that I am, put my books on the dressing table and spent an hour and ten minutes trying to impart chic lines to a shapeless tube of a dress.

I went into my own room and shut the door securely behind me. In ten minutes I was in my bathrobe and slippers and seated at a neat, blotter-covered table with a good lamp shining correctly over my left shoulder. There, how much more comfortable and quiet this was than the large, crowded, insufficiently-lighted library!

I opened Thilly's History of Philosophy, got up and got a tempting apple left over from lunch, and settled down to utter bliss.

The front door bell rang vigorously. I glanced at the noisy clock on my dresser and confirmed my suspicions that it was the "special man." I listened tensely. Yes, someone was opening the door. After a few minutes in which I waited for the lucky name to be called, I heard steps going into the hall where mail is put for people who are not home when it comes. I wondered if it could have been for me and whoever answered the door thought I was in the library as usual. No, of course it wasn't for me. I'd gotten three letters this morning—

I got up and went to the head of the stairs.

"Hey, who was the special for?" I shouted, and went back to my room in disappointment and utter shame at my lack of will power.

"Helen," Jane's voice called on the other side of my door when I had been studying for about fifteen minutes.

"Come in," I invited coldly and helplessly.

"Listen, Helen," she entreated still encased in the black gown which I thought now looked pretty fair, "don't you think the back ought to be cut lower?"

After advising her as to just how many inches of her spinal cord the dress should expose, she trailed out, leaving the door barely shut. It squeaked maddenly during the next five or six sentences before shutting with a bang.

A group of girls were coming upstairs.

"Oh, I can't wait to see it," I heard Betty say.

"Did you just get it?" someone else asked.

"What are they talking about?" I wondered as they went into the room next to mine, still chatting effusively. Someone was evidently opening a box, for soon a volume of admiring exclamations floated in. Again my curiosity got the best of me and I went in to see the new fur jacket Patty's mother had just sent her.

As I went back to my room I was accosted by a worried freshman who wanted to know if I'd ever taken college algebra. I was tempted to lie and get rid of her in a hurry, but remembered that it was our duty to aid the pledges in every posible way. I looked at the problem and made some marks on the paper which the hopeful child generously provided. I remembered having had a problem of its kind but had no idea of how I had worked it.

"If I had time to study it out a little," I vainly tried to excuse myself. "I tell you what," I brightened, "get Kate to help you. She's a math major."

I put the study sign on the door after she went out, in a determined effort to have the last half hour before light flash.

"Oh, she has a study sign up," I heard a voice outside my door.

"Yes, and it's going to stay up, too," I informed them inaudibly.

"Gee, that's too bad. She'll hate to miss him—"

"What do you want?" I inquired eagerly as I flung open the door.

"There's a boy downstairs who says he's a frat brother of Tom's," Ellen said. "He promised Tom he'd look you up."

"Talk to him until I can get down," I begged, already pulling on my skirt.

At a quarter of eleven, I at last started reading the chapter on "Socrates and the Sophists."

Get That New Permanent
For Graduation
at
The Powder Puff Beauty Shop
Duart Thermostat Control Permanent Waving
FINGER WAVING - SCALP TREATMENTS
Melvin L. Pope, Mgr.
108 S. Adams - Phone 656

SUPERIOR
Dry Cleaners and Dyers
"SUPERIOR SERVICE SELLS CLEANING"
SILKS AND FANCIES OUR SPECIALTY
All Garments Insured Against
Fire and Theft
208½ S. Monroe - Telephone 216

MAKE IT A MODERN
Mother's Day

Give Her
Phoenix Hose
New Midseason Colors
1.00
(3 Prs. $2.85)
Lovely shadowless chiffons or semi-sheers with the Phoenix Duo-heel, Tip-toe for longer wear and Custom-fit Top, exclusive with Phoenix, which means extra comfort as well as perfect fit for any size leg.
Linden's FASHION SHOPPE

When You Think
of
Cleaning, Dyeing and
Alterations
Think of the
Central Cleaners
"Your Patronage Is Our Pleasure"

DIVING
GEORGIA COLEMAN
Winner, 13 National and Olympic Titles
BASEBALL
MELVIN OTT
Slugger of the N.Y. Giants
GOLF
GENE SARAZEN
Famous Golf Champion
SQUASH RACQUETS
JOHN L. SKILLMAN
1935 Pro Squash Racquets Champion
SCULLING
BILL MILLER
4 Times National Sculling Champion
BASKETBALL
JIM LANCASTER
Captain, Undefeated 1934, N.Y.U. Varsity
"THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND"
ATHLETES SAY —

GENE SARAZEN, championship golfer, who has smoked Camels for years

CONDITION IS IMPORTANT TO YOU TOO—on vacation, in college, at home. You can keep "in condition," yet smoke all you please. Athletes say: "Camels never get your wind."

The mild cigarette the athletes smoke is the mild cigarette for YOU!

A cigarette so mild you can smoke all you want—that's what athletes say about Camels. And when a champion talks about "condition"—"wind"—healthy nerves—real tobacco mildness—he's got to know.

Gene Sarazen says: "Playing as much as I do—I have to keep in condition. I smoke Camels steadily. They are so mild they never get my 'wind'—never upset my nerves."

Other athletes back him up...."I smoke all the Camels I want, and keep in top condition," says Mel Ott, slugger of the New York Giants....Georgia Coleman, Olympic diver, says: "Camels don't cut down on my 'wind.'"...Bill Miller, oarsman; Jim Lancaster, N. Y. U.'s 1934 basketball captain; John Skillman, pro squash racquets champion—hundreds of sports stars smoke Camels regularly and report that Camels never get their "wind" or nerves.

What this mildness means to you!... It means you can smoke Camels all you want! Athletes have made this discovery: Camel's costlier tobaccos are so mild, they can smoke all they please, without disturbing their "wind" or nerves.

SO MILD
YOU CAN SMOKE
ALL YOU WANT!

Camels COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

● Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS —Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand.

(Signed) R. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO COMPANY, Winston-Salem, N. C.

© 1935, R. J. Reynolds Tob. Co.

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF

RUTH PERSONS .... Editor
ALTHEA SMITH .... Associate Editor
GERTRUDE KUHN .... Managing Editor
HAZEL BOWMAN .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS

Features: Martha Baker; Sports, Elaine Klepper; Society, Margaret Lafferty; Exchanges, Virginia Early; Literary Editor Eleanor Williams; Copy Editor, Arline Lockhart; Outside News Editor, Grace Mary Webster.

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty Nedra McNamara, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF

MARY PATTERSON .... Business Manager
JANE GALE .... Advertising Manager
CEIL LEVY .... Circulation Manager
Assistant Business Manager, Lillie McGuire; Assistant Circulation Manager Caroline Adams

Entered as second class mail matter January 30 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Convention Echoes Take Definite Shape

If the ability to decide what you want and go after it is indicative of the right to be called mature then students of Florida State College for Women have recently shown themselves worthy of being placed in this category.

Two delegates from F.S.C.W. were sent to the National Students' Federation of America meeting with instructions to obtain information about forming a local unit of this organization. With this information in hand the senate of College Government association then delegated a committee to make a survey of local NSFA clubs in other universities and to draw up suitable plans for a similar organization here. This week plans were presented to a group of interested students. At the same time letters from the World Friendship committee of Y.W.C.A., the executive council of College Government association, the Flambeau staff, and the Distaff endorsing the aims and purposes of NSFA were read.

An organization which has as its goal the development of a constructive student opinion through study and discussion of timely questions can be of great value to our campus. Its meetings and programs will be conducted and planned by students themselves. Every member of the student body is a member of NSFA and will be privileged to attend its meetings.

The Flambeau heartily commends the aggressive steps taken by the committee who submitted the plans and the group who accepted them. It is to be hoped that the spark of interest which led these students thus far will permeate the entire campus. Let us not allow an NSFA club to be formed only to die again.

Mother Rules the Day

"And by their traditions ye shall know them" might adequately characterize a graduate of Florida State Collage for Women. Yet, this Sunday, a tradition will be celebrated which represents a national sentiment.

Practically every citizen in our country will remember his mother on Mother's Day, not because she merely happened to be his mother but because he has learned to love her. When F.S.C.W. pays tribute to her mothers it will not be another ceremony crowded into an already overflowing calendar. It will take the form of greetings, in thought if not writing, sent to approximately fifteen hundred homes throughout Florida and other southern states.

These mothers which we honor may never have attended F.S.C.W., but the influence of each is being felt on this college campus now and will be felt wherever its graduates go. Will the students of Florida State College for Women, future mothers of the nation, remember that they, too, will help to shape its destiny?

This year marks a notable change in the dates of the distribution of annuals. Instead of having to stand in line for three or four hours during exam week when time is worth [illegible] as much as usual students began getting their muchly-prized Flastacowos [illegible]. We wish to congratulate the [illegible] Flastacowo staff for the planning it [illegible] taken to make this possible.

Student Slants on Collegiate Cynicism

A new slant on the proverbial cynicism of youth, and especially of collegiate youth, was offered the college-newspaper-reading public last week through the editorial columns of two university papers.

The editors of both the Michigan State News and the Reveille of Louisiana University chose as their subject the attitude so long a source of amusement to maturer thinkers and writers, each attacking the question from the student point of view, though adopting opposite outlooks. Michigan's writer, quoting the Abbe Ernest Dimmet's definition of true cynicism as self-confidence, tainted by conceit or by the conviction that no one is better than one's self, defined the youthful copy as "nothing more than a blase attitude mixed with a forced pessimism," adding that it is usually thought useful as a "halo over the youthful cynic's head, a mark of distinction among students who are carefree, indolent, or prosaically earnest." Going on to describe the campus man-of-the-world as one who haunts beer parlors to sit dully for hours, or listens sullenly in classes, showing boredom, the writer thoroughly condemns this "experienced lad who has tasted everything life has to offer and decided that it is hardly worth living," and predicts a sad awakening waiting for him as he leaves the college gates, where he finds out that one must contribute in order to share, that life offers inducements after all—only to be captured through effort rather than indifference. Painfully he struggles in the throes of self-doubt only to emerge eventually, imbued with a healthy desire to succeed. "But it's a painful, unnecessary change," cries Michigan's editor. "How much easier it is to analyze ourselves in the beginning, and forget the acting."

At Louisiana State, an editorial writer, under the heading "Concerning Arrogance," defends the college cynic on the grounds of immaturity, apparently attributing his existence to a sort of mental "growing pain," automatically outgrown sooner or later. The writer deals also with what he calls a more serious type of cynicism, one which carries more elements of trouble and loss of self-confidence with it, calling this the "type of arrogance the college graduate carries to his first efforts at putting into practice what he has learned. The latter type, the Reveille editor believes, though he may have formerly been among the army of campus stars who go into the business world with the Good Samaritan air of "here I am; now everything will be all right," only to be squelched immediately into the realization that he has much to learn, is now only another one in the throngs who walk the streets in search of work, a "sobering light" constantly on high hopes, and the lesson of humility already thoroughly learned. The Reveille attributes the lesson of humility to the financial depression, and while admitting that youth has many lessons to learn, yet the editorial is surely a blow to the popular picture of the blase collegian.

There is much to be said for the latter view of the question. There is no doubt that students everywhere are turning from idleness to inquiry, from ennui to an energetic quest for knowledge, realizing that beyond the college gates lies opportunity, limited to those who will work for it. Whether the depression has brought this change in collegiate thinking from the rah rah stage to its present approach to a more intellectual point of view, or whether it is a natural evolution, it is an actuality. Undergraduate opinion offers to student readers of the Reveille who are graduating this year this exhortation, worthy of quotation: "Confidence is a necessity for success: belief in one's self is another. But knowledge of one's shortcomings and needs, and a sincere desire to overcome them, are of equal importance. To graduate with honor, to approach the following work with the confidence that one is capable of doing it well, and to absorb with an open mind the experiences of others—those form the gauge of character, background, and ability." The "college cynic" has grown up.

Dating—a social experience and one of the most important opportunities of college life." That's the definition given to that popular collegiate activity by Dr. Harold Bosley, director of religious activities at Iowa State Teachers' College. "Dating bureaus are psychologically sound, although we may laugh at them," Dr. Bosley said. "Dating bureaus give students an opportunity for social experiences which they might not get otherwise" Wonder what Dr. Bosley could do to improve conditions at Florida State?

Magazine Thumbings

By ELEANOR WILLIAMS

BY ELEANOR WILLIAMS

THE MORGAN NERVE BEGINS TO JUMP

By Raymond Swing

Nation, May 1, 1935

Sudden nerve twitchings among British, French, and American officials at the investigation of the senate munitions committee of Morgan and company reveal government and munitions must be pretty close together, writes Swing from Washington.

First Donald Richberg and President Roosevelt intervened for a postponement of the inquiry about the Colt company's Blue Eagle being taken away. Then the British ambassador intimated investigators had better leave the letter files of Guaranty Trust company (Morgan affiliate), alone if Anglo-American relations were not to be injured. Finally about two weeks ago when investigators asked for Morgan and company's files from British and French fiscal agents, not only the British ambassador let himself be heard but the French ambassador and President Roosevelt joined in also.

If the committee bears up under the pressure and if valuable letters concerning the relations of British, French, and American bankers are not destroyed, Swing says we shall soon have proven in black and white the almost truism that the United States went into the World War to save from ruin the American bankers who had strained themselves to the utmost to supply Great Britain and France with munitions and credits.

WOMEN IN NEW GERMANY

By Ruth Frances Woodsmall

Forum, May 1935

Marriage is the great ideal for women in the Nazi program, writes the World Y. W. C. A. secretary who spent last summer in Germany.

Besides the many enticing material gains Hitler offers young people getting married, education in secondary schools and the training programs in camps have one aim in view—to produce a stronger mother, well-trained in domestic duties.

However, with one million nine hundred thousand more women than men in Germany, administrators had to leave some fields of work open to women, those dealing with problems of women and children.

Whether the situation of German women is an advance or retreat for women and whether it will affect the feminist movement in the East or West, Miss Woodsmall concludes, "probably lies in whether or not there is a fundamental conflict between the creative activity of women in the home and their creative participation in economic life and public affairs."

SO CONCEIVED AND SO DEDICATED

By William F. Russell

The Atlantic Monthly, May 1935

New Deal critics declare that our American heritage is being taken away or our American tradition of "an equalitarian social democracy" must now be realized, says William Russell, dean of the Teachers college in Columbia university, and the two groups are at opposite poles

We will always have believers in liberty and those who believe in equality, says Russell, reviewing the struggle between liberty and equality through our history, but we can never have liberty and equality to the full at the same time.

We have tried to steer a strong middle course between the two, says Russell, and our safety and progress lies along that way. "Where we have too much liberty and too little equality, we can readjust," he says, "and where we have too much equality and too little liberty, we can modify."

OTHER PEOPLE'S MONEY

Zy John T. Flynn

New Republic, May 8 1935

You cannot doubt things are getting better, says Flynn ironically, when the chairman of the United States Rubber company used to find only $1 848.71 in his little pay envelope but now finds $2 403.84 tucked away for his week's work. (The company's deficit remains about the same, however, he states.)

Comparing the modest salaries executives received before the World War with some they now receive, Flynn concludes the war gave these executives their first huge pay boosts and they never gave them up

However, salaries are the smallest part of the cut an average corporation official gets out of business, and it is the huge profits made "on the side" Flynn is bemoaning and which, he says, will continue to be made as long as personal "alias" corporations exist.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By Williams

POLITICAL POT-POURRI

BY GRACE MARY WEBSTER

An amusing note in this week's legislative events is that the liquor bill which Representative Frost says "does nothing on God's green earth but bring back the old-fashioned saloon," was composed by the house temperance committee. The bill has been the subject of much argument this week.

Odd Previsons of the Bill:

1. Swinging doors or screens hindering passers-by from seeing into the premises would be prohibited at places where liquor is sold by the drink.
2. Sales are limited to "customers who shall consume such beverages while seated"
3. Food must be offered for sale at all times, but the sale of all other articles is prohibited.

Interesting comments on the bill run rampant. Mathews of Alachua maintains that liquor should be made "a little more difficult to get than a glass of milk"; Mr. Folk of Marion county called the bill a "wolf in sheep's clothing disguised as Mary's little lamb" Another representative protests, "What's the object of sitting down to drink a glass of whiskey, unless it's for the purpose of drinking more because it is more comfortable to sit down than to stand up?"

A baby NRA for Florida was introduced into the senate by Senator MacWilliams of St. Augustine this week. The bill would set up another maize of industrial and business codes for the purpose of promoting cooperation with the federal government, and would give Sholtz power to approve, set up, cancel and modify any code. However, since the governor does not want the powers suggested and the business men of Florida object to it as another "burdensome restriction" the bill is doomed to an early death.

Florida World war veterans will profit to the extent of $21,921,858 if the Patman bonus bill, in the federal congress which has been indicated for Roosevelt's veto, could be passed.

One bill before the senate now brought forth an editorial entitled "Collegiate Chiselers" in a Florida paper this week. The editorial fires a criticism at some of our F.S.C.W. population, and encourages passage of the bill which seeks to remove the burden of furnishing higher education to non-residents or temporary residents of Florida by requiring proof of bona fide residence from students entering either of the state colleges Hop to it, you hyphenated Floridians!

And what was the name of the lively house member who wakened just as a vote was being taken on a bill and had to ask Speaker Bishop what the bill was about in order to cast his vote?

The Florida house of representatives yesterday passed a bill which re-divides Florida and provides for a new fifth congressional district stretching across central Florida. Look up your new district, girlies.

A favorable report was returned yesterday by the committee investigating the proposal that the constitution be amended to move the capitol of Florida from Tallahassee to the central part of Florida. We notice that more than several of the committee members were from central Florida.

More about the lynching bill trouble of last week. Mr Lea in his column suggests that Representative Johns' "idea was that the federal government had no right to interfere with the southern custom of a neck-tie party in the event of negro culprit." We wonder just how representative that idea is of the people of Florida.

Rumor has it that the solons will introduce a bill to change the Florida state song from "Florida, My Florida" to "Old Folks At Home" With all due respect to our winter tourist trade, it seems to us that the suggested song would be doubly true during the winter season And it would be nice to have one official Florida song which isn't an imitation of somebody's else's.

Yesterday the 1000th bill was introduced into the Florida house of representatives. There have been 1004 bills introduced this session in the house In the senate there have been 697 introduced.

It has been suggested that the house pass a bill outlawing talkathons, now that marathons and walkathons are taken care of so completely. Such a measure would be for their own protection.

Katherine Rawls came in for her share of legislative approval last Monday afternoon when she was called to the speaker's rostrum The motion was introduced by Representatives Rogers of Fort Lauderdale.

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

A NEW EDUCATION

Dean Gildersleeve of Barnard College recently made a statement which seems to embody the major problem which education faces today Speaking of college girls, although she might have been referring to men or women students in high schools or colleges, she said, "You haven't an idea what you are educating her for—whether to be a state senator or the wife of a missionary in China"

This seems only too true as regards our training of today. In a world that is constantly changing the task of education becomes increasingly difficult. It is no longer advisable to fit a person for a specific or specialized type of work alone, but it is necessary that, in addition, he be prepared to make quick adjustments to whatever situations he will face at the end of his training in high school or college. The specialized training of a few years ago must yield in some degree to an education producing flexibility of intelligence and broadly developed character traits. To meet the ever-changing economic, social and political conditions, it is highly desirable that college students of today be given a training which will have as its ultimate purpose adaptation to existing circumstances rather than specialized efficiency in one particular field.—Tower Times.

STUDENTS DEMAND CIVIL LIBERTIES

College students throughout the United States are enduring today a suppression of civil liberties that should not be tolerated by any Yet it is a fact that it is only those immediately touched by impending legislation against their rights who have made protest against such maneuvers on the campus or in the state. The large body of students have remained impervious to what should arouse their indignation and stimulate them to action.

The majority of legislation aimed at the students is of a nature intended to silence the tongues of those classed as "radicals" Although it is implicitly stated in the Declaration of Independence, and in the federal and state constitutions, that the people retain the right to object to their government should it become oppressive, reactionary groups that hold the power exert their every influence to push forward unconstitutional measures which amount to a nullification of the Bill of Rights.

This nation-wide drive toward reactionary legislation has had repercussions on the campuses in the acts of violence of student vigilantes at U. C. L. A.; in the administrative abrogation of student rights a Hunter; and in statutory legislation such as the bill in New York demanding an oath of loyalty to the constitution and those in California forbidding student organizations for resisting "the management and control of any such educational institution" It is small wonder that hundreds of students travelled to Albany, New York, to oppose the

(Continued on page six)

Students And Faculty Plan Summer Trips

Europe Will Attract Many With Tours Featuring Interesting Places

Four students, Anna Glen, Margie Glen, Helen Gray and Elizabeth Sponenbarger, and a graduate student, Elizabeth Campbell, will take a motor trip to Europe, leaving New York June 15 with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hay. The tour will take them through England, Scotland, France, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, and Germany.

Margie and Anna Glen will sail on the Scythia, a Cunard liner, on June 7 before the rest of the group in order to visit with relatives in Scotland. The others will sail on the French liner, Champlain, on June 15. All except Elizabeth Sponenbarger will sail home on the Baltimore Mail Liner, City of Baltimore, arriving in Norfolk August 21. Elizabeth will proceed to Spain where she will spend a year studying at the Centro de Ectudios Historicos, which is part of the university of Madrid.

Beth Kehler, who graduated from Florida State last year and is now teaching French in St. Petersburg, will sail on the French liner, Ile de France, June 20 and will attend the summer session at the Sorbonne in Paris. After the summer session she will go on to London for a few days. Miss Kehler's trip is one of the French residential tours which Mr. and Mrs. Hay conduct annually. In the past five years numerous Florida State girls have studied abroad as members of the French or Spanish residential tours Among them are Evelyn Lyle, Mary Grace Alexander, Kate Lamar Vinson, Mary Hazlinger Mitchell and Isabel Fernandez.

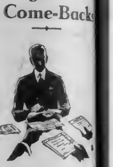
Faculty plans for summer vacation are varied Miss Edith M Burlingame and Miss Dorothy R. Disher, members of the psychology department faculty, will both leave for California immediately after commencement. Miss Burlingame expects to spend the entire summer in California. Miss Disher will go from California to northern Ohio, where she will visit with friends and relatives for part of the summer.

Dr Kathryn Abbey, professor of history, will leave Tallahassee around July 1 for New Hampshire where she expects to spend part of the summer. From there she expects to motor on to Canada down to Chicago and then back to Tallahassee.

Dr Anna Forbes Liddell expects to spend part of the summer visiting relatives in Charlotte and Asheville, North Carolina The greater part of the summer she will spend on her translation of De Doctu Ignorantia by Nicholas de Cusa, which she hopes to complete by September.

A number of the faculty members will spend the summer with their families and relatives Miss Mildred Henry will return to Ohio to spend the summer with her mother: Dr Beulah Briley will go back to Ames, Iowa where her family lives, and Dr Edna M Deviney will go home to Julian, North Carolina, for the summer After summer schools Miss Sadie Young will spend the remainder of the summer near Kansas City Kansas, with friends and relatives Dr. William G. Dodd expects to leave immediately after commencement to spend the summer in North Carolina.

Collegiate Come-Back



With annuals out, the autogra hounds de luxe have begun th yearly rush on students in genera and faculty members in partic lar. It would seem that no one safe from their relentless pursu Not that the profs don't have a our sympathy, but we still ins this is a swell way to get even w them for all those term pap we've been assigned.

• • • •

The sophomores have been ser nading the seniors to the tune "I Believe in Miracles" Su crust, especially with five Beta Kappas in the class.

• • • •

A successful "Don't Send Flow ers" campaign was one of the fea tures of the recent mid-wint dances at Georgia Tech. W gladly lead an "Anti-eggs Breakfast" campaign at Flori State. Bet we'd get plenty of su port.

• • • •

At Michigan State cuts are a lowed after 2 p m. on the day a major dance and up till noo the following day. Dances the must be endurance contests.

• • • •

The Auburn Plainsman sta that there are three kinds of w men the beautiful, the inte tual, and the majority. Well m are more easily catalogued. Th all fit into one of two group the dumb or the abnormal th latter species being extinct on th North American continent. W might add that the more we s of men, the gladder we are we women.

• • • •

POME

I see you here.
I see you there.
I seem to see you ever where—
Am I drunk?

—Advance

• • • •

A professor at Wake Fore lege defines a kiss as "a symbol pure affection, or a blister burning passion, or a smo screen of evil design." On heels of this definition comes th assertion from the Reveille science has proved every shortens one's life three minu by increasing the palpitations the heart. After taking anothe look at said definition, we pr foundly sigh. "What's thr minutes out of a life-time?"

• • • •

The Yellow Jocket contr the following daffynitions:

Absinthe—makes the hea grow fonder.
Acme—acme another
Acquire—church singers.
Acrid—precise
Brusque—hair brusque
Cinch—burn.
Violent—that blooms in spring.

• • • •

For five cents a lecture you have your notes taken for and typed, at the Universit California. Thinking back some of the lectures we've h we figure that if that s worked here, we'd be cheat we didn't get four cents chan

• • • •

With spring here and many gazing fondly at the picture o home town specimen, we subm this bit of timely advice.

Take all they give of love delight
To treasure at leisure in Mem ory's sight.
Go kiss them politely and ma your love lightly,
But never in serious guise.
Avoid ye the dreaded, sad stat of the wedded:
Hear ye the song of the wise

—Log

If this doesn't work, we sugg as a sure cure for all amor afflictions a dish of cold grits g erously sprinkled with mola every morning at 5 o'clock.

• • • •

At the University of Arizona Pan-Hellenic society ruled first year women students date because they are not suf ently mature. Tsk, tsk. W wager that many who wear "emblem of knowledge" on campus could learn from the lo freshman.

• • • •

Subway motto. The public jammed.

—Mississippian

The Social Week

Senator Watson Will Give Banquet for Girls Tonight

Senator J. W. Watson will entertain girls from DeSoto, Dade Olades, Hardee and Highlands counties with a dinner at the Three Torches tea room tonight at 6:30 o'clock.

The girls who have been invited to attend are: Marianna Arcuri, Louise Johnson, Betty Parker, Margaret Ree, Mercia Scott, Kathryn Sutton, LaMarie Sutton, Jean Treadwell, Barbara Wells, Martha Lee Wilkerson, Martha Wells, Doris McKenzie, Nedra McNamara, Helen Mannecken, Geraldine Meyers, Betty Middleton, Ethyl Mintzer, Lula Mae Mooty, Mrs. Geneva Fisher Morris Marjorie Mueller, Ruth Murray Ruth Nasholm, Jennie Rae Nall, Ruth Ann Orlin, Clotilde O'Rourke, Nan O'Shaughnessy, Elizabeth Ostlund, Jack Owens, Dorothy Ozburn, Frances Parks, Mary Bruce Patterson, Carroll Patterson, Rosemary Payne, Mary Peacock, Laurita Pearson, Charlotte Pelsang, Shirley Pemberton.

Edith Phelps, Mary Pollard, Faye Poole, Kathryn Pratt, Ruth Rainbolt, Mary Ramsey, Evaline Raokin, Alice Reedy, Annia Laurie Rentz, Marguerite Sjostrom, Marguerite Ricou, Harriett Roberts Katherine Rogers, Eleanor Ruff, Lois Rutherford, Clarice Sanchez Barbara Sandquist, Mildred Seekins, Vesta Shellhouse, Rachel Sherman, Thelma Smith, Marian Stien, Mildred Stevens, Wyima TerBush, Frances Thill, Bonneviere Tomlinson, Etta Turner

Jewell Turner, Sarah Turner Mary Veach, Anita Walder, Sally Walder, Genie Whiteside, Frank Wildman, Genevieve Wilkins Mary K Williams, Martha Wolliston Banks Wood, Rosa Douh, Doris Pounds, Dorothy Ryan, Hazel Alexander, Charlotte Carlton Aurilla Driggers, Johnnie Weeks, Marie Yetter, Elizabeth Chandler, Virginia Chandler, Wava Godwin, Evelyn Hammond Martha King, Oive McAdams, Darween Morrell, Muriel Nelson, Janet Pierce, Letta Peck Helen Schweigert, and Astrid Peterson.

German Club Members Will Be Guests Of Miss Dolbee

Miss Myrtle Dolbee will entertain the members of the German club tonight at 8.00 o'clock when they hold their regular meeting at her home

This meeting will be held for the purpose of electing new officers to serve next year.

The present officers of the club who will be replaced tonight are president, Katherine Blood: vice president, Sarah Beth Davis: secretary and treasurer, Mary Wing

Following the business meeting a social hour will be held during which an ice course will be served by the hostess. All of the members of the German club are invited to attend.

Students Meet To Form Local NSFA

(Continued from page one)

tional and international importance

"To foster understanding among the students of the world in furtherance of an enduring peace.

"In working toward these ends, the Federation acts independently of any political party or religious sect"

According to the Federation's report for 1933-1934 these aims have been carried out by practical activities during the past year.

In order to make the NSFA programs felt over a wider area The National Student Mirror, a monthly magazine, is published, a weekly news release is sent out to college papers and student government boards, international debating teams are sponsored out of Federation funds, a survey and information bureau is maintained, radio broadcasts are presented, a student travel bureau in conjunction with the International Student Service and The Open Road makes inexpensive vacations abroad possible, district and national meetings are held, the U S Office of Education and the FERA Educational division have been provided with student relief activities information, a committee on academic freedom has been organized, and aid in establishing the National Institution of Public Affairs in Washington, D. C., bas been rendered.

The projected program of the Federation is to expand its activities wherever possible; to assist in training students for public life; to equip students as far as it is possible for active places in the affairs of the national government by making necessary recommendations concerning curriculum changes to college administrations; to assist needy youth by aiding employment and placement breaus, by urging the establishment of better youth counseling facilities, and by requesting private and public enlargement of youth activities programs; and finally to urge the organisations of the Federal Youth Service by the U. S. Office of Education.

The senate committee recommended that the purpose of the local organization be "to relate the work of the National Student Federation more effectively to the campus, to arouse a constructive student opinion through studies and discussions of timely questions, and to act as a local group making appropriate recommendations on any matter of student welfare.

The proposed program of the NSFA club is outlined here: "to inform the student body and present opportunity for discussion of the ideas expressed monthly in the National Student Mirror and in the weekly news release and radio program, which does not exclude discussion of subjects obtained elsewhere; to sponsor surveys and discussions of important public and campus problems and make appropriate recommendations to the student senate; to study and encourage measures to raise academic standards; to investigate and make suggestions as to the regulation and improvement of student relief and self-help programs; and to cooperate with the National Institution of Public Affairs in order to interest students in actively participating in governmental administration."

As the first step in carrying out a program here the NSFA club has had The Student Mirror, official Federation magazine placed in the library.

The National Student Federation of America was founded at Princeton in 1925 and "has expanded its scope until today it stands as the only student unit which represents the typical philosophy of undergraduate America and serves as leader of this large cross-section of our population."

According to the senate committee report "young people all over the world are organizing that they may participate in the political, social, and economic changes which are taking place. NSFA is the most promising youth movement in our land today; but we do not expect it to imitate the mob spirit and hard passions seen in other countries. American youth leaders must be intelligent and informed, and they should act according to clearly reasoned principles."

COLLEGE CALENDAR 1935

May 10 to May 16

Friday

6.30 p.m Senator Watson banquet—Three Torches tea room

7:30 p.m. Beta Phi Alpha banquet—Park Avenue Terrace

7:30 p.m. German club meeting—Miss Myrtle Dolbee

8.15 p.m. He Who Gets Slapped—speech department play, Augusta Conradi theater

Sunday

11:00 a.m Church esrvices

1:15 p.m R.W.C.A. services

Monday

5:30 p.m Orchestre rehearsal —Auditorium

7:30 p.m. Glee club rehearsal

9:00 p.m. Sorority meetings

Tuesday

11:30 a.m. Convocation — Athletic association awards and installation

5:30 p.m. Orchestre rehearsal

7.30 p.m. Social Science faculty and upperclassmen meeting—room 105 History

Wednesday

7:15 a.m Worship services

7:30 p.m. Glee club rehearsal

Thursday

6 30 p.m. Orchestra rehearsal

Friday

8 15 p.m. Certificate recital—Margaret Nickle and Dorothy Leach

Heinleins Fete Alpha Gams with Bridge

Dr and Mrs. Christian Paul Heinlein entertained the seniors and officers of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority with a bridge party at the Heinlein home in College Park on Thursday evening from 8 00 to 10:00 o'clock.

Assisting the host and hostess in entertaining were Mr and Mrs Kenneth Williams and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Lona.

Those present were Marian Turner, Sarah Butler Logan, Pauline McLellan, Amoretta Bullard, Hallie Bailey, Margaret Roe Adilyn Fox, Helen Hartness, Amber Turner Betsey Anderson, Westa Wilkins, Nadia Grainger, Mercia Scott, and Helen Wilson.

Personal Mention

Julia Smith, an alumna from Green Cove Springs, visited here this week at the Alpha Chi Omega house.

Mr. J. K Breaux of Jacksonville visited his daughter, Yvette, here this week.

Cari Brigman is visiting with her parents in Pensacola this week-end.

Mrs. John R. Parkington of Daytona, visited at the Delta Delta Delta house this week.

Evelyn Meitin, a student at Florida State College, has returned from Jacksonville where she visited with friends.

Two alumnae, Eleanor Irsch and Dorothy Burnette, were guests at the Delta Zeta house last week-end.

Clairnelle O'Steen has gone to High Springs this week-end where she will visit her parents.

Frances Moore will visit in Atlenta this week-end.

Dorothy Watson and Betty Hamilton have gone to Jacksonville to spend the week-end.

Among those who will attend the junior-senior prom and the engineers ball in Gainesville this week-end are Wylma TerBush, Iris Machen, Rachel Sherman, Eleanor Payne, Betty Wheeler, Kathryn Barrs, and Adeline Goldslien.

Audrey Smith attended the Alpha and Beta convention of the Alpha Delta Pi sorority last week as the official delegate from the Iota Chapter.

DAUGHTERS OF ROTARANS HONORED BY ROTARY CLUB AT FLORIDAN WEDNESDAY

The Rotary club of Tallahassee entertained the daughters of Rotary members who are attending Florida State College for Women with a luncheon Wednesday at 1:15 p. m. at the Floridan Hotel.

The luncheon tables were placed in various positions around the room and were decorated with spring flowers.

During the course of the luncheon a "Believe it or not" contest was held after which everyone joined in the singing of general songs. The Leon High School glee club presented a program.

Mr. J. G. Kellum was in charge of the arrangements and program.

Among those who attended from the college were: Ella Arozarena, Hallie Bailey, Helen Ayala, Martha Baker, Helen Ballenger, Ann Bayley, Mary Beaver, Dorothy Branch, Elizabeth Carter, Mamie Jane Clark, Sara Clark Jane Cralle, Barbara Crosland, Helen Donn, Dorothy Edwards, Ethyle Mae Edwards, Frances Ellis, Marjorie Fain, Carol Farabee, Lucille Ferguson, Frances Forth, Sarah Graham, Martha Grant, Mary Ethelind Grassfield, Winnie Jane Hackney, Mary Elizabeth Halstead, Annette Harris, Evelyn Haynie, Helen Hartness, Belle Henshaw, Barbara Holmes, Beckey Lou Hopkins, Lucy Jane Houser, Florence Jones, Josephina King Virginia Laughner, Harriett Lawrence, Marion Lessey, Fortuna Lopez, Marion Mason, Erma Jane McCullogh, Mary Jean McKay, Althea Mebane, Edith Merrill, Mary Mickler, Sara Moor, Ellen Moore, Clairnelle O'Steen, Elizabeth Pierce, Ethel Fair Pillane, Helena Ruth Powell, Annette Quinby, Joyce Reed, Grace Rummell, Violet Shampire, LaVada Sweat, Mary E. Tiller, Sara Tillman, Marjorie Joan Tillis, Elizabeth Ann Wartman, Yulee Way, Katherine Wilhelm and Mary Wing.

LYNN ENTERTAINS FOR MORTAR BOARD AFTER TAPPING CEREMONIES TUESDAY

Miss Elizabeth Lynn entertained the old and new members of Mortar Board with a party at her home immediately after the tapping services Tuesday night.

The house was decorated with spring flowers in pastel shades. A very informal evening was spent with the girls singing songs and telling their favorite stories and jokes.

The guests were served refreshments of sherbet, cookies, and mints, by Miss Lynn assisted by Dr. Annie M Popper.

Those who attended this affair were Dr. Annie M. Popper, Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Mrs. Harold F. Richards, Kay Warren, Miss Mary Settle, and Miss Anna Mae Sharp

The new members of Mortar Board who were the honor guests are Katherine Blood, Minna Dunn, Margaret Graham, Sarah Krentzman, Gertrude Kuhn, Dorothy Leach, Betty Meyer, Ruth Persons, Murae Reddick, Mary Etta Thistlethwaite, Lillian Turlington, Edith Webb

Old members are Marien Brantley, Carolina DeMontigne, Helenmary Fritsch, Barbara Garfunkel, Hazel Goze, Frances Hurlin, Abbie Lyle, Jennie Rae Nall, Frances Parks, Lou Robertson, and Georgia Ruth Work.

KAPPA ALPHA THETAS ENTERTAIN FOR SORORITY CHAPERONE ON WEDNESDAY

The members and pledges of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority entertained with a waffle supper Wednesday night honoring the sorority house mother, Miss Elizabeth Timberlake.

The house was decorated with spring flowers ot carry out the informal motif. No program was planned.

Hostesses at this affair were: Evelyn Ballard, Barbara Bandy, Irene Edwards, Mary Ennes, Virginia Hamilton, Mary Ann Hills, Virginia Holt, Betty Kimball, Mary McCormick, Clairnelle O'Steen, Rosalind Parker, Margaret Reedy, Josephine Skeels, Antoinette Sullivan, Wylma TerBush, Claire Williams, Banks Woods, Betty Hamilton, Annie Laurie Rentz, Clarice Sanchez, Anna Belle Baker, Ann Chichester, Mamie Jana Clark, Sarah Clark, Kitty Craney, Marjorie Horton, Iris Machen, Nedra McNamara, Margaret Schmidli, Madge Williams, Helen Donn, Dagmar Frippe, Jean Harris, Mary Kimball, Virginia Lide, Rachel Sherman.

NEW OFFICERS OF FRENCH HONORARY ANNOUNCED AT INITIATION BANQUET

Beta Pi Theta, French honorary, held its installation and initiation banquet at the Three Torches last Wednesday night at which time the new officers for the coming year were announced.

The banquet tables were decorated with purple and yellow streamers and flowers. At each place there was a program made in the shape of the fraternity pin in the purple and yellow colors and having a white "fleur de lys" in the upper corner.

During the banquet the newly elected officers were announced and are as follows: president, Mauvis Lussier; vice president, Alice Porter; secretary, Lillian Turlington, corresponding secretary, Ruth Dickson; treasurer, Ruth Mock; critic, Wylma TerBush; pianist, Leona Stimmel, and faculty adviser, Miss Mildred Finnegan.

The old officers spoke to the guests in French about the work of the fraternity last year, after which they congratulated the new officers. A short program, also in French, followed.

Attending the banquet were Dr A. R. Seymour, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Miss Lucy Lester, Miss Irene Millar, Mrs. A. B. Allen, Ollvia Embrey, Belle Henshaw, Opal Grey, Ruth Feinberg, Leona Stimmel, Wylma TerBush, Ruth Dickson, Lillian Turlington, Mauvis Lussier, Marjorie Carter, Mary Carson, Ruth Mock, Anita Mitchell, Betty Boggs, Alice Porter, Eleanor Payne, Jane Bullard, Tommy Tucker, and Mrs. Dorothy Breen.

Episcopal Students, Faculty Entertain Platt with Tea

The Episcopalian faculty and students will entertain with a tea this afternoon from 4.00 to 6:00 at Ruge hall, honoring Miss Kathleen Platt, the Episcopalian student secretary

The decorations will consist of sweet peas and other garden flowers which will be arranged in bowls throughout the rooms of the hall. After the guests have been received they will be served refreshments of coffee, cookies and mints.

About two hundred guests have been invited to meet with Miss Platt at this time, according to Mary Certain, who is in charge of the arrangements.

Beta Phi Alpha Will Celebrate Founder's Day With Banquet

The members and pledges of the Beta Phi Alpha sorority will celebrate their Founder's Day with a formal banquet tonight at the Park Avenue Terrace at 6:30 o'clock.

During the course of the banquet there will be speeches by the old and new officers of the chapter which will be followed by the sorority awards for service.

Robbye Estes, who is in charge of the general arrangements, has announced that the decorations consisting of flowers, streamers, and place cards will be in the sorority colors.

Chapter Entertains Thirty Guests At Week-end Affair

The Iota chapter of Alpha Delta Pi entertained about thirty guests and rushees last week-end during the May Day festivities.

Friday night the visitors were honored with a buffet supper at the sorority house, consisting of a cold picnic lunch plate. Following the supper the guests were entertained with skits which were arranged by Judy Whidden, Mary Brandt, and Josephine Davis.

Saturday at noon the guests were given a luncheon at the Three Torches, and Saturday afternoon they were escorted to the May Day coronation.

The rushees were then entertained, Saturday night, with a banquet at the Dutch Kitchen. The decorations consisted of spring garden flowers, and each guest was presented with a corsage of sweet peas.

The program at this affair was arranged by Doris Risk, the vice president of the chapter, and consisted of several songs by Mary Lou Moore and Helen Meade, and an original poem dealing with the different members of the sorority which was read by Flossie Henry Amout seventy girls attended the banquet.

PI BETA PHI MEMBERS WILL ATTEND STATE SORORITY PARLEY AT ROLLINS

Members of the Florida Beta chapter of the Pi Beta Phi sorority will attend the state convention of that sorority which will be held in Orlando at Rollins College this week-end.

The program for the week-end has been announced to include several banquets and luncheons Saturday at noon there will be a luncheon followed by a meeting in the afternoon Then from 4 00 until 6 00 there will be a tea at the Rollins Pi Beta Phi chapter house.

Saturday night there will be a formal banquet at which Betty Boggs, president of the local chapter, will give a short speech.

Sunday morning at 6:00 a model initiation will be demonstrated with Miss Amy B Onkin, the grand national president, officiating The initiation will be followed by a business meeting in the morning and a luncheon at noon.

The members of the local chapter who will attend this convention are Marguerite Groover, Jean Clark, Betty Clark, Ermine Lawrence, Betty Boggs, Virginia White and Dorothy Osburn.

SENIOR MEMBERS OF ALPHA XI DELTA ARE ENTERTAINED WITH RODEO PARTY

The members and pledges of the Alpha Xi Delta sorority entertained the seniors of the chapter at a rodeo party Wednesday night at 9:00 at the sorority house

Each room of the house was decorated to represent a ranch. The guests were all assigned to the different ranches where they were given costumes consisting of brown paper chaps, and divided skirts. Each girl was given a horse made from paper and long sticks

During the evening a rodeo of fancy riding and broncho bucking contests were held. These were followed by square dancing and skits

Following the program refreshments of doughnuts, hot dogs and coffee were served by the hosts

At the end of the evening the seniors graduating from the Alpha Xi Delta dude ranch were presented with their diplomas which were Alpha Xi Delta pennants. The graduates are Helenmary Fritsch, Barbara Garfunkel, Ruth Rainbolt, Genava Fisher Morris Elizabeth Stout, Juanila Pace, Bessie Bailey, Bill Lovell, and Mildred Boss.

Florida High School Banquet and Dance To Be Tonight

The members of the junior and senior classes of Florida High School will participate in the annual junior-senior banquet Friday evening at the Floridan Hotel.

The theme of the banquet will be Indian lore, wigwams and Indian favors creating a woodland atmosphere. Miss Betty Dale Miller, of the junior class, will sing the "Indian Love Call." Following the banquet will be a dance at the Woman's Club building.

Remember!
MOTHER'S DAY
YARDLEY'S
OLD
LAVENDER
GIFT SETS
95c
BENNETT'S

ECONOMY TAXI
PHONE 1270
10c per Mile, in City, Baggage Extra
— 24 HOUR SERVICE —
Public Liability and Property Damage Insurance Coverage, While Riding in Our Taxis, For YOUR Protection.
Operating Under Railroad Commission Permit, Paying Required Mileage Tax.
Making Occasional Trips to all Parts of the State
H. J. REDD, Mgr.
Under Same Ownership and Management as
TALLAHASSEE-MONTICELLO BUS LINE
ALL COLLEGE GIRLS WILL BE CARRIED TO CHURCH FREE OF CHARGE FROM 10:15 TO 11 SUNDAY MORNING

STATE THEATRE
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland
in
"PEOPLE WILL TALK"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
James Cagney in "G Men"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
George Burns and Gracie Allen
in
"LOVE IN BLOOM"
THURSDAY
Edmund Lowe in "Mr. Dynamite"
TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT!

RITZ THEATRE
SATURDAY—25c
TIM McCOY in "REVENGE RIDER"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
25c
Clarke Gable and Joan Bennett
in
"AFTER OFFICE HOURS"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
(State Prices)
James Cagney in "G Men"
THURSDAY—25c
Joe E. Brown in "Six Day Bike Rider"
FRIDAY
"LIVES OF BENGAL LANCERS"

Attend the SALE
at
THE LADIES' SHOP
"Where Styles are Shown for Less"
205 SOUTH MONROE
$3.95 Dresses Only $2.88
$5.95 Dresses Only $4.88
$7.90 Dresses Only $5.88

LUCKY STRIKE
CIGARETTES
FOR THAT 7th INNING STRETCH
I'm your best friend
I am your Lucky Strike
Try me I'll never let you down
Copyright 1935, The American Tobacco Company.
It's the tobacco that counts, and there are no finer tobaccos than those used in Luckies

Methodists To Hold Service

New Student Council To Be Honored Sunday By Old Council

Recognition services will be held Sunday morning at 7:00 a. m. at the Methodist student house for the new student council. The annual fried chicken breakfast given the incoming student council by the outgoing council will immediately follow the services. Miss Davis has asked that everyone wear white.

Members of the new Methodist Student council are Jo Beth Foreman, president; Margaret Delaney, vice-president; Marjorie Raulerson, secretary; Ruth Howard, treasurer; Mary Ola Reynolds, financial secretary; Martha Flake, personnel director; Myrvin Everett, worship chairman; Sara Martin, music chairman; Sara Hosea, dramatic chairman, Ruth Murray, publicity chairman; Charlotte Carleton, house chairman; Lula Walker, recreational chairman; Jewell Drawdy, social service chairman; Anna Marie Mitchell, off-campus chairman; Carol Brigman, sorority chairman; Virginia Clayton, league program chairman; Dimples Turner, league social chairman; Dora Helen Baggott, president Sunday school class; Willa May Oreer, vice-president class; Betty Ann Graham, secretary; Rae Reddick, treasurer.

The program of the recognition service is as follows:

Music, Sara Martin; song, "O Master Let Me;" "Looking Backward," out-going president; "Looking Forward," incoming president; Scripture and Prayer, Miss Davis. The Challenge, Old Council; The Response, New Council; song, "I Would Be True;" and Lord's Prayer.

A special Mothers' Day program will be featured at league, Sunday night at 7:00 p. m. Tom Humphries is in charge of the arrangements.

Dr. Bellamy will talk on "Miracles" at 9:45 Sunday to the Sunday school classes.

An informal tea will be given Friday afternoon from 4-6 honoring Miss Kathleen Platt, Episcopal student secretary. The student vestry will act as hostesses.

Miss Kathleen Platt left May 7, to attend the convention of the Diocese of South Florida in Daytona Beach. While there she will tell of her work among the students at Florida State College for Women. She is expected to return Thursday.

The Episcopal student auxiliary will meet Sunday afternoon at 5:30 with Dr. Eyman as guest speaker.

Contemporary Thought

(Continued from page four)

Nunan bill and that not a single undergraduate paper in the state failed to attack the bill! The students in California would do well to participate in similar movements.

It is not enough for a few interested students to take action against legislation endangering their rights. There is a pressing need for united action on the part of all students in order to illustrate how effective student pressure can be! It is time for the students of the country to awake to the critical situation they are prone to ignore, and by wakefulness to prevent action that is damaging to their liberty.—Cincinnati Bearcat.

BUT TRAITORS
WE ARE NOT!

We admit we said Paris (even permitting ourselves the in-the-spring banality). We compared our art with foods to the famous cuisine of the French. In short, we spoke quite candidly of our excellence and superiority.

However, since maturely thinking it over, we retract: Palm Beach is really what we must have had in mind, not Paris.

In any case, although the name Park Avenue suggests New York, an out-door dining room definitely symboizes Florida.

So what? . . . Well, do you see, the point is:

FINE FOOD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT!

PARK AVENUE
TERRACE

Scientific Progress May Decide For An Entire Diet of "Pellets"

Student Considers the Effects of Using Pills for Food

BY ANNA GLEN

I have been very much disturbed at reading of the amazing progress of our scientists in concentrating food and supplying it with the necessary vitamins. Our chemists have been able to create meat, like the flesh of our livestock except that it has so far failed to further growth. Already we have on our market numerous extracts, purees, concentrated juices, irradiated milk, beef cubes, and viosterol.

It is indeed possible that in fifty years—or a hundred—we shall fare entirely on pellets, chemically made to fulfill all the body's requirements. The serious consequences of such an event is appalling.

What a blow to industry would be the establishment of a nation of pellet consumers. What will our grocers do to compete with the chemists dispensing pills? We shall not need dining tables, napkins, cutlery, dishes, stoves, refrigerators, pots and pans, kitchen sinks, or can openers. With chemically manufactured food what need shall we have for farmers? They will be able to move to the cities, leaving the useless land for the equally useless livestock.

What a change we shall have in our sign boards! Instead of such advertisements as "Our Bread is Best," "Our Flour is Finest," etc., we shall read "Our Pellets are Perfect." Advertisers, without such concerns as Puffed Oats, Inc. to flaunt their products before the public eye, will suffer a serious decline in business, despite the patronage of the pellet industry.

We shall not need butchers, bakers, or dairymen. The vegetable man will no longer drive through the streets ringing his bell and crying his wares. The milkman will not clatter up to the porch before dawn to deposit the morning's supply of milk. All our tea-rooms, restaurants, and cafes will close their doors as a concession to the advancement of science.

Our home economics teachers will become jobless. No longer will students bend their intellects to the memorizing of recipes. Our dieticians will likewise be ousted from the professional ranks. Only the chemists will profit from humanity's need for food.

To what will our legislative bodies turn their talents when, in the period of pellets, they may no longer pass farm bills, food and drugs acts? What will our politicians promise when they cease to promise a chicken in every pot?—a pellet for every palate, perhaps?

Think of the international consequences which will ensue with the establishment of the pellet as our means of sustenance. World trade will decline immeasurably. Great Britain will not import Spanish oranges or Florida grapefruit. Tropical bananas will have no sale. Russia will cease to flood the wheat market. The French will lose their traditional reputation for good cooking.

We shall have a great deal of leisure time in the period of pellets, rising just in time to gulp a pill and depart for the office or the factory or the classroom. Instead of a wasteful lunch hour we shall have a pellet moment. Mother will be able to go to the movies every morning, not being confined at home by the necessity of washing the breakfast dishes and buying the groceries.

Our expenses will be decidedly reduced, as we shall have no dining rooms or kitchens with all the equipment we now employ for the process of eating. We shan't need to pay a cook, for no one will mind serving himself a prepared pellet.

Our banquets will become mere "pellet parties," with hours of extra time for the delightful after-pellet speeches. Tiny capsules will replace the insipid punch and frosted cakes we now serve after the last rubber of the bridge game.

But the period of pellets may prove very dangerous. How, for instance, will women find the way to a man's heart when they can no longer appeal to his stomach?

Still graver is the danger that we may become in time a toothless and chinless race. Already advertisements warn us that soft, modern foods are bad for our teeth. Surely when we merely swallow pellets we shall lose our jaws entirely. What then will our dentists do? What will our barbers shave when our men's chins disappear?

And after the period of pellets, what? Possibly our scientists will devote themselves to the problem of finding employment for the millions their achievements have ousted from our professions. Possibly they will evolve a scheme whereby we may simply lie in the sun and absorb from its potent rays all the energy necessary for life. It is certain, at least, that science will continue to advance.

Youth Service Program Begun

President Lang Outlines Community Projects

SARATOGO SPRINOS, N. Y.—(NFSA—NSFA President John A. Lang described the projected youth program of the U. S. Office of Education to Skidmore College students at their May 2nd Chapel exercises.

Praising the work which has been done this year by Dr. John W. Studebaker, who was appointed Commissioner of Education last fall, Lang discussed the program which has evolved through his consideration of the national youth problem.

"The Office of Education has become aware of its important role as a youth agency under Dr. Studebaker's direction. The program which has been developed to alleviate the plight of unemployed and out-of-school young people between the ages of 16 and 25 is evidence that the Office realizes that its responsibility is not limited to formal, classroom education," Lang explained.

He went on to describe plans for a Division of Youth Service which would sponsor community programs to give work of educational and social service value to this strata of young people. Surveys and other research work is already under way with funds from private sources to form an accurate background for the Division when appropriations are made by the Government. The projected program has been presented to President Roosevelt and it is hoped that his early approval will make it possible to initiate the project this summer.

Bennett's

FOUNTAIN SPECIALS

25c Fresh Fruit Strawberry Sundae 10c
25c Maple Pecan Sundae 10c
15c Dish Pistachio Nut Cream with Whip Cream and Cherry 10c
15c Orangeade with Pineapple Sherbert 10c
20c Chicken Salad Sandwich 15c

75c BENNETT'S CLUB LUNCHEON 40c
Choice of:
FRIED CHICKEN COUNTRY STYLE
SMOTHERED WESTERN STEAK
VEGETABLES
BABY LIMA BEANS FRESH SQUASH
PINEAPPLE SALAD
CORN MUFFINS OR HOT BISCUIT
DRINK AND DESSERT INCLUDED

Bennett's Special Rich Ice Cream, pt............ 15c
Russell McPhail Ice Cream, pt. 25c

Student Leaders Endorse Program

NSFA Delegates Favor Academic Freedom

RALEIGH, N. C.—(NSFA—In a telegram to NSFA headquarters, 75 N. C. and Virginia delegates to the North Carolina Federation convention urged that the current program, which includes active participation in defense of student liberties and academic freedom, be continued under the new administration to be inducted in July.

"The North Carolina Federation of Students in convention assembled, representing eighteen N. C. colleges, pledges to the NSFA and especially its leader, the whole-hearted support of the college students of North Carolina. We wish to endorse heartily the program of militant liberalism upon which the Federation has embarked. We sincerely urge that the next administration carry on that program in all its aspects."

Harper Barnes, NSFA executive committeeman, addressed the meeting with an explanation of student government's importance as a student-faculty link and appealed to the undergraduate leaders present to work for increased responsibility in the administration of student activities. His talk was preceded by welcoming addresses by Catherine Mosely, president of the student body at Meredith College, sponsor of the convention, and Governor J. B. C. Ehringhaus.

Round-table discussions of North Carolina problems of taxation for education and the administration of public schools aroused the greatest interest among delegates. Other discussion groups considered of general problems of student government and publications as well as the importance of student interest and activity in public affairs.

Sophomore Class Heads For Next Year Elected

Mickey Conn was elected president of the sophomore class for next year at a freshman class meeting held yesterday morning in the Administration building.

Other officers elected by the group were vice president, Betty Ostlund; secretary, Alicis Meacham; treasurer, Madge Glenn; representatives to senate, Anne Mizell and Frances Lewis; parliamentarian, Helen Daniel; and athletic manager, Janet Cook.

Retiring officers include president, Anne Mizell; vice president, Betty Wheeless, secretary Josephine Trantham; treasurer, Mary Nell Pinckard; parliamentarian, Ruth Lind; and athletic manager, Viola Brooks.

Kadelpi to Elect New Officers Next Tuesday

Kappa Delta Pi, national education honorary society, at a meeting to be held on Tuesday afternoon at 5:00 in the education conference room, will elect officers for the coming year. A feature of this meeting will include the presentation of the history of the chapter for the past year by the historian, Marie Slack.

At this meeting of the educational honorary, special initiation services will be held for Ruth Persons, who was out of town during the initiation services held for the new members several weeks ago.

Five Students Honored

Chi Delta Phi, literary honorary, held an initiation ceremony Wednesday afternoon for the five girls who were recently tapped.

The girls who were initiated are Edna Hoffman, Mildred Boss, Edith Patterson, Clotilde O'Rourke, and Agnes Reedy.

Dr. Hazel Stevenson, faculty advisor, officiated at the ceremony.

Mortar Board Taps Thirteen Tuesday

(Continued from page one)

then as one by one, the old members left the stage and walked down into the auditorium where the junior class, clad in white were seated in alternate rows. Each extended a hand of welcome to the chosen student and arm in arm returned to the stage where the new member was given the symbolic torch.

Faculty members participating in the cremony were Dean Olivia Dorman and Miss Kathryn Abbey, honorary members; Miss Elizabeth Lynn, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Miss Sadie Young, advisory members; and Miss Ruth Schornhurst, Miss Mary Settle, Mrs. Harold Richards, alumnae. Miss Katherine Warren, alumna, also took part and Mrs. Marion Salley and Miss Marion Gardner, alumnae residing in Tallahassee were invited to attend.

Retiring members are Marion Brantley, Caroline DeMontigne, Helenmary Fritsch, Barbara Garfunkel, Hazel Goza, Frances Hurlin, Abbie Lyle, Jennie Rae Nall, Frances Parks, Louise Robertson, Georgia Ruth Work.

Following the ceremony, all members were entertained at the home of Miss Lynn.

The Torchbearers, a local gronp, was organized on this campus in 1925 and admitted to membership in the national organization of Mortar Board in 1931. Not less than five, nor more than twenty students may be eelected for for membership each year, according to Marion Brantley, president.

Beta Pi Theta Initiates Seven

New Officers Announced For Coming Year

Beta Pi Theta, a French honorary fraternity, initiated seven new members Wednesday afternoon at the home of Dr. Arthur R Seymour, after which a banquet was held at the Three Torches and the new officers for the coming year elected.

At 4:30, Ruth Feinberg was pledged into the honorary, which servcie was followed by the initiation of seven new members, Leona Stimmel, Wyima TerBush, Ruth Feinberg, Lillian Turlington, Marjorie Carter, and Mary Carson.

After the initiation services the members and faculty advisers attended the installation banquet at the Three Torches at which time the new officers for the coming year were announced to include president, Mauvis Lussier; vice-president, Alice Porter; secretary, Lillian Turlington; corresponding secretary, Ruth Dickson; pianist, Leona Stimmel; critic, Wylma TerBush; treasurer, Ruth Mock; and Miss Mildred Finegan, faculty adviser.

During the banquet French was spoken entirely, and the toasts, and other speeches were given in that language.

The chairman of arrangements for the banquet was Olivia Embrey, the retiring president, who had as her assistants, Belle Henshaw and Opal Grey.

The faculty members and students who attended the initiation services and the banquet are Dr. A. R. Seymour, Mrs. Dorothy Breen, Miss Mildred Finnegan, Miss Lucy Lester, Miss Irene Miller, Mrs. A. B. Allen, Olivia Embrey, Belle Henshaw, Opal Orey, Ruth Feinberg, Leona Stimmel, Wylma TerBush, Ruth Dickson, Lillian Turlington, Mauvis Lussier, Marjorie Carter, Mary Carson, Ruth Mock, Anita Mitchell, Betty Boggs, Alice Porter, Eleanor Payne, Jane Bullard, and Tommy Tucker.

Hungry Girls Ransack Diet Tables Daily

'Gleaners' Eagerly Await Faculty 'Extras' In All Desserts

"May I have the rest of the cookies?" "have you finished with the bread?" "Are you going to eat the extra ice-creams?" When the girls at the diet tables are about half through a meal they are suddenly beseiged by questions of this kind.

Whenever the meals do not appeal to the girls there is always a hope that there will be something extra at the diet tables. Desserts are the most sought after dish—especially cookies and peanuts which can be carried away in paper napkins. Bread and rolls can also be obtained if you want to make sandwiches. In fact, the girls will give you almost anything you ask for except fruit, which is seldom left behind.

And the extra ice-cream! Who can bear to see them left there, unwanted and uneaten? Nobody . . . . if the neighboring tables don't ask for them, they will soon vanish down the hall to a table farther away.

No one seems to have quite gotten up the courage to ask the faculty tables for "extras" yet. But little do faculty members know the dangers with which they are surrounded. Long before they have finished dinner there are several girls strolling nonchalantly up and down the aisle with eyes fixed on the cookie plate. The rival aspirants sit at the tables opposite drinking water and lingering long after they have eaten as they wait for the more leisurely faculty tables to finish.

But as soon as the faculty have departed, there is a virtual stampede. Cookies are whisked away, and ice-ream vanishes like magic. This time it is first come, first served

The Laundry Does It Best! ☞ Phones: Laundry 808
Dry Cleaning 666

The White Way Laundry & Cleaners

Scientific Sanitary Service

The Best by Test—Let Us Prove It

Washable
NELDA
CREPE

Dots are smart . . . lots of dots . . . all size dots . . . on that dependable Nelly Don fabric—Nelda Crepe with the dobby weave. Until you've had a washable Nelda Crepe, you don't know what real service is, or real value at 5.95

The Vogue
feminine wearables
Tallahassee . . . . Florida

There is no need for a lot of whangdoodle talk about cigarettes

—just plain common-sense

When you stop to think about your cigarette—what it means to you—here's about the way you look at it—

Smoking a cigarette gives a lot of pleasure—it always has.

People have been smoking and enjoying tobacco in some form or another for over 400 years.

Of course you want a cigarette to be made right. And naturally you want it to be mild. Yet you want it to have the right taste—and plenty of it.

In other words—you want it to Satisfy.

Scientific methods and ripe mild tobaccos make Chesterfield a milder and better-tasting cigarette. We believe you will enjoy them.

© 1935, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

Best Wishes And Good Luck
To Graduates of '35

The Florida Flambeau

Published by the Students of Florida State College For Women

LUME XXII. Tallahassee, Florida, May 17, 1935 NUMBER TWENTY-NINE

Blue Dresses And White Elephants
Are With Us Again

ummer School o Begin June 0th This Year

w Education Courses For Teachers Of Nursery Schools

TRA LIBRARY COURSE OFFERED

. W. C. Bagley, Columbia and Woman's Club To Visit Here

On June 10, 1935 the thirtieth nual summer school of Flor- a State College for Women ll begin its eight weeks' ses- n. More general offerings an ever before will be provid- d for students now in college, d teachers now in service.

In the School of Education, lorida State College for Wom- offers five four-year cur- ula and four two-year cur- ula. A new four-year and a w two-year curriculum in rsery school education have en added for the summer of 35 which will increase the op- rtunities offered to teachers graduate and under-graduate rk. All students in the school Education may elect any sub- t offered in the summer hool catalogue.

Additional Library Hours

Additional hours will be offered library science which will en- librarians in accredited high ools throughout the state to t the standards set up by the thern Association of Second- Schools and Colleges several rs ago. The association gave rarians several years in which fulfill these requirements, the dline being set at September, 35.

A course in the history of the East will be given this sum- r school for the first time, ac- ding to Dr. Kathryn T. Abbey, fessor of history. The peculiar blems which the Far East faces ay as a result of its impact h Western civilization will be ussed in this course which will taught by Dr. Annie Popper.

Many Courses Offered

In addition to regular academic rses, Florida State College for men offers liberal courses in ech, music, industrial arts, fine s, home economics, and physi- education. All of these should peal to those who are in pro- ssional services.

Some of the new features ar- ged for the summer school ses- n will include a series of lec- es by Dr. W .C. Bagley, of the chers' College, Columbia uni- sity Dr. Bagley will lecture week-end of June 17 during session of the institute of dership of the Florida Federa- of Women's clubs, under the pices of the Florida State Col- for Women. Many depart- ts of the college will cooperate h the leaders of this institute.

Beginning the week of July 22, Roe, national field secretary the National Congres sof Par- ts and Teachers, will give a se- of lectures to the summer ool students. A leader from the ior Red Cross, at an appropri- time during the summer, will demonstrations before stu- ts who are teachers in service are going into service.

oreign Awards Presented Here

alian, German Consuls Reward Excellence

Two awards have been made by Italian consul and one by the rman consul to students at rida State College for their ex- ent work in Italian and Ger- n during the year.

A gold medal was presented to ne Hamowitz for making the atest progress in the study of an this year; a silver medal awarded to Martha Carlton the outstanding senior in the ian class and for excellence in nunciation; and a history of scape painting in Germany, tled Das deutsche Land im itschen Bilde, was given to ha Stulpner for a consistently h standard of work and gen- excellence in German for the two years.

The medals were sent by Dr. le O. Gallisa, the Italian con- at New Orleans, who stated in ter to Dr. A. R. Seymour that was greatly pleased by the re- s of the thorough work that been done in Italian, especial-

(Continued on page three)

Library Books Are Due Tuesday, May 21

All library books are due this Tuesday, May 21, according to Miss Louise Richardson, librarian.

The library will remain open at regular hours during examination week and Commencement Sunday.

Placement Of Many Students Accomplished

Thirty-four Graduates To Hold Teaching Posts; Two Scholarships

Though the majority of graduating seniors are as yet uncertain as to how they will spend their time next year, a greater percentage than usual have secured positions for the coming year, largely through the assistance of the placement bureau of the personnel department.

Two students, Mildred Boss and Jimmy Lewis, will pursue graduate work, Mildred at New York university where she received a scholarship, and Jimmy at Vanderbilt university, where she will study medicine.

Thirty-four students, two of whom are former graduates, have teaching appointments in various institutions throughout the state. Beth Barnes, Mrs. Elma Patronis and Mrs. Becky Lou Hopkins will teach in Tallahassee at the Caroline Brevard school; Mary Clare Kimbell, Mrs. Catherine Murphree, and Rose Rodgers, at the Sealey Memorial school.

Other students, their work, and location, are Dottie Mae Parksdale, Rural Rehabilitation, FERA, Pensacola; Dorothy Bagley, Cottondale; Mary Barco, Haines City; Vera Barefoot, Graceville; Estelle Black, Plant City; Frances Boots, Reddick; Annette Brewer, Grand Ridge; MacDonald Campbell, Laurel Hill; Elizabeth Dickenson, Greensboro; Dorothy Edwards, secretarial work, Thomasville, C[illegible] Esther Beth Finlay, Ch[illegible]: Lilly Priscia, Tampa; Fr[illegible] Gladden, Lacoochee; Violet Hayward, Panama City; Belle Henshaw, Vero Beach; Marie Lingo, Chipley; Rachal McKinnon, Marianna.

Muriel Nelson, Venus; Nell Elizabeth Price, Haines City; Julia Ruth Radford, Old Town; Margaret Roe, Arcadia; Justine Rutledge, Sarasota; Edith Smith, Dade City; Bertha Sulpner, Fort Myers; Catherine Walters, Melbourne; Helen Evans, Apopka; Margaret Kader, Bonita Springs; Eleanor McNeill, librarian, Ft Pierce.

Several other candidates were offered positions for 1935-36 but declined, hoping to obtain better positions.

Speech Students To Repeat Play

Entertainment Sponsored By Senior Class

"He Who Gets Slapped" will be presented again next Saturday night, May 25, in the Augusta Conradi theater at 8:15 for the benefit of the graduating class and their guests. The performance is being sponsored by the senior class with Virginia Holt as chairman.

The play, by Leonid Audreyev, is directed by Miss Kemper Moore and is interpreted by members of the speech department was chosen as the annual free play given by the students of the department.

The plot centers around a man of high education and great intellectual achievement who abandons his ordinary mode of life, through actual force of circumstances, and becomes a circus clown. He performs antics and gets slapped repeatedly. The public laughs, all the time unaware that their laughter is a mockery of their own life and culture.

Members of the cast include Ruth Mock, Consuelo; Helen Hammond, Mancini; Rosalie Powell, He; Jimmy Lewis, Briquet; Lois Hasel, Zinida; Katherine McGarry, Alfred Bezano; Virginia Kee, A gentleman; Betty Ettlinger, Baron Regnard; Betty Boggs, Jackson; Wilma Mayo, Tilly; Emily Johnson, Polly; Viola Taylor, Angelica; Frances Lingle, Estelle; Shirley Harkness, Usher; Rosalyn Daum, Thomas; Sara Hosea, Vivienne Marshall, Louise Schwadered, bareback riders.

Tickets for the play will be given next Saturday morning at the practice for the graduation processional.

Sub-Committee Would Modify Social Rules

College Council Meets To Consider Proposals Saturday

RED-TAPE WOULD BE ELIMINATED

Better Study Conditions Plus More Freedom Favored

A revision of the college handbook, proposing changes which will affect almost every phase of college life, has been recommended by a sub-committee of the college council that has been working for six months to modify and restate regulations. The report of the committee will be presented to the college council tomorrow, and if it is passed the new regulations will be incorporated into the handbook for next year.

Greater Student Freedom

In its revision and reorganization work the committee has tried first of all to secure greater freedom for students in the matter of regulations governing social conduct, and it has attempted to simplify and condense existing regulations in order to eliminate much unnecessary "red-tape," according to Miss Olivia N. Dorman, dean of students.

At the same time the committee favors stricter enforcement of the necessary regulations and prompt action in case of infringements. Its policy has been to protect the conditions of a scholarship from outside activities to secure a favorable atmosphere for study, and at the same time to provide greater social freedom and opportunities.

More Privileges

Perhaps the most outstanding tendency noted in the proposed revision is the greater difference in the matter of privileges and restrictions between the upper and lower classes. If the recommendations are passed, seniors will be allowed much greater liberties in the matter of riding with men, unlimited number of dates, and week-end absences. Privileges for the other three classes will increase in proportion to their rank, the freshmen having most safeguards.

The committee has also recommended that a number of present restrictions, such as those concerning riding in taxis, playing radios in the dormitory rooms, smoking other than on campus, and dating and riding with men, be modified to permit greater freedom.

The first section of the new handbook as proposed will be given over to a definition and discussion of the word "honor" in relation to campus life. Regulations coming under the jurisdiction of the College Government association have been divided under the headings, "Residence Regulations," "Social Life," and "Personal Conduct." Regulations which do not rightly form a part

(Continued on page two)

Nearing Close of Academic Year Brings Up Kaleidoscopic Picture

Review of Major Events Proves Interesting And Colorful

Homecoming day . . . F. S. C. W. week. . . . the installation of Phi Beta Kappa . . . . midwinter festival . . . . the S. I. A. S. G. convention. . . . a kaleidoscopic picture of red letter days comes to mind as the academic year nears its close.

The scene is pervaded by a solemn procession of black gowned Phi Beta Kappa's . . . by the five members of our college who were chosen to represent the Alpha chapter of Phi Beta Kappa in Florida . . . the wise words of Gauss . . . Gildersleeve . . . Robertson . . . little gold keys symbolic of true wisdom and learning glimmer in the sun. . . .

The governor's proclamation for the observation of F. S. C. W. week is made . . . the name of F. S. C. W. rings through the state . . . campus views . . . pictures of residence halls . . . buildings . . . sports . . . May day . . . on display in the stores of all Florida cities . . . faculty members on speaking tours . . . addresses by alumnae chairmen at dinners, banquets, civic clubs . . . "F. S. C. W. . . . sound in the past . . . honored in the present . . . prepared to meet the future" . . . striking the keynote of the celebration.

The Old and Even colors merge into the picture . . . a hard, fast

(Continued on page three)

Classes Will Have Reunion

Edna Mattox, Lucy Pope Graduates '30, '33 Will Preside

The 1930 and 1933 graduate classes of Florida State College are planning to have reunions on the campus during the commencement season. Edna Mattox, of DeFuniak Springs, president of the class of '30, and Lucy Pope, of West Palm Beach, president of the class of '33, will preside at the meetings.

The annual alumnae meeting will be held May 25, at 11 a. m., in the Augusta Conradi theater. Students receiving bachelor's degrees and L. I. certificates have been invited to attend this meeting, and will be guests at the annual alumnae luncheon which will take place at 12 o'clock in the lower dining hall. Those students are expected to notify the alumnae office of their acceptance.

Approximately 200 alumnae are expected to participate in the commencement activities. Mrs. E. L. Beeson, of Groveland, president of the association, as well as a number of local club presidents, will be on the campus during this time.

Miss Maude Flowers, director of residence halls, is making arrangements for all alumnae to stay in the residence halls.

During the last week of school members of the senior class may pay fifty cents, instead of the usual dollar, for one year's dues in the alumnae association. This offer is made to seniors each year.

Student-Body Votes Changes

Revision of Constitution Sets Up Off-Campus House Committee

The student body voted for the final passage of the recommended changes to five constitutional articles concerning the set-up of the College Government association in convocation Tuesday.

The revised article on student senate extends membership to the chairmen of off-campus houses and the president of the day students' organization and contains provisions for senate to elect one of its members to act as secretary for that body instead of the secretary of College Government.

Article V concerning membership in the executive council excludes the president of Y.W.C.A. who acted as an ex-officio member in the past.

An off-campus committee, constituting a lower court, will deal with minor infractions of house rules, in accordance with the changes in the article on the judicial department. This committee will consist of seven seniors and a chairman who live off-campus and who will be elected by the student body. Not more than one committee member may come from a given house and no member shall act as house chairman in her own house, according to Article VI, section one, part B.

The chairman of the residence halls committee, lower court, will not act as house chairman as she has in the past, but she will devote her time to guiding and unifying the work of her committee, in accordance with section three of this article.

Instead of two junior representatives and one sophomore representative, the junior class will have three representatives and the sophomore class two representatives to judiciary. Section C of the same article excludes the vice-presidents, the secretary, and the treasurer of the College Government association from judiciary and makes the president an ex-officio member.

At a meeting Monday, Senate voted to abolish the song, health, library, and fire committees, the chairman of house chairmen taking over the responsibilities of the fire committee. The duties of the other committees will be assigned to various organizations, according to Katharine Blood, president of the College Government association.

Senate voted to combine the point committee with the senate committee on student activities and elected the chairmen of five standing committees.

Chairmen are Mary Etta Thistiethwaite, social committee; Peggy McMichael, usher committee; Roberta Clifford, student activities committee; Audrey Smith, auditing committee; Evelyn Kennard, committee on proration of student activities fees. Betty Brooks, senior representative, and Anna Glen and Jeannette Annin, junior representatives, to the committee on proration of student activities fees were also elected.

194 Students Take Current Events Test

Data Obtained is Used By Professors For Investigation

QUESTIONNAIRE IS ALSO GIVEN

Results Show Amount Of Time Devoted To Reading News

In an investigation on student knowledge of current events and world affairs undertaken by Dr. Christian P. Heinlein, professor of experimental psychology, and Dr. Marion J. Hay, associate professor of education, one-hundred and ninety-four students of Florida State College for Women took a test, which appeared recently in Time magazine.

The test, which was devised by Dr. Alvin C. Eurich and Dr. Elmo C. Wilson of the University of Minnesota, consisted of 105 items, covering foreign news, national affairs, science, transport, business and finance, books, music, and art.

Students Are Tested

The students tested, of which sixty-two are freshmen, fifty-nine, sophomores, thirty-five juniors and thirty-eight seniors, were taken from the classes of six faculty members. Such a group may be considered a representative sampling of the college population by Dr. Heinlein in compiling the data.

Taken as a group, the juniors are slightly superior to the seniors in a knowledge of national affairs, according to an analysis of the data by Dr. Heinlein. With the exception of music and art, in which the seniors scored poorest, in every division of the test each successive year is characterized by a higher level of test achievement. The results of the current affairs test from twenty-two colleges, according to Time magazine, shows that out of the 105 questions asked, the ordinary college student could correctly answer fifty-five. Of those students taking the test here, the freshman average score was 37; sophomore, 39; junior, 43; and senior, 43.

Questionnaire is Given

From the results of a questionnaire prepared by Dr. Heinlein and Dr. Hay and submitted to students who took the test, it was found that 15 per cent of these students do not read current events at all; 9 per cent read less than an hour weekly; 20 per cent read between one and two hours weekly; 21 per cent read between two and three hours weekly. 35 per cent read over three hours weekly. However, the results also showed that students who devoted 3 to 5 hours reading weekly fell below the twenty-fifth percentile in the test, while a greater percentage who read only an hour or less passed the median percentile.

This seeming paradox might be explained in terms of the character and quality of the material

(Continued on page three)

Two Hundred Twenty-One Candidates For Four-Year Degrees

Nine to Graduate With Honors; Forty-Two Will Receive Their Licentiates Of Instruction

The nine girls in the senior class who will graduate with honors are as follows: bachelor of science in education: Elizabeth H. Barker, highest honors in botany; Marion Brantley, highest honors in chemistry; bachelor of arts in education: Belle Irene Henshaw, honors in French; Elinor Shields Payne, honors in English; bachelor of science in the college of arts and sciences: Margaret Isabel Nickle, honors in chemistry; and bachelor of arts in the college of arts and sciences: Ida Ann Engel, highest honors in history; Lucy Fulghum, honors in journalism; Florence Jennings, highest honors in psychology; and Frances Taliaferro Parks, honors in history.

Candidates for the master of arts degree in the graduate division are Edna Pearl Hoffman, Eunice Edmundson Johnston, and Isabel Landreth Perkins.

The bachelor of arts degree in the college of arts and sciences will be conferred upon Catherine Thomas Ash, Hallie Inez Bailey, Mildred Ada Boss, Aline Elizabeth Bradford, Marcia Adella Buchanan, Myra Irene Bulkley, Amorette Cardwell Bullard, Nancy Bush, Martha Katherine Carlton, Linna Irene Cheney, Esther Daffin, Ruth McCaskill Daniel, Marion Davis Dow, Anne Adelaide Duval, Virginia Earle, Margaret Tommie Edwards, Olivia Cox Embrey, Ida Mary Ann Engel, Rhoda Carolyn Ervin, Mary Louise Filer, Esther Beth Finley, Helenmary Fritsch, Lucy Fulghum, Barbara Garfunkel, Anna Marie Good, Hazel Caroline Goza, Agnes Jane Graham, Marjorie Esther Horne, Sylvia Ruth Horner, Lorraine Weslia Hudson.

Katherine Inglis, Florence Jennings, Avaline Lancaster, Elizabeth Tyler Lancaster, Evelyn Lewis, Mary Marcia Lindsey, Sarah Butler Logan, Mary Leila Lumley, Frances Gardner Lurvey, Abbie Laura Lyle, Mary Louise Mackey, Erin Robert McGlynn, Rachel Mary McKinnon, Nedra McNamara, Janice Anita Mitchell, Mary Claire Moore, Dorothy Irene Moorehead, Mary Elizabeth Mooty Frances Taliaferro Parks, Florence Edith Patterson, Janilee Rhyne, Louise Fleming Robertson, Margaret Mary Roe, Leia Estelle Rushing, Elizabeth Anne Sponenbarger, Charlotte Stevens, Elizabeth Crawford Stout, Virginia C. Tucker, Nell Marian Turner, Melvyne Lois Wahnish, Mary Virginia Warren, Martha Olivia Whitaker, Mary K. Williams, Mildred Elene Williams.

Candidates for the bachelor of science degree in the college of arts and sciences are Mary Margaret Ansley, Barbara Cooley, Lila A. DeVore, Charlotte Collins Cameron, Mary Elizabeth Cooley, Lila A. DeVore, Frances D. Fabrick, Billie Faxon, Lucile E. Ferguson, Pearl Fleet, Louise Hafer, Helen Cameron Hartness, Evelyn Hope Haynie, Evelyn C. L'Abbe, Sarah Lewis Maxwell, Laura Ellen Moore, Margaret Isabel Nickle, Evaline Rankin, and Georgia Ruth Work.

Candidate for the bachelor of arts degree in commerce is Jessie Lee Wilder.

Candidates for the bachelor of science degree in commerce are: Elizabeth M. Allen, Mary Ellen Bailey, Julia A. Baker, Mary Catherine Carter, Irene Collins, Evelyn Love Comick, Margaret Belle Early, Myrle Shuler Pillingim, Wava Ina-Von Godwin, Jean Bradley Hammer, Betty Jane Hintermister, Mary Margaret McLaughlin, Mildred Anna Mumm, Jennie Rae Nall, Elizabeth Seay, Lillian Mildred Shapiro, Josephine Skeels, Mildred Arlyne Smoak, Olive M Towles.

Candidates for the bachelor of arts degree in the school of education are: Caroline Attanasio, Opal Greene Atwater, Doris E. Bourgeois, Jean Beard Boyd, Elizabeth Shumate Brown, June Elizabeth Bullard, Christian McDonald Campbell, Mary Marjorie Carter, Marie Rolfe Certain, Sarah Edith Cheek, Lucille Harley Clendenon, M'Liss Haydon Cook, Lillian Harvey Craig, Laura Edna Mae Crow, Mary Sidney Steffee Degtoff, Anne Lee Dunn, Bessie Ruth Falk, Mary Helen Forth, Lilly Martino Priscia, Estelle Strong Gamble, Cornelia Johanna Garrick.

Helen Margaret Gray, Elizabeth Lindsey Hampton, Elsie May Hamrick, Johny Clarice Hardee, Gertrude Eldora Hastings, Lois Bingham Hazel, Margaret L. Henderson, Belle Irene Hendshaw, Elizabeth May Hurst, Frederica Emily Hutt, Margaret Elizabeth Kader, Margaret Elizabeth Kimball, Cecil Louise King, Mary Ella Limerick, Jeannette Matheson, Nell Ward Mayes, Oneida McFatter, Getrtrude Anne Miller, Muriel Nelson.

Julia B. Norfleet, Susan McPherson Elinor Shields Payne, Nell Elizabeth Price, Helen Parker Rainey, Carol Reeves, George Rose Rogers, Doris Irene Seals,

(Continued on page two)

May Stay in Dorms Between Sessions

Mr. Kellum has announced that any student wishing to remain in the dormitories between the close of school and and the beginning of summer school may do so, paying the same rent that she will pay in summer school; five dollars per week.

Blood, Knight Given Awards

Gilchrist Scholarships Won for Academic, Campus Action

Katherine Blood and Clarissa Knight were awarded the Gilchrist scholarships for next year in recognition of their meritorious work in academic and campus activities.

These scholarships, each valued at $175.00, are given annually to students who have worked their way through college and who have maintained highest scholastic averages.

Save for her first semester, Clarissa, an honors student, has taken eighteen hours of credit towards an A B degree in accounting and a certificate in piano in music, and has earned a 2.85 average, in addition to carrying a dining room scholarship. She was recently elected president of the International Relations club.

Katherine, attaining a 2.61 average, and carrying a dining room scholarship, has throughout her college years been active in student government and campus activities. As a freshman, she was a member of the German club, a member of the varsity baseball team, and a freshman commissioner. In her sophomore year she was elected secretary of her class and was a member of the sophomore volley ball team, and participated in demonstration activities.

Second vice-president of the college government association in her junior year, Katherine was a member of judiciary and executive council of senate, a freshman spunsor, and a member of Der Deutsch Verein. She was a delegate to the convention of N. S. F. A., is president of S. I. A. S. G., and was recently installed as president of Florida State College Government association.

New Building To Be Opened Soon

To House 2 Departments; School of Education

After an absence of four years from the former Education building which was condemned in December, 1931, the School of Education, the Department of Psychology and the Department of Industrial Arts will soon move to the new Education building which has been planned to meet all modern requirements.

The floors of the new building are tiled in red and black. Yellow and white tile wainscoting decorate the hallways in which are cloistered alcoves with attractive seats for students awaiting conferences.

Besides having four large class rooms, the main floor will house the offices of the dean of the School of Education, and faculty members of the department. Professors of the Department of Psychology will also have offices on this floor.

The Industrial Arts department, which now holds classes in the Demonstration school building, will move to the basement floor of the new Education building. The entire third floor will be devoted to laboratories for psychology classes, while the fourth floor will comprise four classrooms and an auditorium.

The return of the Department of Education and the Department of Psychology to the Education building will bring about a closer association between the two departments. The closeness of the building to the Demonstration school is an advantageous feature of the location of the building which houses the departments especially interested in this school.

Dickson Heads Honorary

Ruth Dickson was elected president of Sigma Delta Pi at a meeting of the fraternity held last week in the modern languages offices.

The other new officers elected are Murae Reddick, vice president; Anna Cone Groover, treasurer; Wilma TerBush, secretary; and Winifred Hansen, historian.

Reunion Opens Activities For Commencement

Degrees to Be Conferred At Formal Services Monday, May 27

CAMPBELL, DOAK ADDRESS CLASS

Conradi Will Receive Graduates At His Home

Two hundred and twenty-eight students will be candidates for degrees when Florida State College for Women holds its thirtieth annual commencement exercises at 10 o'clock Monday morning, May 27, in the college auditorium.

The college of arts and sciences will award one hundred and two diplomas, the school of education, ninety-six; the school of home economics, twenty-seven and the school of music, three. At this time three graduate students will receive their master of arts degrees.

Alumnae Meeting

Commencement activities will begin Saturday morning with the annual alumnae meeting held in the Augusta Conradi theater. At noon, all seniors are invited to the annual alumnae luncheon which will be given in the dining hall. In the afternoon, Dr. Conradi and Miss Louise Conradi will be at home to the graduates.

At 5:30 Saturday afternoon, the class day exercises will take place in the open air theater. The seniors in their caps and gowns will come in, accompanied by their junior sisters, in pastel shades, and their sophomore sisters, in white. The seniors will have their procession form a U-shape in the theater. The president of the class, Helen Wilson, will give a talk, explaining how the seniors' books were burned and will present the ashes to the incoming president. Following this, the vice-president of the class, Jean Hamner, will read the class will. The seniors will then remove their caps and gowns and put them on their junior sisters.

Again Saturday evening the speech department will present the play, "He Who Gets Slapped" for the prospective graduates and their guests

Commencement Exercises

The baccalaureate sermon will be delivered by Dr. Albert C. Holt pastor of the Presbyterian church, Sunday morning in the college auditorium. In the afternoon Y. W. C. A. will present a special vespers service in the auditorium. In the evening the school of music will entertain seniors and guests at a concert.

Monday morning commencement exercises will be held in the auditorium. The speaker for the occasion is Dr. D. A. Campbell of Peabody college in Tennessee. Contrary to the past custom, seniors will not have sophomore sisters at graduation, nor will they carry daisies. Dr. Edward G. Conradi, president of the college, will present diplomas to the graduates.

Nall is Elected Permanent Head

Senior Class Has Final Student Meeting

The seniors of 1935 held their last class meeting Wednesday night at which time Jennie Rae Nall was elected permanent president and Helen Wilson secretary-treasurer.

This year's class, together with the senior class of 1933, left as their gift to the colege, the gates at the south entrance to the campus. The surplus from the gift, almost $200, is being left in a fund for a foreign exchange student who will be brought to Florida State through the cooperation of other organizations on campus.

The announcement was made that the rehearsal for commencement would be on Saturday, May 25 at 9:00 a. m. in the college auditorium. At the class day practice immediately following, the sophomore and junior sisters are asked to be present. After the practice the seniors are invited to attend their first alumnae meeting at 11:00 o'clock in the Augusta Conradi Little theater and a luncheon to be held at 12 00 o'clock in the lower dining hall.

The plans for costumes for

(Continued on page two)

Y. W. Project Moves Forward

Committee Chairmen Are Chosen to Further Recreation Park

Plans for committees and the recreational project being sponsored by Y. W. C. A. for next fall were formulated in a meeting of ol dand new cabinets Wednesday afternoon.

All committees of Y. W. will integrate in giving the membership programs once a month. Each committee will render a program emphasizing its particular work.

More stress will be laid on the world friendship committee which will make an effort to secure names of foreign students, preferably French and Spanish, in order to carry on world friendship through correspondence. Vesper committee plans center around the choir and the organization of informal "sings" to be given in front of Bryan Hall.

A method has been devised by the membership committee for the payment of fees by Y. W members at the beginning of the year during the registration in the Gym The committee will also arrange opportunities at the opening of school for students to sign up for the Y. W activities in which they are most interested All committees, to be selected by committee heads next year, will be rotated to give everyone a chance to do various kinds of work

According to Gladys Oliver, general chairman for the recreational center committee chairmen will be: program, Beth Daane; survey, Elizabeth Kirby-Smith and Anita Jones; administration of playground, Catherine Barrs and Carol aFrrabee.

Students who have signed up as interested and willing to work in this project are. Sue Whitaker, Louise Doyle, Laura Mathis, Rosetta Whilden, Mary K Van Wyk, Janet Pierce, Astrid Peterson Margery Colee, Mallie B Halden Mildred Seekins, Dorothy Sryan, Elaine Davis, Margaret Maxwell, Ruth Orlin, Madeline Duncan Evelyn Chauncey, Martha Walliston, Ruth Barker, Marion McKinney, Martha Battey, Valerie Stubbs, Ruth Lind, Willa Greer Sarah Graham, Virginia Cary, Beverley Brown, Betty Peck.

Arline Gray Lockhart Annette Harris, Mildred Emmelhainz, Mary Ola Reynolds, Dorothy Ozbourne Marguerite Groover, Louise Lingo, Betty Clark, Edna M. Stanfell, Marjorie Helvenston, Jane Hubbard, Barbara Hubbard, Betty Ann McKenzie, Marie Peacock, Mary Ellen Thayre, Kathryne Todd, Virginia White, Joyce Reed, Anita Jones, Helen Cate, Jean Clark, Neil St John, Margaret Stout, Mary Kirkpatrick, and Jean Duncan.

Organ and Piano Recital Tonight

Leach and Nickle Will Present Program

Dorothy Leach, organist, pupil of Miss Margaret Dow and Margaret Nickle, pianist, pupil of Miss Mary Esther Winslow, will give a certificate recital in the college auditorium this evening.

The program will include: Prelude and Fugue in G major, Bach; Chorale Prelude, All Men Are Mortal, Bach, Toccata, Foote; Dorothy Leach.

Eroica Sonata, MacDowell; MacDowell had in mind the Arthurian legend when writing this work. The first movement typifies the coming of Arthur The slow movement is the story of Guinivere and the last movement the apotheosis of Arthur. Margaret Nickle.

First Suite, Rogers: Prologue, Intermezzo, Dorothy Leach.

Prelude in E flat minor (well tempered Clavichord, Vol. I), Bach, Gardens in the Rain, Debussy Etude, Op 10, No. 12, Chopin, Margaret Nickle.

Sub-Committee Would Modify Social Rules

(Continued from page one)

of the College Government association have been removed from its section.

Dr Elmer Riggs Smith, professor of mathematics, has served as chairman of this sub-committee, faculty and administrative, whose other members include Dr. Venilla Shores, associate professor of history and secretary of the committee, Dr. Olivia Dorman, dean of women, Dr. Ezda Deviney, assistant professor of zoology, Miss Maude Flowers, director of residence hal., and Miss Katherine Warren, secretary to the dean of students and councilor of freshmen.

Student members include Helen Mary Pritsch, Carolina DeMontigne, Margaret Graham, and Katherine Blood.

Blood, Graham State Policies, Aims for Year

Emphasize Campus Hono Working for Local NSFA Group

In a joint interview yesterday Katherine Blood, president of college government association, and Margaret Graham, chairman of judiciary, set forth their aims and policies for 1935-36 with the principal goal that of emphasizing greater opportunities for individual freedom and citizenship on the part of students on the college campus.

Margaret Graham hopes to do this in several ways:

(1) She wants to work towards a closer personal relationship between students and college government officials.

(2) She wants to distribute her responsibilities as chairman over a greater number of judicial officials. The recently revised constitutional article providing for a second lower court composed of an off-campus committee will aid in making this possible.

(3) She wants almost automatic working of penalties for minor infringements through the influence of the house chairmen and proctors.

(4) Through this she hopes higher court can work on major problems such as campus honor. She thinks campus honor can be greatly clarified by a more careful planning of freshman orientation and a joint decision with faculty as to student and faculty behavior in regard to examinations, parallel, and other phases of study involving honor.

Through the formation of a local group of the National Student Federation of America, Katherine Blood thinks individual citizenship will be emphasized in several ways:

(1) It will stimulate student opinion and help to bring out many students who have had no opportunity to prove themselves leaders.

(2) By discussions of other schools and their problems it will broaden students in their viewpoints and help to make them realize the fundamental aim of college.

(3) It will encourage students to study problems that they actually want to know rather than for the sake of grades or honors.

Snooping Sportster

In the Odd-Even swimming meet last Saturday morning the poor Evens were practically drowned in defeat. We hate to say so, but the score was 56-26. The Odd team was composed of such bright lights as Betty Bailey, Janice Borton, Martha Makemsom, Claire Redfield, Mildred Stevans, and Shirley Stevens. The hard-to-dim lights are Kitty Beyer, Carol Farabee, Louise Gehan, Harriet Lawrence, Frances Lewis, Dorothea Marsh, Betty Ostlund, Rose Panowski, Mary Ward Peterson, and Kathryn Pratt.

During the meet Makemsom broke Ruth Tucker's 25-yard back crawl record by .8 of a second, making it in 17.4 seconds. Panowski broke Daane's plunge for distance record (51 ft. 6 inches) by 2 feet 5 inches, making the new school record 53 feet, 5 inches.

◆

Saturday the F club goats had their day at Camp Flastacowo when they gave their hilarious skit, "The Bearing of the Goats." A water sports carnival was held there also from 2:00-5:00, sponsored by the F club. In the canoe races each class had a canoe, and the faculty, not to be outdone, entered one also. The Freshmen won first place, Seniors second.

In the Odd-Even race in war canoes the Odds won by the paint on the bow. One more coat of varnish on the Even canoe and the race would have been tied. After the races came an exhibition of canoe tilting, the skit, and a free-for-all swim.

◆

Miss Mayer announces plunge periods during exam week at the following hours: Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday at 4:30-5:30; Friday at 4:00-5:00; Saturdya 10:30-12:00. Come and cool off that heated brain.

All who passed the Life Saving test please report to Miss Mayer Saturday morning at 10.30 to receive your emblems

And I was lamenting that play nites were no more! But a "Forget-Your-Cares-and Have-Fun play nite will be held Friday night from 6:00-10:00. There'll be ladder tournament in table tennis or darts—let's see who is the best climber. The swimming pool will be open and the big gym is there to accommodate those who have dates with the dance-habit. By the way, we are thinking of imposing a fine for so much as whispering the word "exams"

Nall is Elected Permanent Head

(Continued from page one)

Class Day, scheduled for 5 30 p. m. in the open air theater, were announced. The seniors are to wear their robes with informal collars over pastel colored dresses. The junior sisters are to be dressed in pastels, also, and the sophomores are to wear white.

221 Candidates For Four Year Degrees

(Continued from page one)

Marie Oriana Slack, Betty Ellen Smith, Edith Lucille Smith, Mary Frances Smith, Thelma Grace Smith, Bertha May Stulpner, Elizabeth Wheeler, Sara Elizabeth Wilkerson, Frances Marie Williams, Lois Virginia Williams, Lola Leone Wood, Mary Florence Young.

Candidates for the bachelor of science degree in the school of education are. Betty Cleone Bailey, Elizabeth H. Barker, Marion Brantley, Wilma Harriet Bristol, Eloise Rita Brizard, Anne Louise Burgess, Elizabeth Chandler, Rebecca White Clemons, Carolina Florence DeMontigne, Rosa Ann Doub, Mary Frances Ellenberg, Helen M Evans, Margaret Evelyn Flook, Gladys Jeanette Folson, Opal Nadine Gray, Frances L Hurlin, Alma Lewis Loudermilk

Mildred Louise Lovell, Susie Rae Meredith, Louise Mullinnix, Martha Emma Neeld, Lois Juanita Pace, Elma W. Patronis, Helen Mar Phillips, Mildred LaLuce Pianck, Rosalie Powell, Ruth Rae Rainbolt, Hazel Royall, Barbara Sandquist, Helen Elizabeth Schweigart, Mildred Louise Sigman, Alice Lee Slone Mildred Elaine Stevens, Catherine Carline Takach, Virginia Catherine Thornton, Helen Faith Wilson.

Candidates for the bachelor of science degree in the school of home economics are: Mabla Anderson, Margaret Arnold, Mary Barco, Joyce Bevis, Mary Doris Baxter, Cora Estelle Boyett, Claire Bridges, Mary Ethel Brown, Virginia Helen Clark, Marjorie Ethel Dickens, Carrie Elizabeth Dickenson, June Dee Dixon, Margaret Louisa Dodd, Alma Ruth Durrenberger, Edith Eudora Flinn, Adelyn French Fox, Aline Bellmont Freeman, Dorothy May Godman Ann Apthorp Hendry, Virginia Holt, Lucile Mattie Jones Marie Reynolds Lingo, Pauline Gregory McLellon, Ethel Fair Pillians, Justine Martha Rutledge, Katherine Ann Sands, Florence Dorthea Stanley

Candidate for the bachelor of music degree in organ in the school of music: Julia Margaret Edmonds Munroe

Candidates for the bachelor of music degree in public school music: Elsa Eugenia Parker and Edith M. Toffaletti certificate in organ: Dorothy Baker Leach; certificate in piano: Virginia Long, Edith M Toffaletti: certificate in violin: Martha Marion Reddick.

Girls who will receive two year diplomas in education are: junior high school: Esther Bower Boozer, Anne E. Higdon, Opal Irene Langley, Hazel Pauline Moreland, LaVada Sweat, Frances Elna Williams; intermediate grades: Ellen Josephine Anderson, Vera Novis Barefoot, Frances Jeannette Boots, Myrtice B. Bryan, Marguerite Davis, Sarah Myrvin Everett, Sylvia Isabel Guito, Helen Elizabeth Guthrey, Zelma Harrison, Mattafoy Hart, Mary Willis Ingram, Aleta L. Jones, Clara Sylvia Kramer, Cornelia Mae Morford, Julia Ruth Radford.

Blanche Rothsein, Virginia B. Taylor, Dorothy Eugenia Wright; primary-kindergarten grades: Anna Estelle Black, Frances Annette Brewer, Aretice Sarah Cole, Beulah Lee Dixon, Robbye Lee Estes, Jesse Perrell, Catherine C. Puilar, Francea Robarta Gladden, Adeline R. Goldstein, Flossie McAlpin Henry, Frances Elizabeth Mock, Mary Lee Mullis, Annawilda Norris, Margaret Laura Pinkoson, Jimmie Lou Richbourg, Marie Jeannette Snyder, Mona Clarice Stanfill, Matilda Trott, Lucile Watson.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR COMMENCEMENT
And Leaving at the Close of College

Only four-year graduates may have guests in the residence halls during Commencement. If yuu are having a guest for Commencement please register this fact with the Director in your hall. GUESTS ARE INVITED FROM FRIDAY NIGHT, MAY 24, THROUGH COMMENCEMENT.

Any student leaving before graduation day, must sign in advance with her Directors, when, where, how, she is going.

No student may leave College before Graduation Day and visit in Tallahassee.

All students must leave from their College Residence and are expected to go directly home. Any other plan will be approved only upon written request of Parent or Guardian.

Students wishing to remain in Residence Halls after Graduation Day must arrange in advance with the Director of Halls, and will be under full College regulations.

A student desiring to return home in a car other than that of her immediate family, must have written permission from Parent or Guardian.

Any Student leaving Tallahassee by night train or bus, must arrange in advance in Bryan Offiee.

No student will be permitted to withdraw from College after she has finished her final examination, and return and stay in Residence Halls, Sorority Houses, or Off Campus Houses for Commencement.

A student may spend the night out of her room just as on week-ends, signing up in the usual manner. In Sorority Houses, where the number of guests and alumnae makes it inconvenient to house the students, it shall be the responsibility of the President of the Chapter to ask the students to cooperate and not fill the House to more than the number that can be taken care of adequately.

A student—not a candidate for a degree—who has not used up all her over-night absences, may go away for the week-end before Commencement and return for Commencement, provided she makes the proper arrangements. She must however return to her College Home, whether Residence Hall, Sorority House, or Off Campus House.

By making proper arrangements, a candidate for a degree may leave College as soon as she has completed her final examination; but she must return in time to be at every Commencement exercise—rehearsal and performance—in which she is to take part. The College expects complete cooperation in this.

Academic probation will be lifted after final examination.

During commencement week last light flash will be at 11:35.

Arrange with your Director about storing baggage.

Until the Business Office takes it over, arrange with your Director about sending express, trunks, packages, etc.

During the last week of college arrange in business office in the Administration Building about tickets, checks, etc.

Place necessary checks on baggage After Baggage is Ready to be Sent.

MAUDE FLOWERS, Director of Residence Halls.

Books Of Romance, Adventure Insure Entertaining Summe

Mysteries, Biographies, Travelogues, Poems Suggested

Though it may seem a bit unusual, after nine months of parallel reading and term paper research, the approach of the termination of required delving finds many students anticipating a summer of literary perusal, both for mental relaxation after these last weary weeks, and for mental stimulation.

For those desirous of enjoying vicarious adventures in life, romantic or realistic, the following in the realm of fiction have been suggested by Miss Louise Richardson, college librarian: Years of Grace, Barnes; So Red the Rose, Young; Magnificent Obsession, Douglas; Mary Peters, Chase; Gay Family, Boileau; As the Earth Turns, Carroll; Middle Watch, Hay; After Five o'Clock, Corbett; Young Mrs. Meigs, Corbett; Beau Geste, Wren; Snobs, Sharrock; Casting Away of Mrs. Lecks and Mrs. Aleshine, Stockton; Jeremy Walpole; The Golden Age, Grahams; Shadows on the Rock, Cather; Sorrell and Son, Walpole

Or if life has semed just a bit too obvious and the student yearns for the fascination of a little mystery, she will find characters and deeds shrouded in secrecy in such sleep-delayers as Charlie Chan Carries On, Biggers; Murder of Roger Ackroyd, Christie; Death of a Millionaire, Cole; Behind That Curtain, Biggers; Bellamy Trial, Hart; Dead Right, Lee; While the Patient Slept, Eberhart; October House, Strahen.

For a stimulating change, inspiration may be gained in temporarily struggling and triumphing through the writings of life-conquerors as revealed in Up the Years from Bloomsbury, Arliss; From Immigrant to Inventor Pupin; My Garden of Memory, Wiggin; Hunger Fighters, DeKruif; An American Idyll, Parker; Adventures of a Novelist, Atherton, Roman Spring, Chandler.

Through travel books, students may roam the ends, four corners, or even curves of the visiting strange lands by civilization, or civilized struggling in the life thro revolution. Appeasing to wanderlust craving should Ends of the Earth, Andrews pool, Wells; Eskimo Year, Ports and Happy Places My Farm in Lion Country With a Motor Truck in West rica, Hambly; Land of Chec board Families, Burks, Red (Russia), Levine; Humanity rooted (Russia), Hindus.

No doubt there will be who will find life offering abundance of romance, so ful indeed that there will be desire nor time to escape its ties. To such blissful stances poetry always lends perfecting touch and harm with the prevailing mood from These Grapes, or, scence and Other Poems, Poems, Van Dyke; Poems, Little Book of Modern Verse, tenhouse, or Modern A Poetry, Untermeyer, may need.

In the informal essay undergraduates should glean fitable experience for their college years through "How to Be Happy on No Year." And for a delightful or two what better than a whimsical or meditative in such collections as Morley; Groups and Co Warner; Great Possessions Adventures in Friendship, son; End Papers, Newton

For pure fun, and this be reserved until the last weeks of vacation as a fore storing of humorous incidents tales the student can reme and chuckle over when the fessor is particularly boring, Richardson suggests, Novels, Leacock; Ruggles Gop. Wilson, Tom Sawyer, ens, Alice in Wonderland, Huckleberry Finn, Clem Where the Blue Begins Jeeves, Wodehouse Laura My Camel, Weigall; While Burns, Woolcott, Innocence Father Brown, Chesterton

SUGGESTED

Gifts for the GRADUATES

GLOVES—

Newest Summer Styles—Ruffled Organdy Cuffs

HANDBAGS—

In Newest Styles and Colors.

Handkerchiefs—

for Sports and Evening.

Also—

Lingerie—

Hose—

Evening Bags—

Costume Jewelry—

Mules—

Evening Sandals and Fabric Sandals to Match Your Ensembles. You are always sure to get your best values, the most for your money, and the best of quality—at

GELBERG'S

"STYLE PLUS ECONOMY"

Congratulations

to the Class of 1935!

McCRORY'S

"The Middle Dime Store"

Get That New Permanent
For Graduation

The Powder Puff Beauty Shop

Duart Thermostat Control Permanent Waving

FINGER WAVING - SCALP TREATMENT

Melvin L. Pope, Mgr.

106 S. Adams • Phone 656

REMEMBER GRADUATION

WITH A DISTINCTIVE

PHOTOGRAPH

PIKE'S STUDIO

107 W. College • Telephone 787

THE SURPRISE STORE

"Tallahassee's Busiest Department Store"

SPECIAL SALE ON

SANDALS . . . $1.00 pr.

Cor. Jefferson and Adams Sts.

DRESS SALE

$5.00 values $2.98
$6.95 values $3.98
$8.95 values $5.95

Lippman's

HUB STORE

104 E. Jefferson St.

STATE THEATRE

FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
Jean Parker and Robert Young
in
"MURDER IN THE FLEET"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
Ann Harding
in
"THE FLAME WITHIN"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
Paul Lukas and Madge Evans
in
"AGE OF INDISCRETION"
THURSDAY
James Dunn
in
"DARING YOUNG MAN"
—ALSO—
"TONIGHT'S THE NIGHT"

RITZ THEATRE

FRIDAY—25c
"DOG OF FLANDERS"
SATURDAY—25c
JOHN WAYNE in "TRAILS BEYOND"
SUNDAY AND MONDAY
(State Prices)
"MURDER IN THE FLEET"
TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY
(State Prices)
"THE FLAME WITHIN"
THURSDAY—25c
"CAR 99"

Florida High Graduates 23

Commencement Exercises Will Be Followed By Formal Closing

The commencemant exercises for the graduating class of Florida High school will be held Thursday evening, May 23, at 8.15 o'clock in the college auditorium. The Honorable Fred H. Davis, chief justice of the supreme court, will deliver the address of the evening.

Miss Rachel E. Gregg, superintendent of Florida High school, will present the class, and Dr. N. M. Salley will preside at the presentation of the diplomas.

One of the highlights of the evening will be the announcement of the new members of Florida High school's honor society.

During the program Miss Margaret Whitney Dow will be at the organ, and special numbers will be rendered by the Florida High school glee club.

Members of the graduating class are as follows: Billy Alfriend, Betty Allen, George Apthorp, Flagg Chittenden, Pansy Crosby, Joe Demetree, Ruth Eyman, Bell Gerrell, Virginia Gidden, Opal Glover, Dora Kolns, Greene Johnston, Kathleen Martin, Jean Roland, Mary Emily Parker, Cecil Rhodes, Pierce Richardson, Bill Rickards, Edwin Smith, Mary C Smith, Blanche Strickland, Elsie Varnadoe, and Edwin Yates.

The closing exercises of Florida High school will be held at 9 o'clock Friday morning, May 24, in the Augusta Conradi theater. At this time the senior council of Florida High school will award a flag to the best citizen of that school, nominated and elected by secret ballot by the students and faculty members of that school.

Those students who have attained the B list will be recognized, as well as those who have been neither absent nor tardy during the past semester.

Friday afternoon the senior council will entertain the student body at a tea dance in the high school lobby. Mary Emily Parker, president of the senior council, is in charge of arrangements.

On Saturday evening Miss Rachel E. Gregg superintendent of Florida High school, will entertain the members of the graduating class, the alumni, and members of the faculty at a reception at the high school building.

Foreign Awards Presented Here

(Continued from page one)

ty in the ability of the students to understand spoken Italian.

The medals are engraved on the face with the head of a warrior under which is the word "Roma." The helmet of the warrior is engraved with a wolf and the nurslings, Romulus and Rhemus. On the reverse side are the words "Italia Madre" and the Roman eagle with outstretched wings.

The German history is bound in copper colored silk and linen, and is illustrated with 133 landscape reproductions by celebrated artists. On the flyleaf in German script are the following words:

Fuer Gute Leistungen in der eutschen Sprache.
Ueberreicht vom
Deutschen Konsul
A. Wendler.
For good work in the German guage.
iven by German consul
A Wendler)

Neophyte Initiated To Bus Travel via Ye Jumpe Seate

Delays for Sightseeing Leisurely Journey Compose Rites

By CLOTILDE O'ROURKE

"Take a bus trip through Florida. Our distinctive service makes the trip so easy, convenient and inexpensive that you can't afford to miss it! Our buses run on schedule—no delay and good connections. And our smart, new, streamlined coaches insure perfect rest and comfort!"

There has been no doubt in my mind that the new and popular way to cross the state was by bus, even before I had read the advertisements. Nearly all my friends who were returning to college after the holidays were going by bus. They assured me that they wouldn't consider any other way.

How had I deprived myself of the pleasure and comfort of bus traveling for so long? I wondered. I could not afford to let this opportunity go by. And in the future I would be able to recommend the bus to my friends on my own experience.

That's how it happened to find myself milling around the bus station with a hundred or so collegemates and numerous other persons on the morning of January 5, at 9 15. In the excitement of checking our baggage and saying goodbye to our friends we were unable to leave at 9:30 as scheduled. But it was just as well for there was only one bus in which to accommodate us. At last two extra buses were produced, and we roared away in them at 10.00 a. m.

Our bus wasn't streamlined, but the driver pretended that it was and we tore along the road at a great rate. It was as good as a boat trip and much more exciting. We bore down upon Lilliputian cars on the highway until I could feel them crumbling beneath our wheels. Even more breathtaking was the appearance of another bus or truck running into us headlong. Yet, by some stroke of genius our driver could always make our bus tip the right way when passing them. Another excellent test of one's nervous condition is the sound of grinding brakes when a bus stops at a railroad crossing, or at red lights in small cities. Ten hours of this is guaranteed to make or break a person.

A timely accident enabled us to make a sightseeing tour of S—— an interesting little town of some forty or fifty houses. "You can't afford to miss a single city in Florida. Each is as barbarically beautiful as a South Sea isle." This, then, is what the advertisement meant. S—— was indeed resplendent with palms, hibiscus and cactus, but as a native of Florida I suppose I did not appreciate it as much as a visitor would have.

Delays are evidently prearranged for the benefit of sightseers for the driver cheerfully assured me that a blowout in S—— was no more than he had expected in such an old bus.

We sailed along steadily enough after that. We were already an hour behind schedule, and though the bus companies like to make a journey as leisurely and as pleasant for you as possible, enough is enough.

At last we arrived in Jacksonville where we were to change to a Tallahassee bus. The connections here were splendid. As soon as we arrived a driver came dashing over to us. "Room for five more to Tallahassee!" he shouted, "Five more! Leaving right away!"

As the next bus to Tallahassee was not leaving for four hours I counted myself lucky to get one of the five places that were left. And, at the same time, I was initiated to the mysteries of a jump seat. Those were the five remaining places. A jump seat is not so comfortable as a regular one, but it is much more disciplinary. I know of nothing better than its stiff back and its lack of arm and head rests to correct your sitting posture. After taking a journey in one of these small chairs there is little likelihood of your ever slumping in a chair again, if, indeed, you ever sit down again at all. To prevent you from dozing off, and thus forget its corrective measures, hat boxes and coats are arranged to fall down on you from the rack above. Such a Spartan-like precaution is severe but necessary if you wish to derive the full benefit of the test.

To convince myself of the merits of the jump seat, I accepted the offer to change places with a friend who had a regular seat. I found that it was a leather-covered chair with a funny head rest that slapped you in the neck when you sat upright. After a half hour of this I definitely decided on my place in the aisle where the things that fell on you at least did not arrive so unexpectedly.

Nine-thirty was judged a fitting hour for supper, so we took a five-minute stop in Lake City to eat. As the drug store nearby was accustomed to the nightly raids of bus passengers the soda clerk was able to fix sandwiches for all thirty-five of us in four minutes flat. We spent the fifth minute waiting our turns to get back into the bus, during which time we were so engrossed in eating our sandwiches that we did not notice the rain that had begun to fall.

At midnight we rumbled into Tallahassee. Everyone was whispering, or sleeping peacefully, and I was situated as snug as a bug in a rug with a coat and a hatbox in my lap, and another coat around my neck. We tumbled out in front of Bryan, bag and baggage, with everyone chattering gayly.

"Don't you like it?" asked my friend, as I was pleasantly observing that my baggage had been left for the next bus, and therefore would not arrive until next morning.

"It's marvelous," I agreed, "So much fun to stop at the little towns along the way . . . like the South Sea islands . . . such good connections in Jacksonville . . . didn't have to wait a minute . . . because there were five jump seats . . . and getting in at midnight instead of tomorrow morning . . ."

For some reason she looked at me as if I were hysterical.

194 Students Take Current Events Test

(Continued from page one)

read by the students, as shown by facts revealed in the questionnaire. Then, too, differences in reading ability and memory might account in part for the low correlation, according to Dr. Heinlein.

Results from other parts of the questionnaire show that 11 per cent of the students tested prefer the funny section to any other item in the newspaper. With reference to music and art only two students registered first choice. In the current affairs test fifty-eight of the freshmen scored less than 20 per cent correct answers in music and art, while the percentages in the upper classes revealed an even greater lack of knowledge.

In reference to the kinds of current events students prefer to read the questionnaire revealed that the order of interest is national affairs, social interaction, foreign affairs, comics and funny sheet, science, editorials, business and finance, music and art. Results from the test show that ranked in order of achievement score are foreign news, national affairs, science, transport, business and finance, books, music and art.

"Since criteria of test validity were not available" Dr. Heinlein said, "the statistical analysis of the data does not warrant any very certain conclusions or sweeping generalizations. If, however, the test and questionnaire are true indices of student interest and accomplishment, then there is a very definite need on this campus for more extensive reading, motivation, and orientation in current events and world affairs."

Professors whose classes participated in the test are Dr. Kathyrn T. Abbey, professor of history; Mr. Earl Vance, associate professor English and journalism; Dr. Ralph L. Eyman, professor of education; Dr. Marion J. Hay, associate professor of education; Dr. Christian P. Heinlein, professor of experimental psychology; and Dr. Dorothy Disher, assistant professor of psychology.

Music Concert To Be May 28

School of Music Students Announce the Annual Music Program

The school of music will present its annual concert Sunday, May 26, at 8:15 p. m. in the college auditorium. The concert will include selections on the organ, violin, piano, and cello and vocal numbers.

Students presented each year on these programs are representative students chosen from each division of the music department who have done outstanding work during the year.

The program Sunday night will be as follows:

Papillons, Op. 2 (Schumann), Edith Toffaletti, pianist; Hungarian Rhapsody, Op. 68 (Popper), Yvonne Tait, cellist.

Aria: O del mio amato ben (Donandy); Selige Nacht (Marx); Life, Curran), Margaret Melzer, soprano; Gardens in the Rain (Debussy); Etude, Op. 10, No. 12 (Chopin), Margaret Nickle, pianist.

Lament (I'm Troubled in Mind), Clarence Cameron White; Danse Espagnole (De Falla-Kreisler), Martha Reddick, violinist; Carillon (Delamater); Finale from First Symphony (Vierne), Julia Munroe, organist.

Miss Mary Esther Winslow will be the accompanist.

Disher's Research Is Mentioned By Davis In "Advance of Science"

Dr. Dorothy R. Disher, associate professor of psychology, is mentioned by Watson Davis, director of Science Service at Washington, in his new book entitled The Advance of Science.

According to Mr. Davis it was Dr. Disher who "discovered that the new-born infant can respond to the fragrance of flowers surrounding his mother's bed as well as to the less agreeable odors of the hospital."

Dr. Disher found, says the book, "that different odors vary in their capacity for evoking activity, but the infants showed no signs of being pleased with some and rejected others. That may have been because likes and dislikes are not inborn but acquired, or it may mean merely that the infant cannot express his taste."

As a result of his work as director of Science Service, which sends out reports of scientific progress daily to newspapers, magazines, and laboratories, Mr. Davis has compiled this history of recent discoveries, inventions, and notable pieces of research in the different sciences, in which Dr. Disher's research is mentioned.

End of Academic Year Has Kaleidoscopic View

(Continued from page one)

basketball game . . . green and gold flying from the Even gates . . . the Odd fountain resplendent in red, white and purple . . . the march of the turkeys . . . golden oranges and red apples. . . . music . . . lights . . . dancing as the Homecoming day draws to a close.

In the background, the Greek pageantry of torch night . . . the medieval ceremony of fealty . . . the clash of hockey sticks . . . a ball soaring high in the air . . . the king and queen of mid-winter festival marching into the dining room . . . a Maypole dance . . . the May queen crowned with spring flowers . . . the sunlight of May.

And in the distance a slow procession of black-gowned seniors . . . mortar board tassles flipped to the left . . . diplomas in their hands . . . it is the last day of the year being crossed off.

Lights Out! Frankenstein Prowls, Moon Winks at Queer Activities

Grandchildren Assured Another Story Of College Days

At Florida State College for Women, that Mecca of bright lights, rather than bright students, something went hay-wire Saturday night. And the lights went out! Then things began to happen.

One female Frankenstein, a movie fan, crept into the room of her impressive next-door neighbor, aided and abetted by the latter's roommate, and announced that she was a vampire come to remove said neighbor from this earthly existence. To the surprise of her roommate and the consternation of the "vampire," the would-be victim hurled a shoe at her tormenter, before taking up a transient residence under her bed.

In the date-parlors profound sighs of gratitude to an unknown Cupid mingled with concerned clucks of the trusty matrons, who stuck to their tasks until every mother's daughter was safely, if unhappily, seated beneath the revealing rays of candle light.

An unfortunate "term-paperite" betook herself to the arcade between Broward and Gilchrist. Despite the mystic beauty of the May moon, she doggedly poured over the unusual feats of memory set forth in a thousand page psychology book. Better moonlight on the subject, than no light!

Many of the lovelorn, writing to THE ONLY ONE, were inspired by a rare eloquence in the romantic darkness. Many of the perennial hair-roller-uppers found equal inspiration, although not of the same type, when their bobby-pins scattered hither and yon in the accursed blackness. The weak of heart, returning from the show, almost expired from the fear that curfew had already rung.

Of all these things, however, the one great event, to be told to the grand-children of all Florida State girls, was the entering of Bryan atrium by a troupe of culprits in pajamas. And voile ones at that!

Dow Will Repeat Organ Recital Sunday; Is New Florida AGO President

Miss Margaret Whitney Dow, professor of organ here, was elected president of the Florida American Guild of Organists last week in Jacksonville at the annual convention of that organization.

Miss Dow opened the meeting with a recital in the Church of the Good Shephard, and she will repeat that program in the college auditorium Sunday afternoon at five o'clock. She will be assisted by Miss Anna Mae Sharpe, professor of violin.

Miss Dow has studied with such eminent European masters of the organ as Marcel Dupre and Andre Marchal. During her stay in Paris she held the position of organist at the British Wesleyan church and also served as organist and choir director of the American church.

Her program Sunday afternoon will include.

Chorale Prelude: We All Believe in One God, (Bach); Cortage and Litany (Dupre); Noel and Variations with Finale by Dupre (D'Aquin).

Hymn to the Sun (Rimsky-Korsakof-Kreisler) Le Coucou (Daquin-Press); A Child's Dream (Ysaye); A Spring Morning (Lili Boulanger).

Rejoice Ye Pure in Heart (Sowerby); The Kettle Boils (Clokey); Chant de May (Jongen); Finale from Grande Piece Symphonique (Franck).

Flambeau and Distaff Win First Class Honor Rating for Year's Work

First Class Honor Rating of excellent was awarded both the Flambeau and the Distaff this year by the National Scholastic Press association which yearly criticizes and ranks college publications from hundreds of the leading United States institutions of higher learning.

In evaluating a paper, critical emphasis is placed on treatment of news values and their sources; news writing and editing, headlines, typography and make-up; and department pages and features.

Special comment was made by the judges as to the excellence of the editorials, the news content, and the general make-up of the Flambeau and in the space reserved for general comment and criticism, the Flambeau score book bears the words "an excellent paper."

Incoming Senior Class Elects Oliver as Head

At a meeting last night of the incoming senior class officers of 1935-1936 were elected.

The new officers are Caroline Oliver, president; Anita Jones, vice-president; Nancy Wilkinson, secretary; Janet Griffitts, treasurer; Mary Catherine Drennan, parliamentarien; Carol Farabee and Doris McKenzie, representatives to senate; Floy Lenert, chairman of commencement invitations; Helen Miller, chairman of coronation; Emily Johnson, chairman of Even demonstration; Betty Akin, athletic manager.

New Way Laundry and Dry Cleaners
Tallahassee's Oldest and Largest
"Wear Clean Clothes"
Representative in Lower Bryan Hall
Laundry Phone 86 Cleaners Phone 183

BENNETT'S
75c
Club Luncheon
40c

25c	Hot Choc Fudge Sundae	10c
25c	Hot Butterscotch Sundae	10c
25c	Frozen Fudge Sundae	10c
25c	Marshmallow Mint Sundae	10c
25c	Maple Pecan Sundae	10c
25c	Buttersweet Sundae	10c
5c	Pineapple Prune Salad a la Carte	25c
0c	Chicken Salad Sandwich	15c
0c	Pimento Cheese and Olive	15c
	Russell McPhail Ice Cream, Pt. (Brick)	25c
	Bennett's Special Rich Ice Cream, Pt. (Brick)	15c

Bennett's

THE DUTCH KITCHEN
Serves
The Best Food

©1935 R. J. Reynolds Tob. Co.
ATHLETES SAY:
"THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND!"
BASEBALL
RIP COLLINS
35 Home Runs for the St. Louis Cards
GOLF
HELEN HICKS
Former U. S. Women's Golf Champion
GOLF
DENNY SHUTE
1933 British Open Champion
SQUASH
ROWLAND DUFTON
Squash Tennis Star
DIVING
HAROLD ("DUTCH") SMITH
Olympic Fancy-Diving Champion
RODEO
DICK SHELTON
World-Champion Steer Dogger
YOU'LL LIKE THEIR MILDNESS TOO!
SO MILD! YOU CAN SMOKE ALL YOU WANT!
Camels
CAMEL

HAROLD ("DUTCH") SMITH, Olympic Fancy High-Diving Champion, enjoying a Camel. He has smoked Camels for nine years—smoked Camels even before he took up diving. Ha... "I'd walk a mile f... Camel."

Read below what leading sports champions say about Camels

With the preference of star athletes overwhelmingly for one cigarette, that cigarette has to be exceptionally mild! Its name is well known to you—Camel. Here's what an Olympic champion diver, Harold ("Dutch") Smith, says about Camels. "I've found a great deal of pleasure in Camels. They never interfere with my wind." Rip Collins, of the St. Louis Cardinals, says: "Here's the best proof I know that Camels are mild. I can smoke them steadily, and they never get my wind."

Rowland Dufton, of the New York A. C., says "Squash is a game that requires A1 condition for tournament play. I've found that Camels are so mild I can smoke all I want, and they never upset my nerves or get my wind. That's what I call real mildness!"

Dick Shelton, world-champion steer dogger, says, "I must be sure the cigarettes I smoke are mild. Camels are very mild—don't get my wind." And those two brilliant golfers, Denny Shute and Helen Hicks, have come to the same conclusion—"Camels do not get my wind."

How this mildness is important to you too!

Camel smokers can smoke more—and enjoy smoking more, knowing that sports champions have found Camels so mild that they never jangle their nerves or get their wind.

YOUR OWN PHYSICAL CONDITION is important to you too. So remember this. Camels are so mild you can smoke all you want. Athletes say Camels never get their wind or nerves.

COSTLIER TOBACCOS!

- Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand

(Signed) R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Winston-Salem, N. C.

The Florida Flambeau

EDITORIAL STAFF
RUTH PERSONS .... Editor
ALTHEA SMITH .... Associate Editor
GERTRUDE KUHN .... Managing Editor
HAZEL BOWMAN .... News Editor

DEPARTMENTS
Features: Martha Baker; Sports, Elaine Klepper; Society, Margaret Lafferty; Exchanges, Virginia Early; Literary Editor Eleanor Williams; Copy Editor, Arline Lockhart; Outside News Editor, Grace Mary Webster.

REPORTERS: Carol Farabee, Claire Williams, Grace Mary Webster, Margaret Lafferty Nedra McNamara, Clotilde O'Rourke, Martha Baker, Virginia Rogers, Eleanor Williams, Sara Rutledge, Virginia Early, Ruth Persons, Edith Hobson, Hazel Bowman, Anne Donnell.

BUSINESS STAFF
MARY PATTERSON .... Business Manager
JANE GALE .... Advertising Manager
CEIL LEVY .... Circulation Manager
Assistant Business Manager, Lillie McGuire; Assistant Circulation Manager Caroline Adams

Entered as second class mail matter January 30, 1915, at the post office at Tallahassee, Fla., under act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

Is Florida State College To "Grow Up"?

Tomorrow morning at nine o'clock, a subcommittee of the college council will present to the council as a whole (which is composed of the faculty committee on student affairs and the student executive council) a group of recommendations representing the simplification and the liberalization of existing social regulations.

While social regulations are primarily designed to protect the scholarship and the time of the student from too much outside activity, the proposed revision of the college government handbook will free the present social condition of its encumbering red tape. The proposed changes in legislation will simplify methods, as well as increase privileges. Date, music, and light provisions are included in the plans, which ask for more liberal hours, while the matter of signing up is simplified and condensed to a minimum requirement. Matters of smoking, dancing, riding, and social engagements are clarified and the arrangements simplified and liberalized.

With the acceptance and the approval of w proposals, will come improvement in hole tone of college government. Hand and with this recognition of the maturity upperclassmen is the responsibility of each lent to herself and to those about her. th the aim of college government directed ard student realization and acceptance this responsibility, Florida State College Women is growing up.

In a foreword suggested for the new handbook, college government will be defined as self-government, with stress placed upon the personal integrity of the student in her responsibility toward citizenship. Called upon to pledge her allegiance to the principles of good citizenship, and credited with a clear cut sense of honor, she will be trusted with the larger concept of regulatory and "honor" systems. Hence, minor problems, such as disciplinary cases and signing up, will be given their proper place in the scheme of things, with no over-emphasis upon detail.

The drawing up of these tentative regulations has not been a hasty measure, but was the result of long and careful consideration and discussion. Undertaken by the committee last November, of the seventeen meetings since then, the majority of its sessions have consisted of from two to three hours of work, in addition to much outside labor on the part of each member. Concerning the work of the committee, Dean Dorman has designated the presentation of these changes to the council for approval as an attempt to allow the college to grow up, that its students may meet their individual and group responsibilities in government from the mature viewpoint in existence generally throughout other American institutions of higher learning.

The regulatory changes are to be regarded as an experiment. If they are accepted by the college council, the student body will be called upon to merit the confidence of its administration in a proper response to new privileges. Students will be expected to discriminate wisely between liberty and license, and so to develop the mature judgment normally expected of a college upperclassman. With a sense of personal integrity as a basis for college rules, social restrictions will no longer be restricting, but will gradually be changed to parallel normal life, in which one does not "sign up", but where nevertheless, one abides by a personal code as rigid as any ruling which involves punishment for offenders.

If the 1935-36 college government handbook is published following the plan of the proposed revision, a significant step toward a vastly improved student attitude will have been taken. The administration will have taken this first experimental step. The proof that we, as a student body, are worthy of the new responsibility which will thus be offered to us, and the assurance that we will accept and carry it in the spirit in which it was offered lies with each individual member of the student body of Florida State College.

Is Holiday-Juggling Justifiable?

The differences in holiday dates, set forth in the calendars of both the Florida State College for Women and the University of Florida have long been a subject of discussion on both campuses, and in last week's Alligator, the editor, responding to a student contribution to the University's annual "gripe and grievance" issue, appeals to both student bodies in advocation of a change in the present situation. He says: "Students and faculty realize the social, psychological, and financial advantages in holiday coordination ... The Florida administration stands willing to make certain concessions in order that next year the vacations of the two schools will coincide."

Since the two institutions are acceptedly "brother and sister" schools, and thus may be considered as parts of the same whole, it seems illogical indeed that their calendars should differ so radically. The University class hours and number of class days per week differ from those of F. S. C., and their governments, social life, and administration are somewhat unlike, also. These differences are accepted without objections from either student body, since they are reasonable and arouse no desire for change. However, in so minor a detail as the arrangement of the main events of the year's social calendar, it would seem preposterous to assume that there can be any objection to a wish on the part of the students for coinciding holidays.

Advantages gained by the change, from the standpoint of the family which sends some of its members to both schools, are obvious. Coincidence would make for happier holidays, if families were allowed to spend them together.

In the matter of the four or five days known as "spring recess" in Gainesville, and "Easter vacation," here, twin calendars would allow the institution of joint social activities, which has never before been possible.

The calendar for next year tentatively proposed by the Florida administration, as it stands now, differs, as usual, from that of F. S. C. W. in several respects. How simple it would seem for a little cooperative concession on both sides, agreement on coinciding dates for the principal holidays acceptable to both schools, and solution of the problem by the joint consideration of representatives from both institutions.

An Optimistic Afterthought

Tree-planting and winding daisy chains may be definitely valuable for the senior of Florida State College in her idealistic moments, but now that seniors must begin to look for solid ground upon which to plant their talents, it's time to "talk turkey."

The prevailing sentiment for the future, in spite of many misapprehensions, however, seems to be optimistic. In a recent poll conducted by the yearbook staff at Columbia University, the average senior (21.4 years, 5' 10" in height and weighing 152 pounds) thinks he will be earning $5,102 annually five years hence. The class of 1934 thought they would be averaging a modest $3,600.

At Ohio State university in Columbus, the deans of five colleges stated that there are many more jobs available this year than last. One dean declared that several openings have arisen lately that he has not been able to fill.

With the apparent existence of such favorable conditions it would seem that graduates of America's institutions of higher learning will have an increased opportunity to build successful futures upon their four-year foundation.

Now may be make one last apeal to spectators at the commencement exercises to discontinue the archaic custom of clapping as each senior walks across the stage to receive her sheepskin, thus avoiding unnecessary confusion, embarassment, and tiresome delay.

Magazine Thumbings

By ELEANOR WILLIAMS

THE IRRESPONSIBILITY OF LABOR

By George Sokolsky

Atlantic Monthly, May, 1935

With so much attention on the rights of labor, Sokolsky comes out to demand its responsibilities.

Labor now, led often by gangsters and not representing the will of the majority, can ruin a capitalist's business, he says, without reprimand from the courts. Only individuals who are caught can be dealt with in a strike he says, but on the other hand a corporation is subject to court jurisdiction.

Sokolsky would have labor unions take on the characteristics of a corporation, be subject to jurisdiction and open examination of expenditure of funds, yet retain the right to strike for specific improvements.

In conclusion he says, "The employer charges responsibility; the worker avoids the American Federation of Labor because he has no voice in the expenditure of funds, the public is weary of the labor racket. The assumption of responsibility would actually strengthen the labor movement."

THE PRICE OF POOR TEACHING

By William Bagley

Survey Graphic, May, 1935.

American public school children are two years behind school children in Scotland and the "per-capita consumption of 'solid' literature in the United States is far below that of France, Japan and other countries," says Bagley, accounting for the fact in the little attention given to the selection and education of American teachers.

Among the causes Bagley lists are extreme localization with school boards trying to employ local girls at smallest salaries possible—about one-third of American teachers receive salaries below the NRA codes—the low quality of education and the little prestige given the profession of teaching.

However, evidence that some improvements are being made is the New College for Teachers at Columbia university, Bagley says, describing the unusual features of that college in conclusion.

THE TENNESSEE VALLEY EXPERIMENT

By Drew and Leon Pearson

Harpers, May, 1935.

The human side of the picture of the Tennessee Valley experiment as presented by these two brothers is not too encouraging and it all goes back to the adage, "you can't teach an old dog new tricks."

The mountainous people of this region steeped in superstitions and tradition have to be persuaded to let government workers put in water pipes and wire their homes for electricity at three cents per kilowatt hour.

At Norris dam, however, where 5,000 men are working out this gigantic experiment, a new social order has sprung up, say the writers, and it is in this and the open country where the dream of President Roosevelt and Chairman Morgan may be realized.

LIBERTY—IS IT WORTH FIGHTING FOR?

By James Truslow Adams

Scribners, May, 1935

Adams is concerned with youth's attitude toward liberty as illustrated in its whole-hearted acceptance of Fascism, Nazism, and Communism. In this effort on the part of young people to find a short-cut to economic security, Adams writes, they are dangerously threatening the liberty for which men have fought and suffered the past centuries.

He admits society is moving towards collectivism, but it is evolution rather than revolution or a dictator which should bring this state into being he says.

Those who are giving up their liberty in foreign countries are not even finding economic security. Adams says and it would take twenty five-year plans to work out Russia's plan of security for everyone.

Furthermore, with our American heritage, we would never give up our freedom of speech and press, Adams says and youth must realize this before rashly accepting a dictator or starting a revolution.

Spirit of the Week . . . . . . By Williams

POLITICAL POT-POURRI

BY GRACE MARY WEBSTER

Banked in many-colored flowers that made us wonder if it were the week after Father's day instead of Mother's day and surrounded with "yo-yo-ing" pages, the Florida legislature struggles through its sixth week of residence in Tallahassee with all major legislation still under fire. The atmosphere becomes more and more tense; representatives are quicker at "catching each other up;" and the speaker's impatient pacing increases in speed with every hour of session. And the right hand doesn't know what the left hand is doing. When an interested visitors inquires of a representative what hours the senators will be in session for the day, he looks amazed.

◆

The solons would legalize slot machines by a bill introduced in the house this week, and approved by the committee to which it was referred. The catch is that they would be heavily taxed in order to provide money for the state's operating expenses and to help the city and county in their expenses. Imagine a state-owned "Cuba" or "bolita", Tampans! For such a bill was also introduced, the proceeds to go for the state school fund.

◆

Disgusted with the sales tax controversy of the last few weeks, one enterprising young man down at the Capitol bought a cheap chair, had it painted red, and nailed on it a sign which read, " 'Tail Tax' One Cent Per Minute." He then placed it in the most crowded section of the capitol lobby, and persuaded an equally ambitious young lady to take charge of the chair. Business was rushing, the strongest impulse of the human race being to sit down—and she made enough to buy a new bathing suit in a few hours! Moral: what this country needs is a good one cent Tail Tax.

◆

And after all the fuss raised about the removal of N. Vernon Hawthorne as state attorney for Duval county, we hear from a reliable source that one factor which probably influences the case is a rash statement made by Mr. Hawthorne in a primary campaign to the effect that senate action on a certain case had been "corrupt."

◆

More senatorial comment about the liquor control bill: "This bill without amendment," says Senator Futch, "goes the old bar-room one better. It allows anyone with a ham sandwich held together by thumbtacks and an old rocking chair or a couple of dry goods boxes to set up and say, 'Come on, boys and get it.' It allows tippling joints to be operated all over without any real regulation 24 hours a day, seven days a week."

◆

Much controversy has arisen over the citrus regulation bill. One representative was giving forth much fiery oratory in defense of an amendment benefitting the growers. He was interrupted by

(Continued on page six)

CONTEMPORARY STUDENT THOUGHT

University Editorials

HERE IS SOMETHING ORIGINAL

For a long time college students have been tolerant of legislators who are eternally investigating the colleges. Most of the investigators reveal that they had no idea of what they were investigating and for the most part exposed themselves as a trifle stupid, to put it mildly. Now a Methodist newspaper in Boston suggests that college students investigate the legislators.

To us this seems like a fine idea. In the first place we would propose that every legislator be required to pass an intelligence test with a grade of "average" at least. We would then require everyone to take a freshman test in principles of economics and sociology. We would further require that our representatives know world history.

Recently when the "drug store king," Mr. Walgreen, demanded an investigation of the University of Chicago the Daily Maroon wagered that he could not pass a simple test in sociology. It was suggested that if Mr Walgreen could pass the test they would give him a silver cup. We would make the same sort of offer to our legislators. If they could pass we might give them blue ribbons. —Cincinnati Bearcat.

◆

A FAREWELL

We remember sitting at Sing on Friday in the midst of laughter and excitement, while outside of the theater five suspended students walked in the rain, with signs asking for reinstatement. We think of the recent Peace Council meeting when police were called into the college to help break up the peace discussion. We remember the B. C. meeting at which its members sat stunned and heard the details of a faculty attempt to "reorganize" Council by virtually abolishing it. We recall the attempt to censor Bulletin, and later to impeach its editor along with three students for support of the anti-war strike.

In the past year we have seen an unprecedented degree of conflict and unrest in student affairs. From it we have learned that abstract editorial discussion is the only kind which is deemed acceptable. In the case of the championing of causes, the college paper must not begin at home—must not touch upon incidents occurring within the college. The attitude is "Let them talk about peace work and freedom of speech, but hands off when home territory is involved. Let them harp on anti-war activity, but any discussion of the disciplining of students who work for peace is disloyal, is bad journalism, is poor taste. If you must, talk about denial of academic freedom at L. B. U., U. C. L. A. and Commonwealth, but forget the cases of seven girls at Hunter. That's our business—not yours."

The attitude is not confined to Bulletin alone. It is characteristic of the entire concept—defended by the present administration—that a college exists only for the purpose of administering a curriculum—that students come to college in order to attend classes, and that mental equipment, sharpened and expanded through education, may dwell upon the problems of modern life in general, and of college life in particular, only off the college premises and a good six feet off—to be in accordance with police regulations. This fundamental idea of the function of a college possesses the expected correlaries. Students who work for peace, for academic freedom, for true student government, become the forces subversive of constituted authority in the institution. They are the ones who are suspended, theirs are the meetings which are broken up by police. They are the ones for whom the traps of technicalities and regulations are continually laid.

Let us make no mistake about this point. The administration of this college holds that the campus must be free from "agitation" of any sort—that "political propoganda" has no place in academic halls. This belief is set up as law, is hallowed as fine tradition, is veiled "in loco parentis," and actually is no law, has produced the tradition of "college" only as a factory for academic degrees, and is veiled not by parental authority, but by reaction of an advanced type.

Consider now, for a moment, the other concept of the function of a college. An institution where "agitation" against war is a fundamental and a guiding principle underlying the whole life of the institution, where "political propaganda" is freely subjected to student analysis and discussion; where political action in behalf of sincere and deep conviction is viewed as a tribute to an institution which produces young people motivated by strength of purpose to build justice and peace where it has fallen to ruin.

Here are the two concepts of the function of a college. Under the regime of the first, we have seen the paradox of praise for the "idealism of youth" coupled with the suspension of the idealistic. We have witnessed the spectacle of those who work for the "sacred cause of peace" refused administrative support in the greatest academic gesture against war which the nation has ever seen. We have even viewed the necessary addition of the police force to the category of "the plane of good manners and the realm of good morals."

Through the pressure of public opinion students can bring about a change in the attitude of college authorities. The building of this new attitude rests entirely upon the courage and the unity of the student body in their approach to the problem.

On Friday several thousand students honored, for the 19th year, the tradition of Sing. Outside, in the rain, five suspended students paid tribute to a tradition of free speech at Hunter College. Let us look ahead now and determine that through our unceasing and unflinching efforts, one day both traditions will be as deeply rooted, as eagerly defended as Hunter College.

—Hunter College Bulletin.

The Garrulous Gator

By EVERETT CLAY

GAINESVILLE, May 16—In past years Florida Homecoming dates have had to divide time with alumni and parents. But Blue Key leadership fraternity, annual sponsor of the celebration, is arranging things differently for next fall. All social activities will be given during the Fall Frolics, November 15-16 the week-end of the Sewanee-Florida football game, and following the example of leading Eastern and Mid-Western universities the 1935 Florida Homecoming program will be devoted primarily to the entertainment of parents and alumna.

Bill Lantaff, Miami, newly-elected president of Blue Key, today announced committee chairmen for the 1935 Homecoming celebration; general chairman, S. T. Dell, publicity, Cleve Hedrick, radio, J. B Patterson; booth, Bill Terry, banquet, Clyde Atkins, welcoming, Jack Butler, town, David Pee, program, Pat McKeown; finance, Mac Grigsby, gator growl, Elmer Griffin; state, Frank Wright, alumni, Ed Price, and decorations, Bill Jackson and Woody Lynn.

◆

Varsity letters and numerals were awarded yesterday by the Athletic Council in track and baseball.

The awards include: varsity track, Bob White, Jack Johnson, Earl Gardner Larry Dimmitt, Errol Mestrezat, George Selser, Jim Crews, George Howe Roger Snow, Huston McClane, Bill Crews, Alton Brown, Duke Warren Dick Warren, J H Look, Hubert Schucht, and Manager Tom Price freshman track, W W Richardson, A G. Landers Tony Piombo, LaRue Osborne, Randall Peeples, LeRoy Davis, Theodore Hendricks, William T. Whaley, Richard Ezzard and R. S Joseph varsity baseball John Seay, Bill Perrazzi, A L. Pennock, Newton Jackson, Jack Bostwick, Kenneth Thompson, Kenneth Peert Jack Clark, Sidney Cohen, Ernie Priest, Walter Carroll, Don Bridges, E J Long, Irving Tutt and Manager Emmett Taley, freshman baseball Charles Arnold N. D. Artman William Clark, E. P. Powers, Kenneth Willis, George C Pogle J J Stevens, A G Green J D Hicks, R H Ivey, Clifton Kerby W Z McLeod, H M Rubin, George Ashmore, J R Duggan, Eugene Hartman, Edward Harrison, Ben Porch, and Manager Mack Nivens

Collegiate Come-Backs

Amid the tears shed by the seniors either at the prospect of leaving their dear Alma Mater through the fear that they leave it, we stick out our long enough to dedicate the following poem to all pig-skin candidates:

Preparation,
Graduation,
Then vacation

Registration,
Dissipation,
Then probation

Desperation,
Illumination,
Then elation,

Graduation,
Congratulation,
Then vocation,
Or starvation

—Drexel Tri

• • • •

While college officials a ing for a new Ad buildin dormitory and a comple cation building, may we put in our order for a shi of extra heavy fly-wat getting so it's not safe for to go into the dining-room On second thought they even serve a double purpose could take them along w when we date the local clams

• • • •

Statistics published by in companies reveal that the is 85 per cent honest. The fifteen per cent is alway to horn in on your boy-f to see how you write your nam your exam paper

• • • •

Co-eds at Minnesota wearing fraternity pins are ten dollars. We wonder hating Ghandi approves idea. We hate to think whe be without his

• • • •

Three sweetest word ou All forgiven, an ner is served
Three saddest words thi time" External use and Not sufficient funds."

—Auburn Plains

• • • •

A professor at Ohio State versity claims that the tired student is temporarily insane this is true we'll have to rest summer to get ourselves cla with the normal idiots.

• • • •

While searching for prec stone in California a Los A junior college student had to fried grasshoppers to appease th wrath of some Indians wh siesta he had interrupted. We he must have gotten a c amount of satisfaction fro knowing what he was eatin That's more than we can say ourselves.

• • • •

I've never seen a purple co
I never hope to see one.
But some of the best people have had D T's

—Red and Black

• • • •

We hear that the death of individual can be determined an investigation of the lense the eyes. Those whose le harden at an early age die yo etc. Judging by the hard some of our profs can give we don't answer a question rectly, we calculate there's plen of the said profs who have be dead for at least thirty years

• • • •

Mary had a little lamb
With fleece as white as sno
And everywhere that Mar went—
Well, how'd you like to ha livestock following you around?

—John onian

• • • •

The best argument we ca think of in behalf of birth contr is that saxophone players a born not made.

• • •

With final exams upon us, w submit the following timely bit

To The Hard of Heart
(the faculty)

There never was a night like this—
Made for love or other bliss,
Maybe not and maybe yes,
Who can tell But I can guess
That though the night is calm and dark
I might as well be in the ark
This night perhaps, was made for fun,
But I have work which must be done.
And though I don't doubt their intention
Professors have no heart to mention.

—Exchange

The Social Week

Seniors Entertained With Sorority Farewell Parties with the end of school drawing ear sororities are entertaining eir seniors with farewel parties, anquets, and luncheons.

The Kappa Delta scorority will onor their seniors with a lunchon at the Dutch Kitchen tomorow at 1 00 p. m. The color scheme r the luncheon wil be green and hite, the sorority colors, which ill be carried out in flower decorations and place cards. Followng the luncheon there will be a ort program of speeches, toasts, nd songs.

The Kappa Delta seniors who ill be the honor guests at this ffair are: Martha Carlton, Mary Claire Moore, Ann Lee Dunn, ouise Mackey, Margaret Edwards, Marcia Lindsey, Helen Miller ary Catherine Carter, Frances Gates, and Jean Hamner.

Miss Henrietta Sivyer will entertain the seniors of the Zeta Tau lpha sorority at a breakfast at er apartment on West Park reet Sunday morning. There ill be an informal program folowing the breakfast.

Those who are invited to attend he affair are: Oncida McFatter, Eli Faxon, Margaret Arnold, eanne Matheson, and Virginia Thornton.

nday night Dr Conradi, and Mi Louise Conradi will entertain enior college government heads at a buffet supper at 7:00 p. m.

The Chi Omega sorority honored their senior, Esther Daffin, at a banquet at the Dutch Kitchen ast night. The banquet room was ecorated in cardinal and straw, the sorority colors. The same color scheme was carried out in the place cards and program. Folow n the short, informal program the members and pledges presented Esther with a gift as a momento of the occasion.

Wednesday at 6.30 p. m. the embers and pledges of the Pi Beta Phi sorority entertained the eniors of that society at a 'cookie hine'' at the chapter house on ollege avenue. The seniors were ach presented with theatre tickts and small pocketbooks made by hildren in the Pi Beta Phi settleent school and presented to the onor guests by Miss Elizabeth Love, the sorority chaperone.

The honor guests on this occasa were: Ethel Fair Pillans, Dw n Haynie, Mary Virginia arren, Frances Lurvey, Charlotte ens, Martha Neeld, and Helen son.

Monday night after the chapter eting at tha sorority house the appa Alpha Thetas entertained their seniors with an informal arty. A short program was given lowed by refreshments of iceeam and cakes. Each senior was esented with a gift by the memers

The seniors who were honored this time are: Nedra McNamara Betty Kimball, Virginia Holt, sephine Skeels, and Barbara Sandquist.

COLLEGE CALENDAR
1935

May 17 to May 27

Friday
8:15 p m. Organ and piano recital—Dorothy Leach and Margaret Nickle—auditorium
10:00 p.m. Alpha Chi Omega reception for Dorothy Leach

Saturday
8:00 a m. Mortar Board breakfast—Three Torches tea room
1 00 p.m. Kappa Delta luncheon for seniors—Dutch Kitchen

Sunday
8:00 a m. Miss Sivyer entertaining at breakfast for Zeta Tau Alpin seniors
11 00 a. m. Church services
5.00 p. m. Organ recital—Miss Margaret Dow assisted by Miss Anna Mae Sharp
5:00 p.m. Kappa Delts Pi tea—home of Mrs. Paul Finner
